17. In July, Sir Louis Cavagnari had received confidential information from Bakhtiar Khan, his native agent, who died at Kabul before Sir Louis arrived there, that Sirdar Yahya Khan, the Amir's father-in-law, was using his considerable influence over His Highness in a manner injurious to the Amir's popularity, and decidedly adverse to the proper fulfilment of the Treaty engagements with the British Government. Sir L. Cavagnari, on reaching Kabul, confirmed these statements so far as they regarded the hostile and disaffected conduct of Sirdar Yahya Khan. But as regards the alleged ill-treatment of the so-called English party, he wrote that although these Sirdars were not being treated by the Amir in a liberal spirit he did not consider that there had been "any actual infringement of the Amnesty Clause." The general condition of the country and administration he described as disorganised and greatly in need of remedial measures; the soldiery being dissatisfied on account of arrears of pay and a continuation of the unpopular compulsory enlistment; the peasantry still depressed by the heavy taxes imposed by the late Amir and unable to obtain redress from the petty governors and revenue farmers; and the Sirdars discontented that no reversion had yet been made to the feudal system suppressed by Sher Ali; whilst he said that all these classes were disposed to look to the British Envoy for an immediate redress of grievances which could only be gradually removed by the Amir's judicious exercise of his own authority in proportion as it became consolidated. Sir Louis Cavagnari also mentioned that some regiments said to have left Herat in a somewhat disorganised manner were expected at Kabul next day. And he added that the Amir's "demeanour and apparent desire to "make things comfortable for the Embassy left nothing to be desired;" that no restrictions were placed on the movements of the Envoy, who went about freely, and was on the most satisfactory terms with the Foreign Minister. On the 4th of August Sir Louis Cavagnari wrote that the Amir was well-intentioned, but too confident of his strength and without any good advisers, and that he was about to take an early opportunity of suggesting to His Highness the more important of the necessary reforms. On the 8th of August, Sir Louis Cavagnari reported that three of the regiments returned to Kabul from Herat were in a very disorderly condition and clamorous for arrears of pay. On the 11th he reported that two of these regiments had been paid off and that they were gradually being deprived of all their ammunition. On the 12th he reported that the ammunition of all the six regiments from Herat had been taken from them; that they had received their arrears of pay; that large numbers had deserted, and that the remainder had been granted furlough.

18. On the 14th August he reported that two of the Kabul regiments had also received their arrears of pay; and on the 16th, 17th, and 19th he reported news of large desertions amongst the Amir's troops in various localities. In a letter, bearing the last above-mentioned date, he referred to a fracas in which some men of his escort had been slightly assaulted and to which he did not appear to attach any serious importance, his remonstrances having been promptly and satisfactorily attended to by the Amir. This letter concluded with an expression of confidence in the Amir's good disposition towards us, and in the satisfactory result of continuance in patient and friendly efforts for the general amelioration of the Afghan government and country. In reply to inquiries from the Viceroy whether the Amir was in immediate need of pecuniary assistance, the Envoy expressed his opinion that it would be undesirable to offer such assistance until His Highness became more fully alive to the necessity for those administrative reforms which he hoped His Highness would be induced to adopt. Sir Louis Cavagnari, in his subsequent letters, made frequent allusion to the friendly intercourse established between the men of his escort and those of the Amir's regiments in Kabul, with whom they had, on several occasions, joined in athletic exercises and sports. In none of his private letters, or official diaries, has Sir Louis Cavagnari at any time expressed the slightest apprehension for his personal safety or that of the members of his Mission. We received continual and increasingly satisfactory reports of the freedom with which the Envoy and his staff were in the habit of moving about the city and its environs; the demeanour of the people; and the friendly intercourse between the escort and the Afghan troops. The danger of what has actually occurred, namely, an overwhelming attack upon the Residency itself, seemed precluded by the location of the Residency within the fortifications of the Bala Hissar and close to the palace of the Amir; and here it should be remembered that the establishment of the British Residency at Kabul was determined, in the negotiations which preceded the Treaty, by the express stipulation of the Amir himself, who declared that nowhere else in Afghanistan could he answer for the Resident's safety. In his last private letter to the Viceroy, dated August 30th, Sir Louis Cavagnari wrote that the Amir showed no disposition to conciliate or treat with generosity those persons who have had communications with us during the war; that their liberal treatment would, no doubt, be greatly to the Amir's own interests; but that there could be no question as to his perfect right to withhold from them the allowances or lucrative appointments they were desirous of obtaining; that neither in person nor in property had they been subjected to molestation on account of their connexion with us; and that the Amir had "done nothing, and will do nothing opposed to the letter of the Treaty." Sir Louis added, "I have nothing whatever to complain of on the part of the Amir or his Ministers, though there are many matters I wish I could influence him about. There is no doubt that his authority is weak throughout the whole of Afghanistan. This is not to be wondered at after the years of misrule and oppression on Shere Ali Khan's part. But if he keeps straight with us he will pull through it. * * * His conduct of foreign relations is apparently all that could be desired * * * I have no doubt that when disaffected persons see that they get no encouragement from us, things will settle down; and, if Yakub Khan will only adopt a little more conciliation, and show his subjects that he is not going to use our safeguard as a means of grinding them down, all will go well." Sir Louis Cavagnari's above-mentioned confidential letter to the Viceroy concludes with the assurance that "notwithstanding all people say against him, I personally believe that Yakub Khan will turn out to be a very good ally, and that we shall be able to keep him to his engagements." The latest communications received from Sir Louis Cavagnari were chiefly in reference to the Amir's expressed desire to visit the Viceroy at Calcutta if possible at the close of the present year; and his last telegram, dated 2nd instant, that is to say the day before the attack on the Embassy, gave no indication of any threatened danger, and concluded with the words "all well."

19. We have now laid before your Lordship a brief and impartial statement of all the information respecting the circumstances of the British Embassy at Kabul, received by us, confidentially as well as officially, by private as well as by public channels, previous and subsequent to, the date of its destruction on the 3rd instant. We are not at present in a position to verify or analyse this information, and we deem it altogether premature to draw from it any positive conclusions as regards either the past, the present, or the future, except in reference to the plain duty now before us of doing all in our power to repair the unprovoked calamity which has occurred, and punish the perpetrators of the unprecedented national crime which has been committed. It remains to report to your Lordship the steps which have been taken, and are still being taken, by us in the recognition and performance of this imperative public duty.

20. The obligation to undertake and complete this duty with the utmost possible promptitude has been imposed upon us at a time when our frontier garrisons are weakened by the periodical sickness prevalent in those localities at this season of the year, when the greater number of the troops employed in Southern Afghanistan during the late campaign were under orders to return to India, and when the undisturbed tranquillity of our new frontier, and financial considerations dictated by the continued depreciation of our currency, justified every possible retrenchment of expenditure compatible with the efficient administration of the Empire. The first intelligence of the outrage at Kabul received by us on the morning of the 5th instant, left room to hope that Sir Louis Cavagnari and the members of his Mission had not yet perished, and that if the defence of the Residency could be maintained for a short while longer the lives of its inmates might still be saved. In the course of that day two alternative plans of action were prepared and organised in the minutest detail, one of them being based on the assumption that it might be still possible to save the lives of the Envoy and his companions. The intelligence received during the night of the 5th, although imperfect, annihilated the hope which had inspired this plan, and on the morning of the 6th instant measures were decided on in reluctant recognition of the fact that our object could no longer be confined to the rescue of the Embassy.

21. General Roberts, who, being a member of the Army Commission, was at Simla on the morning of the 6th, started in the afternoon of that day for Kurram, with orders to lose no time in advancing upon Kabul in command of a force of about 6,500 men.

22. General Massey had been already instructed to re-occupy the Shuturguridan at once and commence concentration at that point of carriage and supply for the above-mentioned force. This operation was successfully completed without opposition on the evening of Thursday last, the 11th instant.

23. As stated in paragraph 3 of this despatch General Stewart had been ordered early on the 5th instant to re-occupy Kandahar, and on the 6th instant he telegraphed that the town had been re-occupied, permission to reside within the citadel and under the protection of our troops being given to the Afghan Governor, to whom the administration of Kandahar had been previously made over, but who on receipt of the information communicated to him by General Stewart had expressed anxiety to be closely associated with the British authority.

24. On the same day a force of 6,500 men in addition to the Peshawur garrison and the troops already holding the Khyber Pass up to Lundikotal was detailed for operations along that line and placed under the command of Brigadier-General C. Gough, with orders to protect the road from Peshawur to Gandamak, and provide a moveable column for holding Jagdallak and establishing communications with Kabul. At the same time measures were taken for securing an efficient reserve of 5,000 men between Peshawur and Rawal Pindiee. The Khyber and Kurram forces, as thus constituted, represent a division capable of dealing with the resistance likely to be opposed to it and having its head-quarters at Kabul with its army line base at Peshawur, and a secondary line across the Shuturguridan till that pass is closed by the first winter snowfall.

25. Many of the transport animals of the Kurram force had, during the previous months, suffered from sickness, and the remainder had to a great extent been dispersed to graze where they were not immediately available for employment beyond the Shuturguridan. To expedite the advance of the entire force under General Roberts, it was consequently necessary to collect at that point carriage and supply for 6,500 men; and this could only be done with a minimum of difficulty and delay by denuding the Peshawur Valley field force of all its available transport. The rapidity of the advance upon Kabul by the force under General Roberts will greatly depend on the assistance, or opposition, it may receive from the Ghilzai tribe, who, if willing, could largely contribute to the transport required for this force. Captain Conolly was consequently instructed to lose no time in securing the active co-operation of the two chief men of this important tribe—Padshah Khan, and his brother, Allal-ud-din Khan. On the 9th instant, he reported to us that he hoped this would be arranged; although Padshah Khan was still at Kabul and might possibly be detained there by the Amir if His Highness were disposed to resist our advance. Every effort has been and will be made to complete within the shortest possible time the collection of transport requisite for the equipment of the entire force organised for operations along the Khyber line; and for this purpose all parts of the empire have been placed under requisition. The experience of the late campaign had convinced us of the urgent necessity of a thorough re-organisation of our Commissariat Department with special reference to the difficulties of transport and supply, and this was one of the important questions submitted by us to the Army Commission now sitting at Simla. Unfortunately, necessity has now arisen for immediate effort, on an almost unprecedented scale, in regard to the speedy collection of transport, before our receipt of the report anticipated from the Army Commission at the end of next month, and consequently before the possibility of any complete re-organisation of our Commissariat Department. In view, however, of our anticipated difficulties in collecting and organising transport for renewed and extended operations in Afghanistan, we have created a new office separated from the Military Department and placed in more immediate communication than was possible between the Commissariat branch of that department, between the Commander-in-Chief on the one hand and the head of the Civil Government on the other. This office we have placed under the direct management of Lieut.-General Sir Michael Kennedy, R.E., K.C.S.I., in whose administrative abilities we have great confidence, and who has been invested with special powers for the expeditious conduct of its business. This officer, as Comptroller General of the Commissariat, will be responsible for the supply of transport to the various columns detailed for field operations; but, on their receipt of the transport thus supplied, it will be treated as regimental equipment, for the supervision and organisation of which the responsibility will rest exclusively with the commanding officers concerned.

26. In consequence of the reports received by us on the evening of the 11th instant that Afghan troops and artillery were mustering in Zurmat to attack the left flank of General Roberts' advance upon Kabul, and that Herat regiments were advancing upon Jellalabad, whilst Dakka was being occupied by the Mohmand tribe with the support of some Afghan cavalry, we determined, on the morning of the 12th instant, to reinforce General Roberts by two squadrons of Bengal Cavalry, one regiment of British Infantry, one Mountain Battery, and three Native Infantry regiments. We also deemed it prudent, instead of pushing on the advance guard of our Khyber force with the rapidity previously considered desirable, to concentrate it at Lundikotal pending the completion of carriage for the whole force, so as to prevent all menace to our Khyber communications whilst preparations are still being made for a general advance upon that line at the earliest possible date. These decisions are now being carried out. We are not yet in a position to say whether the information on which they were promptly taken was absolutely accurate; but we have deemed it inexpedient to incur the smallest risk in our advance upon Kabul either by the Kurram or the Khyber line; and the commencement of that advance will not be delayed by the above-mentioned re-inforcement of it. We are unable to speak with any confidence as to the real disposition and desire of the Amir at the present moment. We do not as yet believe him to be guilty of any instigation or distinct foreknowledge of the murderous assault on the British Embassy; and indeed it is incredible that he should not have perceived the extreme jeopardy in which such an event must place his own interests. But it is clear that even at that time his authority was very weak, and we feel bound to assume that at the present moment he must be so powerless in the hands of the Afghan mutineers and rebels that little or nothing can be expected from his personal action or influence, whatever his disposition may be.

27. General Roberts reached Ali Khel yesterday evening, and we have reason to hope that his advanced guard under Brigadier General-Baker will reach Kushi on Tuesday the 16th instant. Kushi is about 48 miles from Kabul, and the intervening country is perfectly open. A bumper harvest in the Logar valley and surrounding Ghilzai country promises abundant local supply for our troops beyond Shuturgurda, from which the force under General Roberts will carry with it provision of its own for ten days' supply. The march from Shuturgurda to Kabul, if opposed, may last ten days. If unopposed, it will doubtless be much more rapid; but, as General Roberts will take with him all his available carriage, exclusive reliance cannot be placed on his Kurram line of communications after he has crossed the Shuturgurda, and it is possible that this line may be effectually closed by snow early in the month of November next. For this reason we fully realise the paramount importance of losing no time in the active development of the Khyber line, to which the base of the force now advancing on Kabul under General Roberts must be transferred six weeks hence. But the measures we are now taking for this purpose justify the anticipation that almost as soon as, and possibly before, General Roberts can reach Kabul from the Shuturguridan, General Bright will be in a position to establish communications with him from Gandamak.

28. In his latest telegram of the 13th, General Roberts reports that the troops placed at his disposal should be ample for the work before them, and that they are in excellent spirits. The tribes are working well with him from Thul as far as Ali Khel; the independent Ghilzais beyond are being tampered with by emissaries from Kabul; but General Roberts hopes to forestall any serious effects. We learnt yesterday, with great relief and satisfaction, that Nawab Sir Ghulam Hussan Khan, who had been sent from Kandahar to join Sir L. Cavagnari at Kabul, had arrived safely upon the Shuturguridan.

29. Sir Robert Sandeman has telegraphed that the country round Quetta is quiet, that the good disposition of the Chiefs and people of those parts has been unaffected by the event at Kabul, and that His Highness the Khan of Khelat has offered to assist the British Government to the utmost of his power.

30. The Viceroy has already informed your Lordship by telegraph that our financial position and prospects at the present moment are fortunately such as to occasion no difficulty, and cause no anxiety, in providing for the cost of the unexpected military operations above described.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

A. J. ARBUTHNOT.

A. CLARKE.

JOHN STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

W. STOKES.

A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 21.

STATEMENT regarding the disaster at KABUL on 3rd September 1879.

JELLAL-UL-DIN KHAN, just arrived from Kabul, says: "Yesterday about 9 a.m. sound of firing in Bala Hissar. I live in the (deceased) Mir Munshi's house in Bagh Nawab, far from the Residency. I sent three men to ascertain cause; (one has never returned), the other two, one of whom is known as Babajee (whose wife was wet-nurse to the Mir Munshi's daughter) returned to say that three regiments of infantry on duty in Kabul had, on being offered that morning one month's pay, refused it, demanded arrears, and on not getting it, attacked the Residency quarters, killing and wounding some of the escort and removing some horses (among them Sir Louis' own horse, a bay Wazeeri); after which two or three companies went to the 'Mistri Khana,' and seized some arms and ammunition (the remainder surrounding the Residency); and then a fresh attack was made on the Residency, guns being brought up to join in the attack, the Residency being defended by Sir Louis and staff and escort. The city people were ready to defend themselves and property. The attack continued and increased; and being unable to get to or afford the Residency any aid, after removing the Mir Munshi's family, I left Kabul with Babajee and galloped off towards Ali Khel and Kurram to give the news. I have travelled incessantly and without food: my knees are rubbed sore and eyes bloodshot.

(True—A. C.)

I heard before leaving that the regiments intended attacking the Amir. Six other regiments in quarters at Shahr Naw and Bala Hissar had come to the city to plunder, some returned with plunder, the rest to join the attack. I heard that Daud Shah tried to prevent the attack and was wounded. The fastening of sling of my sword is undone by the jolting at a gallop.

(True—A. C.)

Enclosure 2 in No. 21.

MIRZA NIYAZ TAJIK of Panjsher, servant of Jellal-ud-din (whose wife used to suckle the deceased Munshi's children) states that he was present at the disbursement of pay to the three regiments (without arms), which are in camp at Chaman, at the Bala Hissar. Saif-ud-din Brigadier was present; Muhammad Karim's Regiment refused to take one month's pay, demanding arrears from two months before the "Nawroz" (21st March). A mutineer and ringleader on throwing down his pay was thrashed by the Brigadier and Colonel, on which the men rose and stoned their Colonel and rushed off to the armoury and seized the arms and made a rush at the Amir's quarters, but the gates were shut to, on which they went off, after hurling stones and clods at the Amir's doors, to the Residency; the escort turned out and fired on them, killing and wounding some 10 or 12 men, and closed the gates; by this time some of the horses of the Guide Cavalry and of the Embassy were carried off. Brisk firing was now kept up by the soldiers from below on the Residency and returned by the officers of the Embassy and the escort from their upper-story: the crowd suffering heavily, whereas their fire seemed to have no effect. The regiment brought up a gun from the "Top-khana," but having no ammunition could not use it (nor did I hear the sound of artillery firing as I was leaving Kabul). I now ran off to tell Jellal-ud-din, and we decided on coming away (as we could give no aid) to inform the English. We got away by some excuse, and rode here as hard as we could. Daud Shah, Commander-in-Chief, did his best to control the mutineers, but was shot at and knocked over with stones. The officers did not join these men, but were powerless to prevent them. The only road to the "Top-khana" lies exposed to the fire of the Residency; the only other way in which they could get ammunition would be (if) it were let down to them from the fort walls by the Kabuli sentries. The city people had not joined in the affray, but were all ready to protect themselves and property. The three regiments were joined by three from the new cantonment of Shahr Naw and three from the Bala Hissar itself, making nine in all; also by the cavalry on foot and artillery (without guns). The portion of the Bala Hissar occupied by the Residency is surrounded on the north by a hill, east by a portion of Bala Hissar itself, south by open ground, west by part of Bala Hissar containing magazine. The Amir and the Embassy are completely surrounded. A man might escape at night by letting himself down into the open country from a balcony. There is no well in the Residency or Amir's quarters; the Amir probably has enough food for three or four weeks by him: the "Sahibs" for two or three days; the Amir cannot supply the Embassy now, as it is impossible for him to reach them.

(Taken by myself.)

(Signed)

A. CONOLLY,

Captain, Political Officer.

Ali Khel, the 4th September 1879.

Enclosure 3 in No. 21.

TRANSLATION of a Letter from AMIR YAKUB KHAN to GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, dated 15th Ramazan 1296 H. (3rd September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that in accordance with the divine decree which man cannot evade by his contrivance or precaution, at 8 o'clock (a.m.) to-day, Wednesday, the 15th Ramazan (September), the troops who had been collected in the Ark (citadel) of the capital to receive their pay, having all of a sudden and unexpectedly raised an uproar and tumult, first stoned their own officers and, afterwards, all in a body ran towards the quarters of the British Envoy Plenipotentiary. On one side stones were hurled, on the other side began a hail of bullets from within the Embassy (Sarai); and thus the fire of disturbance, rebellion, and mutiny blazed up; so it could be checked or remedied by no kind of means. Then immediately all the troops at Sherpur and Chaman, outside the citadel, and the city people in successive crowds having entered the citadel to plunder the factories, the artillery, and the arsenal; and then both the soldiery and the city people hastened towards the residence of the Envoy. Meanwhile I ordered Daud Shah Khan, the Commander-in-Chief, to this Minister's assistance. No sooner had he arrived at the door of the Minister's residence than he was felled by the soldiers with stones and spears and is now in a dying state. I then sent Sirdar Yahya Khan and my own son and heir-apparent, with the Koran, the book of God, in their hands towards the troops; but this also was of no avail. Then I deputed the Syuds and the priests, one after the other in their order; but this also produced no good. Up to this moment, viz., the "asr" (4 o'clock), the fight is going on. It now remains to be seen what the result of this will be, and what consequences will follow this alarming and lamentable occurrence. I have written this for your information.

Enclosure 4 in No. 21.

TRANSLATION of a Letter from AMIR YAKUB KHAN to GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, of the 16th Ramazan 1296H. = (September 4, 1879).

AFTER compliments.—Be it known to you that yesterday, Wednesday, the 15th Ramazan (September 3rd) from eight in the morning until evening, thousands of people collected for a determined attack on the person of the (British) Envoy, and a fight and slaughter on both sides took place. At the “Asr” (4 o’clock) prayers they set fire to the residence of the Envoy, and I with a few (lit. five) of my attendants, and adherents am besieged from yesterday until this day, Thursday, the 16th. I have no certain intelligence of the Envoy’s condition. I know not whether he with his attendants has been slain or some one has rescued him from destruction. Although this event has befallen in accordance with the divine decree, still a few (lit. five) evil-disposed and seditious persons, who disliked and opposed the alliance and friendship between the two Governments, are the authors of this dangerous commotion, and have stirred up the populace to bring about the ruin of this State, and (i.e., by) the murder of the Envoy, and having thus shed blood have brought the matters to such a pitch that the Afghan Government has been destroyed and ruined: this is for me a day of the utmost distress, as I am confined within my house, and my few attendants and adherents remain prepared to defend me and my family. All the troops and the city people, and the people of the country adjacent, have united in open revolt from my authority. I am using every effort and expedient and device in my power to suppress this outbreak; but it is to be seen with what effect.

..Daud Shah Khan, the Commander-in-Chief, whom I had sent yesterday to the assistance of the Envoy, is now lying wounded and bruised with stones, spears, and blows from the butt ends of guns, and is not expected to live. Those of his attendants who accompanied him have all been killed. The factories and the arsenal have been sacked, the soldiers and the people have plundered all at their pleasure. In short, my kingdom has by these events been destroyed, and after God my strong reliance is upon friendship and union with the British Government, which should communicate with and counsel me what it considers advisable and expedient, and what it thinks proper—in accordance with the requirements of the terms of perfect friendship and mutual understanding—for the extinguishing of this flame of tumult and crime, and for extricating me from this circle of fear and peril—so that I may act accordingly. Let this not remain hidden from the minds of those in charge of the British Government that so long as I live I will not let go my grasp of the skirt of friendship with, and attachment to the British Government. By God’s will the fact of my cordial friendship and my sincerity, and the innocence of my heart has been and will be clear and manifest as the dawn to the (British) Government. By this affair, in which I have lost my true friend the Envoy, and through which my State has been utterly damaged and broken up, I have become greatly distracted, and am in distress and confusion as to what I should do.

Enclosure 5 in No. 21.

Statement of SIRKAI KHAN, uncle of PADSHAH KHAN.

Padshah Khan, Allal-ud-din Khan, and I live in a quarter of Kabul known as the Bala-joi. Shortly after sunrise we all three went to pay our respects to the Amir; Padshah Khan wished to take leave before starting for the Shuturguridan, which he had been told to look after. While we were waiting to be received, a Munshi, who had been disbursing pay to Muhammad Karim’s Regiment at the office about 150 yards off, hurried up and passed on to the Amir’s apartments, and we heard the sound of firing from the office. The Amir called Padshah Khan, and a Jabbarkhel Chief upstairs, and sent them out with the “Koran” to quiet the troops in the Chaman (or plain), of which one regiment had mutinied at the office. Padshah Khan and I and the heir-apparent and Sirdar Yahya Khan went accordingly to the Chaman; and though we were roughly handled, we succeeded in preventing these two Regiments from joining the rest. A messenger now arrived from the Amir to say the Residency was being attacked and Daud Shah had been sent by the Amir to quell the disturbance, but had been badly stoned and speared, and was with difficulty saved by a few men. After a while we returned to the Amir’s quarters, which were almost deserted, and waited in an outer courtyard till the afternoon: all this time the firing was going on. A messenger came to us to say the Residency had been set on fire, and we saw the smoke rising and in a short time the firing which had become tremendous, ceased. We went over to the Residency, Padshah Khan and I. There was a great crowd of men jostling each other and gutting the place. We could not get close enough to recognise any one, nor did we see the bodies of the Sahibs, but the corpses of both sides were lying thick about the place. We returned to the courtyard, and then a letter arrived from the Amir which Padshah Khan desired me to take to Kurram. I left after night-fall and came away as quick as I could, bringing a footman with me from Surkhab (Abdool Rahman, servant of the Embassy Mehmandar, caught me up at Drekhula). As I was leaving Kabul, sowars of a Kabul regiment in camp on the Chaman told me that out of 11 men,

* Sic. in orig. sowars and grass cutters, on return from getting grass, were met: * two killed and nine saved by the Ressaldar of the Regiment above-mentioned; they were alive when I came away: I was told they were Sikhs as well as Mahomedans. After Daud Shah was wounded the Amir placed sentries round the palace and did not show himself. The soldiery did not concern themselves about him but were intent on taking the Residency. The only troops who did not join in the affray and were ready to assist the Amir, were the Artillery who stood to their guns; had they had any officer to direct them they might have fired on the infantry and helped the Embassy. Numbers of the cavalry and infantry dispersed after the affair was over.

(Taken by myself.)

Camp Ali Khel,

The 6th September 1879.

(Signed)

A CONOLLY, Capt.

Political Officer.

Enclosure 6 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 4th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, Simla.

A MAN, who says he is in Sir Louis Cavagnari's service, has arrived in hot haste from Kabul, and solemnly states that yesterday morning the Residency was attacked by three regiments who had mutinied for their pay, they having guns and being joined by a portion of six other regiments. The Embassy and escort were defending themselves when he left Kabul about noon yesterday. I hope to receive further news.

Enclosure 7 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 5th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel.

YOUR telegram to General Roberts giving news from Kabul of attack on Residency. Send immediately a letter to the Amir referring to report received, and conveying message from Viceroy that British Government holds His Highness strictly responsible for personal safety of Cavagnari and whole British Mission. Add that troops will march on Kabul if not immediately assured of complete safety of Mission, and give out publicly that troops are preparing to march at once.

Enclosure 8 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 5th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel.

A SERVANT and companion of Jellal-ud-din has come in from Rokian and confirms his statement in all matters except as regards the guns being used.

Enclosure 9 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 5th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to GENERAL ROBERTS, Simla.

LETTERS from the Amir brought by Sirkhai Khan, uncle of Padshah Khan, as well as their own statements, leave no hope as to fate of Embassy and escort. Particulars follow immediately.

Enclosure 10 in No. 21. (Extract.)

Telegram, dated 6th September 1879.

FROM CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRKAI KHAN, bearer of Amir's first letter, confirms previous reports of disaster, and describes how Padshah Khan visited the spot and saw the dead bodies of Envoy, staff, and escort. Of the latter, some nine sowars are said to have been out getting grass that day and were not killed with the rest; defence was very stubborn and loss of Kabulis heavy, put down at 100, or more. Finding they could not storm the place, the mutineers set fire to the doorway below, and, when that gave way, swarmed in and up to the upper story, overwhelmed the defenders, and sacked the place.

The second letter was brought by another messenger, servant of the Embassy Mehmandar, whose story in all but a few unimportant details is the same as that first received.

I have detained the Kabul messengers pending receipt of instructions as to line of policy to follow, and what to communicate to Amir, or Padshah Khan. The former invokes our aid; the latter expresses himself, through his messenger, anxious to serve us. Once in Logar valley, where they have had a bumper harvest, we could live on the country.

I beg to cancel my application to be relieved.

Enclosure 11 in No. 21.

Telegram, No. 2376 E.P., dated 6th September 1879.

FROM FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel.

YOUR telegram 6th. Reply to Amir at once from Viceroy that a strong British force under General Roberts will march speedily on Kabul to his relief from Shuturguridan, and that he should use all his resources to co-operate with and facilitate the advance of the troops through his country. Roberts will send detailed instructions.

Enclosure 12 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 7th September 1879.

FROM CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

My letters to Amir and Padshah Khan run as follows (they have just been despatched by Sirkai Khan, who will make all haste to relieve and acquaint the Ghilzais of what is expected of them en route):

To the Amir—Viceroy informs you that a strong British force under General Roberts will move speedily on Shuturguridan and Kabul. You should do all in your power to help with supplies, carriage, &c. It is (?) advisable that Padshah Khan should see to the Shuturguridan, revive the dāk, and communicate daily with General Roberts through myself.

To Padshah Khan—After consulting with the Amir, you should at once go yourself, or depute your brother, Allal-ud-din Khan, along with Sirkai Khan, to the Shuturguridan, and secure, through the Ghilzais, the safe passage of our convoys, &c., and security of roads from Karatiga to Kushi. For this you shall be paid down one year's subsidy as lately fixed by the Amir, and also receive the subsidy monthly from us for such time as you may render aid, or as shall be fixed by the British Government, together with any other honours or rewards which your services, on the approval of the British Government, may entitle you to. Use the dāk or special messengers daily to acquaint General Roberts, through me, with the true state of affairs.

Enclosure 13 in No. 21.

Telegram 2381 E.P., dated 7th September 1879.

FROM FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel.

YOUR telegram 7th. Your letter to Amir should state particularly that the force marches on Kabul to his assistance. Add that Viceroy requests His Highness to keep him constantly informed regarding his own personal safety, and the circumstances of his position, and affairs at Kabul.

Enclosure 14 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 7th September 1879. (Extract.)

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

I BELIEVE the prompt action of Government will have the best possible effect on the tribes here. I have sent for representatives, Maliks of all Jaji sections, to exhort them to show their loyalty, by preserving order, by giving all necessary assistance, and by plainly telling their neighbours beyond our frontier of the inutility and hopelessness of any hostile demonstration.

Enclosure 15 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 7th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

HAVE written to the Amir in accordance with terms of your telegram of to-day.

Enclosure 16 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 8th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla,

Two or three Regiments are said to have marched from Kabul towards Gardez and Spega which lie west of our Jaji border to incite the Ghilzais and Mangals of those parts to rise. Accounts differ as to whether they are cavalry or infantry. Padshah Khan's party said to be greatly concerned and alarmed at what has taken place. None of my messengers back from Kabul yet.

Enclosure 17 in No 21.

Telegram, dated 9th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

AN Afghan, who says he constantly visited the Envoy, confirms previous accounts, highly extols the stubbornness of defence and gallantry of the British Officers, upbraids the cruelty and cowardice of the Kabulis in murdering guests and strangers, says there were 12 regiments implicated, that first a gateway leading into the Residency courtyard was burst open, and there such a resolute stand made with rifle, sword, and bayonet, that the assailants were checked; but they set fire to the house, and the defenders charging out sword in hand were all slain and the place completely wrecked: loss of Kabulis including some city people stated at 210, may be read 410. A guard of Guide Cavalry out with grass-cutters escaped, not known where. Amir, terribly perplexed, and confused at the reproach to his name, is in privacy with a few faithful Sirdars, and is sure to come personally to apologise to the Government, as the regiments had got beyond his control. Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan expected on 7th instant. Amir intends making his excuses to him. Rumour that the sepoys were taken and are still alive. Will continue to give news, for I have friends with the Amir, though I dare not venture out myself.

Enclosure 18 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 10th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

A KAHAR belonging to Embassy who was outside Residency when attack took place has escaped and arrived at Karatiga; says attack began morning, Residency fired noon, but fight continued till evening, guns taking part; believes no one escaped, hid himself and travelled by night; saw no troops on road.

Enclosure 19 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 10th September 1879. (Extract.)

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

EMAM BUKSH, native of Jullundur, once in Hyderabad (Sind) Police, and lately in Sir Louis Cavagnari's secret employ, was present at mutiny of troops, and throughout fight in Residency. Two guns were used, but fired only some eight shots. Says the mutineers, under shelter of a balcony which ran round the building, set fire to it, and that the defenders were partly killed, partly smothered, and burnt alive. Sir Louis was rendered senseless by a cut from behind which clove his head, and was immediately afterwards crushed by a portion of wall and building roof which fell in. Jenkyns and Hamilton were shot, and scorched or burnt to death. Doctor Kelly, being shot, lived till next morning, when the mutineers returned, butchered him and all who were alive, stripping and mutilating their bodies in the most horrible way. The Sikh Jemadar defended the Envoy most gallantly, and struck off the head of his murderer with one blow. A Sikh Duffadar ran out and slew eight men with his own hand. All behaved well, but on Sir Louis being killed they lost heart, and the defence slackened. Ammunition, too, had begun to run out. Deponent hid himself in a drain under one of the baths, and at night crept out, and took refuge with a friendly Mullah. Remained two days, and came away. Three sepoys, who had also secreted themselves, were taken away alive to the Amir the same evening. During the attack which was from all sides, one side overlooking the Residency, the Amir and his Sirdars were looking on unconcerned, and did nothing to help beyond sending his son and Mullah a little way. Daud Shah made only a show of quelling the disturbance, but did not really exert himself. He was not wounded.

Enclosure 20 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 11th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

AODIN, one of two men sent from Rokian on 5th instant, has returned from Kabul, where he has a relation in one of the regiments, to say that as far as he can ascertain, the Amir had not planned or foreseen the destruction of the Embassy; but now that matters have come to that pass, he despaired of ever appeasing or regaining the confidence of the English, and that he and all under him had made up their minds to fight. He had sent out letters, too, in all directions, calling on the people to support him, and despatched a small force of cavalry and infantry to stir up Zurmat and Spegas.

Enclosure 21 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 11th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

News from Gardez, in Zurmat, as follows:—Three regiments and six guns arrived from Ghazni, and three regiments expected from Kabul also. Arms arriving from Kabul for the people. Faiz Mahomed Khan, Ghilzai, who has seen much (?) service, and was commanding the cavalry in Zurmat, is appointed Governor of that province. The country is rallying round him, and an advance was intended by the Spegas route in a few days, the intention being in conjunction with the Machalga Ghilzais to threaten or attack our flank advancing on Shuturgardan. The bodies of two sons of Allayar, a leading chief of Zurmat, who were killed in the disturbance at Kabul, had been brought to Gardez and buried amidst great excitement, the people declaring they would avenge their death.

Enclosure 22 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 12th September 1879.

From CAPTAIN CONOLLY, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL news. Bulk of troops though in receipt (?) of pay demanded, and inflamed with desire to fight, are said to lack carriage and leaders.

Enclosure 23 in No. 21.

Telegram dated 14th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel.

SEND message to Amir that Viceroy has now received his original letters, dated 3rd, 4th September, and desires him to be assured in reply that, if he acts in accordance with his affirmation of innocence, sincerity, and strong reliance on friendship of British Government, he has nothing to fear personally, and that our troops will come to restore his authority and rescue him from his danger.

Enclosure 24 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 5th September 1879.

From VICEROY, Simla, to GENERAL OFFICER COMMANDING TROOPS, Kandahar.

ALL troops at present under orders to return to India to stand fast until further orders. Please telegraph present distribution of troops and what are at Kandahar, and also transport available at Kandahar and between this and Quetta, and what reserve of supplies you have. Major St. John and party to remain at Kandahar until you hear further.

Enclosure 25 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 5th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

News received from Kabul that on 3rd September the British Embassy was attacked by revolted Afghan Regiments and overpowered. Letters leave no hope regarding fate of Mission. Your military orders go separately. Kandahar must be held and St. John retained.

Enclosure 26 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 6th September 1879.

From GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

TROOPS in movement towards Pishin recalled to Kandahar. Town re-occupied. Sirdar Sher Ali Khan has asked permission to reside in citadel inside our lines in town. Sirdar has no information as yet from Kabul, but he seems anxious to be associated closely with us, and I encouraged him in this respect.

Enclosure 27 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 7th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR SHER ALI has been informed of events at Kabul, and expressed absolute devotion to British Government, and offers to raise contingent among Durani tribes to march to Kabul with British Force, should one go from here.

Enclosure 28 in No. 21.

Tel. dated 9th September 1879. (Extract.)

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar.

Your telegram 7th. Convey to Sirdar Sher Ali Khan the acknowledgments of the British Government for his friendly and honourable assurances, and add anything suitable regarding his offer of contingent.

Enclosure 29 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 9th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

EVERYTHING quiet here. Sirdar visited General yesterday evening, and renewed assurances of devotion to British Government. He is raising the usual local contingents of horse under tribal Chiefs to support collectors in collecting revenue; this also gives pay and employment.

Two Kandahar regiments on their road from Kabul to garrison Kandahar, on evacuation, have been halted outside city. One was disarmed before leaving Kabul. The Sirdar offered them leave to go to their homes, but they made protestations of fidelity and requested to be allowed to garrison any place remote from Kandahar. They have been ordered to the Tirin district under Sirdar's son, certain suspected officers being dismissed.

Arrangements making for supply of Commissariat from Government grain(?). This will mitigate rise in prices already commencing, and put money in Sirdar's Treasury, which (is) empty.

Zamindawar people have refused to pay revenue to Governor, Muhammad Yusaf, Amir's uncle, who is unpopular, and has no armed force. Sirdar has directed him to return to Girishk, and in conjunction with us, is inviting the Zamindawar Chiefs to Kandahar.

Enclosure 30 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 10th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR has received letter from Amir, written Thursday, giving account of events of preceding day. He says that with thousands of men he strove through the day to rescue the Envoy, and lays great stress on Daud Shah's wounds, adding that all the men with him were killed. He orders the Sirdar to follow advice of representatives of British Government.

Another letter from Amir's Munshi Bashi to Sirdar says that the troops have gone to their homes, or fled; that six regiments did not share in the attack, but have lost all discipline. He concludes thus:—"In order that the Amir's letters may be fit to be shown, should you think it advisable to do so, I have inserted some words and phrases, such as are advisable at such a time."

Enclosure 31 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 11th September 1879.

From GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

PLEASE let us know as soon as possible intentions of Government with regard to retention of part or whole of force at Kandahar during the winter. The information is required with reference to arrangements for hutting and provisioning troops here and in Pishin. Early definite orders will save much trouble and expense. If it be decided to keep whole force above Passes, it is to be noted that supplies and forage are more readily procurable here than in Pishin.

Enclosure 32 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 11th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

WITH reference to General Stewart's message of to-day, I think that forces might be with advantage retained here during the winter. Sirdar wishes it, and its presence under the circumstances, is not in any way distasteful to any part of population.

Enclosure 33 in No. 21.

Telegram, No. A.-94, dated 12th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

GOVERNMENT intend retention of whole force at Kandahar during winter.

Kurrachee will be your base, and the Bolan and Sind your line of communication. All supply and transport will be now transferred to the Bombay Government and authorities, to whom you must state your wants.

Enclosure 34 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 13th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR's bi-weekly post from Kabul arrived yesterday, having left 6th. He says that the only letter from Amir was a simple one of condolence on death of a relation, and I have no reason to disbelieve his statement. None of the private letters in bag contained, as far as I can ascertain, any notice of the occurrences of the 3rd, but this excites no surprise here.

Enclosure 35 in No. 21.

Telegram, dated 13th September 1879.

From AGENT, GOVERNOR-GENERAL, Quetta, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

I ARRIVED Quetta this morning. Country perfectly tranquil; Kabul news has not had disturbing result. I had meeting of Achakzai and Kakazai Chiefs in Khojak Pass yesterday, and explained to them what had happened. One and all declared their determination to abide by previous agreement, and to, as heretofore, faithfully serve the Government. His Highness the Khan has telegraphed to me that his life, country, and all his possessions are at the disposal of Government. I consider there is no cause whatever for anxiety in this direction.

No. 22.

To His Excellency the Right Honorable THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA in Council.

No. 101 of 1879.

MY LORD,

India Office, London, September 18, 1879.

1. HER Majesty's Government have received with profound grief and regret the intelligence conveyed by your Excellency's telegrams of the 6th inst., of the attack made on the British Embassy at Cabul by mutinous Afghan troops and the people of the city, which, as is unhappily but too certain, in spite of a desperate resistance on the part of the British Envoy, the members of his staff, and his native escort, terminated in the massacre of the entire Mission.

2. Her Majesty's Government feel that it would be premature at this moment to discuss either the immediate causes to which this deplorable event may be attributed, or the ultimate consequences which may result from it. They cannot, however, delay expressing their keen sense of the loss which the empire has sustained by the tragic and premature death of so able a public servant as Sir L. Cavagnari, and of his companions, to whom, in full confidence of the ability of the ruler of Cabul to protect them, had been entrusted the honourable but difficult duty of consolidating the friendly relations, so recently re-established, between the British and Afghan Governments. They desire also to place on record their recognition of the gallantry and devotion shown by the escort of the Corps of Guides in the almost hopeless task of the defence of the Embassy.

3. Her Majesty's Government need scarcely assure your Excellency in Council of their steady support in all measures which may be necessary to vindicate the honour of Great Britain, and to exact redress for the murderous violence to which the members of the Mission have fallen victims.

I have, &c.
(Signed) CRANBROOK.

No. 23.

No. 203 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, 25th September 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of a communication from the late Envoy and Minister Plenipotentiary at Kabul, and of its enclosures, regarding the movements of certain Russian officers apparently engaged in making surveys on the Oxus.

No. 25, dated 27th August 1879.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
E. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 23.

Memo. No. 25, dated 27th August 1879.

From MAJOR SIR LOUIS CAVAGNARI, K.C.B., C.S.I., Envoy and Minister Plenipotentiary, Kabul, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, Simla.

HAS the honour to forward translation of three letters received by the Governor of Afghan-Turkestan, reporting the movements of certain Russian officers engaged in making surveys on the Oxus.

Enclosure 2 in No. 23.

Translation of Letter, Pattakaisar (?) ferry, dated 16th Shaban.

THIRTY-ONE Russians have come up the river in two boats. They have been 48 days on the road. Men of the country drag the boats up by ropes. They went ashore for a very short time to eat at Chuchka, on the north side of the river, and then proceeded to Shorab (?) and Pattakaisar (?)

The wooden boat is 30 yards long and 5 yards broad. The small boat is of iron and has a deck under which I don't know what there is. The chief Russian among them has a telescope through which he looks in front and behind, and writes down the account of the country and the river.

Nobody understands what he is doing. There are 14 boxes in the iron boat. The followers of these infidels are all armed. They seem to do nothing else beside noting down the state of the country and the river.

Enclosure 3 in No. 23.

Translation of Letter, dated 21st Shaban.

In a letter dated the 14th of the present month I wrote to you that three Russian officers with three soldiers and one interpreter had come up the river in two boats, one a small one belonging to the Russians, and the other a large one which they had brought from Organj, and which was manned by six Organj boatmen, and had passed one night in Charjui and one night in Kilif. They engaged a man in Kilif for 300 tangas whom they took with them, and questioned him about the countries on both sides of the river.

The people of the country pulled the boats up by ropes from boundary to boundary. They kept on the other side of the river, and never approached our side. The Mir of Kilif's men say that they are going to the source of the river.

I have repeated most of what I wrote in my last letter, lest you may not have received it, as you did not answer it. Yesterday, the 20th, 20 Russian sowars with eight loaded camels arrived at Ak-kum on the banks of the river and passed the night there.

It is reported that some other sowars are coming after them. I enclose a letter on the subject. I sent a man towards Sherabad, &c. When he returns he will bring a true account.

Enclosure 4 in No. 23.

Translation of Letter from a Turkoman of Kirki.

For some time I have been sick, but am now recovering, and hasten to inform you that 20 Russian sowars with eight loaded camels arrived on Saturday evening at Ak-kum. They passed the night there and moved on next day. I don't know where they will halt, nor what their errand is. Some other Russians, following them, have arrived in Kirki, with some object in view.

I have sent a man on with them who will find out what they are doing.

No. 23A.

No. 204 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, the 25th September 1879.

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 196, dated 1st September 1879, we have the honor to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of a letter from the late Envoy and Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of the Amir of Afghanistan and its Dependencies, No. 24, dated 27th August 1879, transmitting his Diary for the period between the 17th and the 23rd August 1879.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 23A.

Memo. No. 24, dated 27th August 1879.

From MAJOR SIR LOUIS CAVAGNARI, K.C.B., C.S.I., Envoy and Minister Plenipotentiary, Kabul, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

HAS the honour to submit Diary of the British Embassy at Kabul, for the week ending 23rd August 1879.

Enclosure 2 in No. 23A.

No. 5.—Diary of the British Embassy at Kabul, from the 17th to the 23rd August 1879.

17th August 1879.—The daughter of Sirdar Yahya Khan married to the Amir has been attacked by cholera, but is now reported out of danger.

The deaths which have occurred from cholera amongst the Herat regiments are variously reported to be from 120 to 365.

The Amir has reduced the allowances of the majority of the Muhammadzai (Barakzai) Sirdars on the grounds that he will not require them to keep up so many followers as the late Amir directed them to maintain. This has caused dissatisfaction, but final orders in the matter have not yet been issued.

Certain military officers of high rank have fallen under the Amir's displeasure, and have been deprived of their commands. Among the number are General Ghulam Hyder Khan, Charkhi (who commanded the troops at Ali Masjid), and Brigadier-General Taj Muhammad Khan (in consequence of the fracas which took place about the lease of the Mint, vide Diary of 31st July 1879). General Saifudin Khan, commanding the artillery, is said to be about to be degraded, but as long as Daud Shah has influence over the Amir it is not likely to take place, as Saifudin Khan is a personal friend of the Commander-in-Chief.

Sirdar Yahya Khan has been given the command of 1,500 irregular cavalry ("Sowar-i-Kushada"). Kazi Sultan Ali, the chief priest of the Shiahs, has died of cholera.

18th August 1879.—The Amir has given Abdul Karim Khan, the Kohistani Chief, a letter to the headmen of Nijrow, summoning them to Kabul to arrange for the payment of their arrears of revenue. Abdul Karim has been promised the Governorship of Nijrow if he succeeds in securing the submission of the people of that valley to the Amir's authority. Asmatula Khan, Ghilzai, is reported to have increased the number of his personal retainers from 200 to 500, and is about to remove his family from Kach to Kulman.

The Amir has directed the Governor of Afghan Turkestan to move troops against the rebels in Badakshan as soon as the regiments in course of relief arrive from Kabul. It is thought that the troops are not sufficiently in hand for the task of restoring order in Badakshan.

19th August 1879.—Sirdar Hashim Khan has been appointed to the Governorship of the northern portion of the Hazarajat.

Six regiments of infantry, one of cavalry, and 12 mountain guns, under orders for Turkestan, have left the cantonments. Two Kandahari regiments of infantry have left Kabul for Kandahar.

The three regiments lately despatched to Ghazni mutinied on the road and wounded Brigadier-General Zabardast Khan. The mutiny is said to have originated in consequence of one of the Colonels having flogged a soldier. The Colonel was violently assaulted and severely wounded. Numbers of men deserted, leaving their rifles which were sent into Kabul.

The Amir has of late become displeased with Daud Shah, and has demanded accounts from him; but owing to the exertions of the Mustaufi a reconciliation has taken place.

Part of Kazi Kadru's family and property left Kabul last night. He is reported to be somewhere in the Safed Koh. His Kabul wives have returned to their parents: his concubines have been sold.

20th August 1879.—Yesterday one month's pay was sent out to the troops under orders for Turkestan. The troops refused to take one month's pay and demanded their full arrears of four months. A compromise was effected by the Amir, having sent another month's pay which the troops accepted: but it is thought probable that many will desert when they get a few marches out of Kabul.

21st August 1879.—Haji Ataullah, former Envoy at the Court of the Amir of Bokhara, is said to be preparing to return to his appointment. (The Foreign Minister has assured the British Envoy that Haji Ataullah will not be deputed to Bokhara until the wishes of the British Government are made known to the Amir).

Muhammud Ali Beg, the Wakil-ud-dowlat of Sighan, arrived in Kabul yesterday with 100 sowars. It is rumoured that he will be detained indefinitely at Kabul, and will not be granted his former appointment.

Sayad Muhammad, son of the late Sayad Nur Muhammad Shah, has been appointed to a civil office at Kandahar under Sirdar Sher Ali Khan.

It is reported that the Amir is pressing Sirdar Hashim Khan to deliver up certain money and valuables the mother of the late heir-apparent is supposed to have deposited with him.

The amount of money reported to have been taken from the mother of the late Abdulla Jan, by order of the Amir, is as follows:—1,60,000 tillas Bukhari (1 tilla=9 rupees Kabuli) 12,000 ratiskas (Russian 5 rouble piece (gold)=12 rupees).

To-day the Amir went on a visit of condolence to the family of Mir Akbar Khan, Kohistani, at the gardens of Ali Mardan. After the visit His Highness went to see the cantonments at Sherpur.

His Highness the Amir sent his Foreign Minister to the British Envoy to say that, in consequence of the unruly behaviour of the soldiery at Herat, he did not think it prudent that Major St. John should go there, but Sirdar Sher Ali Khan would be instructed to arrange for that officer's journey via Anar Darra to Birjand. The above was communicated to Major St. John by telegraph.

23rd August 1879.—Report received that six Companies located at Ghorī in Afghan Turkestan mutinied about their arrears of pay and arrested their commanding officer, and marched with him towards Mazar-i-Sharif with the view to demanding their pay from the Governor of the province. General Ghulam Hyder Khan, fearing that the arrival of these men would create a bad effect amongst the rest of the soldiery, sent out some pay, and thereby persuaded the mutineers to return to their post. The Turkestan soldiers, however, heard of what had been done, and are likely to follow the example set them.

The Mustaufi and Foreign Minister were informed that arrangements for laying the telegraph wire across the Shuturgurdan are in progress, and that an escort would be required from the Amir to protect the camp of the telegraph officials. The Ministers replied that on intimation being received as to the date of the arrival of the telegraph officials at the Afghan frontier, all necessary arrangements would be made for their protection and for supplies.

No. 24.

No. 210 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State or India.

MY LORD,

Simla, 25th September 1879.

WE have the honour to enclose, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, papers containing all the material information that has reached us, since the despatch of our letter of the 15th September, regarding the circumstances of the attack upon the British Embassy at Kabul, and the course of events within Afghanistan. We propose also to report briefly the progress of the measures adopted to exact retribution at Kabul, and to restore order in the country.

2. In regard to the circumstances of the attack on the Embassy, several men of the escort, who had taken part in the defence, have managed to escape into British territory, and their depositions are enclosed with this letter. There are of course various discrepancies in the details of these statements, especially in regard to the manner in which the real attack, with fire-arms, began; but all accounts seem to agree that certain unarmed regiments were drawn up in the Bala Hissar to receive their pay, that they suddenly broke out into violent mutiny, and attacked the Residency; that they were at first kept off, but they went for arms, and on their return after a short interval surrounded and besieged the Residency; reaching the roof and setting fire to the house below, until the building became untenable and the defenders were gradually overpowered. The mutineers were joined by the city mob; and there is no evidence from the accounts given by these men, that any serious attempt was made by the Amir or his people to assist or rescue the British officers. Upon this important point it is still necessary to suspend judgment, until we are in possession of more ample and authentic evidence of the Amir's actual position and behaviour at the time, and until the Amir's own explanations shall have been received. From Kandahar we are informed that the Amir has written to his uncle, Muhammad Yusaf Khan, Governor of Zamindawar, giving an account of the events of the 3rd September, differing much from that sent to the Viceroy and Sirdar Sher Ali Khan. Only two regiments, both of the Body-Guard, are said to have mutinied, and attacked the Embassy and murdered the members of the Embassy. Nothing is mentioned of any attempt at rescue, or of participation by the people, and it is expressly stated that no other injury was done, and that by evening everything was quiet. We remark that Baha-ud-din Khan, a very intelligent native officer of our cavalry, who was in Kabul at the time, and Sirdar Gholam Nakshband Khan, who though not at Kabul when the attack took place, was connected with the Embassy, are both of opinion that the Amir might have assisted our officers.

3. In regard to the origin and causes of this sudden outbreak we are still without authentic information. Taimur, a Sowar of the Guides escort, who has escaped, mentions that the troops and the city people at first welcomed the arrival of the Envoy, imagining that he would be able at once to improve their condition; but that the temper of the soldiery altered when they were disappointed about obtaining their pay. When, therefore, the full arrears were refused to the regiments in the Bala Hissar, they immediately turned on the Residency. Private letters received at Kandahar from Kabul corroborate this account, and say that the affair was unpremeditated; although no serious attempt was made to control the mutineers. On the other hand a letter from a Kazi of Kabul to Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan is said to hint that the affair was premeditated, and that Sir L. Cavagnari had some previous warning. At Kandahar Sirdar Sher Ali has freely declared his conviction that the Amir had been in the hands of dangerous traitors.

4. Several letters have been received, during the past ten days, by General Roberts at Ali Khel from the Amir. Of the first, dated 11th September, we enclose copy; it expresses the Amir's relief and pleasure at receiving a letter addressed to him, at the Viceroy's order, by Captain Conolly, his confidence in the friendship of the Viceroy, and his intention to punish the mutineers. Subsequent letters, dated 16th September, report the mutiny of troops at Herat, and the murder of the Governor there, with other news; while His Highness' latest letter, dated the 17th instant, answered and complied with General Roberts' suggestion that confidential representatives should be sent to him from the Amir, by announcing the deputation of Mustaufi Habibulla and Wazir Sher Muhammad Khan. These representatives reached the camp at Ali Khel on the 22nd, and have had interviews with General Roberts. They presented letters from the Amir acknowledging receipt, and expressing satisfaction at the contents of letters that had been addressed to His Highness by General Roberts, and declaring his fidelity to the British alliance. The deputies also assured General Roberts verbally of the Amir's friendly disposition, and his wish to be guided by the advice of our Government.

5. In regard to the general state of affairs at Kabul, and to the disposition of the principal tribes with whom we have to deal, it is as yet not possible to form any precise opinion. There can be no doubt that emissaries from Kabul are abroad in the tribal country, with the object of inciting the tribes to take arms, and to be prepared for giving trouble to the British forces. From Peshawur it has been reported that letters from the Amir were believed to have come to the Mohmands, Afridis, and Shinwaris, directing them to assemble. On the 17th September, General Roberts heard from the Ghilzais that the Amir had called upon them to stop all roads leading from Ali Khel toward Kabul; while on the other hand, Major St. John was told at Kandahar that the tribes had been instructed not to oppose our advance; and to reserve themselves for attack on our communications hereafter. We have not yet ascertained to what extent, and with what object, the Amir himself may be in correspondence with these tribes, or whether the messages are circulating under his direct authority. It was to be expected, however, that in his present situation the Amir would be anxious to secure, in any contingency, the adherence of the more powerful tribes; while it was certain that all persons at Kabul who have reason to dread our presence there would use their utmost influence with the tribes to embarrass our advance.

6. There has been an attack, near the Shuturgurdan, on a small party of our troops escorting stores; but generally the tribes with whom our officers are in communication on the Shuturgurdan and Khyber lines have not shown themselves hostile. The Commissioner of Peshawur reports satisfactory arrangements made with the Afridis of the Khyber; and from Ali Khel we learn that the headmen of many neighbouring tribes are coming into our camp. General Stewart's reconnaissance toward Ghazni will probably engross the attention of the Southern Ghilzais and will aid in maintaining tranquillity in that direction.

7. Kandahar and the adjacent country continue quiet. The Amir's Governor, Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, is on very good terms with the British officers, and apparently desires to prove his attachment to the British Government in the existing crisis of Afghan affairs.

8. In the outlying provinces of Afghanistan the central authority of the Kabul Government appears to be weak. The Governor of Zamindawar, who is a younger brother of the late Amir, has shut himself up in his fort, and has sent into Kandahar for help. At Herat some troops mutinied on the 5th September, two days after the outbreak at Kabul, murdered Fakir Ahmed Khan, the Governor of the town, and plundered and burnt his house. Fakir Ahmed had been a devoted adherent of Yakub Khan, the present Amir; he had accompanied Sirdar Ayub Khan into Persia, returned with him, and was supposed to be his chief and most trusted officer at Herat. But a telegram from Major St. John mentions that private letters express an opinion that Ayub himself planned the murder, apparently from jealousy of Fakir Ahmed's attachment to the Amir. The Amir has confirmed this news from Herat by letters to General Roberts, of which the last received states that the troops at Herat have been again disorderly, but have been quieted by payment. From Badakshan intelligence has been received, through Kashmir, of another local revolution, by which Mir Baba Khan has been overthrown.

9. Our military situation at the present moment may be briefly summed up as follows : in Southern Afghanistan, General Stewart concentrated the bulk of his force at Kandahar, and in addition to guarding his long line of communications had prepared a force of 2,000 men with transport and supplies, ready to move at a moment's notice. We have strengthened this force by the addition of two companies of Bombay Sappers for employment on the Bolan road, and have called up a Bombay brigade of three infantry regiments to guard the Sukkar-Multan line and frontier, and to meet the demands for escort and convoy duty. We directed a reconnaissance to be made to Kelat-i-Ghilzai; and a force of about 3,000 men under Brigadier General Hughes left yesterday morning for Kelat-i-Ghilzai. We have further under consideration the expediency of pushing this reconnaissance even up to Ghazni. On this line all operations are in full working order.

10. On the Kurram line, the supply of transport and the progress made up the valley by the reinforcing troops have now placed General Roberts in a position to advance. His line of communication is fairly well-guarded already, and is daily becoming more so. His field force is concentrated between Ali Khel and Shuturguridan. An advance will be made to-day on Dobandi or Kushi by half the force; the remaining half following a day or two afterwards, when the Shuturguridan will be held by four guns, the 3rd Sikhs, and 11th Native Infantry. The field force should therefore be fully concentrated by the 1st at Kushi, whence Kabul can be reached in four marches. Communication will be maintained with the Shuturguridan until the pass is closed by snow, or the Khyber line is open.

11. On the Khyber line, Major-General Bright, who is now at Peshawur, has organised a strong advanced brigade which is destined to move on to Jellalabad and to push a reconnaissance beyond. A portion of the Lundikotal force will move immediately upon Dakka. The sickness in the Peshawur valley and Khyber Pass, which has been unusually great, has added to the difficulty of equipping two lines at once, but matters are mending in this direction; and as all transport has now been diverted to Peshawur, there is every hope that the road to Kabul will be open via the Khyber before the end of next month. A cart road already exists to Gandamak, and this will be improved and continued onwards with the utmost possible expedition.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

P.S.—A telegram dated 24th September has been received from General Roberts to the effect that, General Baker occupied Kushi without resistance at 3.20 p.m. o'clock, on the 24th instant. He reports that supplies are abundant. The strength of the force he has with him in Kushi is over 2,000 men.

Enclosure 1 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 14th September 1879, received 16th Sept.

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

A FOLLOWER of Cavagnari, Emam Buksh, and a Kahar have arrived here. They state three of the escort were alive when they left, and had been taken to Amir. Their fate unknown. Party of sowars were out with grass-cutter; their fate also unknown. Escort reported to have behaved most gallantly, especially Sikh Jemadar of Cavalry.

Enclosure 2 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Following is précis of letter received yesterday from Amir, dated 11th September :—
Letter begins—

I HAVE received your letter of 7th instant, and was much pleased. I fully understood what was written. Complete confidence was restored and sense of relief felt in friendship shown by Viceroy, as my prosperity found favour in his (?) sight. I am dreadfully distressed and aggrieved at recent events ; but there is no fighting against God's will. I hope to inflict such punishment on the evil-doers as will be known world-wide, and prove my sincerity. I have twice written on this subject, and third time by my confidential servant, Sher Muhammad Khan. I now write to say that, for these eight days, I have preserved self and family by the good offices of those who were friendly to me, partly by bribing, partly by hoaxing the rebels. Some of the cavalry I have dismissed ; and night and day (I) am considering how to put matters straight. Please God, the mutineers will soon meet with the punishment they deserve, and my affairs be arranged to satisfaction of British Government. Certain persons of high position in these provinces have become rebellious ; but I am watching carefully and closely every quarter. I have done all I could to ensure Nawab Gholam Hussan's safety. I trust to God for opportunity of showing my sincere friendship for British Government and recovering my good name before the world. Letter ends.

Enclosure 3 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan reached this yesterday. He arrived at Shah Kalander Kili, three marches from Kabul, before hearing of murder of Embassy. Troops at Ghazni seemed ready for mischief, Amir sent Allal-ud-din, Padshah Khan's brother, to take care of him. People of Wardak were inclined to molest him, but he managed to reach Shuturguridan with Allal-ud-din without receiving injury. His property he had to leave with a friend in Wardak. Nawab's opinion is that Amir did not plan destruction of Embassy, but for some time there was estrangement between him and Envoy, and Amir had sent ammunition to Logar and orders to Ghazni to support any insurrectionary movement or opposition to English. Nawab thinks Amir will fly to Turkestan when we advance, and proposes that he should be invited to meet us as proof of his sincerity. Nawab says, massacre calls for retribution, and country should be occupied in strength.

Enclosure 4 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 17th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

I hope I made satisfactory arrangement yesterday with Allal-ud-din Khan for security of road from Karatiga to beyond Kushi, provision of transport animals, and supplies.

Ghilzais report that Amir has called upon (them) to stop all roads leading from this towards Kabul. I am trying to get one of the Amir's letters to this effect.

Enclosure 5 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 17th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Spy from Kabul reports 12 regiments, Highlanders (?), in Kabul; three had gone previously to Ghazni. Amir has authority and has his door guarded by faithful servant. He says open jibād is to be urged, and troops assembled. Whole city shared in plunder of Embassy, and that Kabulis are much concerned at the vengeance we may take. No troops between Kabul and this; country quiet. People of Logar, excepting the Afghans, favorable to us.

Amir had killed Brigadier Abdul Karim and Abdul Karim, Kohistani (?) for refusing to march off mutinous regiment to Kohistan, there dispersing and making away with them.

Enclosure 6 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879, received 19th.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KOTE DUFFADAR Futtah Muhammad and Sowar Akbar Shah, of Guide Cavalry, arrived last night, with Sirkai Khan, uncle of Padshah Khan, Ghilzai Chief, (who) were out together with a Sikh Sowar, also saved, and twenty-five grass-cutters, twenty-two saved by Colonel Ibrahim Khan, pensioner of British Government and in Amir's employ,—state that some disturbance was anticipated ever since arrival of regiments from Herat, and that they had warned the Embassy. They were saved by their own tribesmen, Kuzalbash (?); do not consider revolt was instigated by Amir, who was still helpless. Some Embassy servants have escaped,—Envoy's bearer, chupprassis, Peshawuri, and Kuzalbash dhobi, and baker, also a sepoy, Ghilzai, who was on furlough in Kohistan. Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani Chief, said killed by Amir, because two of the three mutinous regiments were chiefly Kohistanis: this said to have caused revolt in Kohistan.

No preparations have yet been made either for opposing us in the capital, or on the road. The three sowars, including the Sikhs, were protected by Naibs (?) Mir Muhammad Khan and Rahim Khan, Kuzalbash Sirdars Taimur Saborai Shahzada. A Sowar in the Guides and one Gholam Nubbi, formerly in the Guides, Kuzalbash and Chupprassi to Envoy, saved.

Letter will follow.

Enclosure 7 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879, received 19th.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Letters from Amir, dated 16th September, and enclosures from Turkestan and Herat, report as follows:—Mutiny of troops and murder of Fakir Ahmed Khan, Civil Governor and Military Commandant under Ayub Khan at Herat; disaffection of three regiments ordered to march from Takhtapul and Mazar-i-Sharif to Ali Shaban in Turkestan; movements of Russian Officers under Czar's nephew, Nicholas Constantine Ozak, with one hundred and fifty men, apparently to have a look at country and meet Amir Bokhara.

Ayub's letter to Amir confirms report of disturbance in Turkestan, and begs leave to resign his position.

Amir states that he hopes very shortly to regain his power and intends expending the whole of his resources (?) and energy in maintaining his friendship with British.

The Russians gave out they intended fighting Turkomans at or near Merv.

Enclosure 8 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL BAKER, Shuturguridan, through Ali Khel, to VICEROY, Simla.

Yesterday received letter from Head Malik of Kushi offering to come in; have summoned him here to-day. Yesterday letter arrived from Amir which has been sent to Roberts this morning. Nakshband Khan Sirdar Bahadur, in Cavagnari's employ, since arrival of troops at Jellalabad in December last, reached this; he will doubtless be of great service as regards information when the time comes; he has been resident at Kabul for 10 years, and has property there and at Jellalabad; used to go to Residency every day: he says that if Amir had chosen he might have assisted Envoy. Arsenal was not looted. Doubts Amir. All here quiet and well. Very cold.

Enclosure 9 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 20th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Daud Shah has expressed wish to serve us and asked if he may. I have replied in the affirmative.

Hastings and Mahomed Amir have gone to join Baker on Shuturguridan and open communication with people of Logar.

Arrangements being made for pushing on telegraph line towards Kushi.

Two hundred camels have just come to take our supplies to Shuturguridan.

According to Nakshband Khan, Amir might have stopped attack on Resident when troops went to their lines to fetch their arms. As, however, Nakshband has come straight from Wali Mahomed's protection, his account must be received cum grano.

Enclosure 10 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 20th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

LETTER just received from (Amir), dated 17th instant, acknowledging receipt of my letter of 13th instant, suggesting deputation of trustworthy Agent to meet me, and intimating that, on 19th instant, Mustaufi Habibulla and Wazir Shah Muhammad would start for my camp.

Letter further contains assurances of trust in, and friendship toward, British Government.

Enclosure 11 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

PRIVATE letters from Kabul state, three regiments only engaged in attack on Residency, that the affair was apparently unpremeditated, having arisen from disappointment of these three regiments at getting one month's pay only, and that no serious attempt at relief was made beyond preventing other troops taking part.

Enclosure 12 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

A PRIVATE letter of 8th from Kabul confirms report that three regiments only mutinied and attacked Residency. One lately arrived from Herat, one Kabuli, and one of Amir's body guard. All three have received pay and been sent to Kohistan. Kabul is said to be in the greatest confusion and excitement.

Enclosure 13 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR SHIRINDIL KHAN, a nephew of Sirdar Sher Ali, who started for Kabul about a fortnight ago to make his submission to Amir, returned to-day, having met, between Mukur and Ghazni, a courier bearing letters from Amir to his Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai.

The courier told him of the massacre of the Envoy and escort, which was caused, he said, by quarrel about a woman taken into the Residency, and was carried out with the connivance of the Amir, who was now sending orders in all directions to assemble troops and tribes for a holy war.

Six regiments had been ordered to Kabul from Herat, and six from Turkestan.

The courier himself said that he was taking letters to Mahomed Tahir Khan, Governor of Kelat (-i-Ghilzai) to raise the Southern Ghilzais.

He had also orders from the Amir to the Governors of Ghazni and Kelat (i-Ghilzai) to seize Nawab Gholam and send him to Kabul.

Enclosure 14 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 15th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR MUHAMMAD YUSAF KHAN, Governor of Zamindawar, being unable to enforce his authority and in fear of his life, has shut himself up in the fort of Sarhing, and sent to Sirdar Sher Ali for help; the latter is sending out to bring him in to Kandahar.

Enclosure 15 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 16th September 1879.

From SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Disposition of Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai uncertain. Sirdar suggested yesterday that Kelat-i-Ghilzai should be brought within circle of immediate influence of Kandahar, both for local and strategic reasons; and there would be no difficulty in occupying it as proposed.

Enclosure 16 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 16th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

AMIR has written to his uncle, Muhammad Yusaf Khan, (?) Governor of Zamin-dawar, giving account of event of 3rd, differing much from that sent to Viceroy and Sirdar. Only two regiments, both of body-guard, said to have mutinied, and attacked Legation, and murdered British. Nothing was mentioned of any attempt at rescue, or participation of people. Expressly states that no (?) other injury was done, and by evening everything was quiet.

Enclosure 17 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879.

From GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

FOLLOWING force ordered for advance to Kelat-i-Ghilzai under Brigadier-General Hughes:—Wing 59th Foot, Wing 3rd Goorkhas, Wing 2nd Biluchis, 2nd Punjaub Cavalry, two guns, 8-4 Field Battery, and three guns, 11-11 Mountain Battery: a Company of Sappers, with two Companies Biluchis, will follow with reserve European stores. Major St. John might accompany force to report on disposition of tribes.

Attitude of Governor Mahomed Tahir Khan unknown, out approach of force communicated to him with request to provide supplies.

Enclosure 18 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

DAK from Kabul with dates to 11th September arrived yesterday evening. Letter from Amir to Sirdar contained only intimation that all was going on satisfactory at Kabul.

Enclosure 19 in No. 24.

Telegram, dated 18th September 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

LETTER from Ayub Khan at Herat to Sirdar states that on the 5th September Kabul regiments mutinied, attacked house of General Fakir Ahmed Khan; killed him, plundered and burnt his house.

Enclosure 20 in No. 24.

Translation of a letter from the AMIR MUHAMMAD YAKUB KHAN, to SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN, dated Thursday, the 16th Ramazan = 4th September.

ON the 15th Ramazan, the regiments which had come for their pay at 8 a.m. to the Ark suddenly rose in mutiny. First they stoned their own officers, and then with one accord ran to the residence of the Envoy. From their side stones were thrown, and from the other side a rain of shot was poured. The fire of mutiny and disturbance at once reached such a height that it became beyond remedy; and all the regiments from Shirpur and Chaman, (the cantonments) outside the Bala Hissar, and all the people of the city of every tribe invaded the Bala Hissar, and began to plunder the artillery park, the arsenal, and the factories; after which all the crowd, troops, and citizens, surrounded the Envoy's house. In the meantime I had sent Daud Shah Khan, Sipah-Salar, to the

* Bayonets fixed on sticks, a favourite weapon in Afghanistan.—O. St. J.

Envoy's help. At the door of the Envoy's house he fell under the blows of stones and sar-naizah,* so that he is now on the point of death. I then sent Yahya Khan and my son the Waliahd, the Koran in his hand, to the troops, but it was of no avail. I then sent the Seyyids and Mullahs, but this equally useless. Till the time of evening prayer on Wednesday with thousands of men I defended the Envoy. On both sides there was much slaughter. At the time of evening prayer the door of the Residency was set on fire. Although it was the will of God that this should happen, yet those five,† intriguers, whose profession is enmity, who were displeased at the friendship of the English and Afghan Governments, were the origin of this terrible and fearful agitation of the mob, and instigated them to the ruin of this Government and the murder of the Envoy. The result has been that much blood has been shed, and that the kingdom of Afghanistan is ruined and destroyed. My own state is very grievous. With five‡ servants and adherents, who with girded loins are guarding me and my family, I am sitting in my own little house.§ The troops, the townspeople, and the inhabitants of the neighbourhood with one accord have diverted the road of obedience from me, but by every means in my power, I am trying to put an end to the business. Daud Shah Khan, whom I sent to help the Envoy, is so grievously wounded by stones, gunstocks, and bayonets, that there is no hope for him. The people who went with him are all killed. The arsenal and workshops are so completely ruined that of the latter not a brick remains in place, and everything of use to the soldiers and people has been taken away from the former. In short, my rule in consequence of this occurrence has gone to the winds; and I, after trust in the benevolence of God, have no hope but in the amity and concord of the British Government; and my opinion is this—that to extinguish this terrible conflagration gration, and escape from this fearful and dangerous circle, the only way is to act according to the advice of the representatives of the British Government. I send you this for your information.

† Probably meant to signify a "small party," not the exact number five. The idiom is a common one here.—O. St. J.

‡ As before "a small number," "a handful."—O. St. J.

§ "Saraicheh."

A letter from the Amir's Munshi-Bashi to the Sirdar adds that of the soldiers, some have gone to their homes, others have fled. The regiments in the Chaman outside the Bala Hissar, six in number, though not so guilty as the others, for they desisted from the attack on Cavagnari's house when they saw the Koran, have nevertheless spilt the water of discipline. In order that the Amir's letter may be fit to be shown, should you think it advisable to do so, I have inserted some words and phrases such as are advisable at such a time."

(Signed) O. B. ST. JOHN, Major, R.E.

Enclosure 21 in No. 24.

No. 1 dated Camp Ali Khel, 13th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B.,
Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, in original, the letter from the Amir brought by the special messenger mentioned in Captain Conolly's telegram to your address of the 10th instant, and to state that a reply has been sent to His Highness a copy of which is herewith enclosed.

Enclosure 22 in No. 24.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR of Kabul, to the address of GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., dated 8th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that I have sent a concise written account of the events of Wednesday and Thursday,* the 15th and 16th of the current month (Ramazan), for your information, and I was on the

* Corresponding to 3rd and 4th September.

† 5th, 6th, and 7th September.

‡ 6th September.

§ 8th September.

point of writing an account of the events which occurred on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, the 17th, 18th, and 19th† idem, when a friendly letter, dated the 18th‡ Ramazan from Captain Conolly, arrived at 10 a.m., on Monday, the 20th§ idem. I have perused it and mastered its contents. Whereas it is necessary that the Officers of the illustrious British Government, who are in reality my kind and sympathising friends, should be thoroughly informed of the various and variable events of the present time, I have deputed my confidential Peshkidmat, Sher Muhammad Khan, to you that he may wait upon you and represent in detail the true state of affairs and lay before you a few words, which, for the welfare and friendship of the two Governments, I have entrusted to him, to the best of his ability.

Enclosure 23 in No. 24.

Translation of a Copy of a Letter from GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, to the AMIR, dated 13th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to your Highness that an order has reached me from his Excellency, the Governor-General (to the effect) that, according to the Treaty which was concluded in May of this year 1879, between the British Government and your Highness the Amir of Kabul, and which was entirely approved by your Highness, it was agreed that, conformably to your special request, an English officer should be appointed as an Envoy at the city of Kabul, and that "I (the Amir) will be responsible for his protection and honorable treatment." Whereas, in accordance with your Highness undertaking the responsibility, four British officers were sent to Kabul. After six weeks they were ruthlessly killed in the very Bala Hissar and within the Residency, and no effort was made by your Highness to protect them; but this was done by your Highness' own troops and subjects, and your helplessness and inability to carry out the treaty engagement became apparent. Moreover, it appears difficult for your Highness to establish your power even in your own capital; therefore, an English army is advancing to Kabul for this purpose, (viz.) to inflict retribution upon the mutineers and murderers of the said officers, and that the terms of Treaty may be concluded (sic). The object of my Government in entering Afghanistan by the different routes is to strengthen and consolidate your Highness' Government on condition that your Highness loyally observe the friendship which has been concluded between the two Governments, and in no other way is it possible to strengthen your Highness' Government.

Your Highness' friendly letter of the 16th* Ramazan intimated that your friendship and sincerity are apparent, and will become apparent. But, in the meanwhile, my Government has heard that men have been sent from Kabul to stir up the people in the country. As this is contrary to the friendship above-mentioned, it appears therefore proper that your Highness should depute a confidential Agent to me, so that I should converse with him and become acquainted with your Highness' objects, as I am invested by Government with this power.

* 4th September.

Enclosure 24 in No. 24.

No. 2, dated Camp Ali Kehl, 15th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B.,
Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honor to forward (1), in original, a letter from His Highness the Amir to Captain Conolly received yesterday, précis of which was telegraphed to you yesterday evening; (2) copy of letter addressed to the Amir in accordance with the terms of your message of yesterday; (3) a narrative by Nawab Sir Gholam Hussan Khan, K.C.S.I.

Enclosure 25 in No. 24.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR to CAPTAIN CONOLLY, dated 23rd Ramazan, H. 1296, (corresponding to 11th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that your friendly letter, dated the 19th Ramazan, reached me last night, Thursday, the 23rd idem. I was gratified to hear of your good health. I have fully understood the contents of your letter. My reliance upon the perfect kindness and good-will of his Excellency the Governor-General and the other officers of the illustrious British Government, who really desire the prosperity and advancement of my Government has become stronger.

Although I exceedingly regret and deplore the occurrence of the recent event, yet there is no remedy and help against the decrees of God. It is to be hoped that the fire of this tumult and uproar will be soon extinguished, and by the great vengeance which I intend to inflict, a result will become known to the world, which will perfectly console and satisfy both our hearts, and those of our friends.

I have written and sent you an account of the events that have occurred here twice in two letters, and the third time by the hand of my Peshkhidmat, Sher Muhammad Khan; and now I am writing to you that during the last eight days I have protected myself and my family by means of friends, relatives, and a body of my trusted adherents and servants, from the mutineers and rebels, having kept some of them at a distance from me by means of money, and dismissed others, such as troopers, from the service. Both day and night I am thinking how to repair the effects of this blow. God willing, the mutineers will soon be requited for their deeds, and order and tranquillity be restored to this God-granted Government, to the satisfaction and content of the hearts of the representatives of the illustrious (British) Government.

The governors and rulers of certain provinces have also commenced to revolt. I am attentively looking to every direction, that is to say, I am seriously thinking how, by the help of God, every place where disturbance prevails may be restored to peace and tranquillity.

Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan will give you an account of the disturbed state of the country which he has seen and ascertained on the road. As soon as the intelligence of the approach of the Nawab (to Kabul) reached me on the outbreak of this disturbance I despatched Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan, and Muhammad Yusaf Khan, the guardian of my son and heir-apparent, to meet him, and after conveying my friendly sentiments to him to relate to him verbally the present state of affairs, and to return after they had seen him pass these limits in safety.

My friend, I have this hope that, by the favor of God, as far as lies in my power and ability and strength and might, I may exhibit my perfect innocence and sincerity in my friendship and amity with the British Government, and establish my good name or friendship with the illustrious Government.

Further I will inform you of everything that takes place daily.

Enclosure 26 in No. 24.

Translation of a Copy of a Letter from GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to the AMIR, dated Ali Khel, the 15th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to your Highness that I have sent your Highness' two friendly letters of the 3rd and 4th September, conveying your Highness' cordial sentiments, in original to his Excellency the Governor-General; and I have received an answer thereto to the effect that they give evidence of your Highness' sincerity. I therefore write to inform your Highness and give you good news that if your Highness, as in the past, should continue to the end friendly and sincere, your Highness may rest perfectly assured and rely on the British Government that no harm or injury (lit. anxiety) will befall your Highness. The British force is coming specially to support your Highness, and will protect your Highness from all kinds of harm and danger, and strengthen your Highness' Government.

Enclosure 27 in No. 24.

Narrative of NAWAB SIR GHOLAM HUSSAN KHAN, K.C.S.I., dated Ali Khel, 14th September 1879.

(Received with letter from SIR F. ROBERTS, No. 2, dated Ali Khel, 15th Sept. 1879).

I LEFT Kandahar on the 18th August for Kabul with eight or ten Sowars and 16 or 18 footmen (including servants), of whom some 15 or so were armed men. We were escorted by one Habbo Khan Lukozai, Durani, told off by the Governor for the purpose. I believe all parties were sorry to lose me from Kandahar except the Barakzais.

I kept out of the way of a Kabul regiment marching down the road, and the troops at Ghazni appeared to me ready for mischief. According to advice received here, I left the high road to travel by Wardak, accompanied by one Mirza Ahmad Ali Khan. I got safely as far as Shah Kalandar Kili, two marches from Kabul, and there heard of the disaster. Seeing that the Ghilzais of the place under one Muhammad Hossein Khan were hostile, I returned about a mile to Mustaufi Kila, where one Abdul Guffoor Akhoonzada, was kind to me, though a Mullah tried to raise the people against me; they stole some of my things, but those were recovered. Allal-ud-din Khan now joined me with a few sowars having been sent by the Amir. I left all my things (10 or 11 camel loads) and two horses in charge of one Haji Ata Muhammad Khan, Wardak, whom I had formerly befriended at Dera Ismail Khan on his way to Mecca, and who took them back to his own fort two stages back. I gave him a watch.

We now came away direct for the Shuturgurdan, escorted by Muhammad Afzal Khan and 60 or 70 Wardakis to the Logar border, and beyond that by Allal-ud-din Khan with a large following.

Two days after leaving Mustaufi Kila, Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan met me at Allal-ud-din Karez with some horse and foot, and gave me some information from the Amir, translation of which is attached.

Allal-ud-din Khan and myself then went on, the Wazir returning to Kabul, and reached British troops on Shuturgurdan, and were cordially received. Allal-ud-din Khan wanted to go back, but I persuaded him to come on and see what General Roberts required of him.

Enclosure 28 in No. 24.

Translation of the Proclamation issued by GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., in Command of the British Forces despatched to Afghanistan, dated Ali Khel, the 16th September 1879, corresponding to the 28th Ramazan 1296.

BE it known to all the Chiefs and the people of the country of Kabul and its Dependencies that, in accordance with the Treaty concluded in May 1879, corresponding to Jamdi-ul-Akhir 1296 Hijri, between the two great Governments, and to the terms of which His Highness the Amir expressed his assent, and agreed to the location of an Envoy of Her Imperial Majesty the Empress, a British Envoy was, at the special request of His Highness the Amir, located at the Kabul Court, and the Amir guaranteed that he should be treated honorably and protected.

Within six weeks after the said Envoy was received at and entered (Kabul) the whole Embassy was besieged and massacred in the very citadel of His Highness the Amir, who could not save or protect them from the hands of the soldiers and the people. From this the lack of power of the Amir and the weakness of his authority in his capital itself is quite apparent and manifest. For this reason the British troops are advancing for the purpose of taking a public revenge on behalf of the deceased as well as of obtaining satisfaction (lit. consolidation) of the terms entered into in the Treaty concluded. The British troops are entering Afghanistan for the purpose of strengthening the royal authority of His Highness the Amir on condition that His Highness loyally uses those powers for the maintenance of friendship and of amicable relations with the British Government. This is the only course by which the Amir's kingdom can remain intact, and (by which) also the friendly sentiments and sincerity expressed in his letter of the 4th September 1879 after the occurrence of the (said) event can be proved.

For the purpose of removing any doubt about the concord of the two Governments the Amir has been addressed to depute a confidential agent to my camp.

The British force will not punish or injure any one except the persons who have taken part or joined in the massacre of the Embassy unless they offer opposition. All the rest, the small and great, who are unconcerned (therein) may rest assured of this.

Carriage and supplies of every description should be brought into the British camp. Full price and hire shall be paid for everything that may be taken. Whereas mercy and humanity are the characteristics of this great Government, this proclamation is issued beforehand for the information of the people at large.

Enclosure 29 in No. 24.

Statement of RUSUL, Sepoy, 7th Company, Corps of Guides, of Mianrai, Yusufzai, taken 16th September 1879.

ABOUT 14 days before the attack on Residency, four sowars of the Guides were attacked in the bazaar of Kabul, but escaped. On the 14th day after this, in the early morning, some regiments, I don't know how many, were drawn up below the Bala Hissar, but inside the walls, to receive their pay. I do not know the names of the regiments, but they were unarmed. They suddenly broke into open mutiny with cries of "kill the kafirs." I was then in the Residency, in a building beside the house in which the European officers were. The troops came running up from the north, and entering our enclosure commenced to throw stones at us, and plundered our things which lay in the yard marked B. Mr. Hamilton came up and shut the gate leading from B into the road. We ascended the roofs of the houses in B. The troops attacked us with stones only, and were then unarmed. Sir L. Cavagnari ascended the roof of the Residency when a high officer of the Amir, whom I do not know, came from the parade ground and entered the arsenal, which is a good stone throw from B. The troops threw their stones away and entered the arsenal too. We had not fired upon the troops; they retired without our firing upon them; in fact Mr. Hamilton told us not to act on the offensive but keep quiet. The sowars also came inside B from C, leaving their horses in C. Then they began to fire upon us from the arsenal, and at the same time attacked their General. So I have heard, but did not see it. They fired four shots at us from the arsenal, when a shot was fired by Sir L. Cavagnari, who was on the south-western corner of the Residency, killing a man standing at the door of the arsenal. We were then on the roof.

of the Sikhs' quarters, Mr. Hamilton with us. Then the firing became general from the arsenal upon us. There is a parapet on the roof of B, but none on A. The Afghans stood at and near the door of the arsenal: the arsenal stands on high ground, higher than the Residency, and commands the roofs of A and B, clearing C. Sir L. Cavagnari fired four shots lying on his face on the roof of A, when Mr. Hamilton, who was with us, said he had been wounded, but I don't know where Sir Louis was hit up to now: none of us had fired except Sir Louis. Then we got the order to fire, and we fired. Shortly after I and a few others descended and entered A in order to prevent the small door at D being forced. I and three other sepoys sat there, two Sikhs and two Mussulmans, when a Kabuli, who was a servant of the Mission, came up and said Sir Louis Cavagnari had sent him with a letter to the Amir. We let him out by the door at D, Metab Sing Jemadar giving the order. The door at E was always open. The Afghans then broke through the wall at F, and four men came in and entered the Residency though we fired, one was shot at the courtyard. Sir Louis Cavagnari was wounded about 8 a.m. When we went to D Mr. Hamilton and Dr. Kelly also came into the Residency A. The roof of A to the north is one story higher than to the south. I don't know where Sir L. Cavagnari was. Mr. Hamilton, and Mr. Jenkyns, and Dr. Kelly were all in F with us. Mr. Jenkyns and some six or eight sepoys ascended the roof of F and fired from the north-western corner on the Afghans. The troops then placed ladders on the roof of a house to the north-eastern corner of F, and ascended the roof: this was about noon, and many were killed and wounded of us then. Mehtab Sing, Karak Sing Havildar, a Duffadar and others were dead. About this time the Afghans fetched up two guns and planted them to the north-west of B; they had also made holes in the thin courtyard wall from M to N. We, when the Afghans ascended the roof of F, descended into the building. Mr. Jenkyns sheltered himself in the rooms in the west corner of the building, while Mr. Hamilton and Dr. Kelly, with some sepoys, including myself, went from the east of F to the west in the building. The Afghans entered after us, and commenced to plunder and set fire to F from below, and the Afghans began to leave the building, ascending to the roof, and descending by the ladders. About 2 p.m. the fire began to make the building untenable, and we leapt from the roof of F into a narrow wall, and thence down to the roof of the Sikhs' quarters to the roof of B. The rest left this roof of F, but I remained behind, being driven back by the flames. I saw then at the east wall of F (the roof was about to fall) a Kabuli, Dost Muhammad, an acquaintance of mine, among some men who rushed up to kill me. Dost Muhammad called out loudly in Pushtu "don't kill him, he is my ustad," he caught me in his arms and dragged me off to one side, another Afghan snatching my rifle from me. He led me off to his house in the Bala Hissar; we were all in plain clothes, for no one had time to put on uniform. I told Dost Muhammad then to run and get me news of what was happening, his house is close, and he ran up sharp to see. He told they brought up the guns close to the door of B and killed some and carried off the rest of the Sowars' horses. They blew the door of B in and fired the building. He said that when the gate was blown open, about 3 p.m., Mr. Hamilton charged out of the gate at the Afghans, and was killed in the gateway, and Dr. Kelly and Mr. Jenkyns were killed there too, charging out at the head of the sepoys who remained alive. All were killed. Some have escaped, six sowars went out on grass-cutting guard; four have been killed, and two are said to have escaped, so I hear. I did not see any corpses of European officers, nor did I go to see for fear of my life. Dost Muhammad said to me, that next morning they put all the corpses in one place, below the wall of the Bala Hissar at a waste plot of ground at T, not far from the latrines; they dug a trench and buried Europeans, Sikhs, and Mahomedans there. Next day I left Kabul to go down to Peshawur. About four kos from Kabul I came into a village, of which I don't know the name, where there were troops of the Amir. They held me back and beat me for being a "kafir," and were about to cut my throat, calling out "let us kill this Cavagnari-ite;" ("Cavagnari"), but a soldier whom I told I was a Mussulman, begged me off to a village called Sarasia, where they again were about to kill me, when I fell at the feet of a Mian, who protected me, and I spent three days there with one Shamsudin. I left on the fourth day, but was again arrested at a village three kos this side of Sarasia. The people beat me, but let me go again. Some officer of the Afghan army heard that I had escaped, and again I was arrested by his men on the road and taken back; they stripped me, but let me go. Then I came along at night in the hills. I left Jellalabad exactly 48 hours ago, travelling chiefly by night. There was no force in Jellalabad nor in Dakka, nor are any coming, as far as I know or have heard. Everybody along the road is afraid, but they are not preparing for resistance. I have heard that some Mullahs are talking of resistance. The regiments were on pay parade in the open ground inside the Bala Hissar when they broke.

I have heard that Daud Shah is wounded, Wali Muhammad Khan fled from "Nazarband" to Kurram; and that the Amir is in great distress at what has happened.

NOTE.—The above does not differ very materially from the story of Taimur, the guide who arrived yesterday, except in details regarding the commencement and the mode of the attack. Rusul is now being cross-examined, and his further statement will follow to-morrow. This man belongs to the infantry, and may have been away from the cavalry lines when the shots were fired by the Sikhs, or Taimur may not know who fired the first shots.

None of the regiments had ammunition, which had been taken away by the Amir, even those who had arms. The regiment that began the mutiny was also disarmed.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieut.-Colonel,
Peshawur, the 17th September 1879. Commissioner.

Enclosure 30 in No. 24.

Statement of Sepoy MUHAMMAD DOST, G. Company (Q. O.) Corps of Guides, one of the survivors of the Cabul Embassy Escort, dated Murdan, 18th September 1879.

SEPOY MUHAMMAD DOST, Ghilzai, resident of Muhammad Khel, in Lughman District, Kabul, states as follows:—

I was employed to arrange for atta for the escort from the "Kuchis." Early on the morning of the 3rd September (day of attack) I went out of the Residency and brought back one load. I was told to go and get another, and when returning with it I found the Residency was surrounded by the Herati regiments, and fighting was going on. I returned to the Kuchi people. I was not in uniform. It was after 8 a.m. when I returned with atta the second time. When I first started for atta I saw the Herati regiments assembling to get pay. They had not got their rifles with them, but had side arms.

I heard that the Herati regiments were dissatisfied with only getting one month's pay instead of two, as other regiments had got the previous day. Daud Shah was sitting above watching the pay being given out. The soldiery began throwing stones at him, and he came down to where they were, when he was cut down with a tulwar and was bayoneted. He was not killed, but there was no hope for him.

The soldiers then made for the Amir's house, but were turned by his guard, and then they turned towards the Embassy and pelted the escort with stones. The Amir sent a message to Sir Louis Cavagnari to let no one get near his party. The escort fired upon the soldiers and killed nine men. Then the soldiers broke into the Amir's magazine and armed themselves with rifles.

I hid until evening in a house outside. I saw the Residency was burning. All was over about sunset.

When I first went out for atta that morning, Lieutenant Hamilton and Dr. Kelly went out for a ride with some of our Sowars and some of the Amir's as escort. I heard a man say there were two Sahibs with the Amir's cavalry, and I was in hopes they might have been my Sahibs.

I stayed in a house about three miles from Kabul for three days. I heard that the grass-cutters and the guard with them were under the protection of Amir's cavalry. Two of the grass-cutters had been killed by some people.

When I started for Murdan, I went through Lughman, and remained there three days. Asmatula Khan came down upon Charbagh and looted the place, killing six of the Amir's people.

When I got to Jellalabad I heard that a Poorbeah grass-cutter who was dumb, or pretending to be dumb, had arrived there, and was being taken care of by the Hakim.

There was no force at Jellalabad, or at Gandamak, or at Butkak.

I stayed two days at Lalpura. The fort at Dakka was occupied by 150 men of Muhammad Sadik Khan of Lalpura.

I did not go through Lundikotal, but left it on my right and went by footpaths to Ali Musjid, where I stayed a night.

I was told the Herati regiments had upwards of 200 men killed.

(Signed) R. B. CAMPBELL, Major,
Queen's Own Corps of Guides.

REMARKS by COLONEL JENKINS, C.B.

I THINK this man gives a fair account of what he saw and heard. I made a mistake in saying in my telegram that he had come out by Michni. Taimur, the first man who got down to Lundikotal is here, but has got bad fever, otherwise he might be sent to Simla to be examined. The Government has his statement, however. It seems to me that neither the Amir nor Daud Shah knew that there would be an outbreak.

I have now two men in Kabul on leave, and a third that I sent to get news when I heard of the disaster.

Enclosure 31 in No. 24.

CAPT. J. B. HUTCHINSON, Officiating Departmental Commissioner, Lahore, to COMMISSIONER of PESHAWUR, dated 18th September 1879.

I WRITE to tell you that the man Khezi has arrived at Lahore. I had a long interview with him this morning, together with his brother, Sikunder. The following is the substance of his information, which for convenience sake I will give in his own words.

"I was formerly a sowar in the Guides. I took my discharge two years ago. My family lived at Kahul. I went there. I am an Armenian Christian. Dr. Kelly was the doctor of my regiment, and I knew him well. The Herati regiments were not at Kabul when the massacre took place. They had been disbanded, and had gone away. Only those whose homes were at Kabul remained there. Three Kabuli regiments were on duty at the magazine 100 yards from the house occupied by the Embassy in the Bala Hissar. I frequently noticed these soldiers taking together in knots of 10 to 20 men. They always were talking about the Embassy, and were saying that in a day or two they should all be killed. I told Dr. Kelly what they said. He answered 'Oh! you are afraid!' but I said, 'no, I am not afraid for myself; but I am for you.' I could not make Dr. Kelly understand that there was much fear. The general people like the English. They would be only too glad if the English ruled the country, but what they fear is that they will come and then go away again, and then any one who shows them any friendliness will be killed. Several men of high standing would have liked to visit the Embassy, but were not allowed. The strictest watch was kept not to let the English fraternise with men of position and influence. I left Kabul the Saturday before the massacre. I reached Jellalabad in five days, staid there two days, and then came into Peshawur in four days. I believe the three Kabuli regiments were guilty of the massacre, and I believe the Amir knew it must take place. The Amir was very cold and distant with the Envoy lately. He showed by his face that he did not want to meet him. He got rid of him as soon as he could when he called. I believe that the Amir understood that if he did not agree to the Embassy being massacred he would himself be put out of the way. I only spoke to Dr. Kelly. I was never able to get to Major Cavagnari to speak to him."

The above was evidently all that this man could tell me, but he seemed to be well acquainted with the general feeling at Kabul, and declared that the Bazaar people and private individuals were very well inclined towards the English, but not the soldiery and officials, and he did not believe the Amir was at all on our side in reality.

No. 25.

Telegram from SECRETARY OF STATE, 27th September 1879, to VICEROY.

REUTER reports cholera amongst troops. Is it true? Telegraph reply immediately.

No. 26.

Telegram from VICEROY, 29th September 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

Your telegram 27th. Cholera prevails generally from Rawulpindee to Jumrood only; a few cases occurred at Ali Musjid, but that place and Lundi Kotal are quite free. As troops advance beyond Jumrood they lose cholera influence.

No. 27.

No. 215 of 1879. (Extract.)

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To The Right Hon. VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, October 2, 1879.

WE have the honour to forward to your Lordship, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copies of further papers containing detailed descriptions of the outbreak of the troops in Kabul and the attack upon the Residency. The enclosures also carry down to the present date the narrative of events attending the advance of the British forces upon the Amir's capital.

2. The most important and apparently the most trustworthy accounts of what passed on the 3rd September, and on the days immediately preceding and succeeding, are those of Timos (Taimur), of the Corps of Guides, who formed one of the Residency Guard; and of Ressaldar-Major Nakshband Khan, Sirdar Bahadur, a British pensioner, who was in Sir L. Cavagnari's employ at Kabul. These statements are now forwarded in extenso with this letter.

3. The postscript to our last despatch informed your Lordship that General Baker had advanced to Kushi and had encamped there with the troops under his command without any opposition. We now learn by a telegram that General Roberts arrived at the same place on the 28th ultimo with three regiments; and it is understood that his whole force, assembled yesterday at Kushi, moves forward to-day toward Kabul. The Cavalry Brigade, accompanied by General Roberts in person, advanced the day before yesterday as far as Zarghun Shahr, and was expected to reach Zahidabad, two marches from Kabul, to-day. General Roberts expresses his hope that the whole force will have arrived before the walls of the capital by Sunday, the 5th instant. Intelligence of the arrival of His Highness the Amir in General Baker's camp on the 27th September, has already been communicated to Your Lordship by telegraph. At 9 o'clock on the morning of that day General Baker received a letter from Daud Shah, the Afghan Commander-in-Chief, asking whether General Baker would receive him and the Amir's heir-apparent in camp. General Baker replied in the affirmative. An hour afterwards some special servants of the Amir arrived, inquiring whether His Highness himself, attended by 300 sowars, would be received in camp. General Baker replied that he would meet him a mile from camp. The Amir appeared at Kushi on the evening of the same day attended by his son, Sirdar Yahya Khan, Daud Shah, a suite of 45 members, including many of the most important Chiefs, and an escort of about 200 men. Shortly before this, the Mustaufi and the Wazir Shah Muhammad, who had been allowed, after several interviews, to leave General Roberts' camp, had arrived at Kushi, where they have now joined the retinue of the Amir.

4. On receipt of this news by the Government of India, General Roberts was instructed by telegram not to delay his advance, and to issue a proclamation announcing his intention to occupy Kabul. On the following day the letter of general instructions, which is forwarded to your Lordship separately by this mail, was sent to General Roberts for the guidance of his proceedings as soon as he shall have occupied the city. It was reported that the gates were closed, and that the city was in some confusion immediately after the departure of the Amir, who appears to have left without giving any public notice of his intentions; and as soon as his withdrawal became known, the people, after some fruitless appeal had been made for assistance to three regiments in Kohistan, began removing their property. Kabul was reported to be quiet on the 27th September, but we now learn that four infantry regiments have returned thither from Turkestan, which may encourage the inhabitants to resistance. Besides the persons of rank and importance who accompanied the Amir, several others, including Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan and Abdulla Khan, awaited General Roberts' arrival at Zarghun Shahr, which is 7 miles distant from Kushi, and a satisfactory interview followed. The Amir has addressed the Ghilzais and his officials forbidding opposition to the advance of our troops, and has promised assistance, transport, and supplies, which, in obedience to his orders, have been sent in.

5. Hitherto, there has been little active molestation from the tribes along either the Kurram or Khyber line of advance. There have been rumours indeed of a general rising, and a warning to this effect was received from the Amir himself before he joined the camp at Kushi. A raid by marauders upon a convoy of telegraph material was mentioned in our last despatch; and on the 27th September, General Roberts, on his march toward the Shuturgardun was attacked by a party of Mangals and Ghilzais, whom he beat off and dispersed with loss. In this affair five sepoy of a Sikh regiment were killed, and Deputy Surgeon-General Townsend was wounded. Along the Khyber route, where at first certain circumstances seemed to point to possible opposition, the people have shown no intention, as yet, of attempting to hinder General Bright's progress. The Khan of Lalpura was informed that the Dakka fort would be required for our troops, and he returned an amicable reply. The Amir had sent orders to him, and to the Afghan officials along the Jellalabad route, that they were not to resist, but, on the contrary, to facilitate the advance of the British troops. On the 29th September, a telegram arrived from Lundikotal stating that Dakka had been occupied by the Guides without opposition, and that the Khan of Lalpura, who is devoted to the Amir's interests, had retired to Lalpura. On the 30th the road was reported to be quiet, and supplies had begun to come in. A small collection of Mohmunds who had assembled near Dakka had dispersed.

6. From Kandahar the news received is of a satisfactory character. The brigade under General Hughes, which has been detached for a reconnaissance toward Ghazni and the country of the Southern Ghilzais, left Kandahar for Kelat-i-Ghilzai on the 23rd September. Major St. John, who accompanied the force, received on the 25th September a letter from the Afghan Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai in which he expressed pleasure at the approach of the troops, and promised assistance in obtaining supplies.

7. Among the enclosures to this despatch will be found letters received from the Amir prior to his entry into the British camp at Kushi.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 22nd September 1879.

FROM GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, Ali Khel, to VICEROY, Simla.

GENERAL BAKER reports that guard escorting mails this morning between Shuturgardan and Karatiga were attacked by Ghilzais or Mangals, six men, 5th P. I., and about 20 muleteers and telegraph workmen killed, 74 mules carried off. Report received by General Baker of threatened attack on his camp. He is prepared. Allal-ud-din has sent men to Ghilzais, and hopes to keep road free from further attacks. General Baker will, however, be on the look out. 350 of 5th P. I. marched from this to-day for Karatiga escorting reserve ammunition. F-A and 12th B. C. go to-morrow.

Enclosure 2 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 23rd September 1879.

FROM GENERAL DORAN, Lundikotal, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla.

HUSSEIN, Hamilton's syce, has arrived here from Kabul: he corroborates the stories of Taimur and Russul in all particulars; states that three men of the Guides, a Duffadar, and two Sowars, are safe in Chandaol and Muradkhana, suburbs of Kabul; also that the three mutinous regiments were sent to Istalif by the Amir a week after the massacre to bring three lakhs of treasure.

Simla, September 25, 1879.

Enclosure 3 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 25th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel.

GUIDES should reach Dakka 28th. Please request Amir to order his officials and all his subjects on route from Khyber via Jellalabad to facilitate Bright's advance. Any kind of opposition must be strictly prohibited. We have made declaration that our troops come to assist Amir and to restore authority.

Enclosure 4 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 26th September 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL ROBERTS, Ali Khel.

FOLLOWING message from Lundikotal to Quartermaster-General received to-day :—
Begins.

Amir has written to his officials positively forbidding opposition to our advance.
Small collection of Mohmunds, 12 miles from Lalpura, has dispersed. Ends.

Enclosure 5 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 27th September 1879.

From GENERAL BAKER, Kushi, to VICEROY, Simla.

RECEIVED letter from Afghan Commander-in-Chief at 9 this morning, asking whether I would receive him and Amir's heir-apparent in camp. Answer sent him in affirmative. An hour afterwards Amir's special servants arrived asking whether I would receive Amir himself, attended by 300 sowars. Have sent him word to say that I will meet him a mile from camp. The Mustaufi and Wazir arrived here this morning from Ali Khel.

Enclosure 6 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 27th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Shuturguridan, to VICEROY, Simla.

The Amir, attended by his son, Sirdar Yahya Khan, Daud Shah, and suite of 45 members, with escort of about two hundred men, reached Kushi this evening. Kabul reported to be in state of disturbance, and the gates of city closed. I go to Kushi with 9th Lancers, 5th Punjab Cavalry, and 92nd Highlanders to-morrow.

Enclosure 7 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 27th September 1879.

From MAJOR HASTINGS, Kushi, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

THERE are with the Amir, his son, Sirdar Yahya Khan, Daud Shah, Commander-in-Chief, Sirdar Ahmed Ali Jan, Haji Khanimulla Khan, Syud Ahmed, son of Fazul Mahomed of Kunar, Nesanided, (?) son of Sirdar Abdul Ghanni. Mulla Shah Mahomed and Mustaufi here in camp.

Enclosure 8 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 28th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Dobandi, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN, Habibula (?) Khan, son of the late Dost Muhammad, Abdulla Khan, son of Sultan Muhammad Khan, once Governor of Herat, and Muhammad Hakim Khan are at Zarghun Shahr waiting for me. I am now on my way to Kushi.

Enclosure 9 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 28th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

AMIR's representatives in Kabul are Sirdar Wazir Muhammad Khan, General Abdul Kerj (?) Khan, Sirdar Nur Muhammad Khan and Mirza Syud Ahmed. Amir left city, without people knowing his intention. When people found he had fled, they sent messages to the three regiments in Kohistan asking if they would help regiments; replied they could not assist at Kabul; but promised to do so in Kohistan. People are carrying off their goods from the city, and no opposition expected. Wali Muhammad and other Sirdars left city without Amir's permission. Up to noon, Saturday, all was quiet in Kabul. Amir has written Ghilzais of Spegā to desist from troubling us in the Hazar Darakht (?); he has also promised assistance, transport, supplies. I reached this to-day, and will see Amir to-morrow morning.

Enclosure 10 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 28th September 1879.

From MAJOR HASTINGS, Kushi, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR WALI MAHOMED, Hasan Khan, Mahomed Kasim (?) Khan, Habibula Khan, sons of late Dost Mahomed, Abdulla Khan, son of Sultan Mahomed Khan, once Governor of Herat, and Mahomed Hakim Khan, son of Mahomed Sharif Khan, are at Zarghun. Orders sent for them to remain there at present.

Enclosure 11 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 29th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, through Shuturgurda, to VICEROY, Simla.

Reached this yesterday with 9th Lancers, 5th Punjab Cavalry, and 92nd Highlanders. Remainder of force will arrive on 1st October, and on following day I shall advance on Kabul. Amir with Sirdars who accompanied him is in camp. Wali Muhammad Khan and other Sirdars came to-day. Weather magnificent; troops healthy; all well.

Enclosure 12 in No. 27.

Telegram; dated 30th September 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

YOUR telegram of 25th, reporting advance Khyber force. Amir says, he had previously addressed Hakim of Jellalabad and Khan of Lalpura, ordering every facility to be afforded. He has now urgently repeated the offer.

Enclosure 13 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 30th September, 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, through Shuturgurda, to VICEROY, Simla.

Cavalry Brigade, with two guns Horse Artillery, and two companies 72nd Highlanders, march to-day for Zarghun Shahr, accompanied by 5th Punjab Infantry, to be joined to-morrow by 23rd Pioneers with treasure and reserve ammunition. Last of Kabul Field Force left Ali Khel yesterday, will be here to-morrow. Mangals and Ghilzais who attacked us on 27th, suffered considerable loss, and are reported to have dispersed. A small party of 92nd Highlanders under Colour-Sergeant Macdonald, and of 3rd Sikhs under Jemadar Suer (?) Mahomed, a native of Kabul, did excellent service coming to close quarters with the enemy. Dismounted men of 9th Lancers and 5th Punjab Cavalry aided materially with their carbines. The Amir, and indeed all Afghans, express great astonishment at horsed guns being driven over the Shuturgurda, an extremely difficult road, which had, however, been made so good by Sappers and Pioneers under General Baker's orders, that elephants were not required. Daud Shah Khan's wounds have been dressed by Dr. Duke, who considers, were caused by bayonet or stoning, and that unconsciousness would probably result from them.

Enclosure 14 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 1st October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Cavalry Brigade marched to Zarghun Shahr yesterday, and will be at Zahidabad to-morrow. I accompanied cavalry and met Wali Mahomed Khan and several other Sirdars, chiefly Barakzai. All professed great friendship for British Government. Supplies were forthcoming by order of Amir. Amir seems more at ease than when he first came to camp. Padshah Khan is, I think, with us; he is now with me in camp. Last of force will be here to-day, and on Sunday next the whole should be assembled in front of Kabul. Accounts are so conflicting, it is difficult to say whether there will be opposition. I am inclined to think not, but the four infantry regiments have returned from Turkestan which may induce the Kabul troops to fight.

Enclosure 15 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 27th September 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

LATEST news Kabul just given me by a servant of Sirdar Zulficar Khan, detenu in Lahore. He left Kabul day of the Id. Nakshband Khan had just reached his home at Kama in disguise. Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani, killed by the soldiery. Cavagnari's body recovered from ruins day before Id, was placed in a coffin by the Amir when informant left. The mutineers were three orderly, and not Herati regiments, and they have now been sent to Kohistan under Sirdar Wali Muhammad to collect revenue.

Family of Kazi Abdul Kadir has reached Peshawur; he has gone to Bajour.

Enclosure 16 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 27th September 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

AM in constant communication with Sadik Khan of Lalpura, who has just replied verbally that he is friendly disposed, and is awaiting orders from Kabul. He read to my messenger three letters from Amir. The first informs him of attack on Embassy, and tells him to have his tribe in readiness; second informs him of Mustaufi having gone to Kurram; third, which arrived on 24th, told him peace was made, and ordered friendly attitude to British. Amir has also written to Governor of Jellalabad not to act against us. I have informed Lalpura and Jellalabad of the advance of our troops on 28th, Dakka, 1st, Basawal, and asked for supplies and carriage. 200 Kuchi camels arrived at Peshawur yesterday. Men sent for Sangu Khel and Tirah Hindus and Afridis are sending mules. No Mohmund gathering. Plowden thinks Khyber Afridis are communicating with, and desiring to meet the Orakzai.

Enclosure 17 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 28th September 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

WARBURTON telegraphs from Lundikotal. Khan Lalpura, in reply to letter regarding evacuation of Dakka fort and movement of troops from this side, asks for two or three days' delay. Khan has evidently received no order from Kabul, telling him to help us in this movement, but merely not to interfere. Khan is devoted to Amir's interests, and will not act in opposition to them. Guides halt here this day. Sadik asks for delay to enable him to disperse 3,000 men collected there. Our messenger said none and no news of any, but Sadik has sent to the Mohmunds to collect. Am sending one more letter to Khan Lalpura. Telegram ends. In reply, have said that further communication with Sadik appears unnecessary. Advance on Dakka may be delayed to 30th.

Enclosure 18 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 28th September 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

GOVERNOR, Jellalabad, replying to my letter of the 15th September by order of the Amir, expresses great gratitude for the favour and sympathy shown to the Amir by the British Government, and says it is necessary to postpone the advance of troops until his agents with General Roberts have disposed of some points affecting the interests of both Governments. The people will appreciate this kindness to the Amir. General Gough will still advance to Basawal about 2nd.

Enclosure 19 in No. 27.

Telegram, dated 29th September 1879.

From GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR SHER ALI has forwarded for perusal two letters, received 27th, from Kabul. The first from Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan who arrived at Kabul from Kandahar on the 5th September and interviewed the Amir, who stated to him that his Government had been ruined by certain wise men.

The second letter is from Roshun Dil Khan, a Kandahar Sirdar, written about 19th September. He mentions there are five persons belonging to the army who instigated the mutiny which was devised to avert an inquiry which Amir intended to make into reported thefts of large sums of money. The mutiny once commenced, the instigators were powerless to stop it.

Sirdar Sher Ali stated that the wise men and instigators of the mutiny herein referred to are Mustaufi Habibulla, Daud Shah Khan, and their adherents.

Enclosure 20 in No. 27.

No. 4, dated Camp Ali Khel, 18th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B.,
Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, in original and under registered cover, the letters and enclosures from the Amir, of which a précis was forwarded to you by telegram this morning.

Enclosure 21 in No. 27.

Translation of a letter from YAKUB KHAN, to GENERAL ROBERTS, dated 28th Ramazan 1296 A. H., corresponding with 16th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Yesterday, Monday the 27th current, a letter from Syud Jaffer Khan, an official of this Government, who was in Karshi and wrote it to the Governor of Turkestan, was received by me enclosed in one from the Naib-ul-Hukumat (Deputy Governor) of Turkestan. I have also sent the same to you, so that you may fully learn the matters contained therein.

Enclosure 22 in No. 27.

Translation of a letter from AMIR YAKUB KHAN to the address of MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, dated 28th Ramazan 1296 Hijri=(16th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that the recent occurrence is this; that last night, Tuesday the 28th Ramazan=(16th September), couriers arrived from Herat with letters from my brother, Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan, Governor of Herat. The purport of the letters is that the troops at Herat have mutinied, attacked the house of General Fakir Ahmed Khan, the Civil and Military Official of Herat, killed him, stripped, and dishonoured his family, and plundered his property. You will learn the detail of this frightful event from the three letters from Herat sent herewith in original. But I only add that we had no trustworthy, confidential, faithful, and experienced servant like Fakir Ahmed Khan under our Government; and we had brought him up like a brother and a son. Although my brother, Muhammad Ayub i.e. General Fakir Ahmed Khan. Khan, was called the Governor, yet the civil and military administration of Herat was entrusted to him.

At the hands of ignorant men matters have reached such a pitch that our sympathizing servant, nay in reality an obedient son, has been killed in such disgrace and dishonour. Although different and contradictory accounts of the excesses of the troops are received from Turkestan every day, yet the event of Kabul has made us forget the Turkestan disturbances, and the concurrence of Herat has served like salt that has been sprinkled on the wound of the affair at Kabul.

Yesterday, Monday, the 27th Ramazan=(15th September) a letter reached me from Turkestan which I have also sent to you with the Herat letters, so that you might thoroughly learn the true state of affairs in Herat and Turkestan.

Although the occurrence of these events has fallen hard upon me, yet in spite of all these troubles and blows, I have girded my loins with fortitude, endurance, and self-possession, and I hope that having soon through the mercy of God set right my deranged affairs and healed the wounds of my heart, I may use all my endeavours and exertions for the friendship of the illustrious Government. Please God I will fully inform you of anything that takes place hereafter. Consider me your sincere friend.

Enclosure 23 in No. 27.

Translation of a letter from SIRDAR AYUB KHAN to AMIR YAKUB KHAN without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—By the customary post which is leaving at this time I beg to write this short letter to inform you that on Thursday the 16th Ramazan (4th September) the Kabuli regiments having mutinied attacked General Fakir Ahmed's house, killed him, demolished his house, and dishonoured and stripped his family. I have sent you a detailed account of this occurrence by Gholam Muhammad Khan, my Peshkidmat. You will learn from (my) report the account of the event as well as of the misdemeanour of the Kandaks (troops?). Whatever orders you may think proper, please issue immediately.

Enclosure 24 in No. 27.

Translation of a letter from SIRDAR AYUB KHAN, Governor of Herat, to AMIR YAKUB KHAN, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Verily it is unlawful for me to remain alive after the killing in such a manner of our faithful old servant, General Fakir Ahmed. While I am still here his body has been dragged out of his house to the city wall and cast before me. Notwithstanding that I ordered the soldiers to desist from their misdeeds; they would not listen to me. Neither did they attend to their officers, who also forbade them. It would appear that this event has occurred through the worthlessness of myself and their officers. My reputation is injured for many years to come. We have indeed lost a faithful servant in General Fakir Ahmed who at the very moment of his death exclaimed—"tender my respects to the Amir and say—'thanks be to God! I have died as a faithful servant of the God-granted kingdom, and not as a traitor.'"

Under these circumstances I conjure you by God and the soul of the late Amir to let me retire from service, as in consequence of the injury my reputation has suffered, I can no longer live in Afghanistan in company with my peers. Therefore be pleased to appoint a Governor to superintend the affairs of Herat.

Enclosure 25 in No. 27.

Translation of a letter from SIRDAR AYUB KHAN to the AMIR YAKUB KHAN, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Whereas it is incumbent upon me to inform you of the events that have passed (here), I beg to state that during the early part (awal) of the holy month of Ramazan, General Fakir Ahmed Khan used to pass the nights with me, and during the days he attended to his duties and to the complaints of the people in the * 3rd September 1879.

Durbar. On Wednesday, the 15th Ramazan,* Naib Hafizullah Khan came and stated that two sepoy of the first Ardal (?) regiment had disappeared; on a search and inquiry being made, it was found that one of them had been killed in Shewan, and I caused the murderer, who formerly belonged to the Herat Artillery and is not now in the service, to be put in prison. On this Thursday night, the 16th Ramazan,† General Fakir Ahmed Khan was with me till dawn, when he took leave and went home. After he left I went to sleep, and after an hour when I awoke, it was reported that the troops had mutinied before General Fakir Ahmed's house. I immediately rode off thither and saw that about 3 or 4,000 soldiers had mutinied and fallen on General Fakir Ahmed's house. Notwithstanding I ordered them to desist from their misdeeds, they would not listen, and every one of them said a different thing. Some said they wanted their six months' pay, and some said that General Fakir Ahmed had told the people in the country to kill the soldiers of the Kabuli regiments if they should commit any oppression or outrages in the villages; and some of them said that they had long been away from their homes, and that they misbehaved, so that they might be recalled to Kabul. In short, although the buglers sounded the assembly, they would not listen and stoned them. I called Naib Hafizullah Khan, General Taj Muhammad Khan, and the other officers, so that they should forbid them. They forbade them, but in vain. General Taj Muhammad Khan then told me that it was no use my standing in the sun, and that as they (soldiers) had demolished and plundered General Fakir Ahmed's house, and he himself had gone to Char Bagh, I had better go to the new Ark (fort) and sound the bugle of assembly, perhaps the soldiers might assemble. Accordingly I went to the new Ark and sounded the assembly, but not a single man made his appearance. When I came to the Hissar Fort, I found General Fakir Ahmed lying dead there. He had received many wounds, and his body was brought and thrown at the steps of the Hissar, and his house had been plundered and his family stripped. Naib Hafizullah Khan was going to shoot himself, and had once made up his mind to throw himself down from his balcony. General Taj Muhammad Khan was also going to kill himself, but was not let to do so. I was greatly grieved at the conduct of the troops, and returned to Char Bagh. On account of this occurrence I am unable to write. I have complained and written to you about the misdeeds of these troops, and asked you to recall them (to Kabul). You have not listened to my petition, and so it has led to this great disturbance. I again request you to recall them. Should you not do so soon, they will destroy the lives and property of the people of Herat, as they neither listened to me nor to their officers, especially the 1st and 2nd Ardal regiments. Further, you are at liberty to do as you like. Sirdar Abdulla Khan has written from Maimeneh that the Herati troops have shown signs of mutiny (be-it-i-dali). I had sent Gholam Muhammad Khan, Peshkidmat, with letters to Maimeneh, in the hope that the people there might settle down, but this produced no effect. Gholam Muhammad Khan has returned with letters from Maimeneh, which I send in original. He will represent other matters verbally. I hope you will soon dismiss the bearer with a reply.

† 4th September 1879.

Enclosure 26 in No. 27.

FROM MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B.,
Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to enclose, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy, English copies of (I) the letter to the Amir from his Excellency the Viceroy, (II) the proclamation issued by me to the tribes, (III) a letter from me to the Logar Maliks; also Persian copies of the letter from his Excellency the Viceroy to the Amir, and my letter to the Logar Maliks.

2. Up to the present no reply has been received from the Amir to his Excellency the Viceroy's letter. Copies of the proclamation to the tribes and my letter to the Logar Maliks have been forwarded to the Amir, with the intention of keeping him acquainted with all that is being done. Copies in English (IV) and Persian of my letter to the Amir, forwarding copies of the proclamation to the tribes, and my letter to the Logar Maliks are also herewith forwarded.

Enclosure 27 in No. 27.

No. I.

Copy of Letter to His Highness the AMIR, dated 13th September 1879, corresponding to 25th Ramazán, in accordance with Telegraphic Communications from FOREIGN SECRETARY, dated 12th September 1879.

I AM directed by his Excellency to inform you that, according to the Treaty concluded in May this year between the British and Afghan Governments, with which you expressed yourself entirely satisfied, you agreed to receive a British Resident, who, at your special request was placed at Kabul, and to be personally, safely, and honourably treated, your Highness guaranteeing this. Within six weeks of the Envoy's reception at Kabul, the whole Embassy was surrounded and murdered in your Highness' own Fort, and your Highness has failed to protect the Envoy from your Highness' own soldiers and people; from this your Highness' present powerlessness to fulfil your engagements, and the loss of your Highness' authority in your own capital, are thus clearly proved. For this reason the British army is sent to superintend retribution for the murders, and to ensure the execution of engagements made. The army enters Afghanistan to support your Highness' authority, if your Highness is ready to use it loyally for maintenance of our alliance. This is the only thing that can now preserve the integrity of your Highness' kingdom, and prove the friendship and honesty of purpose declared in your Highness' letter of the 4th September 1879. We hear emissaries have been sent from Kabul to excite the tribes against us, which is of course incompatible with our alliance. Your Highness is requested to send without delay a confidential representative to meet me, as I have full power to communicate with your Highness on the part of the British Government.

Enclosure 28 in No. 27.

No. II.

Copy of Proclamation issued by MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C.

BE it known to high and low, subjects and dependants of Kabul, and others, that by Treaty concluded in May 1879, with which Treaty His Highness the Amir expressed himself entirely satisfied, he agreed to receive a British Resident, who, at his own special request was placed at Kabul, and was to be personally safely and honourably treated. This was guaranteed by His Highness the Amir. Within six weeks of the Envoy's reception at Kabul, the whole Embassy was surrounded and murdered in the Amir's own Fort, and His Highness failed to protect the Envoy from his own soldiers and people.

His Highness the Amir's present powerlessness to fulfil his engagement and the loss of authority in his own capital are thus clearly proved. For this reason the British army is sent to exact retribution for the murders and to ensure the execution of the engagements made.

The army enters Afghanistan to support His Highness' authority, if His Highness is ready to use it loyally for the maintenance of the British alliance. This is the only way by which the integrity of His Highness' kingdom can now be preserved, and the friendship and honesty of purpose declared in His Highness' letter of 4th September. To clear up all doubt, His Highness has been requested to send without delay a confidential representative to my camp.

The army will not punish or oppress any but those concerned in the late massacre so long as no opposition is offered; all others should rest assured. Carriage and supplies of all kinds should be supplied wherever the British troops may be. Adequate payment and hire for everything received will be made. As mercy is the prerogative of sovereignty, notice is hereby given beforehand.

Enclosure 29 in No. 27.

No. III.

Copy of a Letter from MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to certain MALIKS of Logar Valley.

FROM the proclamation already issued by me, you will have learnt the reasons for the march of the British troops to Kabul. Her Majesty's Government, by the movement of troops, intends to exact retribution for the massacre of Her Embassy and to aid His Highness the Amir in restoring order.

Let all those not concerned in the massacre rest assured, provided no opposition is shown.

His Highness the Amir, in communications received by me, expresses his friendship and wishes to continue friendly relations.

As the British troops under my command will shortly enter the Logar Valley, I write to assure you, and expect that you will inform all the residents of the valley not concerned in the late hateful massacre, the purport of the proclamation, and give every assistance in providing carriage and supplies required for the troops, for which adequate hire and payment will be made.

I hope that after the above assurance all the headmen will come to meet me in my camp, where I shall be glad to see them.

Enclosure 30 in No. 27.

No. IV.

Copy of a Letter from MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., to His Highness the AMIR, dated 18th September 1879.

AFTER the usual compliments. Your Highness' letter of the 28th Ramazán, with the enclosures from Herat and Turkestan, reached me last night. I have acquainted myself with the contents. I am glad to find your Highness is in good health, but sorry to hear of the unfortunate disturbances in your Highness' dominions. Your Highness' letter in original, has been sent with enclosures to his Excellency the Viceroy. I have already informed your Highness of the wishes of his Excellency the Viceroy, the reasons for the movements of the British troops, and requested your Highness to send a confidential representative to my camp. I am awaiting a reply to that letter and the arrival of your Highness' confidential representative.

In the meantime I have sent a proclamation to the tribes and letters to some of the Logar Maliks, your Highness' subjects, to assure those not concerned in the hateful massacre, and asking them for assistance in carriage and supplies on payment. As it appears to me proper I should inform your Highness of what I have done, I enclose copies of the proclamation to the tribes and of my letter to the Logar Maliks, and hope that your Highness may also issue necessary orders for the furtherance of our plans.

Rest assured of the Government support.

Enclosure 31 in No. 27.

Dated Camp Ali Khel, 19th September 1879.

From MAJOR E. G. HASTINGS, Political Officer, Kurram Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

IN accordance with General Roberts' instructions I have the honour to forward:—

Statement of Ali Hasan, son of Naib Kasim, Kotwal of Kabul, Kazalbash of Chandawal, taken by Mr. Christie.

Enclosure 32 in No. 27. (Extract.)

Statement of ALI HASAN, son of Naib Kasim, Kotwal of Kabul, Kazalbash of Chandawal, dated 16th September 1879.

I was in Kabul when Sir Louis Cavagnari arrived. He was received by the Amir with every sign of respect. For three days the Envoy used to ride about the city and visit all objects of interest in the neighbourhood. He was everywhere treated with respect and invariably saluted by the Amir's troops. The Envoy used to be accompanied only by a few orderly sowars, and the Amir represented that it would be better if he confined his visits to the chaman, or open plain, where he would meet with fewer people and be in less danger. This warning of the Amir was known all over the city, and the Envoy listened to it. One day an Afridi orderly of the Envoy's (probably Amal Din, an old and trusted orderly of Sir L. Cavagnari) had a quarrel in the city with two of the Amir's sepoys. The matter came to the ears of the Envoy, who rewarded his orderly, while the two sepoys were imprisoned by the Amir. This created feelings of anger in the minds of the people and the troops.

The Amir next ordered that his Sirdars and officers, with a few exceptions, were not to visit the Envoy. The exceptions were Mullah Shah Muhammad, Mustaufi Habibula, and General Daud Shah, who continued to visit the Envoy regularly.

On 3rd September (15th Ramazan), the three orderly regiments of the Amir were assembled without their arms in the Bala Hissar to receive their pay. Their chief officers were Brigadier Taj Muhammad Khan and Colonel Din Muhammad Khan. The Amir had given orders that they were to receive only one month's pay. They demanded more. Generals Daud Shah and Kharim Khan, who were distributing the pay, said, "If you want more pay go to your shuezan (i.e., your wife's lover) Cavagnari." On this some stones were thrown. Daud Shah ran away, and was slightly wounded with a spear. The Amir's pay office was then looted, his papers torn up, and his munshis maltreated; and the troops ran to the chaman or plain, where they were encamped, and, returning with their arms, proceeded direct to the Residency. They found the door of the compound—there was only one—firmly closed, and the residents employed in making loopholes. Sir Louis Cavagnari, on seeing the troops assembled, ordered all the Residency horses who were picketed outside to be shot, lest they should come into the hands of the mutineers. This was done. The mutineers then brought up a gun to fire on the door, while another was directed on the walls of the building. As soon as a breach was made, 300 sepoys of the Balkh regiments, who had been two days before recalled from leave, rushed in, and, according to some accounts, set fire to the building; others say that the residents themselves set it on fire.

Meantime, thousands of the city people had collected to share in the spoil, and more breaches had been made in the wall; the door, too, was forced open, and the crowd rushed in. The residents, harassed by the fire of troops above them, and by the fire and smoke of the burning building, took shelter all together in another place. Meantime the flames were spreading, and the roof under which the residents were sheltered fell in, and all who had escaped hitherto were buried in the ruins. This was about 2 o'clock, the affair having commenced about 8 a.m. Little or no spoil came into the hands of the attackers; all was completely burnt or ruined by the fire. The people then began to carry away their dead, of whom there were a great many, from the compound and the neighbourhood. I myself helped to carry away the body of a well-known Fakir Buzurg Shah, who had been for nearly two hours inciting the people to kill the infidels, and calling out that he was going to paradise.

When all was over at the Residency, the crowd rushed to the house of General Khisrao close by, where all the uniform for the Amir's troops was stored, and a number of swords and other weapons. These were all carried off. There was then a talk of looting the magazine in the Upper Bala Hissar where there were two other regiments. Daud Shah, who had taken refuge near here, called to these two regiments to allow no further looting. They replied that the troops and people were their brothers, and they would do nothing. The magazine, however, was not looted. The people abstained of their own accord. The people talked of attacking Yakub Khan, but the troops intervened, saying that he was their Amir and must not be touched.

After this for three days the shops remained closed, and the owners kept guard over their property. No further looting, however, occurred. Meantime, the doors of the palace were closed, and the Amir did not come outside. After three days, at the advice of his Sirdars, he took his seat in the balcony over the door, and sent his own son to the three regiments, who had first mutinied, to ask what their wishes were. They said that they only wanted three months' pay. The Amir sent their pay by the Mustaufi, and also sent two guns, saying that these three regiments might go and collect the revenue of Kohistan and take it themselves in addition to their pay. The regiments marched as far as the Chaman-i-rah-i-Khwaja Rawash, where they encamped, and, dismissing their officers, chose as their leaders men of their own tribe. They remained in camp for two days, when they returned to the city and applied for permission to return to their homes with their arms. No answer had been given when I left. After the third day the Amir called together his Sirdars, officers and chief men of the city, and said that, if they wished for a jihad, he was with them, and would do what they wished. He was obliged, for fear of his life, to say this. His wish throughout had been that the Envoy should, through fear, voluntarily leave the city, but he wished that the pressure should be put on him by the people or by independent tribes, and not by his troops.

Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani, is in Kabul; he is strongly advising the Amir to send his family to Kohistan. This he has consented to do, and all arrangements have been made. Camels have been sent for from Kohistan, but had not arrived when I left.

The residents of the Bala Hissar, where there are some 3,000 houses, have sent all their property to the city, and the city people are all busily engaged in burying their property. They are afraid to take it out of Kabul for fear of being looted.

The Amir has sent for the troops who had started for Balkh, and is recalling all soldiers from furlough.

Before this disturbance in Kabul, three regiments in Zurmat had mutinied for their pay, and expelled and wounded their commanding officer. I don't know how many regiments were concerned in the late disturbance, but there were as many people, soldiers, and others as could crowd together near the place. There was an idea that there was a vast amount of property stored in the Residency. When I left, there was a guard over the place, and the ruins were still smouldering and too hot to be disturbed. All the bodies, mutineers, and others, who have been found have been buried; but there are still a great number under the ruins.

The Amir is endeavouring, by exciting people to a jihad, to regain his influence with the people; but it is known that he has sent letters to the British authorities, and he is accordingly regarded with suspicion.

Note.—Informant appears to be speaking the truth; his confession that he was himself on the spot strengthens the belief in his story. I have not arrested him, as, if he is only one of many thousands, his punishment would be of little use, and might create distrust in the minds of the people of Kabul generally, who were all, like himself, collected in hopes of sharing in the spoil.

Enclosure 33 in No. 27.

Dated, Camp Ali Khel, 19th September 1879.

FROM MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FRÉDÉRIC ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding the Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for your perusal, (a) the depositions of two Guide sowars of the late Envoy's escort, who took refuge with their co-religionists, the Kazalbashes, given safe conduct from Kabul by Padshah Khan, and brought into this camp by his uncle Sirkai Khan; (b) a letter in original, brought by Sirdar Bahadur Ghulam Nakshband Khan from Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, in whose house he had taken shelter when the late outbreak took place.

Enclosure 34 in No. 27.

Statement of AKBAR SHAH, Kazalbash of Murad Khana (Kabul), B. Troop, Guide Cavalry, escaped from Kabul disaster, dated Ali Khel, 17th September 1879.

ON the day of the mutiny, I and Duffadar Futteh Muhammad Khan and a Sikh trooper Narain Sing, with 25 grass-cutters, were out for grass. Lieutenant Hamilton had come a little way with us to look for good grass, and also Dr. Kelly. They turned back after coming about $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile to the chaman, and returned to the Residency. Presently we heard sounds of firing from the Residency. We at once returned, and were met near the Embassy by a crowd who threatened and tried to capture us. We managed to get away and take refuge with Naibs Nur Muhammad and Rahim Khan, Kazalbashes, in the Murad Khana. The Sikh was secretly removed to a "dhurmsala" in the city. As soon as the mutineers discovered our whereabouts, they surrounded the quarter, and demanded we should be given up; but our fellow-tribesmen stood by us, and refused to surrender us; on which the mutineers, seeing it was useless, desisted. We remained in Kabul for 10 days, and Sirdar Yahya Khan and Padshah Khan arranged with the Kazalbash Maliks above mentioned for our safe conduct. We were accordingly made over to Sirkai Khan, Padshah Khan's uncle, to whose house we were first removed, and then came away at night. At Dobandi, we were threatened by a Malik, who obliged us to leave the high road, and we then came round by Kundao to Rasim Khel by a difficult footpath over the mountains.

As regards the defence of the Residency, the Sahibs, finding the place untenable, at last set fire to it, and retreated to a "hammám," from which Lieutenant Hamilton and a few men sallied out no less than three times, killing and wounding a number each time; at last he was shot near a gun he had tried to take. Mr. Jenkyns was killed in a doorway. The Envoy, being wounded on the forehead by a bullet when on the roof, was carried downstairs, and attended to. He dictated a letter to the Amir, which was taken by one Gholam Nabi, a Kabul chuprassie, brother of Muhammad Sharif of the Guides. The bearer got a reply promising help, but could not carry it back into the Residency, which was completely surrounded. Another (verbal) message was afterwards sent by one Taimūs, a Guide sowar (Saddozai), who, however, was thrown down over the wall, and became insensible. He was kept prisoner a day, and then released for extracting a bullet from one of the mutineers' shoulder.

I had the above account from Taimūs and Gholam Nabi.

I do not believe the Amir instigated the revolt. It was the soldiery who wanted their pay. They mutinied nearly all together, and the Amir was powerless to prevent. Yahya Khan, Barakzai, and father-in-law of the Amir's, also the heir-apparent, also the son of Shahghassi Muhammad Yusaf, were sent out with the Koran to quell the row, but could not. Had the Amir called us, Kazalbashes, out, we would have fought the mutineers and saved the Embassy. Abdul Karim Khan, General or Brigadier, of the three "ordul" regiments, incited the troops to go to the Envoy and demand redress. Another Abdul Karim, Kohistani, was killed by the Amir, because two out of the three mutinous regiments were mostly Kohistanis. This has raised the Kohistanis, who refuse to give up some of the Amir's camels out grazing with theirs, or to pay any revenue.

Twenty-two out of twenty-five grass-cutters were saved by one Ibrahim Khan, a Colonel Commanding an Afghan Cavalry Regiment, and a pensioner of the British Government, having been in service with one of the Bengal Cavalry regiments as Wurd-Major. The Cavalry did not join in the mutiny, but turned out ready to obey any orders sent. A few of the artillery served the guns, which helped to batter down the gateway of Residency.

Enclosure 35 in No. 27.

STATEMENT OF FUTTEH MUHAMMAD, son of Muhammad Jan, Pharsiwan, resident of Kabul, Kote Duffadar, 2nd Troop (Q.O.) Guide Cavalry, dated 17th September 1879.

ON the day of the massacre, he, Akbar Shah (2nd Troop), and Narain Sing (4th Troop), were on duty with the grass-cutters of the escort. The grass-cutters had had only commenced going out to cut grass from the 1st. Up to that date, grass and bhussa had been provided by the Amir.

Lieutenant Hamilton wished the grass to be cut from the chaman (uncultivated grazing land) near Bini Hissar, and had ridden out with him in the morning to see if it was possible. It was feared that if grass was cut near the crops, they might be damaged by the grass-cutters. Lieutenant Hamilton, after seeing the uncultivated grazing land, agreed with him that it would be better to cut the grass near the khets, and gave orders that it was to be done.

There were 25 grass-cutters and 4 sowars of the Amir with him.

About an hour after Lieutenant Hamilton and Dr. Kelly, who had also ridden out with Lieutenant Hamilton, had left, he heard firing, and from its continuance, began to suspect there was a fight going on. (He was not surprised, as there was a very strong feeling against both the Amir and Sir Louis Cavagnari since the arrival of the six regiments from Herat, more than a month ago. They were angry with the Amir for having allowed the Embassy to come to Kabul, and expressed it openly. He mentioned about the feeling there was to Lieutenant Hamilton and Major Cavagnari; the latter said the Amir is our friend, it does not matter.) As soon as he had satisfied himself that there was a disturbance (bulwa) going on, and that it appeared to be against the Residency, the top of which was covered with people, (as a rule it was closed and never used because it overlooked other houses), he told the Amir's sowars to escort the grass-cutters to a cavalry regiment not far off, and started with the two Guide sowars and two grass-cutters (one a sowar and the other Dr. Kelly's) for the city. They failed to get to the Bala Hissar, as it was surrounded, but managed to reach Sirdar Yahya

Khan's fort just outside the city. Before they reached Yahya Khan's the Amir's sowars who had been with them on the grass-cutters' guard, came up, and wanted to kill Narain Sing, the Sikh sowar. They went so far as to take his sword; but on his and Akbar Shah showing that they would not permit him to be interfered with as far as in their power lay, he was allowed to come on and his tulwar returned. There were some Kazalbashes* at Yahya Khan's who offered to give them shelter, and be responsible for their safety; so they went with them to Murad Khana (a portion of the city occupied by Pharsiwans).

* Men of their own tribe.

(Signed) E. G. H.

The night of the massacre they were joined by Gholam Nabi, an Embassy chupprassi entertained in Kabul by Sir Louis Cavagnari. He was formerly in the Guides, and is a brother of the present Wurdi-Major of the Guides, by name Muhammad Sharif Khan. He is also a Kazalbash. Akbar Shah, the other Guide sowar, is a Kazalbash Sayud. The next night they were joined by Taimus, a Shazada of the Sadozai division, a sowar in the Guides, and one of the Envoy's escort. He had been kept a prisoner by one of the mutinous regiments, but was released for extracting a bullet from a Havildar's arm. All the grass-cutters (but two) out with him were saved. A Peshawuri chupprassi, Sir Louis' bearer, his washerman and a baker escaped from the Bala Hissar. He has heard that a sepoy of the Guides, one of the escort, who was on leave in Kohistan is also alive. The sepoy is a Ghilzai by tribe. Two carbines (snider), one sword, two pouches and belts belonging to himself and Narain Sing are with Afzal Khan, Kazalbash, a Khan. He has asked Yahya Khan to get them back. He does not think the Amir was implicated in the massacre, but he failed after the outbreak to save the Sahibs; he should have called out the Kazalbashes; they were ready to respond. The sooner the army reaches Kabul, the better. No preparations to oppose a force have been made, and the Amir himself is in a state of siege. Kazalbash sentries are on all the gates. The three first mutinous regiments (Kohistanis) were sent by the Amir to Kohistan. There are nine regiments in Kabul; there were four cavalry regiments, three have been disbanded, as the Amir had no money to pay them. There are plenty of guns in Kabul (50 or more), but there are no cattle to drag them.

Gholam Nabi, chupprassi, has the letter from the Amir in reply to the Envoy's request for help.

Sirdar Wali Muhammad was in his own house in the Bala Hissar during the attack. He was sent for by the Amir after the massacre, and has since been in communication with him.

They owe their safety to Colonel Ibrahim Khan, a son of Naib Sharif's. Colonel Ibrahim Khan is a pensioner of the British Government and in the Amir's employ.

When the Embassy first came, the people were pleased, as they expected reforms of all kinds.

Taken before me, 17th September 1879.

(Signed) E. G. HASTINGS, Major,
Political Officer.

Enclosure 36 in No. 27.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDARS WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN and IBRAHIM KHAN to the address of GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., without date.

Be it known to you that the state of affairs in these quarters is such that can neither be stated nor written. Please God when the worthy Sirdar obtains the honour of waiting upon you, he will represent the true state of affairs. Usual ending.

Enclosure 37 in No. 27.

No. 7, dated Camp Ali Khel, 21st September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding the Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, Simla.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for your information, the following papers:—
Depositions of Ressaldar-Major Nakshband Khan Sirdar Bahadur.

Translation of letter from Kazi Abdul Rahman to Nawab Sir Gholam Hussan Khan, K.C.S.I.

Information by Ressaldar Bahawul-din, 11th Bengal Cavalry.

Enclosure 38 in No. 27.

Deposition of RESSALDAR-MAJOR NAKSHBAND KHAN, SIRDAR BAHADUR, dated Ali Khel, 19th September 1879.

I LEFT Aoshahr, a place about one kos from the city of Kabul, at about 7.30 p.m. on the 17th day of the current month.

Some two or three days after the arrival of Sir Louis Cavagnari and the Mission, six regiments of infantry arrived from Herat; they encamped for three days at Debori, about one kos distant from Kabul; on the morning of the fourth day after their arrival, they marched in order through the principal streets of the city headed by their officers and with bands playing. While marching along they shouted out, abusing the Envoy by name, asking, "Why has he come here?" &c. They also abused all the Kazalbashis, saying, that they were not men, and that they (the Herat soldiers) would show them how to act, that they would soon put an end to Cavagnari. They then marched out of the city to their camp at Sherpur. The residents of the city said nothing to them; they appeared neither pleased at what was going on, or the reverse. I was present when this took place, and at once took the news of what was going on to the Envoy, who said, "Never fear, keep up your heart, dogs that bark don't bite." I said, "These dogs do bite, and there is real danger." The Envoy said, "They can only kill the three or four of us here, and our death will be avenged." I then went to Mr. Jenkyns and told him what I had heard and seen. He asked me whether I had been to the Envoy, and if so, what he had said about it. I told him what had passed, and Mr. Jenkyns said, "What the Envoy says is very true, the British Government will not suffer from losing the three or four of us here."

A day or two after this three Herat regiments were all paid up most of their arrears of pay, and were given forty (40) days' leave to visit their homes. At this time cholera was raging violently; about (150) one hundred and fifty men out of their number died in one day, and the men dispersed to their homes in a fright, placing their arms in the Balar Hissar; they did not even wait for their leave certificates. Up till date none of these troops have returned; in my opinion the greater part of them will not rejoin, though some of them may do so. The Commander-in-Chief (Sipah Salar) Daud Shah was present when the troops marched through the city as above mentioned, and was also abused by them. He did not reply at all. Some of my own countrymen (Jellalabad men) were serving in these regiments. On my asking them what the meaning of all this was, they answered, "Do you think soldiers would have acted thus without orders; we were ordered to act as we did by our officers, and to shout out as we marched along."

I called up a well-to-do Hindu, Hira by name; his son is a servant of Sirdar Ibrahim Khan (the elder brother of Yakub Khan). Hira knows the ins and outs of what goes on in the houses of the great men; he had been to see the Envoy twice before. I called him up and sent him to report to the Envoy; he went towards the Residency for that purpose; he came back to me, and told me that the Amir's sentry would not let him pass and stoned him. I reported this to the Envoy, who said, "It is untrue; the man lies." The next morning another man endeavoured to get speech of the Envoy: this man was also stopped by the sentry. I don't know who this man was, but I reported this also to the Envoy, and asked him, "What is the use of your being kept like a prisoner, and no one allowed to come near you!" He answered, "I will have that sentry removed." A day or two after this that sentry was removed by the Envoy's order. Lieutenant Hamilton was sent to order the sentry's removal, which was accordingly done. I heard that the Amir was very angry at the removal of that sentry. A day or two after this, the Amir asked me whether I knew what the Amir's intention was, "to travel with me to the frontier as he had engaged to do at Gandamak, or whether he intended not to go." When the Envoy asked me about the Amir's intentions as to his proposed journey with me round the frontier, I replied, "He will not go; he has made

"no preparations for it at all. If you wish to make further inquiries, call the Mustaufi 'Habibulla Khan.'" The Envoy ordered me to call him. I went to the Mustaufi who said, "I am not well to-day. I will go to-morrow; give the Sahib my salaam." I went to the Mustaufi the next day at 10 a.m. to call him as he had promised to be with the Envoy at 8 a.m. The Mustaufi went to the Amir, and stated that the Envoy had called him. The Amir gave him permission to go, but said, "Don't go alone, take 'Shah Muhammad the Wazir with you.'" They both accompanied me to the presence of the Envoy, who made the three of us sit down, and entered into conversation. He then said to them that he had heard that the Amir was not treating well the Sirdars who had accompanied him (the Envoy), that he had stopped giving them the income they were entitled to, and which the Amir's father had given them regularly, that they had nothing to live upon, and would suffer from the want of it. That the British Government would not let them be the losers, and would pay their allowances if the Amir refused to do so, and that the Amir would not be pleased at this. The Mustaufi said, "He was unaware that this was the case, that he would mention it to the Amir, and say that if this was the case it was not proper." The Envoy then asked the Mustaufi, "Whether it was the Amir's intention to travel with him as he had promised or not?" Both the Mustaufi and the Wazir said, "He cannot go this year, because the country is unsettled, but he will go next year." The Envoy said, "Very well." He then asked them, "Whether the Amir intended to go to meet the Viceroy in India?" The Mustaufi said, "Yes, he will go about December." The Envoy said to them, "Ask the Amir again about this." They said, "We will ask him." The Envoy then dismissed them, and asked me my opinion as to whether the Amir intended to go to India or not. I answered, "No; he has thrown up the idea of going on this tour with you, and he does not intend going to the Durbar." I heard shortly afterwards from a friend of mine, that he had heard from a friend of his, who was present at the time, that on the Mustaufi leaving the Envoy they went straight to the Amir and mentioned what had taken place at the interview. The Amir was very angry. The Mustaufi said "Why are you angry?" "If you do not give these men anything, and the British Government gives nothing to them either, they will suffer from actual want." The Amir then asked Daud Shah what he thought of it. Daud Shah answered, "I am a soldier. I don't understand this sort of thing. I think that the promises made with the British Government at Gandamak ought to be carried out." The Amir answered, "This country is Afghanistan; we cannot get on here without practising deceit." On this, Naib Lall Muhammad (Farash Bashi) said, "If this is true what you say that Afghanistan cannot be managed without practising deceit (fareb), then we may look upon Afghanistan as on the way to ruin; it will go out of our hands." The Amir made no reply. On hearing all this, I reported it to Cavagnari, who said, "The Amir can do as he likes." (This took place some 8 or 10 days before the 3rd of September.)

About three days after this, the Envoy said—"I will go and call on the Amir to-morrow." When I went to the Amir's Durbar the next day, I saw the Envoy sitting alone with the Amir; when he returned to the Residency, I came to speak to him. He told me that "he had a private interview with the Amir which lasted two hours." That the expression of the Amir's face was a pleased one, that it was the same expression that he had seen him wearing at Gandamak. On the 2nd September the Envoy told me that he had asked Shah Muhammad to secure a house for Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan somewhere in the Bala Hissar but away from the Residency: this Shah Muhammad had refused to do so, the Envoy asked me to look out for one for him either in the city or Kazalbash quarter, or some other place than the Residency grounds. I had selected one, and was coming towards the Residency the next morning at 7 o'clock to report having done so. On arriving at the gate of the Bala Hissar, I heard a report that Daud Shah had been killed by some men of a regiment. I went on and saw three regiments and a few bazaar people going towards the Envoy's quarters. I followed them with two of my own retainers. Some of the men of one of the regiments recognized me, and said, "Kill him, he is Cavagnari's father;" they were unarmed as a rule, some of them had side arms. Two men attacked me with sticks, one struck me on the shoulder, and another struck my horse, which reared and turned round. I found I could not go to the Envoy, so I went up a bye street to Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan's house, and leaving my horse in his stable I went inside the house, where I found Wali Muhammad who was taking his bath (Hamam). I called out to him to come out. He did so, and said, "What is the matter?" I said, "Men have gone up to kill Cavagnari." He said, "Don't stay below, go upstairs." I went upstairs, and from there, 200 yards off through a window, I saw all these people go up to the Envoy's stables and begin stoning the syces and undoing the horses and plundering; some went on to where the Sowars' horses were and began to stone them and begin to plunder, and unfasten the horses; the Sowars armed immediately, and I then heard two or three shots evidently fired by the Sowars. I cannot tell whether any damage was done by these shots, but they all retired at once, and some two hundred of them went to the upper part of the Bala Hissar to fetch their arms, and the rest of the soldiers going out by the Shah Shahie gate of the Bala Hissar to fetch their arms from their Camp.

I heard that when the men had gone to fetch their arms, the Envoy wrote a letter to the Amir and sent it to him by a chaprassi. I heard that this letter reached the Amir, but did not hear whether he sent any reply or not. Had the Amir wished to assist the Envoy, why did he not send 100 men to guard each gate so as to prevent the return of these men with their arms?

In about half an hour's time, at 7.30 or 8 a.m., the soldiers returned with their arms and a regular fight began. Firing went on without intermission on both sides, the Afghan soldiers had capital cover and surrounded the Residency on all sides. The officers of the Afghans directed their men; they had looted the magazine of the Upper Bala Hissar and had plenty of ammunition with them. All the clothing, stores, treasury and other store-houses are near the Residency. The store-houses were looted; they attacked the treasure, but were stopped by the regiment or guard there. This regiment was I suppose about 500 strong, and remained at the treasury all day. The Amir's house is about 250 yards from that of the Envoy. Besides the regiment on duty at the treasury, I suppose there were some 2,000 followers of the Amir who had come into the Bala Hissar early that morning who were all round the Amir's house. They were all armed; none of them joined the attacking party in the morning, though some of them did so at about 2 p.m. I hear that the Amir several times said, "Some of you go to the Envoy's assistance," but whenever any did go towards where the fighting was going on, they only shouted out, "Kill, kill." This is only hearsay.

At about 9 a.m., while the fighting was going on, I myself saw the four European officers charge out at the head of some 25 of the garrison; they drove away a party that were holding some broken ground. When charged the Afghan soldiers ran like sheep before a wolf. About a quarter of an hour after this another sally was made by a party with three officers at their head—Cavagnari was not with them this time,—with the same result. A third sally was made with two British officers (Jenkyns and Hamilton) leading; a fourth sally was made with a Sikh Jemadar bravely leading. No more sallies were made after this. They all appeared to go up to the upper part of the house and fired from above. At about half-past 11 o'clock part of the building in which the Embassy was, was noticed to be on fire. I do not know who fired it. I think it probable that the defenders finding themselves so few fired part, so as to have a less space to defend. The firing went on continuously all day; perhaps it was hottest from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., after which it slackened, and the last shots were fired at about 8.30 p.m. or 9 p.m., after which all was quiet, and every one dispersed. The next morning I heard shots being fired. I asked an old woman to whose house I had been sent for safety by Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, what this was; she sent out her son to find out, he said, "They are shooting the people found still alive in the Residency."

The whole of that day the dead bodies stripped remained in the Residency. On the next day I hear that the bodies of all Mahomedans, Hindus, and the two British officers, Hamilton and Dr. Kelly, were all thrown together into a place dug for the purpose. I hear that the body of Mr. Jenkyns was taken to the Amir. I know nothing more about it. Cavagnari's body was not found. I am of the opinion that it must have been burnt in the house. I heard that on the 4th, the soldiers found some money in the Residency. On hearing this the Amir posted sentries over the house, and on the 5th, caused the bodies to be buried, and from other money he found there, he paid each sepoy of the regiment that had guarded the treasury a present of seven rupees per man.

I asked Wali Muhammad Khan to send me to some safe place; he gave me three ponies. I dressed as a grass-cutter, and with one grass-cutter riding one pony in front and the second behind me with the other pony we got safely to Aoshahr, where I remained in hiding about nine days; when hearing that the British force was on the Shuturguridan I travelled by night and reached that place in safety and reported myself to the Brigadier-General Commanding there.

On or about the 13th or 14th September the man in whose house I was concealed came to his home and stated the following facts:—He said the Amir called up the Sirdars of every clan, the Ghilzais, Kohistanis, Kabulis, Kazalbashis, Tajiks, &c., and asked them whether they intended to join in the "Ghaza" or religious war to fight the British, and if so, he requested that he would send their families to Kohistan and Ghilzai country, or some other place out of the way; they answered; "We are not going to send away our families let the Ghilzais bring their families to Kabul, and we will then fight."

The Amir at this reply was very angry and abused Zainulabundin, the man that had collected all the Sirdars together, and had said that they would agree to fight.

Abdul Karim Khan, Safi, the most powerful man in Kohistan, and a friend of the late Envoy's, was cut into small pieces by order of the Amir about ten days ago, the Amir fearing that he would probably seize him and make him over to the British in case he wished to fly to Balkh or Kohistan.

Malik Hamid, Ghilzai, Khan Muhammad Khan, Ghilzai, Nyaz Muhammad Khan, Ghilzai, were all called by the Amir the day after Abdul Karim Khan had been killed, and said "Cavagnari made you all over to me, and I have done nothing to you; now you must swear on the Koran never to go again to the English, and you must join in a religious war against them." They agreed to do as he ordered. When I left Kabul the troops consisted of—

One cavalry regiment "Sharuk Walla," stationed at Kabul.

" " " Colonel Ghulam Hyder, stationed in Zurmat.

Seven infantry regiments, in Kabul.

Three infantry regiments, 14 guns, stationed in Ghazni.

Six infantry regiments, 24 guns, sent to Turkestan. I hear that they have been recalled, but do not know whether they have arrived.

There are a great number of guns in position in the Bala Hissar, but very few gunners.

The walls of the Bala Hissar are of no use for defence. There are some three or four places which men can scale easily.

Some 200 or 300 irregular troops, infantry, are in Kabul but no irregular cavalry.

On or about the 13th of this month three cavalry regiments asked for pay and were disbanded by the Amir after they had deposited their arms.

The Sirdars who are for the British and not for the Amir are—

Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan.

" Ibrahim Khan.

" Ahmad Ali Jan.

" Muhammad Sarwar Khan.

" " Sadik Khan.

" " Hashim Khan.

" " Karim Khan.

" Abdul Rusul Khan.

" Muhammad Hussan Khan, &c., &c., &c.

On my faith I believe that Yakub Khan stands alone, and that those Sirdars who are outwardly for him are so only through fear, and, when the British advance, will all come over to them.

I have omitted to mention one thing. Before the arrival of the six regiments from Herat (mentioned above) the Envoy, agreeably to a suggestion of mine, wished to pay Wali Muhammad Khan a visit to condole with him on the death of his mother. The Envoy said that he wished first of all to ask permission from the Amir before going. He did so, and the Amir answered "go." The Envoy then told me what he had done, and said that he intended to visit Wali Muhammad Khan on the next day, ordering me to go and prepare Wali Muhammad Khan for the visit. I went to Wali Muhammad Khan's house and told him this, and the Sirdar made every preparation to receive him and informed all the other Sirdars of the expected visit. The next day, however, the Envoy told me he had asked Ghyas, the Mehmander, whether the Amir would really like his paying this visit, and that Ghyas had answered "No, the Amir will not like your going." I then said, "I warned the Sirdar that you were coming and everyone expected that you would have paid this visit, and all the Sirdars hearing that you have put it off have begun to tremble in their hearts, saying, 'We wonder what our fate will be if the Sahib is afraid of going, or is unable to visit our chief Sirdar.'"

Enclosure 39 in No. 27.

Letter from KAZI ABDUL RAHMAN of Kabul, written on 15th September, addressed to NAWAB SIR GHOLAM HUSSAN KHAN, K.C.S.I., and brought to him by RESSALDAR BAHAWUL-DIN KHAN, II. (Q.O.), Bengal Lancers on furlough in Kabul.

I HAD communicated the state of affairs in Kabul to Major Cavagnari several times through Ressaldar Baha-wul-din Khan, and especially two days before the outbreak which I told him would take place, and he should be on the alert, but my warning was disregarded. I again beg you to tell the Sahibs that no one is prepared to fight you. I declare they are all on your side and looking for your arrival. The revolt was pre-arranged.

The Ressaldar being cross-questioned as to what the Kazi could have heard to induce him to send the Envoy a warning of intended disturbances, says: "The Kazi judged by the fact of the Amir not having fulfilled one of his promises in connexion with the Treaty, that he had no intention of acting honestly, or being really friendly, but that, on the contrary, he would sooner or later break out into open hostility. The Kazi had not, however, heard of any specific intention or arrangement for mutiny or revolt on a given day or in a preconcerted manner."

(Signed) A. CONOLLY, Captain,
Political Officer.

Ali Khel,
20th September 1879.

Enclosure 40 in No. 27.

Information given by Ressaldar BAHAWUL-DIN KHAN, 11th Bengal Cavalry.

The "Neza bazi" practice by the Envoy was most distasteful to the Amir, because his own troops used to look on and sometimes join in the sport. The spot on which it was carried on, however, was concealed by willow trees, and not actually in sight of the palace.

There were other matters at which His Highness took offence, such as accompanying the Envoy in person on the proposed tour to the northern provinces; also the military rank of Sir Louis Cavagnari, for in the Afghan army a major is of no account.

As regards his attitude on the day of the mutiny, the first thing the Envoy did was to send him an urgent message verbally by one Muhammad Karim Khan, Subadar in the 1st Punjab Cavalry, and son of Muhammad Rahim Khan, who was killed with Captain Davidson at the Crag Picquet, Umbeyla campaign. (Muhammad Karim Khan, whose house is at Bariki Barik in Logar, had come to Kabul about a land case.) On his arrival with the message from the Envoy, he was told to wait, and help would be sent, but he was kept all day, and nothing was done. Later on one Ghulam Akhi, a Chaprassi with note from Mr. Jenkyns reached the Amir, but nothing was done beyond giving him a line to say help was coming, which never came. His son was certainly sent out apparently to stop the fighting, but he went to the Chaman or quarter which the three mutinous troops had left, and where there was no one left to coerce. Daud Shah when sent out was maltreated and wounded, and I dare say he did his duty honestly, for he had lately rather sided with the Envoy and estranged himself from the Amir accordingly. The Amir had a considerable number of personal attendants, from 100 to 150, and all the officers and leaders of the troops besides officials. Had he gone out in person even a short distance, it would most probably have had the effect of checking the revolt.

Besides he might, before they broke away and joined the attack, have kept back or made active use of three regiments quartered in the Bala Hissar close to his own residence.

Allao-din of Lalpura, a trusted adviser, urged him to help the Envoy, but he would do nothing.

Saif-ud-Din Khan Brigadier offered to bring up three regiments from Sherpur to beat off the assailants, but he was desired to be silent. He showed no concern as to the treatment of the bodies both of Embassy and escort (excluding the Envoy's which was not found); they had been tossed over the wall and left in a naked, dishonoured and horribly mutilated and hacked-about condition for a day and night, after which they were thrown into a hollow and covered with earth and rubbish.

As to the defence and setting fire to the Embassy this was done by the Embassy themselves in order to render untenable that portion of the place, the roof of which was in the enemy's possession, and from which they were pouring down a hot fire of bullets. They had scrambled on to this roof from a neighbouring building which stood on one side only of the Residency.

The defenders had retreated meanwhile to another part of the Residency, and eventually to a "pucca hamam" or bath which could not be set on fire, and which they defended to the last.

Ressaldar Bahaw-ul-din Khan's sources of information are Saifu-din Khan, Allao-din of Lalpura, Mirza Nishan (the Commander-in-Chief's Secretary).

He says Padshah Khan was being closely watched, but told him (the Ressaldar) that the moment he heard of our advancing from the Shuturguridan, he would slip away and get us unlimited supplies and carriage in Logar. Sirdar Wali Muhammad also sent a verbal message by him to say that for his own sake and that of the country he hoped the British would advance rapidly.

He believes Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan to be untrustworthy, but Mustaufi Habibulla and Daud Shah to be at heart favourable to our cause. The latter has reason to suspect the Amir for having sent him out alone to face the troops (that is exactly what Allal-ud-din Khan, Ghilzai Chief, has stated in one of his interviews with Sir F. Roberts). The coldness between him and the Amir arose from his having advised His Highness on certain points, as follows:—

- (1.) Eleven months' arrear of pay had been promised the troops, but not given them.
- (2.) His Highness had promised to go on tour, but would not make any arrangement for it.
- (3.) He was treating Abdulla Jan's mother very hardly and had forced her to give up 17 lacs.
- (4.) He would not befriend those who had come in to Cavagnari.
- (5.) He did nothing to gain the support and affection of the Chiefs and people.
- (6.) Or to listen to complaints of, or see to interest of, traders and travellers and people.

Enclosure 41 in No. 27.

Translation.

Statement of ALLAL-UD-DIN, brother of PADSHAH KHAN, GHILZAI, taken at Ali Khel on the 15th of September.

ON the morning of the 3rd, after the sun had risen, I and my brother started from our residence in the town of Kabul and proceeded to the Durbar of the Amir to ask His Highness' permission to return to our home. The Amir was in his private apartment at the time, and we stopped at the gateway downstairs. Our names having been announced to the Chief, he said he would send for us after he had washed his face and hands. As usual, General Daud Shah, Mullah Shah Muhammad, Yahya Khan, and Mustaufi Habibulla were with him at the time. At this time we observed two attendants of the Amir hurriedly running towards His Highness's apartment. Shortly after General Daud Shah came down, and we asked him if everything was all right. He said it was all right, and not all right, and in a hurry went away. His orderly told us that three Orderly Regiments quarrelled on the occasion of issue of their pay, and that, having mutinied, they had proceeded to the residence of the British Plenipotentiary, Sir Louis Cavagnari. A short while after a loud cry of "Dam-i-Charyar" was heard. It was said that the mutinous troops first went to the stables to seize the (Embassy) horses; that the Chhota Sahib, Mr. Jenkyns, ordered his men to fire upon them, and by this means killed nine of the soldiers; that the Afghan troops, being then without arms, receded and went to fetch weapons; that they got hold of some arms from the magazine, known by the name of Qulah-i-Firangi, and took away some from the lines of the other three Afghan regiments stationed in the square of the Bala Hissar fort; that these regiments also joined the mutineers, and wounded Daud Shah by bayonets and stones; that the Amir desired to go out himself, but was prevented by Mulla Shah Muhammad and the Mustaufi, who expressed their apprehension that the troops would also kill him if he went out. The Amir then sent his heir-apparent and his tutor with a copy of the Koran and Yayha Khan to dissuade the three mutinous troops from acts of violence, and to tell them that he would send away the British Envoy from his territory if they did not like his stay at the capital. He also sent them a message to the effect that, if desired, he would wage a religious war, but that they should not raise a disturbance now. I and my brother and a number of other Khans were also sent with the deputation. When we reached near the troops we asked them to forbear, but they snatched the Koran from the hands of the heir-apparent's tutor, and beat him with the stocks of guns, and continued in attacking (the Residency). Guns (banduks) were being fired incessantly from both sides. The besieged inmates of the Residency showed a staunch resistance. I have heard that when the troops first attacked the Residency, Major Cavagnari wrote a letter to the Amir, telling him that no person treats his guest in the way (he was being treated). It is said that a servant of Major Cavagnari, the resident of Barki, managed to go out of the Residency with the letter, but as the place was subsequently more closely besieged, all communication with it was cut off. The fight continued to dusk, when the Residency was seen on fire. Some say that the inmates of the place set the building on fire themselves to burn away the mutineers who had reached the roof; while others remark that the building was set on fire by the mutineers, or it caught fire from the 10 or 12 charges of artillery which had been fired. That morning Major Cavagnari had gone out for an airing, and he had not yet ungirdled his loins when the disturbance broke out. When out riding, Major Cavagnari and the troopers of his escort used to cut apples while galloping near the lines of the Afghan troops, and the men of the Amir's army thought the British officer and his followers showed them that they were great swordsmen, and thereby taunted them. The Afghans took this to heart. Besides this, a few days ago some sepoys (of the Envoy's escort) were seen at the house of a saddler, with whose wife they were on terms of intimacy; they were even pursued that day by a number of people, and the circumstance enraged the populace. Major Cavagnari was not in the habit of receiving visits from any persons or hearing reports from them, and so he could not be aware of their feelings and ill designs. The Amir was not concerned in exciting the mutiny. But it is true that after the disturbance the Chief sent three months' pay to the mutinous troops to their lines to prevent them from doing any further harm. Three or four days previous to the mutiny a Russian Envoy was at Kabul; but I am not aware whether he was there on the particular day, or whether he is now in the town or not. From the hammam (bath-room) of the Residency house the mutineers brought out three women, two of whom were the daughters of a farrier of Kabul, and they were killed on the spot. The Amir cannot at present punish the mutineers for fear of his troops and the (excited) public. The soldiers do not obey the orders of their officers. They appoint their officers themselves. The people and the army are ready to wage war under the name of Jihád. As I have come here (to the British camp), the Amir will ruin me. I shall carry out as far as I can all the orders given to me. When leaving Kasim Khel yesterday I sent my nephew, Sherdil Khan, to Kabul to inform his father, Padshah Khan, that I had proceeded to the British camp, and to request him to manage to return home. If matters are settled with the British Government, I shall render them every service. The people will probably collect together to engage in Jihád.

Enclosure 42 in No. 27.

Statement of KAJIR KHAN, SON of PAYANDA KHAN, in Service of the Kabul Embassy, dated 10th September 1879.

I MET Major Sir L. Cavagnari, K.C.B., C.S.I., at Batti Kot during the late campaign and took service with him, bringing information as I was a Talib-ul-Ilm. I again came across Sir L. as he was proceeding to Kabul, and was asked to take service once more, and consented, joining the Embassy six days before the massacre. There were four regiments of infantry and a battery of artillery in the Bala Hissar; the other troops were scattered about the place, owing to cholera. On the morning of the 3rd September a regiment, named Bahadur Khan's, turned out for parade with arms, then another; also a third without arms, to receive their pay. General Daud Shah rode up and was received with a salute; he then proceeded to pay regiment 3. A month's pay was handed to them, but the men demanded arrears for three; the General abused them, the soldiers replied with a volley of stones at him, and then at their officers; after this they proceeded towards the Embassy. At the commencement of the disturbance I was near the soldiers, and started at once to warn the Envoy of what had occurred, and Sir Louis ordered every preparation to be made for defence. The rioters fired shots and threw stones at the Embassy house, and were received with a volley; the cry of Ghaza was raised: all the regiments (with the exception of the officers) and the city rabble joined in. Up to one p.m. no impression was made on the Residency. The rioters then set fire to the buildings, and brought two guns to bear also. As the fire burnt the supports (wooden) of the houses, our men were now and then precipitated down and either shot or cut down. The smoke hindered the garrison greatly. It was about this time that I attempted to escape, and being secured by men of Bahadur Khan's regiment, would have been slain had I not thrown my arms round the legs of a man who was directing them, and he saved my life, keeping me a prisoner in one of the rooms. It was not till sunset that resistance ceased and all was over. At intervals men came in to report how the fight went on. In this way I heard that Amir Yakub Khan had sent his son with the Koran, and begged the soldiers to desist from attacking men who were their guests, and every claim of theirs would be satisfied, but they would not listen to the lad. After sunset the man who had saved my life told me to slip away. I did so, and took shelter in a village three kos from Kabul; the next day and night (4th September) I spent on the road; 5th, with a Ghilzai chief, who gave me shelter; 6th, Tezeen; 7th, with Azmatulla Khan at Charbagh; 8th, Girdeh; 9th, Safed dheri; 10th, Peshawur. During the six days that I was at Kabul, I mixed constantly with the people in the city, and am under the impression that the presence of the English officers was not distasteful to the residents, and that this rising was not premeditated or planned by any one.

Note.

Bahadur Khan's regiment is said to have come from Herat, and the regiment No. 3 also came from that quarter. Khan Bahadur Ibrahim Khan substantiates the first, and Wali Muhammad Khan, Zakka Khel, the second. Information received through Gholam Moyauddin Khan at Lundikotal from Jellalabad, says that the Herati soldiery had commenced the disturbance. Kajir Khan knows the regiment, entered here No. 3, as the "Ardal." He gives further details of the men at the Residency taking shelter in the garden, and throwing themselves into the water when on fire with their clothes burning, which shows that he was an eye-witness of the events he has related, though these details have been omitted here from his account.

At first this man expressed absolute ignorance of any Herati regiment having anything to say to this outbreak, and maintained that the regiment which began the attack was the Ardal, or orderly regiment, composed of selected men taken from all the regiments and formed into household troops.

September 14, 1879.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieut.-Col.,
Commissioner.

Enclosure 43 in No. 27.

MEMORANDUM on Information received from Kabul regarding the recent Massacre of the of the Embassy, the Attitude of the AMIR and that of some of the Tribes.

IN forwarding the information which I have selected as the most interesting, and to some extent most trustworthy of all that I have received regarding events in Kabul, and the present aspect of affairs, I would draw particular attention to the statement of Abdulla Nur, Chief of the Kuki Khel Afridis.

His history is well known to Government, and I need not repeat it; our most strenuous opponent throughout the late Kabul war, he declined positively to attend our summons until he had received orders or permission from the Amir of Kabul. What those orders were he has briefly stated. Abdulla Nur is now in Peshawur with the Khyber deputation, and in receiving him in the presence of the whole of the Afridi tribes assembled, I told him that I remembered his services to me ten years ago, that we respected him for his adherence to the cause of the patron whose favours he had received, and that I now expected as hearty service from him as he had given to the Amir. He at once, in few words, replied that he had come in to do that service, and I, myself, believe that he will not be found faithless. Throughout my dealings with the Khyber tribes he has shown great strength; he has supported my views which have, no doubt, to some extent coincided with his own, but he has also had much to say in smoothing away difficulties and quieting the heart-burnings which naturally enough existed among the opposite faction.

I suspect that the little effect which the recent news of the disaster in Kabul has had upon the Afridis generally is greatly due to the calm attitude of Abdulla Nur.

I have said so much regarding this man because, being by far the most powerful and most respected among the Khyber Chiefs, and at the present moment working, to all appearances, heartily and honestly with us, I would obtain for his opinion as much weight as I think is due.

I believe it will be found that Amir Yakub Khan was as much taken by surprise as the Embassy, and that he was nearly in as great danger from his own mutinous troops as the Envoy, and became practically a prisoner in his own palace. No doubt he may have shown little force of character, and but little personal courage, yet he probably was deterred from running similar risks, by the treatment which General Daud Shah, the Commander-in-Chief, and his attendants, as also the Amir's own son, had received at the hands of the soldiery.

With reference to the final paragraph of the statement of Abdulla Nur I may add here that three or four men, whose opinions ought to be the most valuable, have volunteered their conviction, almost in the same words, that Sirdar Ayub Khan was the secret instigator of this revolt. I should not say so much.

We have always heard that Ayub Khan, in writing to his brother Yakub Khan protested against the alliance with the British Government. These feelings were shared by the regiments lately arrived fresh on the scene from Herat, and they are also said to have openly expostulated with the Amir through their officers. To the soldiers and to Ayub Khan the Amir is reputed to have given a firm reply, that he had been powerless to resist us, and that we had treated him with consideration and kindness.

Ayub Khan and his regiments were but indifferently informed of the progress of events which led to the execution of the Treaty between the Amir and the Government. Could they have been in personal communication, Ayub Khan would probably have arrived at the same conclusions as the Amir. There is no necessity for suspecting Russian intrigue in Herat; Ayub Khan need only have been prompted by the same national feeling which influenced more or less all Afghans, and which was only modified by personal interests.

The troops lately from Herat had been for many years away from Kabul. They are not composed of residents of Herat territory, but of a miscellaneous collection of all classes and tribes from which the Army is usually recruited. I believe it was the intention of the Amir to have sent them in relief to Turkestan. On arrival in Kabul they were mutinous about their arrears of pay, and the Amir attempted at first unsuccessfully to disarm them. Then cholera broke out among them, 250 are said to have died in one day, and some three regiments received part of their arrears of pay, gave up their arms, and were dismissed to their homes.

The remaining regiments from Herat who were in the relief for Turkestan were probably detained in Kabul to accompany the Amir and the Envoy in that direction.

So far as I am able to judge at present the outbreak was entirely due to a quarrel about pay; the "Ardal" Regiment stationed in the Bala Hissar having demanded more than the one month's pay offered to them, then maltreating and wounding Daud Shah the General, and threatening the Amir and afterwards the Embassy. I should say that although there may have been disaffection and mutinous language, yet that the outbreak and its results were unpremeditated and unforeseen.

Assad Khan, Subadar of the 2nd Punjab Infantry, at this moment sitting with me, assures me that the Afridis are one and all ready to do the Government service, and adds that his news from Kabul is that the Amir is heartbroken and refuses food. When asked the origin of this disaffection and mutiny he immediately replies that the Sirdars Ayub Khan and Abdul Rahman Khan are at the bottom of it; the same story that I have before alluded to.

Why the Amir withheld so much pay from the troops I have never heard satisfactorily explained. He is supposed to have had the money, having recovered 18 lakhs from the mother of the late heir-apparent. It may have been to prevent desertion. Food was at famine prices, and the troops are universally said to have been starving and to have plundered right and left on their way to Kabul.

It is, of course, to be expected that the people of Kabul itself will dread the advance of British troops and fear indiscriminating retaliation. So also will the army, or at all events those regiments most concerned in the late outrage. But I do not as yet anticipate that our columns will meet with opposition. If any of the Herati regiments have left Kabul unbroken, and have marched in any direction, they are thinking of their own safety. They know that they will not find this in their homes; their nominal rolls exist, and it will I believe be found that they are endeavouring to escape into quasi-independent territory. Any advancing towards Jellalabad are probably making for Kafiristan, or more probably Kunar and Bajour.

I believe that the Afridis and the Khyber arrangements are absolutely in hand. I have as yet no fear of the Mohmunds or of any opposition on this road. I disbelieve the reports of the Amir having circulated letters calling for assistance from the tribes. He has probably told them what has happened and of our certain advance, and has asked them to await any summons. The rest of the message has probably been supplied by disaffected fanatical Mullahs, by those who have gained nothing personally from the British alliance, and by the alarmists within our territory who would raise difficulties in the hopes of our appreciating their offers of service.

Nevertheless I may say that the almost universal opinion expressed by natives in and about Peshawur is that Amir Yakub Khan has, 1st., been guilty of treachery, and has deliberately planned this massacre; 2ndly, is so alarmed at the results that he has thrown himself into the arms of his soldiers, and now looks to them to defend him.

I do not believe in either theory; the property of the Amir and the persons of his servants appear to have been no more respected than the Embassy.

People who served us before along the Jellalabad road, are again offering help, but no doubt all are waiting to see what the Governor of Jellalabad and the Khan of Lalpura will do. The latter is said to be prepared for flight. If this is the case, it is because the Amir when communicating with them was doubtful of the intentions of the British Government towards himself.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Peshawur, 14th September 1879. Commissioner of Peshawur.

Enclosure 44 in No. 27.

STATEMENT OF ABDULLA NUR, Kuki Khel, dated 13th September 1879.

I REACHED Kabul the day before the arrival of Sir Louis Cavagnari, saw the Amir in Durbar, and was entrusted to the care of Shah Muhammad, who was directed to entertain me. I had one long and private interview with Amir Yakub Khan with no other persons present in the room, before I was permitted to return this way. He assured me that he had made definite arrangements with the English, and fully intended carrying them out; that for the future their friends were his friends, and their enemies his enemies. He then turned to me and said: "You, Abdulla Nur, are a true Pathan, and have clung to me, in spite of the advances of others, I now ask you to be friends with the English, serve them as you have served me. Go to them and they will treat you well I am certain, but even if they do not act as I have imagined, restrain your tribe from all hostilities with them, and I will then see what I can do for you from my own purse." I was presented with a thousand rupees and then dismissed. I believe the Amir to be friendly to the English, the reports of his having sent messengers and letters to stir up the tribes are all false. The soldiers of the Amir—some of them were opposed to the Envoy's coming to Kabul, as they considered that their "pardah" was gone. The Herati regiments have been in Herat for years, and their officers with Ayub Khan have been greatly open to Russian influences.

Enclosure 45 in No. 27.

STATEMENT OF SAYAD AZGHAM, SON OF SAYAD IMAM R. ACHINI BALA KHALIL PIRBUBAS.

WENT about one and half months ago to Kabul (without being called by the Amir) to solicit that a grant should be given him and his family, as the mowajibs enjoyed by him in Kunar and the Khalil tappah of Peshawur had been taken away from them; it had been given to them as khairat. Syud Amir is a cousin of mine, and his mother was a Mohmund woman, married to Sayad Ahmad Ali (his father), and related to the mother of Amir Yakub Khan; through her he obtained an interview with the Amir at the "tabela*" in the Bala Hissar. Yakub Khan, hearing his request, promised to give him a grant and advised him to bring his family to Kabul. I remained about 22 days in the Bala Hissar, a house being given me for my use. There were no regiments actually stationed there, but the fort had always a guard of 800 men or thereabouts. I had no interview with Sir L. Cavagnari, or any of the officers. During my stay the Amir was summoning men to his capital who were friends of the English like Gholam Nakshband Khan and Wali Muhammad Khan, whom he desired to send towards Balkh with the Envoy, as he could not go himself. These men would only attend when the seals of the Amir and Sir Louis were on the paper, and as they interviewed the Amir they disappeared. Syud Muhammad, Badshah of Kunar, Asmatulla Khan, Ghilzai, Jabbar Khel, and Khalo Khan, Barakzai, would not attend the Amir's summons. Sir Louis asked what had become of the men summoned (name of the person unknown from whom asked), the reply he received was that the Amir had made away with them, he then became aware that the Amir's intention was evil, and would not permit any one to get near him. Twelve or 13 regiments were summoned from Herat before I reached Kabul. They were to be replaced in Herat by others. In the bazaar the people said these regiments had been summoned to fight the English. Rumours were about that any day a disturbance would take place and Cavagnari had been informed of the same. Two of the Herati regiments about a couple of days before the massacre went to the Amir and demanded four months' pay. They were sent to Daud Shah. He said, I can give you a month's pay. If you want more, go to Cavagnari. They did not go that day, but went on Wednesday, the very morning I started for Butkhak on my way to Peshawur. I left about 5 a.m., and had reached Butkhak about sunrise. When at Pishin the same day the news came of what had occurred in Kabul. I was also apprised of letters having been sent in all directions to rouse the border tribes against us. I heard the firing of guns towards Kabul. I went the next day to Tezin, then by the Karkatcha pass to Burji Sultan, then Kajja, afterwards Sultanpur, and the next day Jellalabad. I stopped there in a masjid, and was informed that the Governor had sent letters to summon the Khan of Lalpura and the Shinwaris against Asmatulla Khan who had become rebellious. On my reaching Ali Boghan I met a Mullah Wali Muhammad, who said that he had seen the body of Gholam Nakshband Khan being carried to Kama; he had been killed in the Kabul affair. I knew Wali Muhammad Mullah; he belongs to Taikal Bala. I then proceeded to Chardeh, and arrived the next day at Lalpura. I came across two Mullahs with "talibs" (students) who had letters for the Mohmunds, Bajouris, Swatis, and Bunerwals. That for the Mohmunds was delivered to Muhammad Sadik Khan in my presence, and the Mullahs having been provided with horses went on their way. Sadik Khan was ordered to collect 6,000 Mohmunds, and a similar force would be sent from Kabul. I saw no collection of men. The Lalpura families were ready to fly away to the hills. The people were glad of a religious war with us, because they had heard of Mowajibs having been taken away in Peshawur, and promises made to others to be broken afterwards. In Kabul I heard that the Amir had made peace with us because he had been forced to do so contrary to his wishes, and that he meant us no good for the future. Muhammad Hashim Khan, son of Muhammad Sherif Khan (in Balkh), Ahmed Ali Jan, and Abdulla Jan's mother are against the Amir.

THE above is a fair specimen of the sort of news circulating in Peshawur. The informant is an elderly highly respectable Sayad. He was brought to me by Arbab Tatah Khan, Khalil, who assured me that his information was thoroughly trustworthy; and I had heard of his arrival the day before from Arbab Jumma Khan, Mohmund, who professed to believe all that the informant stated.

Most of the report is untrue and invented. The informant himself was evidently embittered against the Government, which had done nothing to better his circumstances.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Peshawur, 14th September 1879. Commissioner.

Enclosure 46 in No. 27.

Statement of AHMEDJI, MULLAH, Resident of Alladand, Swat, who had gone to Kabul three months ago to collect money due to a shrine in Swat, to which informant belongs. Taken 13th September 1879.

INFORMANT left Kabul a week ago and walked to Jellalabad whence he came down the river on a raft staying over night at Lalpura on the 11th and arrived at Michni on the 12th, in Peshawur to-day, 13th. Before the attack on the Residency took place the people in Kabul had expressed sentiments hostile to the presence of a British Envoy at Kabul, and no doubt the fact that British officers were in the Bala Hissar was unpopular in the city. A short time before the attack an affray between two Kabul soldiers and a sepoy of the Guides took place in which the Kabulis were wounded. They belonged to the Bala Hissar garrison which was much exasperated by the Amir arresting the Kabulis and by the chaff of the townspeople who taunted them with having first their comrades wounded and then put in jail. Informant was not an eye-witness of the attack, but hears that the Bala Hissar garrison broke out early that morning on parade, and after firing on Daud Shah who was wounded in the side, made for the Residency. Sir L. Cavagnari was shot through the head about 9 or 10 A.M., and the Residency was set on fire and taken about 2 or 3 P.M., or later. The Bala Hissar was open during the day and troops and townspeople kept streaming in. The first regiment to break was the "Orderly Paltan." The Amir was in his own house the whole day with strong guards; he was in fear of his life. He lives about 400 paces distant from the Residency. Informant saw the flames of the burning houses that evening. Most of the bodies of the defenders were burnt in the Residency, the rest buried next day. Four men of the Guides escaped. (These were spared out of a few sepoys who took refuge in a "hammam" or bath contiguous to the Residency.) Three (of whom two are unknown and one wounded, and one being Ali Asghar of Koh Daman) are with the Amir; and one is making his way down to Peshawur. Informant saw him at Butkhak. He belongs to Gujrat or Bakshahi, a village in Yusufzai. Next day the troops told the Amir that they did not wish to kill him, but were determined to have a religious war. The second day after the attack the Amir paid the troops three months' pay; armed the city and recalled the six regiments sent some time ago to Herat. When informant passed through Jellalabad, everything was quiet. Did not hear of any troops coming. No one alarmed. The Governor there, but no troops. At Lalpura the Khan was prepared for flight if the British advanced, and had written to his tribe, the Mohmunds, to prepare for a religious war. There were no troops there or at Dakka. Much excitement in Kabul, but no plundering of the city. The Amir is powerless to control troops. No chiefs were killed by the Amir. Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan is a prisoner in his house.

THE above has been generally confirmed by the Guide who has escaped from Kabul, and the last news from Lundikotal is that there are no troops at Dakka or Jellalabad, and that none are on their way there. The attitude of the people is one of expectation, and the Mohmunds are merely holding themselves in readiness.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Peshawur, 15th September 1879. Commissioner.

Enclosure 47 in No. 27.

* GHOLAM MOHAYUDIN, on 11th September 1879.

A MAN by name Orakzai who had been sent to Jellalabad has returned. He states that many men have come to Jellalabad from Kabul and report that all the British officers of the Embassy and those who accompanied them have been killed and the Embassy house has been burnt. Though the principal part in the massacre has been taken by Herati regiments, still almost all the people of the city joined, and other troops also connived. The mutiny is not yet over. Orakzai was searched near Jellalabad by the servants of Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan, Governor, with a view to intercepting papers to the address of the British authorities if any could be found on his person. He was again searched with the same object by the servants of Muhammad Sadik Khan at Dakka. The road this side of Jellalabad is safe, but on the other side of Jellalabad it is unsafe for traffic (on account of Asmatulla Khan, Ghilzai). Muhammad Hassan Khan, Governor of Jellalabad (who probably had been away against Asmatulla, this is conjecture), received information of the mutiny from Muhammad Sadik Khan and directed the latter to establish posts. Muhammad Sadik Khan went towards Pesh-Bolak and has appointed guards in several posts and returned to Haftchah. He has sent his agents to Mohmunds to keep themselves in readiness and to come up as soon as invited. He intends to send for some Mohmund levies and post them in the fort of Dakka. He will probably locate some troops in this fort. His brother, Muhammad Ali Khan, is at Lalpura.

Nur Muhammad who has been sent by Sikandar Shah from Lalpura states that Muhammad Sadik Khan returned to Lalpura last evening. (Sikandar Shah is a resident of Karyanah-Daudzai, but has long been in the service of Nauroz Khan, father of Muhammad Sadik Khan. He may be sending news on his own account, but it seems most probable that Sadik Khan should know what he is sending.) Akbar Khan, son of Ajun Khan (the refugee who killed the Tehsildar of Hushtnuggur years ago) came last night into the fort of Dakka with 120 sowars and foot. Muhammad Sadik Khan has received orders to recruit 500 troops for the Dakka Fort and to collect his levies, so that British troops may not advance. Mullah Khalil, resident of Fahm-Killi in Khwaizai territory, has received letters from the Amir to collect men for a religious war, and His Highness has promised to pay expenses of the war.

The Amir has summoned to Kabul Muhammad Shah Khan and Abdul Aziz Khan, sons of Sultan Muhammad Khan, and Akbar Khan, son of Nauroz Khan, and they will leave to-day or to-morrow. (This would be to clear away the opposition faction and strengthen Muhammad Sadik Khan.) Akbar Khan, son of Ajun Khan, states that the six infantry regiments who killed the Embassy are on their way to Jellalabad.

With reference to the above, there are only 50 men in the Dakka fort. Akbar Khan has long been in service in Lalpura. The Amir had summoned Muhammad Shah Khan and others to Kabul before the outbreak. Muhammad Shah Khan is protected by his aunt, the Amir's mother. If any Herati regiments came this way, it is in order to escape to Kafiristan.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Peshawur, 15th September 1879. Commissioner.

Enclosure 48 in No. 27.

Statement of Timoss (Taimur), B. Troop, Corps of Guides, Queen's Own.

Our arrival at Kabul was at first welcomed by the Amir's troops and the city people; the former were under the impression that the arrival of Sir L. Cavagnari would make a great change for the better in their affairs; they expected to receive their pay regularly and be permitted to take their discharge when it pleased them; but their views altered when they found that our Envoy could not interfere in their affairs; the respectable residents of the city on the contrary remained friendly to the end. During our stay there, regiments were coming in from Herat and Turkestan, were paid and sent off. I am a Saddozai, well acquainted with Kabul, and have many friends there. I am under the impression that the presence of the Embassy was not distasteful to the majority of the people. Matters remained thus till the 3rd September; there were two regiments inside the Bala Hissar who had been brought down from Turkestan, and had created a disturbance there; other regiments were encamped outside. The "Ardal" regiment with General Karim Khan went to the Munshi in the Bala Hissar, and asked for their pay; they demanded two months, but were informed that they were to receive only one. Karim Khan told them to appeal to Daud Shah; they went and were informed that orders had been given for them to receive merely a month's pay. The men then broke out, and another regiment joined in with them; the last went to secure their arms whilst the "Ardal" regiment started for the Embassy. On the way they stoned the horses of the Guide escort and killed one of the syces; the Sikhs to protect their own lives fired on the mutineers. They then went away to get their arms, whilst our men collected at the Embassy, and Sir L. made every preparation for defending it. The Amir's troops secured a "morchā" in a place named "Kulla-Fi-arangi," about 80 yards from our position and commanding it completely, and opened fire; it was then about 8 a.m. The fight continued till near mid-day, when Sir L. was wounded in the forehead with a bullet; he descended the stairs without assistance and asked for the doctor. Jemadars Jewand and Mehtab Sing were also wounded about the same time. Mr. Jenkyns then asked me to write a letter to the Amir demanding assistance, which I did, and it was carried by Gholam Nabbi, brother of Ressaldar Muhammad Sherif Khan; he delivered it, but was unable to bring back an answer. A second letter was then sent by the hands of a Hindu; he was killed at once. By this time an entrance had been made into the Embassy, and in spite of our utmost efforts their men would get in and commenced firing the building. I addressed them under the orders of Mr. Jenkyns, but could not induce them to desist. A paper was then given me to hand over to their general regarding their pay. As I appeared amongst the mutineers they plundered me of everything, and after beating me soundly took me before Karim Khan; he said I am unable to stop the disturbance, and gave orders for my detention. I was placed in a room, and shortly after a wounded havildar was brought in, and on his request I extracted a bullet from his back. In the evening this man gave me some old uniform of his regiment and permitted me to depart in return for what I had done for him. The Amir was surrounded in his residence and unable either to come out or render any assistance to the Envoy's party. He sent General Daud Shah with 20 or 30 men from other regiments. The mutineers wounded Daud Shah and he had to run away, his companions were killed. Sirdar Yahya Khan and the Mustaufi Habibulla were then sent; they were forced to fly also. The troops plundered everything belonging to the Amir they could lay hands upon, and released all the prisoners in the gaol. I went and hid myself in the house of Shahzada Sharyar, who is a relation of mine, and the next morning went secretly to see what had occurred at the Embassy, disguising myself as well as I could. I found Mr. Hamilton's body lying close to a gun about 70 paces from the Embassy; the soldiers round about were discoursing that the defenders had charged out about 5 p.m. Mr. Hamilton had shot three men with his revolver and cut down two others with his sword before he fell. Mr. Jenkyns was lying 20 paces nearer to the building, and Dr. Kelly by the stairs. I did not see the Envoy's body. I went back to the city and remained hid for four or five days. Heard that the bodies of the murdered officers had been buried about 100 paces to the west of the Embassy. I went then and saw their graves. The Amir's authority was completely gone, the soldiers plundered and did as they liked. One night they were on the point of putting him to death, and took away property valued at seven lakhs from him. All the shops in the city were closed for four days; the Khans used to send their followers to protect the Amir's life and person from his soldiery. I left Kabul on the sixth day and came by Butkhak and Lughman. There I heard that Gholam Nakshband Khan had been killed, but I could not learn by whom. I came by Lalpura and Jellalabad and reached Lundikotal at 8 p.m. on 14th September, and saw no men collected on the way to resist an advance. I know that the 20 or 30 men who came with General Daud Shah were killed by the mutineers. I heard this from others, and saw the bodies lying on the ground when I went to see the Embassy, and could distinguish them to be those men in whom Daud Shah placed considerable trust and confidence; their clothing was different to that worn by the regiments that had revolted. I went first to Shahzada Sharyar's house, remained two nights with him, and then removed to Sultan Khan Peshawuri's. There I heard of many events that had taken place. It was said that Futteh Muhammad Khan, Duffadar, Akbar Shah, and Narain Sing had been sent out with the grass cutters. Hearing the disturbance these men fled to Sirdar Muhammad Sarwar Khan's place in the Morad Khani, Akbar Shah's father being in his service, and the grass cutters were entrusted to the Amir's cavalry, and sent for by Sirdar Yahya Khan where I saw three of them. I also saw Futteh Muhammad Khan, Akbar Shah and Narain Sing at the house of the Turkestan Naib, whose name I do not know. Sirdar Muhammad Sarwar Khan sent them to Sirdar Yahya Khan, and he forwarded them to the Naib, as they belonged to his religious sect (Shia). Mr. Jenkyns' horse was purchased by General Tamas Khan of Jellalabad. The fire of the Sikh troopers (at the commencement) knocked over about six of the mutineers. I only know of one gunshot striking the door of the Embassy; the gun was fired several times during the day. When I appeared with Mr. Jenkyns' letter, the soldiers, under the impression that they could at all times lay hands on me, did not attempt to kill me, but led me to General Karim

Khan who commanded the two regiments and others that were encamped outside. The idea in Kabul was that this man had a hand in the revolt, and has been turned out of his command; his men were chiefly from Logar, Wardak, and Kohistan. I started from Sultan Khan's house with the messenger of Sirdar Asuf Kahn going to Lughman. I have not heard of Shahghassi Yusuf having come towards Peshbolak.

(True Translation.)

Peshawur,
16th September 1879.

(Signed) R. WARBURTON.

Enclosure 49 in No. 27.

Statement of TAIMUR (Timoss), Sowar B. Troop, Corps of Guides, on 15th September 1879.

I was in the Bala Hissar, Kabul, on the 3rd instant: Major Sir Louis Cavagnari and the other British officers were in the bungalow. At about 8 a.m. the Turkestani "Ardal" regiment, which was in the Bala Hissar, was paraded to receive its pay. Daud Shah, the Commander-in-Chief, gave them one month's pay. They claimed two and broke.

They were paraded quite close to the Residency, and another regiment was also quartered with them.

One of soldiery shouted out "Let us destroy the Envoy first of all and after that the Amir." They rushed into the court-yard in front of the Residency and stoned some of the syces who were sitting there.

We then opened fire on them, without orders from any European. All the British officers were inside.

The Amir's men then went for their weapons and returned with them in a quarter of an hour. If in that time the British officers had so desired, they might have escaped. They then commenced to besiege the Residency, and from commanding positions made the roof of the Residency untenable. We then made shelter trenches on it and fired from the windows.

The city people came to help the soldiers at about 10 a.m. Major Sir Louis Cavagnari was wounded in the forehead about 1 p.m.; he was in a shelter trench. A man from the roof of a house shot at him and the bullet striking a brick, it, together with a piece of brick, struck Sir Louis. But he was not killed. Mr. Jenkyns came up and sent for a Munshi to write to the Amir, but the scribe was unable to write through fear.

I then wrote briefly to the Amir that we were besieged and he was to help us, and sent it by Gholam Nabbi, a Kabuli, an old Guide sowar who was in the Residency. No answer came. Gholam Nabbi afterwards told me that the Amir wrote on the letter, "If God will, I am just making arrangements."

Major Cavagnari was helped into the Residency and tended to by Dr. Kelly. Mr. Jenkyns then ordered me to send a second letter to the Amir, stating that Major Cavagnari was wounded and to hasten on assistance. This letter was sent by a Hindu whose name I don't know. He was cut to pieces in front of the Residency. I was at about 3 p.m. sent with a letter by Mr. Hamilton promising six months' pay. By that time they had managed to get on to the roof of the Residency. I went armed into the midst of the crowd, and was immediately stripped of my arms, but my life was saved by an officer. I then said I had a promise to give them six months' pay. They threw me from the roof of the Residency on to the roof of the neighbouring house. I lost my senses, was stripped of everything I had, and was taken to General Karim Khan who commanded the brigade which had mutinied. He was sitting on a bed surrounded by 50 or 60 men. I did not see him give any orders, but when I told him I had come to give six months' pay to the troops, and that he must stop their fighting, he said he was helpless in the matter and ordered me to be confined.

I know nothing of what happened after this, but I visited the place next morning.

I recollect they had begun to set fire to the Residency just as I was leaving.

A wounded havildar of the Amir's, who was brought to the house where I was imprisoned, let me escape for extracting a bullet from his back. It was then morning. Daybreak I went to the Residency, and saw first the corpse of Lieutenant Hamilton lying over a mountain gun which had been brought up. The troops who were there told me Mr. Hamilton had shot about three men with his pistol, and had cut down two more before he was shot.

He was stripped and cut into pieces but not dishonoured. About 25 feet off was the body of Mr. Jenkyns in a similar state. I did not go into the Residency, but was told Dr. Kelly was lying killed in the Residency. Sir Louis Cavagnari was in the Residency when it fell in flames. He was in the room where the wounded were, and his body had not been discovered when I left the city. All bodies found in the Residency were so burned that they could not be recognized.

The bodies of Messrs. Hamilton, Jenkyns, and Kelly were buried about 100 yards below where they fell, and in a garden. Besides myself no other of the defenders escaped, so far as I know. Gholam Nabbi, the ex-sowar, brother of Rissaldar Muhammad Sharif Khan of the Guides, who was entrusted with the letter, is alive and in Kabul. He still has the letter with the Amir's answer on it.

The Guide sowars who were out cutting grass are now in Kabul in the Mured Khana Mahalla, but prevented from leaving the city. The grass-cutters are with Sirdar Yahya Khan in safety.

There are no troops on the road from Kabul, nor are there any in Jellalabad nor Dacca. As far as I know none are coming.

Daud Shah did his best to stop the mutiny, being sent by the Amir, but he was pulled off his horse, stoned, and wounded with a bayonet. Daud Shah was alive when I left, but his life was in danger.

In the afternoon Sirdar Yahya Khan came accompanied by Mustaufi Habibulla, but were fired on and had to retire.

NOTE.—The above taken at Lundi Kotal differs slightly from that taken at Peshawar, and contains a few additional particulars.—W. G. WATERFIELD, Commissioner.—19/9/79.

Enclosure 50 in No. 27.

Memorandum by W. MERK, Esq., Political Officer at Lundi Kotal, dated 16th September 1879.

Taimur, sowar of the Guides, whose first statement is forwarded, arrived here on the night of the 14th, and before his statement was taken gave a different account (during the night), viz., that he and some other sowars, including Fattah Muhammad Daffadar, escaped on the morning of the attack from some out-houses not actually included in the Residency building, which had been appropriated to sowars; he being a Peshawuri found refuge in the house of Sultan Khan (a son of the late Nazir Tarverdy Khan of Peshawur), who had accompanied Sirdar Yahya Khan to Kabul. Next morning he visited the scene of the attack and recognized the bodies of Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Jenkyns, and Dr. Kelly; all the sepoys, and in fact everybody in the Residency building, were killed. If it is true that he made this statement, and there seems reason to believe he may have done so, he is not an eye-witness, though his story is probably fairly correct and derived from eye-witnesses.

Report says that the Amir, though he could not have been averse to such a demonstration against the Residency as might have afforded him an excuse for demanding its withdrawal on a plea of being unable to protect the members of the Mission, yet neither he, nor anyone else in power, at all expected, or was prepared for what did happen. Other rumours connect Abdulla Jan's mother and her party with the occurrence.

NOTE.—I agree with Mr. Merk that there are doubts about Taimur, Guide Cavalry, having witnessed all he describes. He probably heard much from others.—W. G. WATERFIELD, Commissioner.—19/9/79.

No. 28.

No. 216 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, October 2, 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of a letter which we have caused to be addressed to General Sir Frederick

Roberts, and which contains instructions for his guidance in carrying out the several objects of the expedition to Kabul.

	We have, &c.
(Signed)	LYTTON.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
"	A. CLARKE.
"	JOHN STRACHEY.
"	E. B. JOHNSON.
"	W. STOKES.
"	A. R. THOMPSON.

The Right Hon. Viscount Cranbrook,
Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

Enclosure in No. 28.

No. A.-505, dated Simla, 29th September 1879.

From A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kurram Field Force.

On the 5th September you received from the Viceroy in person at Simla instructions to return with all possible speed to your command at Ali Khel, and to move upon Kabul by the Shuturguridan Pass with the forces placed at your disposal for this purpose by the Government of India. You were invested with the chief political authority within the range of your military operations, and you were charged with the duty of signally and promptly punishing the barbarous murder of the British Envoy at the Afghan capital, and of subduing the confusion and disorganisation which have ensued in Afghanistan.

2. It would be useless, in the opinion of his Excellency, the Governor-General in Council, to endeavour to furnish you beforehand with detailed orders as to the manner in which these instructions are to be executed. Your proceedings will necessarily depend upon the state of affairs at Kabul and elsewhere, the acts and attitude of the Amir and his people, and upon various other conditions impossible at present to foresee. The Government of India desire, however, that in taking the measures necessary for the full and effective accomplishment of the objects of your expedition, you will be guided by the following general injunctions.

3. It is assumed that on your arrival at Kabul you will at once place your forces in a strong and secure position, such as will give you complete command over the Amir's capital, and reduce it entirely under your control. In order to assure your authority, and to prevent disorder, you will proceed at once to enforce the surrender of any fortified post and the disarmament of any Afghan troops remaining at Kabul, and of the whole city population. You will take early steps for the collection of the supplies which may be required for the maintenance of your force at Kabul, in the contingency of any temporary interruption of your communications with Ali Khel and Kurram, before your base of operations shall have been transferred to Peshawur, and your communications opened by Jellalabad. It is possible that the operations involved by this change of base may not be completed until some weeks after your arrival at Kabul. It is hardly necessary to remark, in reference to the provisioning of your troops, upon the expediency of looking carefully to the considerate treatment of that portion of the people of the country upon which you may be to some extent dependent for supplies.

4. With regard to the Amir Yakub Khan, your instructions are to secure his personal safety, retaining adequate control over His Highness' movements and actions. You are, moreover, to prevent the withdrawal beyond the range of your authority of any person or persons as to whom you may have reason to believe that their behaviour in connexion with the attack upon the British Residency may become a subject for future inquiry.

5. As soon as you shall have established yourself at Kabul you will institute a close and comprehensive investigation into all the causes and circumstances of the outrage which has compelled the British Government to occupy the capital of His Highness the Amir. Upon the question of the punishment, which, after due inquiry, it will be your duty to inflict as speedily as possible upon those who have abetted or participated in the perpetration of this outrage, his Excellency the Governor-General in Council desires me to commend to your careful attention the following observations.

6. I am to point out, in the first place, that for an offence of this character the Afghan nation must be held to be collectively responsible. It was a totally unprovoked and most barbarous attack by the Amir's soldiery and by the people of his capital upon the representative of an allied State, who was residing under the Amir's protection in the Amir's fortress, in very close proximity to the Amir himself; and whose personal safety and honorable treatment had been solemnly guaranteed by the ruler of Afghanistan. In the second place, I am to observe that the nature and magnitude of the outrage leave no room for doubt that it had its leaders and its instigators—that certain persons must have taken a prominent part in the attack upon the Residency, and in the murder of its inmates; while there is a strong presumption that such an outbreak must have been fomented and encouraged by persons of rank and influence. Towards this latter conclusion all our present information points, and it is corroborated by expressions used in the letters written by the Amir himself after the occurrence of the catastrophe.

7. The retribution to be exacted must accordingly be adapted to the twofold character of the offence. It must be imposed upon the Afghan nation in proportion as the offence was national and as the responsibility falls upon any particular community; while it must also involve condign punishment of those individuals who may be found guilty of any participation in the crime. In regard to the penalties to be borne by the State, by the city, or by the people generally, it would be premature in the present stage of your operations to issue to you any specific directions. The imposition of a fine upon the city of Kabul would be in accordance with justice and precedent. The military precautions required for the security of your position may necessitate the demolition of fortifications, and possibly the removal of buildings which may lie within the range of your defences, or may interfere with your control over the city. In forming your plans for works of this kind, required by military exigencies, you will have the opportunity of considering whether they can be combined with any measures compatible with justice and humanity, or leaving a memorial of the retribution exacted from the city in some manner and by some mark that will not be easily obliterated.

8. In regard to the punishment of individuals, it should be swift, stern, and impressive, without being indiscriminate or immoderate. Its infliction must not be delegated to subordinate officers of minor responsibility acting independently of your instructions or supervision; and you cannot too vigilantly maintain the discipline of the troops under your orders, or superintend their treatment of the unarmed population, so long as your orders are obeyed, and your authority is unresisted. You will deal summarily in the majority of cases with persons whose share in the murder of any one belonging to the British Embassy shall have been proved by your investigations; but while the execution of justice should be as public and striking as possible, it should be completed with all practicable expedition; since the indefinite prolongation of your proceedings might spread abroad unfounded alarm.

9. I am here to observe that it will probably be essential, not only for the protection of your own camp from annoyance, but also for the security of the well-affected population, and for the general maintenance of order, that you should assume and exercise supreme authority in Kabul, since events have unfortunately proved that the Amir has lost that authority, or that he has conspicuously failed to make use of it. Moreover, the conduct of the Amir himself in reference to the murder of the British Envoy is a matter regarding which very conflicting and ambiguous reports have reached this Government, and it will necessarily form one of the primary points to which your investigation will be directed. But, whatever may be the result of your inquiry, no action (beyond the limits already indicated in the 4th paragraph of this letter) should be taken in regard to the Amir Yakub Khan without special reference for orders to the Government of India. There may be other cases where the conduct of personages of high position at Kabul may come under examination, upon which it may be undesirable to pass any final decision without special deliberation or extended inquiry. It will be for you to judge what cases falling under this category should be reserved for the consideration of the Government of India.

10. The military and political exigencies of the situation with which you will have to deal require all possible precautions against future violence among a population of which a large section is fanatical, treacherous, and vindictive. While, however, it must be your aim to leave on the minds of all classes of the people the strongest conviction that atrocities such as those which have lately been committed will inevitably be visited by the British Government with the sternest retribution, you will spare no efforts to convince the people of Afghanistan that our desire is to treat them with justice and benevolence, to respect their religious belief, their feelings, and their customs. It cannot be doubted that a very large proportion of the agricultural and commercial classes in Afghanistan will appreciate, as well as the people of other countries, the advantages of good government and of protection to life and property.

11. Although nothing can now be said in regard to the future internal administration of Afghanistan, the Government of India cannot ignore the possibility of being forced to exercise over that administration a closer and more direct control than has hitherto been contemplated or desired. It is, therefore, especially important that during the period of difficulty and disorganisation which must, it is feared, be passed before a better and more settled system of administration can be established, the people should learn, from the strict discipline of our army, and from the wise and upright proceedings of our military and political officers, to look to the strength and the justice of the British Government as their best guarantee for the future tranquillity of their country.

No. 29.

No. 217 of 1879. (Extract.)

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, the 9th October 1879.

WE have the honour to submit a summary of the intelligence received during the past week regarding the state of affairs in Afghanistan and the progress of our military operations in that country.

2. General Roberts met the Amir at Kushi on the 29th September. He telegraphed on the 2nd October that His Highness was much alarmed for the safety of his family in the Bala Hissar, fearing that the Afghan troops might attack and plunder the Bala Hissar upon the near approach of the British troops. The Amir stated that there was but one regiment at Kabul upon which he could depend; and he and his advisers strenuously endeavoured to induce General Roberts to delay his advance. It appeared obvious that the promptitude of the movement upon the capital, and the ease with which our artillery had crossed the Shuturguridan, had taken the Amir, and indeed the Afghans generally, by surprise. General Roberts replied to the Amir that any delay was out of the question, but that all the women and children would be given time to leave the city. The Amir had apparently proceeded in some haste from Kabul to the British camp on hearing that Sirdar Wali Muhammad and other influential personages were about to join General Roberts. His Highness has accompanied the march of General Roberts' column upon Kabul.

3. On the 2nd October a telegram from Ali Khel reported that the British position on the Shuturguridan had been unsuccessfully attacked by the neighbouring tribes. Communications between Ali Khel and the Shuturguridan were interrupted during that day; but on the 3rd October news came from General Roberts giving the true version of the affair. The independent Ghilzais, who had been watching very closely the movements of the British troops, had assembled in great force on the ridge above the Shuturguridan crest. Colonel Money, who was in command there, wisely took the offensive, and attacking the Ghilzais in their position, he drove them off with a loss of 30 killed, and captured one of their standards. The number of the wounded is not known. On our side one officer and four men were wounded. This successful action is likely to have a salutary effect throughout that part of the country. On the 30th September, Lieutenant Kinloch was unfortunately murdered on the road a short distance beyond Thull, while proceeding with a single trooper to join his regiment. The circumstances of this murder and the measures which we are taking against the offenders are being reported separately.

4. General Roberts arranged to evacuate Kushi until he should be firmly in possession of the Bala Hissar, when a military postal service will be established between Kabul and the Shuturguridan Pass. He telegraphed that until this had been effected all communications between himself and the Pass, which would be held by a strongly entrenched force might be suspended for a few days, unless it were found possible to maintain a postal service or to keep up a correspondence by means of heliographic signalling. General Roberts took this course in order to avoid leaving small parties along the road while it was still insecure and because he was desirous of reaching Kabul with as strong a force as possible. The whole column reached Zarghun Shahr on the 2nd of October, and marched on to Zahidabad the following day. Here the insufficiency of transport, which General Roberts had previously reported to be the great obstacle to his progress, compelled the column to halt for one day, as it was necessary to send back the animals to bring up the reserve ammunition and stores. On the 5th the advance was to be continued to Charasiah, which is only a short march from Kabul. The walled hill above the capital could be plainly seen from Zahidabad.

5. From the Khyber column it was reported on the 1st of the month that supplies were coming in, and that the troops beyond the Khyber Pass were healthy. General Gough with his detachment reached Basawul the next day. The country was quiet, and the Governor of Jellalabad had promised assistance. His agent had enjoined the tribes to refrain from acts of hostility. On the 4th October the Governor of Jellalabad himself came into General Gough's camp accompanied by the Khan of Lalpura, the chief of the Mohmands. They visited the General, and have been sending in supplies, with the aid of the headmen of the neighbouring tribes. A foraging party of the Guides is at Peshbolak.

6. On the 3rd October Major St. John telegraphed that General Hughes' brigade of reconnaissance, which he was accompanying, had arrived at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and would halt there for two days. The arrangements which had been made by Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, the Governor of Kandahar for supplies along the road, and for the maintenance of the post, were excellent. Letters were received from Kandahar, a distance of about 89 miles, in 36 hours. Sirdar Mahomed Tahir Khan, the Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, met the British commander outside the fort. He had collected some supplies. Grain was abundant, but fuel and forage were scarce. The country was apparently quiet, and caravans were arriving unmolested from Kabul. From Kelat-i-Ghilzai the troops advanced to Naorak, and thence pushed on to Ab-i-Tazi, the third march along the road and about 29 miles from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, as supplies were found to be insufficient at Naorak. The Amir had made no communication to the southern Ghilzais who inhabit this country except that he remained on terms of alliance with the English.

7. Several additional papers and reports received from General Roberts are also enclosed. They relate principally to the attitude of the tribes, and to the interviews held between the General and the Amir's agents, the Mustaufi Habibulla Khan, and the Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan, before the Amir entered the British camp. It will be seen that the main objects of this deputation were to declare the Amir's desire to maintain friendly and faithful relations with the British Government, and to persuade General Roberts to stay his advance on the capital. The deputies represented that the presence of the British troops at Kabul might cause confusion and disorganisation throughout the country; and they pleaded that they were anxious to obtain for the Amir some chance of restoring his own authority. Nevertheless, they agreed that since the British army would not delay its march, it should come in such force as to overawe or overpower all attempts at resistance. Some further letters which passed between the General in command and His Highness the Amir are also enclosed.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.
E. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

P.S.—We have just received and transmitted to your Lordship the following telegram from General Roberts:—

"Charasiah, 6th October.—Reconnoitring parties sent out on all roads to Kabul at daybreak this morning, reported enemy were advancing in great force from direction of city. The parties had to retire, and soon afterwards the high range of hills intervening between Charasiah and Kabul were crowded with troops and city people, while parties of Ghilzais appeared on the hills running along both flanks of camp, and reports were received that the road to Zahidabad was threatened, along which General Macpherson was advancing with large convoy of stores and reserve ammunition. Warning was sent to Macpherson, and some assistance in cavalry. It was absolutely necessary to carry the heights in front before evening. General Baker was entrusted with this very difficult duty, which he completed in the most admirable manner. He sent a party under Major White, 92nd Highlanders, consisting of a wing of that regiment, three guns, G-3 R. A., 100 of 23rd Pioneers, and two squadrons 5th P. C., to advance by the right of the gorge. After an obstinate resistance, Major White succeeded in driving the enemy off the main hill, and later in the day captured 12 guns. Our loss here, three Highlanders killed, six wounded, and a man, 5th Punjab Cavalry, killed, two wounded, and one 9th Lancer wounded. General Baker, with 72nd Highlanders, Wing 5th Goorkhas, 100 5th P. I., and remainder of 23rd Pioneers, four guns No. 2 Mountain Battery, and two Gatlings, made a turning movement to the left, and was soon hotly engaged. He reports that the advance of the troops was made to his entire satisfaction, height after height being carried in gallant style. Our loss, Captain Young, 5th Punjab Infantry, and Doctor Duncan, 23rd, Lieutenant Fergusson, 72nd, wounded; and about 70 men killed and wounded. Enemy's loss unknown, but it must have been considerable; they fled in great confusion and lost two standards. We have strong pickets posted, as large numbers of Ghilzais are still in neighbourhood; but I hope to-morrow to be able to march to within a short distance of Kabul. Amir states Bala Hissar is no longer in possession of people he can trust; his family have moved into the city. The headmen of Chardeh, a suburb of Kabul, have asked if they may pay their respects to me. Others will probably follow their example, and I am sanguine that the country will quiet down now that the people see opposition is useless, but at present there is very great excitement in the city and country generally. I received greatest assistance throughout the day from army signalling under direction of Captain Straton, 22nd regiment."

Enclosure 1 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 2nd October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Amir is much alarmed for safety of his family in Bala Hissar, and begged me to interview him yesterday on subject of our advance. He and his advisers strongly urge delay. I said it was impossible, but that time would be given for all women and children to clear out of city. Amir fears his own troops may attack and sack Bala Hissar on hearing of our approach. He has only one regiment he can depend upon, and it is quite evident from having made no arrangements for their families that the Afghans never contemplated a British force would reach Kabul this season. Indeed, the Sirdars admit this, and don't conceal their surprise at the rapidity of our movements.

Amir hurried to our camp on hearing that Wali Muhammad and other Sirdars intended doing so; he wished to be beforehand. Amir accompanies me on line of march to-day.

Enclosure 2 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 2nd October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kushi, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

67th Foot and G.-3 reached this yesterday. The two Infantry Brigades join Cavalry Brigade at Zarghun Shahr to-day, when Kushi will be for the time abandoned. Except as regards postal service, which I hope will be maintained regularly, and possibly heliograph signalling from some hill near Kabul, we shall have no communication with the Shuturguridan for some days. As soon as I have possession of Bala Hissar, General Gough will establish military post between Kabul and Shuturguridan, but I am averse to leaving so small parties on the road at present; besides, it is desirable to reach Kabul as strong as possible. Meanwhile 3rd Sikhs, 21st Native Infantry, and 4 guns Mounted Battery are strongly entrenched on Shuturguridan, and will be provided with food and ammunition. Holding the Shuturguridan gives me great support. One fatal case of cholera in Mountain Battery yesterday.

Enclosure 3 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 3rd October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Zarghun Shahr, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Column arrived here yesterday, and marches to-day to Zahidabad; great difficulties about transport. No certain information of attitude of troops in and about Kabul, apparently want of leaders renders them powerless. The Ghilzais watched our movements very closely, and yesterday morning assembled in great force on ridge above Shuturgurda. Colonel Money wisely attacked them, and drove them off with loss of 30 killed, number of wounded unknown. Our loss, Major Griffiths, 3rd Sikhs, and a sergeant of 67th, belonging to signalling party, both slightly wounded; also three men, 3rd Sikhs: this will have good effect all over the country.

Enclosure 4 in No. 29.

PROCLAMATION (by GENERAL ROBERTS) to all people of Kabul, dated Camp Zarghun Shahr, 3rd October 1879.

BE it known to all that the British army is advancing on Kabul to take possession of the city. If it be allowed to do so peacefully, well and good; if not, the city will be seized by force; therefore, all well-disposed persons, who have taken no part in the dastardly murder of the British Envoy, or in the plunder of the Residency, are warned that, if they are unable to prevent resistance being offered to the entrance of the British army, and the authority of His Highness, they should make immediate arrangements for their own safety, either by coming to the British camp, or by such other measures as may seem fit to them; and as the British Government does not make war on women and children, warning is given that all women and children should be removed from the city beyond the reach of harm. The British Government desires to treat all classes with justice, and to respect their religion, feeling, and customs, while exacting full retribution from offenders; every effort will, therefore, be made to prevent the innocent suffering with the guilty, but it is necessary that the utmost precaution should be taken against useless opposition.

After receipt of this proclamation, therefore, all persons armed in or about Kabul will be treated as enemies of the British Government, and, further, it must be distinctly understood that, if the entry of the British force is resisted, I cannot hold myself responsible for any accidental injury which may be done to the persons or property, even of well-disposed people, who may have neglected this warning.

Enclosure 5 in No. 29.

Translation of a Proclamation issued by His Highness the AMIR to all people of Kabul, without date.

It is hereby notified that the British troops are advancing to take possession of the city of Kabul, that is to say, to restore order there. If the above-mentioned troops be allowed to do so peacefully and without resistance, well and good, namely, the people will be protected and their lives and property saved, and injury will be caused to no one; if not, it will be seized by force. Therefore, all well-disposed persons, the Chiefs, the soldiers, and the followers of His Highness the Amir, who have taken no part in the dastardly murder of the British Envoy or in the plunder of the Residency are warned that, in case they are unable to prevent resistance being offered by the ignorant and rebellious people to the British army and to the authority of His Highness the Amir, they should remove themselves and their families from among those ignorant and wicked people, and make arrangements for their safety, either by coming to the British camp, or by such other measures as may seem fit to them; and as the British Government does not think it lawful to make war on women and children, warning is given that, in case a band of the ignorant and vicious people should take up arms and offer resistance to the British Government, the well-wishers and the followers of His Highness the Amir, whether soldiers or others, should remove their wives and children from the city to some safe place. The British Government desires to treat all classes of people with justice and equity, to respect their religion, feelings, and customs, at the same time it will inflict severe punishment on the offenders and mutineers. Great care will be taken that the innocent do not suffer with the guilty, but it is necessary that the people of Kabul should take utmost precaution against opposition and not enter into open hostility to the British Government. After receipt of this proclamation, therefore, all persons inside and outside the town should not carry arms, as their carrying them would make the British Government suspicious of their hostile attitude, and all persons armed will be treated as enemies of the British Government; and if the entry of the British force is resisted by the inhabitants of Kabul, the British Government cannot hold itself responsible for any accidental injury which may be done to the persons and property even of well-disposed people.

Enclosure 6 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 5th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Zahidabad, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Reached this yesterday; obliged to halt to-day to send back transport for reserve ammunition and stores. March to-morrow to Charasiah, leaving all impediments in store here. Walled hill above Kabul visible from camp. Hope to open communication by heliograph with Shuturguridan. A standard was captured from the enemy on the Shuturguridan on Thursday by a native officer of 3rd Sikhs. All well.

Enclosure 7 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 4th October 1879.

From DEPUTY COMMISSIONER, Thull, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

ARRIVED yesterday evening. Ascertained following additional particulars regarding Kinloch's death. Dr. Bellew and other officers left Thull shortly before him. He marched along with his baggage and servants accompanied by a sowar. Other party safely reached Mundoorie halting ground. Kinloch was wearing Peshawur loongee, and was not distinguishable from a cavalry sowar. Scene of offence, a ravine running down to river Kurram from interior of Zaimusht country, some 11 miles from Thull, and in portion of road for which Wattizais are responsible. One of the Zaimushts said to have been shot in leg by deceased. Offenders were Khoedad Khel from furthest settlements, one of same sections as committed both raids near Gandior. Wattizai chowkidars in nearest road towers arrested, and in custody. Road kept open in consultation with General Gordon by Khatak levies.

Enclosure 8 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 3rd October 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

GENERAL GOUGH reaches Basawul. Agent of Governor of Jellalabad in camp assisting with supplies. The Governor himself will wait on the General to-morrow. Afridis, Shinwaris all working well. Amir's Sirdars to assist have reached Lalpura.

Enclosure 9 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 4th October 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Simla.

KHAN of Lalpura and Governor of Jellalabad have both come in, and are helping with supplies.

Enclosure 10 in No. 29.

Telegram from Kandahar, dated 3rd October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 20th September, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

ARRIVED this morning with General Hughes' column, which halts here for two days. Arrangements made by Sirdar Sher Ali Khan for supplies on road and for post excellent. Letter coming from Kandahar in 36 hours. Sirdar Mahomed Tahir Khan met me outside the fort; has collected certain amount supplies; grain abundant, but fuel and forage scarce. He has about 500 Khasadars, mostly Wardaks; about 300 are in fort, which is left in his hands. The country apparently quiet. Caravans arriving unmolested from Kabul. Thermometer falling below freezing point at night; early and severe winter predicted.

Enclosure 11 in No. 29.

Telegram, dated 4th October 1879.

FROM GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

As supplies are insufficient at Naorak, General Hughes' brigade has been permitted to go to Ab-i-Tazi, the third march from Kelat.

Amir has made no communication to the Southern Ghilzais, except that he remains on terms of alliance with English.

Enclosure 12 in No. 29.

Camp Ali Khel, 19th September 1879.

FROM MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding the Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward copies of letters of this date addressed by me to Padshah Khan and Asmatulla Khan, leading Chieftains of the Ahmedzai and Jabbarkhel Ghilzais, with the object (a) of establishing friendly relations and gaining over to our side the influence and assistance of those powerful Chiefs, which will be invaluable to both the Shuturguridan and Khyber Columns; (b) of making their personal acquaintance as soon as opportunity may offer.

The former I hope to see shortly, the latter after my arrival in Kabul, and after he has been of use, as I trust he may, to the Jellalabad Force.

Enclosure 13 in No. 29.

Translation of a Copy of a Letter from GENERAL ROBERTS to PADSHAH KHAN, Ghilzai, dated 19th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Your brother Allal-ud-din, with his son Bahram Khan, has arrived in Camp. I am aware of your attachment and that of your family (to the British Government). Therefore they have been treated, and will be treated with honour and respect.

Whereas we intend to proceed shortly to Kabul, via Logar, with a view to render friendly assistance and support to His Highness the Amir, and take revenge on the mutineers who massacred the Embassy, I hope that you, out of your devotion of long standing (to the British Government), will give me the pleasure of seeing you at Kushi at the time of the arrival of the British Camp there, and will accompany me to your own limits. By this you will do service to both Governments, and will be handsomely rewarded.

Rest assured in every respect; but do not fail to join the camp at Kushi.

Enclosure 14 in No. 29.

Translation of a Copy of a Letter from GENERAL ROBERTS to ASMATULLA KHAN, Jabbarkhel, dated 19th September 1879.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Whereas I am well aware of your attachment to the British Government, and also know that you expressed the same to the late Major Cavagnari at Jellalabad, I consider you my friend. I am also aware that you have not waited upon the Kabul Durbar for certain reasons.

Whereas I intend proceeding shortly to Kabul, at the head of the Imperial troops, via Logar, I write to ask you to come and see me at Kabul as soon as you hear of my arrival there. I shall receive you honourably, and be pleased to see you. This will conduce to your welfare. I hope that you will not delay your visit after I arrive there.

Rest assured in every way, and be not afraid.

Herewith I enclose a copy of the proclamation, from which the object of the present expedition will become known to you. It is hoped that you will, out of friendship, circulate and make known the said proclamation to the people at large, so that the tribes and the people who have not taken part in the base massacre of the Embassy may rest quite assured, and may not be afraid, as the revenge will be inflicted only on the participators in the crime.

Enclosure 15 in No. 29.

No. 9, dated Ali Khel, 24th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FRED. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward in original, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council, the enclosed letter to my address, from Sirdar Ahmad Ali Khan, together with covering letter from an Armenian Christian in Kabul.

18th September 1879.

AFTER many compliments, if God please, I will come myself to see and explain you all the news after some days. Believe me, Sir, Sirdar Ahmad Ali Khan is the only well-wisher of the British in this country. The well-wisher of the Christian faith, Luka or Sur-ood-din, an Armenian Christian, and a student of Revd. T. P. Hughes.

(Signed) C. M. S., Peshawur.

Enclosure 16 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR AHMAD ALI KHAN to GENERAL ROBERTS, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—The death of Sir Louis Cavagnari has caused me great sorrow, but as there is no remedy against the divine decree, nothing can be done.

May the Almighty now protect you with all the well-wishes of Her Imperial Majesty's Government from all harm. I and all my friends and relatives, the well-wishers of the everlasting Government, are looking forward to the time when we can do service to that Government with devotion and zeal.

Further rest assured in every respect, and please always gratify me with the good news of the well-being of the Imperial Government as well as of your own good health.

Enclosure 17 in No. 29.

No. 12, dated Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FRED. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

In continuation of my letter No. 9 of the 24th instant, I have the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, a copy of my reply to Sirdar Ahmad Ali Khan.

2. I have also the honour to forward, in original, a letter received yesterday from Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, together with copy of my reply. (See ante.)

Enclosure 18 in No. 29.

Dated Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FRED. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to SIRDAR AHMAD ALI KHAN.

I HAVE received your letter, expressing your sorrow at the late occurrences in Kabul, and your readiness to serve the British Government. I am glad to have news of you and to know your feelings in this matter. It will give me pleasure to be informed from time to time of your welfare.

Enclosure 19 in No. 29.

Dated Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FRED. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to SIRDAR WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN.

Your letter has reached me safely at this place. I was glad to receive news of your welfare, and I send this reply to let you know that I shall be happy to hear from time to time that you are in good health.

Enclosure 20 in No. 29.

No. 8, dated Ali Khel, 23rd September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

- (1.) From His Highness the Amir of Kabul to General Sir F. Roberts, dated 18th September 1879.
- (2.) From His Highness the Amir of Kabul, to General Sir F. Roberts, dated 19th September 1879.
- (3.) From Sirdar Ayub Khan to His Highness the Amir.
- (4.) From His Highness the Amir to Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan, dated 19th September 1879.
- (5.) From Captain Karazin to the Governor of Afghan-Turkestan.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, the letters marginally noted.

Enclosure 21 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from AMIR YAKUB KHAN to GENERAL ROBERTS, dated 1st Shawal 1296 H.=(18th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that your friendly letter dated the 27th Ramazan (15th September) reached me yesterday, Thursday the 29th idem (17th September). From its contents I have derived a series of fresh favour and innumerable kindnesses on the part of the noble British Government towards me, as well as their wishes for the advancement and continuance of my Government which has greatly pleased and gratified me and increased the degree of my sincere friendship and love for that powerful Government.

My Peshkhidmat Sher Muhammad Khan arrived here after I had read your friendly letter. Although he has brought no letter from you, he has made a verbal statement of the favour and kindness of the British Government towards me, and thereby opened the doors of joy and happiness to the face of my sincere heart.

As I have deputed Mirza Habibulla Khan, the Mustaufi, and Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan to you, and they, please God, will represent all the particulars and the minutiae of the event as well as my friendly sentiments towards the illustrious British Government, I think it sufficient to write the above. It is sincerely hoped that the above-mentioned officials will return with speed and happiness.

Enclosure 22 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR to GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., dated 2nd Shawal 1296 H.=(19th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that I have received and perused this day, Saturday the 2nd Shawal, your friendly letter dated the 29th Ramazan (17th September 1879) accompanied with two copies of proclamation to the address of the people of Kabul and Logar. From the contents of the (said) writings, viz., the friendly letter and the proclamations, I have fully understood the sentiments of friendship, kindness, sympathy and amity on the part of the officers of the illustrious British Government in regard to myself. I have deputed my most confidential agents to you. They will, please God, represent and state before you all the particulars of the case. I would, therefore, not trouble you by writing more than this, that all that I most sincerely and cordially wish and desire is the friendship and amity of the illustrious British Government; by God's help the truth of these assertions has been and will be manifest and apparent every day.

I have informed the Mustaufi of certain internal and external matters. He will communicate them to you.

Enclosure 23 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR AYUB KHAN to the AMIR YAKUB KHAN, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Previous to this I sent you a detailed account of the murder of the late General Fakir Ahmed Khan both by post of Wednesday * 4th September 1879. the (16th Ramazan)* and by the hands of my Peshkhidmat Gholam Muhammad Khan. God willing, you will receive and peruse it.

And as the customary post is now leaving for that direction, and you may perhaps wish to know what the state of affairs is, I beg to inform you that since the death of General Fakir Ahmed no untoward circumstance has happened. Let us see what will happen hereafter.

I hope you will take my petitions into your favourable consideration. As it is my duty I have represented the above.

P.S.—To-day the Kabuli Kandaks (Regiments?) laid plans for raising a revolt and committing another mischief, under the pretext of their pay being 'in arrears. But Hafiz Khan has commenced to pay them and has given one regiment their two months' pay. Consequently they are quiet at present, but what will happen hereafter remains to be seen. It being my duty, I have represented the above.

Enclosure 24 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR to the MUSTAUFU and WAZIR SHAH MUHAMMAD, dated 2nd Shawal 1296 H.=(19th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Thanks be to God that all is well here. I have just received a letter from Ghulam Hyder Khan, the Deputy Governor of Turkestan, dated Thursday the 23rd* Ramazan, enclosing a letter to his address from a Russian Captain. I send the same herewith in original for the information of General Roberts, so that he may know that both I and my servants acknowledge as friends no one but the illustrious British Government, and that we have and will have no hesitation or doubt in imprisoning strangers and expelling them from our country. The said Deputy Governor also reports that four Kandaks (regiments?) have left for the capital, and that they arrived at Tashkurghan on Thursday the 23rd* Ramazan.

* 11th September 1879.

Enclosure 25 in No. 29.

Literal Translation from the Russian.

Kelif, August 25th.
[New Style: September 6th.]

Worthy and Respected Ruler of Mazar-i-Sharif.

ALONG the downward course of the Amu Darya, from Termez, there is [now] being floated down a Kayuk, occupied by four Russian travellers, with whom are four Cossacks and [some] servants.

Yesterday, the 25th* instant, this Kayuk was driven against [or, close to] the left Afghan bank of the river; and when three Cossacks and four Bokhariot Kayuk-men disembarked to tow the Kayuk [walking on shore], some Afghan people attacked them, and carried them off. This happened near the ferry of Chushka Gázár.

* [This must either be the 24th August-5th September; or the letter should have been dated the 26th August-7th September.]—Tr.

By the grace of God, Russia and Bokhara are at present at peace with Afghanistan, and not at war; hence I hope that this seizure of our people has not been effected by order of the Afghan authorities.

Informing you, the Worthy and Respected Ruler of Mazar-i-Sharif, of this, I request of you to pass an order to have these three captured Russian Cossacks and four Bokhariots sent to Kelif, without doing them any harm or violence.

I hope you will comply with this, my lawful and respectful, request.

(Signed) CAPTAIN NICOLAI KARAZIN.

SIMULTANEOUSLY I am also informing his Excellency Major-General Ivanof, Governor of the Samarkand Province, of all that has taken place.

Enclosure 26 in No. 29.

No. 10, dated Ali Khel, 24th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq.; C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, notes of an interview which I had yesterday with the Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan.

Enclosure No. 27 in No. 29.

Notes of an Interview between GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS and the Amir's Agents, MUSTAUFU HABIBULLA KHAN and WAZIR SHAH MUHAMMAD KHAN, Ali Khel, 23rd September 1879.

AFTER compliments General Roberts intimated to the Agents that at their desire he had granted them a second interview. He now requested them to be good enough to speak freely all that they wished him to know.

The Mustaufi then spoke in the following sense:—The interests of England and Afghanistan are the same, and the Amir and his officials are deeply grieved at the late occurrences in Kabul. Moreover, the Amir is anxious to do whatever the British Government wishes, and most desirous that the dignity of the British Government should be maintained by any means which may seem proper to the Viceroy. But His Highness cannot conceal from himself that the mutinous troops and the people in general, ryots as well as soldiers, are in fear of an indiscriminate revenge which will fall alike upon innocent and guilty. He hopes, therefore, that measures will be taken to guard against the possibility of a general rising consequent on fear.

The Mustaufi was here reminded of the tenor of General Roberts' proclamation of 15th September. He answered that the people were too ignorant to be acted upon by a proclamation; and then went on as follows:—

Of course it is possible that no such combination may take place. The Afghans are selfish and divided against themselves. Still, lest he should be plamed if it should occur, the Amir thinks it right to express his opinion and give the British Government all the information in his power. On the whole his advice, as an earnest friend, is that the advance of a British force on Kabul should be delayed for a short time ("Panj roz"). In the interval he will endeavour to disarm the regular troops; raise new levies; and, by the aid of the latter, punish all concerned in the late abominable outrage. His idea is to get rid of Sher Ali's soldiery, always a source of danger, and keep only 15,000 men for the future. It would be very desirable to delay the advance until he could establish his power. The Amir does not mean to imply that any Afghan army, were it 50,000 strong, could resist the British. The mutinous troops have neither organisation nor leaders. But the mutinous troops are of all tribes, and if the British army destroys them, as it would undoubtedly do in case of resistance, the whole country may combine against the British and the Amir. It is for this reason that he advises delay, and that the punishment of the guilty be left to him. The Viceroy may rest assured that he will show no mercy. He will make an example which will be conspicuous in the eyes of the world as the sun at noonday. Already every one in Kabul regards the Amir as an infidel because of the way in which he and his have thrown their lot with the British Government.

Notwithstanding all that has been said, however, things might go right if the mutinous troops would keep together and attempt a stand. But the Amir feels they will not do so. They are more likely to scatter here and there and raise the country. In that case there will be constant attacks on the communications of the force, and the gathering of supplies will be difficult. They would come chiefly from the direction of Ghazni, partly also from Logar. If the tribes rise it will be hard to collect them. Only one month remains before the setting in of winter.

Of course it is impossible to say what may happen. There may be no opposition, and the Amir is in any case ready to do what the British Government desires. But he feels it is his duty to express his strong opinion that the present season is unsuited for a forward movement.

General Roberts replied that on behalf of the Viceroy he thanked the Amir for his kind advice, which he was confident was the advice of a friend. He said the matter was important and required careful consideration and asked whether the Agents had anything more to bring forward.

The Mustaufi then spoke as follows:—The Amir's advice to delay the advance is that of a sincere friend, and it is the best he can give. But if the British army is to march on Kabul there is one thing more which I am desired to say. Let it march in such strength as to crush all hopes of mischief, and put down all rebellion throughout the country. You cannot wait for reinforcements. If you come you must come in full strength—in sufficient strength to put down all opposition. There may be no opposition, but you cannot count on this.

General Roberts replied:—The Amir's advice is of great importance and must be carefully considered. When His Highness first wrote announcing the outbreak at Kabul and asking for help the first desire of the Viceroy was to send the British forces on without delay. I was ordered to Kurram at once to lead the force here. Simultaneously the Kandahar force was ordered by telegram to return to Kandahar, which it was then leaving, and to advance towards Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and instructions were issued to collect a third force at Peshawur. All this was to help the Amir with the least possible delay. The Viceroy from the first contemplated the possibility of such a general rising as the Amir now fears, and the several armies were therefore by his Excellency's order made up to such a strength that all Afghanistan combined could not stand against them for a moment. The Kandahar troops were

* NOTE.—The Agents here seemed surprised and anxious.—H. M. D. ready in a very short time, and are now beyond Kandahar, on the road to Kabul.* The Peshawur force was rapidly collected and pushed on; and the Amir may rest assured that the British army is advancing in ample strength. I will think over the Amir's advice nevertheless, for it is important. But His Highness must remember that the late occurrences at Kabul do not affect only the English officers and the 50 or 60 men who were treacherously killed. The honour of the English Government is concerned, and so long as the bodies of these officers and men remained unburied or uncared for in Kabul, I do not believe the English people will ever be satisfied. They will require the advance of a British force, and the adequate punishment of the crime. Still the Amir's advice, which I am convinced is that of a friend, must be carefully considered, and I will think over it and give an answer later.

The Mustaufi then said:—We quite understand what has been said about the strength of the British army. Doubtless it is sufficient, and all Afghanistan could not stand against it. But the Amir asked us to mention, what I have hitherto forgotten, that there are in Turkestan 24 regiments of infantry, six of cavalry, and 56 guns. These troops were the first to show a disaffected spirit at Mazar-i-Sharif, and putting aside external enemies there are Abdul Rahman and the sons of Azim Khan waiting their chance. Herat again is doubtful, when the troops there hear what has occurred at Kabul there is no saying what they may do. If Abdul Rahman ingratiates himself with these people Herat and Turkestan will be permanently severed from the Afghan dominions. This is another reason why the advance of the British force should be delayed in order that the Amir may have time to gain over the Herat and Turkestan troops.

General Roberts replied.—All these reasons will have full consideration. The Viceroy's first order was to push on at once to help the Amir, but I am sure His Highness' advice is friendly, and that in any case he will do his utmost to co-operate with the British Government. Therefore, every consideration will be given to what His Highness has desired you to say.

The Mustaufi.—The Viceroy may be sure the Amir will do what he pleases.

The Wazir.—When the Amir learnt from General Roberts' letter that the Viceroy had given General Roberts power to deal with the whole matter he was very pleased, knowing General Roberts' character as a soldier and his kindness of heart.

General Roberts replied that he would carefully consider the proposals brought forward, and give an answer later on. Meanwhile he must request the Agents to stay a day or two in camp until he should have thoroughly weighed the Amir's advice, which was of the utmost importance to both the British and Afghan Governments.

The interview then came to an end.

Enclosure 28 in No. 29.

No. 11, dated Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I have the honour to forward for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council a copy, in Persian and English, of my reply to His Highness the Amir's letters of the 18th and 19th September.

Enclosure 29 in No. 29.

Dated Camp Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, to His Highness the AMIR OF KABUL.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—I have received your Highness' two letters of the 18th and 19th September (1st and 2nd Shawal), delivered to me by the hands of your Highness' two confidential representatives, Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad.

I am much obliged to your Highness for sending to me two such well-known men, and of such high character, as the Mustaufi and the Wazir. They have informed me of your Highness' wishes, and I quite understand all they have told me.

It is unfortunate that the season is so late, and that winter will soon be here, but there is time yet for a British army to reach Kabul before the great cold sets in.

The Viceroy of India is much concerned that there should have been any delay in promptly acceding to your Highness' request for assistance and advice, as conveyed in your Highness' letters of the 3rd and 4th instant.

It was his Excellency's earnest wish that troops should march on Kabul at once, so as to ensure your Highness' personal safety, and aid your Highness in restoring peace and order at your capital.

Unfortunately, the want of transport and the necessity for collecting a certain amount of supplies have caused a few weeks' delay; it is, however, a source of gratification and happiness to the Viceroy to learn that your Highness' safety is not at present endangered, and his Excellency trusts your Highness will be able to keep everything quiet in your kingdom, until such time as British troops may reach Kabul.

I am glad to be able to inform your Highness that news reached me yesterday of the departure of a considerable force from Kandahar under the command of a brave and distinguished officer, and that a large body of troops, under command of General Bright, were advancing rapidly from Peshawur to Jellalabad and onwards, via Gandamak to Kabul.

My own force will, I hope, be in a state to march before long. As your Highness is aware, the Shuturguridan has been occupied for some days; meanwhile regiments of cavalry and infantry, and batteries of artillery have reached Kurram to replace those I am taking on with me, and to re-inforce my own column, should a necessity for more troops arise, a contingency I do not in the least expect.

The Viceroy of India, in his Excellency's anxiety for your Highness' welfare and safety, issued orders that each of the three armies now advancing on Kandahar, Kurram, and the Khyber, should be strong enough to overcome any opposition your Highness' enemies could possibly offer. That each is strong enough there can be no doubt.

I understand that there is no one at Kelat-i-Ghilzai or Ghazni to stop the progress of the troops en route from Kandahar; there is no reason, therefore, why they should not reach Kabul in a very short time.

The Khyber tribes, having understood and appreciated the Treaty of peace made by your Highness with the British Government in May last, have unanimously agreed to assist the troops from Peshawur in every way, and are now eager to keep the road through the Khyber safe, and to place all their transport animals at the disposal of the British Commander, who will thus be enabled to concentrate his force rapidly at Kabul.

Through the kindness of your Highness I have experienced much less difficulty than I could have expected, and I may now reasonably hope to be with your Highness at least as soon as either the Kandahar or Khyber column.

I look forward with great pleasure to the meeting with your Highness, and trust that you will continue your kind assistance to obtain for me supplies and transport,

I have carefully considered your Highness' proposal, that you yourself should be permitted to administer just punishment to the mutinous troops and others who shared in the treacherous and cruel attack on the British Envoy and his small escort, and thus save Her Majesty's troops the trouble, hardship, and privation which must necessarily be encountered by an advance on Kabul at this season of the year.

I thank your Highness most cordially on the part of the Viceroy and Government of India for this further proof of your Highness' friendly feelings. Under ordinary circumstances such an offer would be gratefully and willingly accepted; but after what has recently occurred, I feel sure that the great British nation would not rest satisfied unless a British army marched to Kabul, and there assisted your Highness to inflict such punishment as so terrible and dastardly an act deserves.

I have forwarded your Highness' letters in original to the Viceroy; a copy of this, my reply, will be submitted by to-day's post for his Excellency's consideration. Meanwhile I have permitted Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad to take their leave, and rejoin your Highness.

It would be convenient, I think, to both your Highness and to me, and would materially assist my future communication with your Highness, if one or other of the above-named gentlemen could remain with me. Should they see no objection to this arrangement, I will request one of them to stay in my camp, pending an intimation of your Highness' approval.

Enclosure 30 in No. 29.

No. 14, dated Ali Khel, 26th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, notes of my third interview with His Highness the Amir's officials, Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan. They left camp early this morning for Kabul.

Enclosure 31 in No. 29.

Notes of an interview between MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., and the Amir's Agents, MUSTAUFİ HABİBULLA KHAN and WAZİR SHAH MUHAMMAD KHAN, dated Ali Khel, 25th September 1879.

AFTER compliments General Roberts requested the Mustaufi to take charge of a letter for His Highness the Amir. In it General Roberts said he had thanked His Highness for sending him two such distinguished officials as those now in camp, and had informed the Amir that he thoroughly understood all His Highness had charged them to say. But it was impossible for him to accept the Amir's advice in its entirety. In accordance with the Amir's first request, the Viceroy had at once prepared three armies to march on Kabul. The Peshawur and Kurram Forces were now nearly ready, and the Kandahar Force had already pushed forward. To stop the advance of these armies now was a thing which General Roberts could not do. To begin with, the Viceroy would be much distressed if any misfortune were to happen to the Amir on account of the absence of British support; and, in the second place, the British nation would never be satisfied unless a British force advanced to Kabul and recovered the bodies of the officers and men so foully murdered. The forces therefore must advance. In the meanwhile, General Roberts trusted that the Amir would be able to guard himself, and maintain peace and security at his capital. The Mustaufi replied that the Amir had sent himself and his colleague to assure General Roberts of His Highness' fidelity to the British. * Whatever General Roberts thought best should of course be done.

General Roberts requested the Mustaufi to assure the Amir that he had carefully considered His Highness' advice. The conclusion at which he had arrived was shown in his letter to His Highness. Putting aside the question of an advance, the letter contained, he said, his thanks for the assistance of the two officials sent by His Highness, and a request that he might retain the services of one of them. If, however, they both preferred to return now, General Roberts was of course willing to afford them every facility. But he hoped one of them, or some equally trusted official, would soon be sent to his camp. The Mustaufi replied that he was hard worked as Finance Minister, while his colleague had the foreign work, besides other departments of the administration in his charge, and that he feared the absence of either would cause serious inconvenience to the Amir.

General Roberts said, that in that case he could not ask either of them to remain, but, considering the special importance of having constant and easy communication between the Amir and the British camp, he hoped some trusted servant would be sent without delay.

The Mustaufi replied, that since his departure from Kabul he had only received one letter from the Amir, and was therefore ignorant of the state of affairs in Turkestan and Herat. If, when he reached Kabul, all was quiet, the Amir would probably come in person to meet General Roberts, or send his son. If not, it would be necessary to devote all their energies to ensuring the Amir's safety. Meanwhile the Mustaufi thought it necessary that he and his colleague should return at once, and hinted at the desirability of a little delay on the part of the force in order that they might have time to reach Kabul first and make any necessary arrangements.

General Roberts said his own object was to ensure the Amir's safety, and that His Highness should be told exactly beforehand when the force was likely to reach Kabul. His Highness would then be able to make arrangements for coming himself to the British camp. But in any case, to show the people that there was no disunion between the Amir and the British Government, it was especially desirable to send over a trustworthy official.

General Roberts then asked the Agents when they would like to start, in order that a guard might be ready; and he requested them to accept rupees 2,000 each with rupees 1,000 more for their servants.

The Mustaufi and the Wazir both seemed anxious to start at once, evidently fearing that the British force would enter Kabul, almost simultaneously with themselves. It was, however, eventually arranged that they should not leave camp until the following morning, General Roberts being of opinion that they should not spend the night, except in the security of a British encampment.

The Agents then took their leave.

After dismissing the Amir's officials, General Roberts received, with their assent, a son of Padshah Khan, who had accompanied them from Kabul. He assured General Roberts that his father would join the British camp on the advance of the force from Koushi.

Enclosure 32 in No. 29.

No. 16, dated Kushi, 29th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, the papers marginally noted, and to report that I left

(1.) Letter from General Sir F. Roberts to His Highness the Amir, dated 28th September 1879.

(2.) Letter from His Highness the Amir to General Sir F. Roberts, dated 29th (28th?) September 1879.

(3.) Letter from Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan to the address of General Sir F. Roberts.

(4.) Letter containing Kabul news furnished by Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan.

(5.) Letter from Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan to General Sir F. Roberts.

Ali Khel on the 27th instant and arrived at Kushi yesterday.

2. I found His Highness the Amir in Brigadier-General Baker's camp. Early in the morning of the 27th, Major Hastings received a letter from His Highness intimating that he and some of his Sirdars were on their way to Kushi, and shortly after noon the Amir's approach was announced. His Highness was met by Major Hastings a mile from the camp, and later by Brigadier-General Baker, who went out with a squadron of cavalry to receive him. He was accompanied by his son Sirdar Muhammad Musa Khan, by Sirdar Yahya Khan, by Sirdar Ahmad Ali Khan, and by about 300 sowars, but was without tents or equipage of any kind. 200 of the sowars who had accompanied His Highness returned the same evening to Kabul. Every endeavour has been made by Brigadier-General Baker to consult the Amir's comfort, and His Highness professes himself entirely satisfied with the treatment accorded to him. But on his first arrival in the camp it appeared both to Brigadier-General Baker and to Major Hastings that he was anxious and ill at ease. He has now obtained tents and has requested leave to remove from the centre of the camp, where Brigadier-General Baker had arranged for him to stay.

3. This morning I paid a visit of ceremony to the Amir, and during the afternoon His Highness returned the visit. He was received with the customary honours. Nothing of importance passed at either interview, and I propose to defer until to-morrow any discussion with His Highness of the present state of affairs in Kabul, and the measures to be adopted for the restoration of order. I have, however, already been informed at the Amir's desire that before my arrival His Highness had issued orders to meet the wishes of Government in two matters of some urgency, namely, the arrangements to be made for facilitating the advance of the Khyber column, and the collection of supplies for the force under my command. With regard to the first point His Highness had, he says, before the receipt of any request from me, addressed the Hakim of Jellalabad and the Khan of Lalpura ordering that every assistance should be afforded to the troops advancing from the Khyber, and the orders have now been repeated. With regard to the collection of supplies for this force I am informed that His Highness yesterday offered to place at our disposal the stores of grain and other necessities which had been collected in the Khalsa villages in the neighbourhood. Some of His Highness' officials were accordingly sent out with all the transport animals available, and I hope that ample supplies will soon be forthcoming.

4. The arrangements for the protection of the road between Kushi and Ali Khel are complete. I have decided to withdraw the troops now at Karatiga, which is not in all ways a suitable position, and to replace them by a mixed garrison of Jajis and Ghilzais; the whole to be under the charge of Allal-ud-din Khan. I have every reason to hope that both this chief and his brother Padshah Khan are in earnest in their desire to preserve intact our postal and telegraphic communications, and to afford us every assistance required on that part of the line with which they are concerned. All arrangements for the road between Kushi and Kabul I propose to leave to the Amir, and I have been given to understand by His Highness' officials that he will gladly undertake the responsibility.

5. Besides His Highness the Amir and the persons who accompanied him, I expect soon to meet Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, and a number of other Sirdars, who left Kabul shortly after His Highness, and arrived yesterday at Zarghun Shahr about 10 miles from here.

Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan has a feeling of antagonism towards the Amir, and I anticipate some difficulty from the relations existing between them. I shall of course receive with caution any information supplied by the Sirdar, or others connected with him, and shall not accept without every careful examination statements to the prejudice of His Highness.

The Sirdar professes to have in his possession a letter written by the Amir to the hill tribes after the conclusion of the Treaty, calling upon them to join him in a Jehád against the English. Any evidence of this nature will receive due consideration; meanwhile I shall make no difference in my treatment of the Amir, which will be in accordance with the respect due to his rank.

6. It will be seen that one of the inclosures to this letter is a letter to my address from Sirdar Ibrahim Khan. I have lately heard that this Sirdar was yesterday arrested by the Governor of Kabul while attempting to leave the city; and that he is now in confinement.

7. The news from Kabul is conflicting, and I am unable to ascertain with any accuracy the movements of the revolted troops and the number of the armed men now in the city. But all is reported quiet, and I am generally assured that there is no prospect of resistance. I propose to march from Kushi on the 2nd of October and reach Kabul on the 5th.

Enclosure 33 in No. 29.

Translation of a Copy of a Letter from GENERAL ROBERTS to AMIR MUHAMMAD YAKUB KHAN, without date (28th September 1879?).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Information has reached me that the troops which his Excellency the Viceroy of India had ordered to march from Peshawur to Kabul, have already started. I therefore request your Highness to issue orders to your Highness' officers and subjects to the effect that they should, as far as lies in their power, facilitate the passage of the British troops which will march through the Khyber Pass to Jellalabad and onward. It is necessary that your Highness should prohibit (them from making) any kind of opposition. It also should be fully explained that the above-mentioned troops are going to assist your Highness and to consolidate your Highness' Government, otherwise it is probable that the stupid and ignorant people may make up their minds to offer opposition.

Be pleased to inform me always of your welfare.

Enclosure 34 in No. 29.

Letter from the AMIR to GENERAL ROBERTS, dated 11th Shawal 1296 A.H.=(28th September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Your friendly letter has reached me just at this moment, 8 p.m. Monday the 11th Shawal (28th September) and opened the doors of joy and happiness on the face of my heart marked with affection. I feel perfectly certain and confident that the movements of Her Imperial Majesty's victorious troops are merely for the purpose of consolidating the foundation of my kingdom and strengthening the basis of my Government.

In truth the sympathy of friends with friends is fitting and proper, and the indulgence and kindness of a great Government to a sincere and faithful friend is agreeable and pleasing. I am exceedingly gratified with, and thankful to, the representatives of the illustrious British Government for their expression of sympathy, and their support of my cause. Your friendly and wise suggestion that none of the ignorant tribes of Afghanistan should oppose the British troops, so that the officers of the British Government should be the better able to support and protect me, is very acceptable and reasonable. Before I received your letter I had sent orders repeatedly to the Governors of Jellalabad and Lalpura not to let any one oppose or resist the British troops, and stringent orders have again been issued to the Governor of Jellalabad to use his utmost endeavours and efforts in this respect. The order in question to the address of the Governor of Jellalabad will be shown to you to-morrow, and sent by an express courier.

Usual ending.

Enclosure 35 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN and 11 other SIRDARS to GENERAL ROBERTS, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that on Friday last the Amir Muhammad Yakub Khan went out under the pretext of walking in, and seeing, the garden of Hissar (Bala Hissar?) and from thence he hastened towards the British camp at the time of sun-set prayer. As we were not aware of the fact we were all perplexed as to where he had gone, and so the whole family being at one with me, we all set out towards you, and are awaiting your orders as to when we may have the honour of meeting you.

To-day Sunday the 10th* (Shawal) we are halting at the village of Zarghun Shahr, and are anxious to know where we may have a joyous interview with you.

* 27th September.

Enclosure 36 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN, to MUHAMMAD HAYAT KHAN, C.S.I., dated 6th Shawal H. 1296= (23rd September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS,—Should you wish to know how I am, thank God I am all right.

I have just heard that you have arrived at Ali Khel in company with General Roberts. I therefore write to ask you to let me know how you are, and that if I can do any service for you I will perform it with pleasure.

Rest assured in every respect about these parts. All the tribes about Kabul are quiet—a fact which you will learn from my report (Memorandum). The bearer of your letter gave me an account of the kindness you have shown to him. It has pleased me greatly; and I hope that in future you will also be as kind.

Thank God, all is well here.

Enclosure 37 in No. 29. (Extract.)

Memorandum of SIRDAR WALI MUHAMMAD KHAN, enclosed in a letter from him herewith sent in original.

When the Herat troops were one march from Kabul, they were instructed to raise a cry on arrival at the capital that they would wage a religious war, and that they would not allow the English officers to remain in the town. In accordance with these instructions they raised cries in the city on their arrival there. They quarrelled with the servants of Major Cavagnari in the streets of the town on one or two occasions. I reported this to the Major, and he remarked in reply that it was the habit of a rabid dog to bite, be the person bit however innocent, and that no one could touch his hair. The Sirdar Bahadur (Gholam Nakshband Khan?) is aware of this. After that, these six Herat regiments left on account of the sickness (cholera), and went to their homes, and none of them have as yet returned.

On Wednesday, the 15th of Ramazan (3rd September), three of these six regiments asked for their pay. They were offered one month's wages, but they refused to take the money, and said that they would take nothing short of three months' salary. The Amir told them that they did not perform any service or any religious act, or protect the honour of their country, and so were not entitled to three months' wages. On learning this they broke out and proceeded towards the residence of Major Cavagnari, saying that they would now engage in a religious conflict. Daud Shah came out to prevent them from their design, but was not successful in his attempts. He was insulted, and was wounded in three or four places. At this juncture, Saif-ud-din Khan (a General) presented himself before the Amir and remarked, that if His Highness gave permission he would aid and save Major Cavagnari. But he was rebuked, and was dismissed from service with the remark that he had no concern in the matter. He is now out of his office of General.

The troops and the people of Turkestan raised a disturbance against General Gholam Hyder Khan, Wardak, and plundered the bazaar, the Serai, and the shops, and fled with their families towards Khulm and Sarbagh. The six regiments sent from Kabul to retain them in Turkestan have arrived at Khulm, but these Turkestan regiments are still there. Saripul and Maimena were occupied by Mir Muhammad Khan of Saripul; and Shubarghan was taken possession of by the son of Mir Hakim Khan. Turkestan is without a chief. Gholam Hyder Khan has also come to Khulm.

The Kabuli troops at Herat raised a disturbance as they were disheartened, and their being in arrears of pay was made an excuse for their rising. They killed General Fakir Ahmed Khan, their chief, and deserted, or are deserting the town.

The greater portion of the three regiments (of the six) who had attacked Major Cavagnari, and were deputed to Kohistan after being paid three months' wages, have deserted.

The cavalry regiments of Kabul have gone to their homes, and it is only possible to re-collect them in two months.

Likewise the men of the infantry regiments and artillery men at Kabul have also gone to their homes, and there are not 1,000 soldiers in the lines.

The three regiments which had gone to Ghazni to collect revenue deserted to their homes when they heard of the massacre of the British Embassy at Kabul.

The people of Afghanistan who used to pay revenue to the Amir refuse to make any payments to the collectors, and are hopeful of the favours of the British Government.

About 2,000 Kharwars (a Kabul Kharwar= $14\frac{1}{2}$ maunds English) of grain belonging to the Amir are lying in Logar. The Amir's people intend to take it away. It would be well for the British troops to hasten their advance to Kushi to take possession of the grain.

If the British troops desire to delay their advance (to Kabul) it would at any rate be better to come to Kushi and there halt. There will be many advantages in at once marching to Kushi.

It would be well if Mullah Shah Muhammad Khan and Mirza Habibulla, Mustaufi come (to Kabul) with the British camp. But if they are given congé from Kushi the British authorities may do so.

Enclosure 38 in No. 29.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM KHAN to GENERAL ROBERTS, without date.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that about five years ago, I had friendship, with the British Government through Nawab Ata Muhammad Khan and Munshi Bakhtiar Khan, for which my father the late Amir threw me into prison at Kabul and sent me to Turkestan. On his death I returned to Kabul to do service to the (British) Government. But by the decree of God I fell ill. The friendly sentiments I entertained for the late Sir L. Cavagnari and the verbal representations which I had made to him out of my fidelity to the British Government are known to Gholam Nakshband Khan Sirdar Bahadur who may have conveyed them to you. As the decrees of God had passed, no remedy was of any avail. I hope you will consider me your well-wisher. I am waiting for an answer, and any orders that may be sent to me I shall endeavour to carry out in the service of the British Government.

No. 30.

Telegram from VICEROY, 10th October 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

Following information just received from General Roberts, dated 8th instant, outside Kabul. :—Hearing that the troops returned from Kohistan had entrenched themselves on a high hill behind Bala Hissar overlooking city, he sent General Massey, with eight squadrons of cavalry, round by north of city to watch roads leading to Bamian and Kohistan, cutting off enemy's retreat. Simultaneously, General Baker, with strong force, was instructed to attack the enemy from the high ground above Bala Hissar. At sunset Massey had reached Aliabad on Bamian road, and found in the Sherpur cantonment, which was deserted, 78 guns, including 17 Armstrongs. At the same hour Baker was about to attack enemy's position.

No. 30A.

From VICEROY, 12th October 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

FOLLOWING from Roberts, outside Kabul, 10th October :—General Baker was unable to deliver his attack on evening of 8th on account of darkness; before daylight yesterday General Macpherson joined him with 67th Foot, 28th Native Infantry, and four horse artillery guns on elephants; enemy, however, fled during the night, leaving on their very strong position 12 guns, 6 field and 6 mountain; cavalry pursued for several miles in two detachments under General Massey and Hugh Gough, but the enemy had so completely dispersed that they only overtook a few small parties; we have now in our possession 110 guns, there are some 30 more in the Bala Hissar, and a few I hear in the city. Our camp is pitched on the Sia Sang ridge, immediately overlooking and within 1,300 yards of the Bala Hissar and city. I shall make public entry into and take possession of Bala Hissar to-morrow or next day; the troops have worked splendidly, for several days we have been without tents, and rations have had to be carried for want of transports; two wounded men of 72nd and one Sapper have died, remainder of wounded doing well.

No. 31.

Telegram from SECRETARY OF STATE, 14th October 1879, to VICEROY.

I MOST heartily congratulate you upon the success of operations against Kabul. Please telegraph to General Roberts my congratulations on the rapidity and skill with which he has led his forces and my appreciation of the courage and success with which they have achieved their objects.

No. 32.

No. 219 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To The Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, October 16, 1879.

WE have the honour to submit a summary of the intelligence received during the past week regarding the state of affairs in Afghanistan and the progress of our military operations in that country.

2. General Roberts' telegram, despatched on the evening of the 6th October, reporting very briefly his successful engagement with the enemy on the heights between Kabul and Charasiah, formed a postscript to our last despatch. From other accounts it appears that the Afghan regiments and the armed bands of the city held in large numbers a very strong position on the heights above Charasiah, which they defended with tenacity and with some military skill; while the tribal levies, principally Ghilzais from about Tezin and Hazarah, showed in force along the hills upon General Roberts' flank, watching an opportunity to embarrass his advance, and threatening the large convoy that was following under General Macpherson. It is now known that the plans for arresting the advance of our troops upon Kabul had been carefully laid, and that the Ghilzais had been instructed to act against the flanks and rear of our column, while the regular troops and the Kabul people undertook to bar its passage across the hills in front. The information received by General Roberts decided him to attack at once the force on the heights, since delay would have given the enemy time to bring up reinforcements from the city, and to fortify a position that was sufficiently formidable by nature. Moreover, there was good reason for suspecting an understanding and correspondence between the leaders of the resistance in Kabul and the Afghans who were accompanying General Roberts' camp. The attack was opened by a turning movement against the right of the enemy's position, which was executed resolutely and skilfully under a sharp fire. The Afghans fought well, but were beaten back; and when the front attack was delivered, their main body was driven with great loss from the ridge. They continued, however, to contest every point at which the ground favoured a stand, nor was it until dark that the heights were cleared, and the whole position occupied by the British troops. Twenty guns were taken in this action; and it seems certain, from subsequent information, that the regular troops opposed to us were effectively routed, while the tribes who were assembling to co-operate with them are said to have returned to their homes.

3. On the 7th the advanced portion of General Roberts' force was within two miles of the city of Kabul, and the Bala Hissar was found to have been evacuated by the Afghan troops; but three mutinous regiments from Kohistan were reported to have returned to the Sherpur cantonment, on the west side of the city. General Roberts, hearing that these troops were entrenching themselves on a high hill beyond the Bala Hissar, and immediately overlooking the city, detached on the 8th October Brigadier-General Massey with eight squadrons of cavalry to watch the roads leading from the north side of the city to Bamian and Kohistan, in order to cut off the line of retreat. At the same time Brigadier-General Baker, with a force consisting of six companies 92nd Highlanders, two companies 72nd Highlanders, a wing of the 67th Regiment, two companies 5th Goorkhas, 23rd Pioneers, four mountain guns, and two Gatlings, prepared to attack the position on the hill. By sunset on the 8th General Massey had arrived at Aliabad, on the Bamian road, having found the Sherpur cantonment deserted, and having taken possession of 78 guns, found in it. General Baker was prevented by nightfall from opening his attack on the evening of the 8th; he was joined before daylight on the 9th by General Macpherson with additional troops, but during the night the enemy evacuated their position, and took to flight, leaving 12 guns behind them. The cavalry in two detachments, under Generals Massey and Hugh Gough, were sent in pursuit, but the Afghan troops had so completely dispersed that only a few small parties were overtaken. General Roberts' camp was on the 10th October pitched on the Siah Sang ridge, immediately overlooking the Bala Hissar and the city. He visited the Bala Hissar on the 11th, and made his public entry on the 12th, accompanied by the Amir. The whole of the heavy guns and howitzers presented by the British Government to the Amir have been captured, with sufficient ammunition for present purposes; so that General Roberts has been able to send back to Peshawur the heavy battery which was coming up with the Khyber column.

4. Brigadier-General Gordon telegraphs that his camp at Ali Khel was attacked on the morning of the 14th by the Mangals and some sections of other tribes from Spega and the neighbourhood. He reports that they came on very boldly, but were well met by the 29th and 8th Regiments; and that a counter-attack was delivered by his cavalry and infantry with complete success; that the assailants left many dead, while our casualties were five men slightly wounded.

5. The advanced portion of the force moving by the Khyber Pass reached Barikab on the 10th October, and General Gough has now occupied Jellalabad. Supplies were coming in slowly, and the Afghan officials showed little readiness to assist, having probably received secret encouragements to retard, if possible, the advance of our troops, but the country is generally quiet.

6. From Kandahar General Stewart reports that General Hughes' brigade had halted 14 miles in advance of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, as the country beyond could furnish no supplies. The Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, Muhammad Tahir Khan, had no real authority in his district, and the fort is now in the possession of the British troops. Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan, the governor of Zamindawar, had come to Kandahar; his unpopularity and his want of troops to support his authority had much embarrassed his administration, insomuch that Sir Donald Stewart doubted whether he could continue to maintain himself in his government. It appeared to us essential, on political as well as on military grounds, that in the present juncture of affairs at Kabul the local government at Kandahar should be encouraged and supported in preserving order in the adjacent districts, and that those districts which had been formerly administered from Kandahar should be brought within the sphere of our influence and protection whenever this might be necessary to prevent disorganisation. We have accordingly instructed General Stewart that he has full discretion to make any requisite arrangements for preserving tranquillity and for administering Zamindawar from Kandahar; that Muhammad Yusaf, if he proves incapable, need not return to his government; and that the necessary measures may, under existing circumstances, be taken without previously consulting the Amir. The latest news received at Kandahar from Herat was dated 27th September, on which date Sirdar Ayub Khan wrote to Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, Governor of Kandahar, that all was well, but that he was perplexed at the news of the Kabul outbreak.

7. There is no further news of importance from the other outlying provinces of Afghanistan.

8. We forward, for your Lordship's information, some further depositions [taken by the Commissioner of Peshawur] of servants of the Kabul Embassy, who escaped from the massacre, and of others who were present in the Bala Hissar when the outbreak took place.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 32.

THIS morning Major Hastings and Nawab Ghulam Hassan Khan with Kazi Muhammad Aslam, under orders from Major-General Sir Frederick Roberts V.C., K.C.B., went to see the Amir. The following is the pith of the Amir's advice and conversation:—

(1.) In my opinion the best thing is to occupy the hill commanding the Pass which leads to Kabul. The mutinous troops have lately occupied that hill, and if they were allowed to keep it in their possession for the night they are sure to fortify it, and it will be rather difficult to dislodge them from there to-morrow.

(2.) I have received a verbal message from Kabul to the effect that the mutinous regiments have plundered the magazine. My mother and wife have left the Bala Hissar and gone to the house of Sirdar Yahya Khan; and that the other members of my family will soon follow them. The Bala Hissar is actually out of my possession. I have received no information to this effect from Nazar Muhammad Khan, Governor of Kabul, or from any other officer. But any trustworthy news which I may receive from Kabul at night will at once be communicated to the General through Major Hastings.

(3.) I have been and am still the true friend of the English, and so long as I live I will remain a staunch ally of the British Government.

(4.) On account of my coming to the British Camp, all people call me an infidel (Kafir), and my private servants desert me every day. No one will obey my order or consider me the Amir.

NOTE.—The Amir appeared in a very unsettled and troubled state of mind.

(Signed) E. G. HASTINGS, Major,
Political Officer.

Charasiah, the 6th October 1879.

Enclosure 2 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 11th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Camp through Shuturgurdan, to Foreign Secretary, Simla.

KABUL, 7th October.—Advance portion of my force is now within two miles of city and Bala Hissar. The latter which has been evacuated by Afghan troops will be occupied by some of this force to-morrow, a camp for the remainder being pitched on the ridge of hills to the east of city known as Siah Sang. The three mutinous regiments which went towards Kohistan are reported to have returned to-day and to be at Sherpur with the remainder of the Amir's army about four miles from this on the other side of the city. I shall look them up to-morrow or next day. Want of transport necessitates my halting here, as it is desirable to collect my force before taking final steps to occupy city, and rear troops cannot join me until to-morrow.

I am glad to report that 20 guns were captured in yesterday's fight, not 12 as stated in my last telegram. One of them is an English made iron 8-inch howitzer; most of the others are imitation Armstrong guns.

I am opening communications with Khyber line, and hope to arrange in few days for letters and telegrams being sent by that route. All well.

Enclosure 3 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 10th October 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Camp, to Foreign Secretary, Simla.

Outside Kabul, 8th October.—General Macpherson rejoined me this evening with stores and reserve ammunition. As I am informed three regiments from Ghazni are trying to join force opposed to Baker, and as several people from the city have already joined that force, I am sending Macpherson with wing 67th, 5th Goorkhas, two mountain guns, four horse artillery guns on elephants, and 27th N. I. to be with Baker by daybreak to-morrow. If our cavalry succeed in intercepting the Afghan troops, I don't think they will be able to make another stand. Ghilzais from Tezin, Hissarak and that neighbourhood assembled in large numbers to join the force opposed to us on 6th instant, but arrived too late. Some returned to their homes, but a good many are still waiting to see result of this fresh stand made by the Afghan troops.

Enclosure 4 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 10th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

ALL quiet so far, though tribes are reported uneasy, specially in Spega Machalgo posts. All on the alert.

Enclosure 5 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 13th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

OUTSIDE Kabul, 11th October.—All accounts agree that troops have been completely routed. Ghilzais, Kohistanis, Logaris, and other tribes, who were assembling to fight against us, have returned to their homes. I hope there will be no great difficulty about supplies. The Sherpur Cantonment will furnish enough firewood for several months, should it not be practicable to bring in a store from the hills before winter sets in. It is nevertheless very desirable that communication should be opened via Gandamak and Jellalabad as soon as possible. Only two days' rum is in hand. Letters take 10 and 12 days from Simla by Ali Khel and Shuturguridan. They should come in half that time by Peshawur. The heavy battery coming up with Khyber Column might return to India. I shall not require it. The heavy guns and howitzers presented by the British Government to the Amir are complete, and there is sufficient ammunition for present purposes.

I visit Bala Hissar to-day, and make public entry to-morrow. Kazalbashis and most of the influential men of the city have come to camp and paid their respects to me. All well.

Enclosure 6 in No. 32 (Extract).

Telegram, dated 13th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

OUTSIDE Kabul, 12th October.—After carefully considering the position and information received from various people, and after giving due weight to facts and circumstances which have come under my own notice, I have decided that it is necessary to place Mustaufi, the Wazir, Yahya Khan, and his brother Zacharia Khan, under restraint, and that Military Governor must be appointed over city of Kabul.

Entry will be as public and impressive as possible. British troops will line road from camp to Bala Hissar; royal salute will be fired by horse artillery battery as Amir and I enter gateway. British standard will be hoisted over main gate. 67th Foot and 5th Goorkhas will occupy Bala Hissar and hill on which it is situated. Result will be telegraphed to-morrow, and full report of proceedings submitted by post, with copy of proclamation.

Country is fairly quiet. Proceedings of to-day will necessarily cause certain amount of excitement, but I don't anticipate trouble or great opposition. The Kazalbashis have paid their respects to me in camp, and expressed themselves well-wishers to the British. I have received friendly letters from several influential Kohistanis. Asmatulla Khan has written to say he will be here in few days.

Enclosure 7 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 14th October 1879.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

CAMP attacked at daybreak by large numbers of Mangals, Spegwals, Hassan, and Ahmed Khels. Attack very boldly made, but well met by 29th and 8th. Counter-attack delivered by cavalry detail and infantry with complete success; left many dead in our hands. Twenty-three bodies brought in; more expected. Our casualties, five slightly wounded. Further particulars will follow. Our attacking parties are returning to camp unmolested.

Enclosure 8 in No. 32.

Telegram, dated 9th October 1879. (Extract.)

From SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

I HAVE exchanged visits with Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan, and received several Maliks of Zamindawar, four of whom objected to Muhammad Yusaf Khan as Governor, because, they said, he had oppressed them. I advised Muhammad Yusaf Khan to return to Zamindawar and try to govern without giving his people just ground for complaint, and shall recommend the Maliks to obey him.

Governor of Herat has advised Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan that troops for Zamindawar cannot at present be spared from Herat. Without aid of his troops I doubt whether Muhammad Yusaf Khan can carry on the Government of Zamindawar, as he is much disliked by the people generally. Amir has been informed by wire through Roberts of state of affairs in Zamindawar and his instructions regarding Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan, requested.

Sirdar Sher Ali Khan states no mails from Kabul have arrived here during past week.

Latest news from Herat, 27th September, on which date Sirdar Ayub Khan writes to Sirdar Sher Ali Khan that all goes well in Herat, but he is perplexed at news of Kabul massacre. Travellers state Kandahar—Herat road between Washir and Kushk-i-Nakhud is unsafe for small parties.

At Kandahar, country quiet. Supplies coming in freely.

Enclosure 9 in No. 32.

Telegram dated 10th October 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

YOUR telegram, 9th. If Muhammad Yusaf Khan cannot carry on government of Zamindawar, you are authorised to make necessary arrangements for preserving order and administering country from Kandahar, and Yusaf need not return.

Enclosure 10 in No. 32.

Telegram dated 9th October 1879.

From Mr. RONALD THOMPSON, Teheran, to VICEROY, Simla.

FROM the Herat correspondent's letter, dated September 16th:—Nothing appears to have been then known in Herat of the Kabul outbreak. When the Kabul Regiments mutinied in Herat, Ayub Khan, it is stated, had been in total ignorance of what was going on, and he endeavoured to quell the revolt, but only arrived on the spot when General Fakir Ahmed had been killed and his house had been pillaged and razed to the ground.

Enclosure 11 in No. 32.

Cross-examination of RUSSUL, 7 Company, Corps of Guides, taken 18th September 1879.

[Original statement taken at Lundikotal, dated 16th September 1879.]

THE regiments drawn up below the Bala Hissar had no arms at first; the Sikh Sowars of the Guides did not fire first on the Amir's riotous soldiery, nor do I know of any syces having been stoned to death. The rioters rushed up and secured some nine vessels from the Mussulman members of the escort, these were lying out. The Sowars when they took shelter inside B had not fired a shot. After four shots had been fired by the Amir's regiments, one was fired by Sir L. Cavagnari; the messenger sent by our Envoy to the Amir never came back with a reply; to the best of my belief our fire killed about 300 of the enemy. The guns were dragged up and fired at the Embassy by infantry soldiers, no artillerymen were present; the firing was bad, although the distance was but 100 paces. Dost Muhammad was a Kakar, and his mother a Yusufzai woman: as he lived close to the Bala Hissar he and I became acquainted with one another: the talib who accompanied me from Kabul is named Daman, and his home is in Lughman. I was on the top of roof F when Dost Muhammad saved me. The Amir's soldiers had dark "cloth" (banati) clothing. Of the sowars who went out with the grass-cutters, I heard four had been killed near Sar-asia by troopers of the Amir's. The bodies of our officers killed were not mutilated. I did not see Sir L. wounded: imagine he never left the house and it fell on him. The city people joined in the attack. I saw two Hindus dead from our fire. Sar-asia is a cluster of villages about 3 to 4 kos from Kabul. The people of Kabul did not like the arrival of the Embassy, but the Amir is greatly distressed at what has occurred; he was helpless to give aid, as the soldiers threatened to kill him if he interfered, and wounded his General when he came out with his koran; they stoned another General. The Amir will not oppose our advance, but his soldiers might.

Enclosure 12 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of ABDULLA, son of ABDUL MAJID, Resident of Kars, dated 22nd September 1879.

I, Mahammad Omar, and Amad are servants of the Sultan of Turkey, and were taken prisoners with 400 other followers of Osman Pasha by the Russians at the taking of Kars. We were taken to Tobolsk and fled to Kizil-Yar, from thence to Hazrat Sultan, then to Nuri-ata, and ultimately reached Bokhara, and presented ourselves before the Emir who gave us five tillahs. We then came to Balkh by Keshi, asked for help which he denied us; we then came to Tashkurgan, and the ruler of that place would not help us; we then started for Kabul, and arrived there on the 15th day of Ramazan, and two days after went with a petition to the Amir; he ordered us to present ourselves the next day. We left the Durbar at 11 a.m., a great many soldiers had come to the Amir's quarters and demanded pay from him; the Peshkhidmats said they would receive it after two or three days, the soldiers said they must have it then. The officers who came with the soldiers ordered them to kill the Amir, who hid himself. The rioters then went at the Embassy; the defenders closed the gate and guns were fired from both sides. I saw these as I was standing on a mound outside the Bala Hissar; about 400 of the mutineers were killed and 100 wounded. They then fired the Embassy, and all inside were burnt, only three that were outside managed to escape, and were captured afterwards. The rioters then plundered the treasury, and told the Amir they would give him three days' grace, and if their pay was not forthcoming they would kill him; after this period they got their three months' pay and three months' rations. They then went towards Kurram. I am unable to say whether this attack was made with the instigation of the Amir or not. We remained five or six days more in Kabul, asked for help which was not given, and we then came this way, and wish to return to our country, but have not the means of getting there. We came by Jellalabad. On our arrival there some one informed the Governor that we were Englishmen; we were secured and afterwards released, and the Hakim gave us rupees six. We got on to a raft, came down the river to Michni and then Peshawur. I saw no troops on the way, nor did anyone mention that they were coming from Kabul to Jellalabad.

NOTE.

The informants have been forwarded to Bombay to the Turkish Consul. It has been often said that the Amir was threatened openly by the troops, that they made first for the Amir's palace, but were turned by the guard, and I suspect that there is truth in this.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Commissioner.

Enclosure 13 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of HOSEIN, of Hoti Murdan, Syce of the late Lieutenant HAMILTON, V.C., Guides Corps, 23rd September 1879.

On the day of the attack I went out early in the morning to get grass. Lieutenant Hamilton and Dr. Kelly also went out about the same time with us for their morning ride. Duffadar Futtah Muhammad Khan and two sowars of the Guides and four sowars of the Amir were with us as guard. About 8 or 9 a.m., while we were cutting grass about two kos distant from the Bala Hissar, we heard shots being fired.

The mounted escort rode about to find out and galloped off across the meadows. Shortly after the villagers of a village turned out armed and attacked us. We mounted our tats and galloped off towards the Bala Hissar. Five or six mounted men rode after us, but when I said I was a Mussulman, they did not kill me at the orders of their captain, but plundered me, took away the pony I rode which belonged to Mr. Hamilton. Three cavalry regiments of the Amir were encamped upon the grass plain called the "Chaman," it has no other name, below the Bala Hissar, and they mounted about this time.

Some of them were the men who robbed me of my pony and clothes; they told me Cavagnari Sahib had been killed. Then they took me to a village some two kos distant from the Bala Hissar, called Sak, and there a captain in the cavalry, called Muhammad Hassan, brother of Muhammad Afzal, who now has Mr. Hamilton's pony in his possession, kept me concealed for three days. He had saved my life when the sowars plundered me. He concealed me because the people would have killed me. The fourth day I went to Kabul, to the Murad khani mohulla (which is the Shiah quarter, and not on good terms with the rest of the Kabul city, which is Sunni), where I had heard Futtah Muhammad, Duffadar, had found refuge with the relations of Gul Badshah and Muhammad Sherif Khan, native officers in the Guides. I am a Shiah myself, originally from Kabul. There I heard from men who had been in the attack that the three regiments (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Grenadiers?) "Grandilaw-wal" "doyam" and "Grandi Soyam," which, drawn up for their pay on the Chaman, below the Bala Hissar, broke and attacked their general, Daud Shah, who had abused them for not taking one month's pay. They attacked the Residency with stones, plundered the treasury and arsenal, and fired on the Residency. I saw Ghulam Nabi, orderly to Sir Louis Cavagnari, who was beside him, and he said that Sir Louis had been shot in the forehead while on the roof early in the morning. Immediately afterwards, Ghulam Nabi says, Sir Louis wrote a note to the Amir, and gave it to him to take to the Amir. Ghulam Nabi went off to the Amir, through the postern gate at the back of Residency, with the letter; the Amir told him verbally, "What can I do?" and sent a high Sirdar to remonstrate, but it was no use. Ghulam Nabi, who is now in Kabul with his relations in the Murad khani quarter, still has Sir Louis' note to the Amir, and something written by the Amir. Futtah Muhammad told me Taimur had escaped about 11 a.m., and had gone to Peshawur. I was told Lieutenant Hamilton and Mr. Jenkyns charged two or three times, sword in hand, and were then shot there. Dr. Kelly lay dead in the Residency; also Sir Louis lay there, but his corpse was never found. Those of Lieutenant Hamilton and Mr. Jenkyns and Dr. Kelly were recognised and buried. I don't know where. People said the Amir had privately buried them. I left Kabul 10 or 12 days ago, dressed as a fakir. Ghulam Nabi gave me the striped blanket I have. He and Futtah Muhammad are the only survivors of the escort I know of. The three regiments that attacked the Residency left for Istalif in the Kohi Daman, where there is treasure. I did not see them leave, but their baggage had gone. The Amir was in the Bala Hissar, and had sent regiments towards Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Kandahar.

None were coming this way. The country is quiet at Jellalabad. I don't know what became of Russul sepoy. I saw Lieutenant Hamilton's horse "Mushki" tied up in a meadow in front of where the mutinous regiments were encamped; also another horse belonging to a sowar. I was about five days in Kabul. I was told that the regiments first went to the Amir's residence, but he escaped into his harem. The Amir sent the regiments towards Kandahar, &c., or else dismissed them to their homes before this attack.

I know nothing about movements of troops after it. All the Chandol quarter arms itself at night, and sentries are posted all round. They are afraid of being attacked by the Sunnis. The city is quiet.

NOTE.

The informant says that it was about an hour after the firing began in the Bala Hissar that the cavalry mounted and came down upon them. Informant did not know of Russul's safety. The departure of the three mutinous "orderly" or household regiments is confirmed.

I believe this statement to be trustworthy.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieut.-Colonel,
Commissioner.

Enclosure 14 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of ABDUR RAHIM, of Pujjuggi, Peshawur, dated 23rd September 1879.

My brother, Gul Muhammad, was Duffadar in the Guides escort at the Residency. I was there with him. On the day of the attack I had gone to the bazaar in the morning. Two regiments were on the way to parade to receive their pay from Daud Shah. Bands were playing, and people looking on.

I met the regiments, and turned back to see the sight of the parade. They objected to one month's pay, and commenced to throw stones at Daud Shah, and hit him, and with bayonets wounded him in the right side. I was looking on. They were not armed otherwise. The members of the Mission were looking on from their high house. One regiment then suddenly went off for their arms, and the other regiment fetched the guns. They fired on the Residency, and would not be stopped. About 2 p.m. Lieutenant Hamilton charged out of the gateway, sword in hand, at the guns. He cut over two men, when a number fired at once, and shot him with some Guide sepoy who were with him, and cut them to pieces. The Afghans then ran in and commenced to plunder; others set fire to the building, and threw powder bags into the Residency. About 2 p.m. Sir L. Cavagnari, then on the roof, was shot in the right eye. I heard he had sent a note to the Amir by a Kizzilbash of the Chandof quarter.

By this time the Residency fell in, and many were buried in the ruins and others killed in the "hammam," near the Residency. A sowar of the Guides rushed out at the end, crying he was a Syud, and was spared. Don't know his name. He is in Kabul.

Two Sahibs were lying dead in the courtyard, and were cut to pieces. Sir L. Cavagnari's corpse was not found. I remained a week in Kabul in a mosque, hiding. The day after this the Amir and Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan went to Shahr-i-naw, where the mutinous regiments were camped. He told them they had done badly, and ruined him. They replied, they wished for a religious war, disliked Daud Shah, and begged Muhammad Jan Topchi Bashi to be made general; also Wali Muhammad Khan to be made commander-in-chief. This was done. On the 5th day the two regiments were sent towards the Kohi Daman to get in land revenue.

The road from Gandamak to here is safe. I was searched at Butkhak, and again at Tanga.

This statement is also trustworthy. All said here has been confirmed by others. Muhammad Jan has been made commander-in-chief, and is said by some to have been one of the leaders in the attack on the Embassy. He is also said to have been the author of the death of Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani.

Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan himself has taken away the three mutinous regiments to Kohistan, the object given out being to collect the revenue.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Commissioner.

Enclosure 15 in No. 32.

STATEMENT OF KHAIRULLA, SON OF GOLAB PATHAN, ANAKHEL, resident of YAR HUSSAIN.

Had a land suit. My son was in the Guides, and went with the Embassy escort to Kabul. I went after Sir L. Cavagnari, K.C.B., C.S.I. Passed four nights in Kabul with my son. On the morning of the 5th the outbreak arose, and I witnessed the result myself.

The Ardal Regiment had some words with General Daud Shah about their pay; the General wished to give them a month's pay, whilst the regiment demanded that of seven; the soldiers attacked the General with their bayonets, and struck him with stones and fists; the people rescued him. The regiment then moved towards the quarters of Sir Louis, which were at Azim Khan's place. The gates were locked, the soldiers broke the wall on the eastern side, entered, and commenced firing. Sir Louis told them to desist, and 12 months' pay would be given them. The men remained quiet for half an hour. The Khasadar Regiment with the city people then arrived, commenced firing. In this they were joined by all who were present. Major Cavagnari in a loud voice tried to stop them, but they would not heed; he himself was wounded by a shot in the forehead, and then sent a letter to the Amir by the hands of a Hindu, stating that he was at the point of death; if he could rescue the other officers, it would be a good thing for him.

No reply came to this. At last he (Major Cavagnari) ordered his men to fire, until his men were slain.

Sir Louis was placed on a cot and brought below. A short time after, the other officers and men were driven out, the building set on fire, and then the rioters killed the officers and their remaining companions.

A small portion of the day was left when all was over. My son, Hamzulla, was killed also. I was robbed of my property, and then let go. Two men, a resident of Zeyda, and the other of either Barikab or Kattakhat were allowed to go, as they said they were "Sayads," and I corroborated their account. I do not remember their names.

I heard in Kabul that Yakub Khan's mother was proceeding to Dakka, and that Yakub Khan had sent letters to Kandahar, Herat, Maimana, to fetch all troops there, and had summoned the country people for a "Ghaza." About 180 of the rioters were killed and 30 wounded. I saw the heads of the officers (3) and one of a Sikh native officer cut by the men of the "Ardal" Regiment and taken by the Amir's dewdi, and placed on a stone outside the Bala Hissar below a bridge, a public place where every one passed by. I saw these heads the day after the fight in the morning. Major Cavagnari's was not with theirs, as his body had been burnt in the fire. I did not hear the heads had been taken before the Amir, but imagine they must have been taken.

NOTE.

This old man feels very bitterly the murder of his son, the loss of his property, including Sir Louis Cavagnari's letter, and his own danger when in Kabul; therefore too much dependence cannot be placed upon his word. He, however, stoutly maintained that the heads of the British officers had been exposed upon a bridge, and I shall not be surprised if this is found to be correct. All natives would, as a rule, deny it.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Peshawur, 23rd September 1879. Commissioner.

Enclosure 16 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of FAKIR MUHAMMAD, syce of TAIMUR SOWAR, GUIDES, Lundikotal, 25th September 1879; also of Fazldin, dhobi of the Sowars Guides Escort, dated 25th September 1879.

FAKIR MUHAMMAD.—I went out grass cutting on the day of the attack on the Residency, and hearing the noise, and being told of what was happening, fled into the city of Kabul, where I found refuge with Ghulam Mohiyudin Hakim, with whom I have come down. I did not see anything that happened.

FAZLDIN.—On the morning in question I went out early from the Bala Hissar to wash clothes, and while doing so heard the firing on the Residency, and saw the beginning of the attack from where I stood. Shortly after the mob plundered me and seized the clothes I was washing, when I fled to the city of Kabul, where I found refuge in the Murad Khani quarter, and came down with Ghulam Mohiyudin the Hakim. Five days before the attack supplies for the Residency ceased to come in.

One sepoy of the escort said that there was some coolness between the Amir and the Envoy. This they said a few days before the attack took place.

Enclosure 17 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of GHULAM MOHIYUDIN, Hakim of Peshawur, MOHALLA RAWALAN, GUZAR SARASIA, Lundikotal, 25th September 1879.

I TRAVEL about as a Hakim, chiefly as an eye-doctor, and in the course of my travels went from Peshawur to Balkh about a year and a half ago. About two months ago I left Mazar-i-Sharif near Balkh to return via Kabul to Peshawur. I was present in Mazar-i-Sharif when Amir Sher Ali Khan died, and I saw the corpse myself and joined in the funeral procession. When I left Balkh and Turkestan, all was quiet there, and Ghulam Hyder Khan was Governor. I recollect hearing it said in the Chandol quarter in Kabul where I was living that the troops of the Amir said among themselves, "The escort of the 'Kafir' will not leave Kabul alive." That was the day before the attack. In the attack the town mob joined, about 340 of the assailants were killed by the Residency defenders. I did not see the fight. For about three days there was anarchy in Kabul, but the city was not plundered. The Amir's arsenal was looted. The Amir has little authority in Kabul; the troops are quite out of hand. Daud Shah is only slightly wounded.

The road from Kabul is open and safe. I brought the syce and dhobi down with me from Kabul.

Enclosure 18 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of HASSANGUL, of Gujarat, YUSUFZAI, Sepoy, No. 2 Co., Guide Corps, dated Lundikotal, 25th September 1879.

MEMORANDUM.

MULLAH AHMEDJI, in his statement taken on the 14th instant at Peshawur, mentioned having met a Guide Sepoy of Gujarat, Yusufzai, at Butkhak.

Hassan Gul.—About 8 a.m. I was outside the Residency, when I heard the cry “dam-i-charyar” (the Sunni cry) from the place where Daud Shah held his durbar, and saw a cloud of dust. Presently troops came running up from that direction towards the Residency. I came into the barracks and saw Hossein, Havildar, standing at the gateway. We shut it and they began to stone us from outside. Mr. Hamilton came out of the Residency to our barracks and told us not to fire but to stand behind the parapet on the roof. We did so, and made long holes in it; 20 sepoys remained on the barrack roof, and the rest, including myself, went into the Residency itself. Just then Syud Mir, sepoy, reported that they were plundering the horses. They then commenced to fire upon us, and we received orders to fire. Sir L. Cavagnari also fired from the roof, and firing grew hot. Sir Louis fired five shots. There were two shouldaries pitched in the courtyard of the Residency, one was full of miscellaneous things, and the other held ammunition and the treasure. The first shouldari stood close to the wall of the courtyard at the rear of the Residency, and the Afghans broke a hole into the wall there and commenced firing through it. I informed Mr. Jenkyns of it; he was in the Residency then, and he sent me, Mihrdil, Sepoy, and a Sikh to the place. We struck the shouldari in order to get at the men firing through the hole, and Mihrdil was shot through the arm. I led him into the Residency, and saw Lieutenant Hamilton and Mr. Jenkyns there. I was told there that Sir Louis was wounded. On passing the room where the wounded lay I looked through the open door and saw Sir Louis lying on his back, the knees drawn up, and Dr. Kelly sitting by his head. I asked Amaldin, Sir Louis’ Afridi orderly, what it was, and Amaldin pointed to his forehead. He said nothing. I could not see what Dr. Kelly was doing. Just then the news was brought that the Afghan has reached the roof by ladders, and Lieutenant Hamilton told us to fire from the staircase leading up to the roof. Karak Sing, Havildar, was shot there beside me, also Mehtab Sing, both mortally. Lieutenant Hamilton told us to charge on to the roof. Hossein, Havildar, and I replied that we were too few to clear the roof of the Afghans. There were seven of us. The guns had been brought up by the Afghans at this time to the gateway, and they were firing with them. Lieutenant Hamilton and Mr. Jenkyns then went down to the gateway; the Afghans had got into the building, and were setting fire to it and coming down the stairs. I was then in the building, and I and other sepoys got mixed up with the crowd; we were in plain clothes. Among the crowd was Tor Khan, Subadar in the Amir’s army. I was stripped, and Tor ordered me to be shot, but the others said, “He is a Mahomedan, spare him.” Then Tor told me to put a bundle of loot on my head and to walk out by a hole in the courtyard and come with him. He took me to his house where I stayed five days. I left on the sixth day and came along here with some Syuds of Kunar. I was searched at Tanga.

Cross-examined at Peshawur, 27th September 1879.

I don’t know about any syce being killed in the stable before we fired, but we could see one of the Sikh Mounted Guides lying in the stable by his horse with his head cut open and not dead, and one of the Amir’s soldiers dead beside him. He had been defending his horse, and it was not until they carried off the horses that we had permission to fire. The Orderly Regiment that came for its pay and began the mutiny was not as a rule, armed. All men had their bayonets and knives in their belts, and a few had their rifles, and shots were fired when the stone throwing began. It was not until other shots had been fired that Sir Louis Cavagnari himself fired four shots, killing four men.

There was great feeling against us in Kabul. The regiments in the Bala Hissar spoke of us all as infidels, and we were none of us, not even Mahamedans, upon speaking terms with them; we used to go in parties of four or five into the city armed, for shopping, but could not have gone safely alone, and the Sikh and Hindus never went into the city at all. They used to go out in parties of 10 or 12 to bathe and wash their clothes. The people of the city certainly abused us, and the Envoy and officers never went out of the Bala Hissar unless followed by a troop of about 40 of the Amir’s cavalry, beside the Guide Mounted Escort. I only saw the Envoy once in the garden walking alone, and then some of the Guides put on their uniforms and joined him. When we first reached Kabul the Envoy or the officers used to visit the Amir every day, but latterly the visits became much less frequent. When we first reached Kabul there was in the courtyard a guard of the Amir's troops, not the "Orderly" but the other regiments, and it was found that they took down the names of all people who came to visit the Envoy. When Sir Louis heard of this he made some excuse and got rid of the guard, saying it was not wanted. When I was in Tor Khan's house during the five days after the massacre of the Embassy, I heard that the day after the Amir had sent for all the native officers, brigadiers, &c., and said to them, "I am in your hands, you have taken all my property, and my family and wives and children are yours also; you can do what you like, and can make me a prisoner and hand me over to the British Government if you like," upon which the officers all said they would fight, and have "a religious war."

When Daud Shah was paying the troops their pay, they refused; he offered them only one month's pay and told them they were to go off the next day to Kohistan to get in the revenue. When they asked for more he told them to go and get it from Cavagnari Sahib. He was angry, and said this to annoy them. He was stoned and wounded in the side by a bayonet.

We were too few, and the Residency was too large for us to hold; they completely surrounded us.

The Amir's troops broke a hole in the wall so as to fire into the courtyard where the magazine was; against this wall were a number of tent poles, and through them the enemy could fire at us, whilst in returning the fire we only hit the tent poles. I was sent by Mr. Jenkyns to clear away the tent poles and the tent, which prevented us from getting a fair aim at the men who were breaking through the wall. In doing this Mehtab Sing who was with me was wounded in the arm, and I got splashed with his blood. I got him away and brought back his rifle. I pushed down all the poles and cut the tent down, then they made a hole as large as a doorway and fired through it. The officers cheered me on, calling out "Well done," "Well done." Tor Khan gave me afterwards to carry to his home, a double-barrelled rifle and a pea-rifle and some clothes, part of his plunder. A Subadar in the Amir's army ranks below a Jemadar, the reverse of our system.

We used not to complain to the Sahibs that we were abused in the streets and called Kafirs; we should have been ashamed; they would have said we were afraid; we sepoys used to talk together and say something of this kind would happen.

There were three regiments in the Bala Hissar, two Orderly regiments who also, when in uniform, wear the kilt and a third line regiment on the magazine.

It was the kilted, or Orderly Regiments, that began the outbreak and refused their pay. They had been ordered to Kohistan on the 4th. They had nothing to do with Herat. Some Herat regiments had come in perhaps 15 days previously, and they had threatened to attack the Embassy. So it was common bazaar report, and we were warned by the Sahibs not to go to the bazaar. Then a few days afterwards the Amir gave nearly all leave, only a few men in a company remained. They were two kos off in the new cantonments, and never joined in the attack at all.

There were 12 boxes of treasure. I hear we started with 21,000—one box was emptied, the rest full—all must have been plundered before the house fell. The room in which Sir L. Cavagnari was lying was full of men, Guides as well as the Amir's, all dead.

On the night of the 4th I went after dark with Guldin Mohmand of Sultanpur in Kunar, a servant of Hussain Ali Sayad, to see the bodies, which had been dragged out of the houses and thrown over the wall of the fort by the Amir's order on the 4th.

Most of them were stripped—not all—none of them had their heads cut off, but they were lying as they fell in a heap under the wall: officers and men all covered with dust and they had begun to decompose. They were all scanted (?) and most of them stripped where they were killed. (Khairulla says, he saw the heads exposed, but I think this is untrue). The Amir did send his son to the sepoys with the Koran on his head, and they took the Koran away and told him to go home. This is what I heard all the sepoys saying afterwards. The sepoys all said they would fight, but the officers one and all used to say; "You won't fight and can't resist, and the British force will come and Kabul is doomed."

I came by Butkhak, Barikao—Asmatulla Khan's country, and Lughman; troops and a mule battery can go the way I returned.

Enclosure 19 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of PIR MUHAMMAD, HALIMZAI, Resident of Kunar, dated the 27th September 1879.

I AM a servant of Sirdar Zulficar Khan and Sirdar Saleh Muhammad Khan who are in Lahore. They sent me to Kabul two months ago to solicit Major Cavagnari to get their lands released which had been confiscated by the late Amir Sher Ali Khan. I reached Kabul four days after the arrival of Major Cavagnari at that place, and submitted to the Amir the letter from the above-mentioned Sirdars (on the above subject). His Highness observed that he would make inquiry when he could go to Lahore for a meeting with the Viceroy.

The sister of these Sirdars who is married to Sirdar Ibrahim Khan, the brother of the Amir, received a similar reply from His Highness on inquiry. I was at Kabul when the Embassy was attacked at noon.

Sirdar Bahadur Ghulam Nakshband Khan was sitting with Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan in the latter's house in the Bala Hissar, when a noise was heard from the Duftar where the pay was being distributed to some regiments. The Sirdar Bahadur sent a man to bring information, the man returned quickly saying that he could not go farther as the regiments had mutinied, and were killing men. The Sirdar Bahadur went to the house of the Mustaufi, and I went to Deh-Afghanan to tell the men of the Sirdar Bahadur to conceal their property. From Deh-Afghanan I returned to the Bala Hissar to the house of Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan, and the son of the Amir, about eight years old, and Sirdar Muhammad Yahya Khan, with a copy of the Koran, went and prohibited the regiments from mutinying. The regiments were firing on the Residency, and would not obey the order of Yahya Khan and of the Amir's son.

One Orderly Regiment was standing by the gateway of the Amir's house, having made up their mind to kill him if he came out, but His Highness went into the harem. The son of the Amir and Sirdar Yahya Khan returned to the Amir when their entreaties failed. The two regiments who attacked the Residency were the Amir's "Orderly" Regiments, and consisted of men of various classes and sects. I have heard from all sources that when the pay was being distributed by Colonel Karim Khan, nephew of Arsala Khan, General Muhammad Jan Khan, Wardak, gave orders to use violence.

Three regiments were standing to receive their pay; they said that the Amir had given orders for three months' pay, but Colonel Karim Khan told them that only one month's pay had been ordered, and referred them to Major Cavagnari. In the meantime General Daud Shah came from the Amir and beat a sepoy with a stick, another sepoy asked him why he beat his comrade, and a captain hurt the General with his sword. The mutinous sepoys proceeded towards the Residency, were fired at, and 25 of them were killed; then the sepoys who were unarmed went into the arsenal and brought arms and attacked the Residency. They brought two guns and fired at the Residency and demolished the upper story, then they set fire to the gateway, and went into the Residency, and attacked the Embassy after 2 p.m.

After this the mutineers plundered the bazaar in the Bala Hissar and the Amir's arsenal and other things, but the treasury was spared. The General in the upper Bala Hissar allowed the mutineers to take arms from the arsenal and joined in the mutiny. The fire burnt out in six or seven days. The Amir gave an order that the bodies should be discovered by removing the earth over them. No bodies were discovered during my stay at Kabul, excepting that of the young Sahib, who rushed over the gun, by coming three times out of the gate, and who killed two mutineers, went back by the gate, and was wounded and fell.

Major Cavagnari was wounded first of all with a bullet, and on receipt of this information the Amir sent his son, but the mutineers would not obey his order. The Amir was coming out from his house, but Sirdar Muhammad Hashim Khan and Sirdar Shabbaz Khan prevented him, saying that he would be killed. The Amir observed that the outbreak would lead to his disgrace, that Major Cavagnari had been wounded, and that he would save other members of the Embassy and send them away.

Formerly a Guard of the "Shahi" Regiment was placed on the gate of the Residency, but Major Cavagnari dismissed it 20 days before the occurrence. Nothing was heard of intention to mutiny before the actual outbreak; the Herati regiments of course talked loudly and asked where Cavagnari was, and why he had come. The Amir disarmed them and they went to their homes.

I left Kabul shortly after the occurrence. One day before my departure the Amir had the agent of Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani, killed, and sent three Orderly Regiments to Kohistan with General Muhammad Jan Khan to remain in that province. The Amir began collecting men of the Herati Regiments and of other regiments to ask them if they would make the three Orderly Regiments prisoners. The next day the mutineers proceeded to the house of Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, but he came out with the Koran, read "the Kalama," and was spared. The Amir intended to collect some tribesmen and regiments to take their opinion how the massacre of the Embassy should be avenged. The three regiments who had mutinied were sent by the Amir to Turkestan to avoid further disturbance by them in Kabul. Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan was suspected by some people to have instigated the mutiny.

Enclosure 20 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of FATTEH MUHAMMAD, son of Muhammad Yar Tajak, Resident of Kohistan.
Taken on 30th September 1879.

I SERVED as a syce in the Guides Corps for 12 years and went to Kabul with Taimur, a sowar of the British Embassy. On the day of the massacre I and 24 other grass-cutters went towards the village of Bini Hissar at 6.30 a.m., with two sowars of the Amir, and two sowars and one duffadar of the Guides. At 12 o'clock a cry was heard and many people and some Bini Hissar villagers coming up with knives and sticks in their hands, they carried off our ponies, and plundered our things, and killed three or four men, sparing others who ran away. I hid myself in a maize crop, and at night came to the city, and remained two days in a shrine in the Murad khani quarter. From Kabul I returned to Peshawur via Jellalabad.

Enclosure 21 in No. 32.

STATEMENT of SAID MUHAMMAD, son of SAID MIRAN, age 50, taken at PESHAWUR, on 30th September 1879.

I HAVE served as a syce to Major Cavagnari, and was with him at Kabul. When Major Cavagnari went to visit the Amir I used to go with him to hold his horse outside the Durbar. His interview with the Amir generally lasted from half to one hour, but an interview held two days before the massacre took two hours, and I asked Ghulam Muhammad, orderly what was the reason of the long interview, and why did Major Cavagnari seem annoyed when he came out from the Durbar, and he told me that the Amir had refused to go to Turkestan and Herat, and that Major Cavagnari would go to Peshawur via Jellalabad. On the day of the occurrence I was sitting on a mound with some sepoys of the escort of the Residency, when a cry of "Ya Char Yar" by some regiments was heard from the direction of the Amir's Durbar. On inquiry from a Kabuli, we ascertained that some regiments had become disaffected because General Daud Shah had refused to pay their pay for more than one month, and that they had thrown stones at the General, and were coming towards the Residency. I and the sepoys went in, and the sepoys shut the door against the mutineers; the mutineers were unarmed; and they went to fetch arms while the armed regiment in the Bala Hissar who were guarding the arsenal came up and fired at the Residency. The city mob and some sepoys came into the stable and plundered the horses and other things. I had put two saddles and four swords in a room, and had closed the door and hidden myself there, but two mutineers broke the door and took away the saddles and swords, and inquired about treasury. I left the room, and finding that firing was going on, I concealed myself in an underground room until evening, and then I found that fire had been set to the Residency. I came secretly to Charikar, Nijrab, Tagab, Lughman, Jellalabad, and Peshawur. At Charikar I heard that three Infantry Regiments had been sent from Kabul towards Jellalabad, and that Abdul Karim Khan, Kohistani, had been killed by order of the Amir. The regiment which first mutinied on account of a dispute about their pay was an "Orderly" Regiment, and the regiment which joined the mutineers from the Bala Hissar wore black uniform.

MEMORANDUM.

THIS syce is an Afghan, and had been seven years in the service of Sir Louis Cavagnari.

(Signed) W. G. WATERFIELD, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Commissioner and Superintendent.

Enclosure 22 in No. 32.

Translation of Proclamation issued by the AMIR YAKUB KHAN to the Mohmand Tribe, dated 8th Shawal H. 1296 (25th September 1879).

It is hereby notified that whereas the old treaty engagements between the God-granted Government of Afghanistan and the Sublime British Government are still firm, and the same cordial friendship and concord (as before) still subsist between them; and whereas the troops of the latter Government have started only for the purpose of rendering aid and restoring order to the Government of His Highness the Amir Muhammad Yakub Khan, you should lend your friendly assistance in the best way you can to that Government, and should know that the foundation of friendship and concord (between the two Governments), which other Governments have acknowledged (lit. madé known) is firm, and that it has been proved to me to be sincere. It is therefore incumbent on you who are the well-wishers of the God-granted Government, to provide, to the best of your ability, the camp of the British Government with supplies and carriage, for which you will receive payment.

No one should interfere with, or oppose those, who belong to that camp, but you should restrain your hands, feet, and tongue from causing injury to their lives and property. Under any circumstances do not act contrary to the spirit of this Proclamation. Should you behave or act improperly towards the troops of the above-mentioned Government, you will certainly have to account for it.

Enclosure 23 in No. 32.

No. 15, dated Ali Khel, 26th September 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward in original, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General

i.—From His Highness the Amir of Kabul to Mustaufi Habibulla Khan and Wazir Shah Muhammad, dated 24th September 1879.

ii.—Ditto ditto forwarding letter from Muhammad Jan Khan.

iii.—From Muhammad Jan Khan to His Highness the Amir, dated 23rd September 1879.

iv.—From Sirdar Sher Ali Khan to His Highness the Amir, dated 16th September 1879.

in Council; the letters marginally noted, which were sent to me by the Mustaufi Habibulla Khan this morning after his departure from the camp.

Enclosure 24 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR to MUSTAUFI HABIBULLA KHAN and WAZIR SHAH, MUHAMMAD KHAN, dated 6th Shawal, 1296 H.=(23rd (24th?) September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Be it known to you that yesterday, Tuesday (sic) the fifth current (22nd September) I received a letter from Muhammad Jan Khan, the "Ghat Mashr" (General?) which I send herewith, in original, so that you may read it and know to what extent the seditious and ill-disposed persons excited and are instigating disturbances. The "Ghat Mashr" (General?) has placed a certain person in confinement. The latter confesses that so and so had sent him to the Kohistan camp to tell such and such things to the troops and the people. The man is in prison and will be kept there till you arrive here safely. When you come, and he repeats the same confession in your presence, he will, please God, receive his punishment.

I hope that through God's favour the friendship between me and the British Government will neither be interrupted nor diminished; that the basis of the treaty engagements between us will become stronger than before; and that the enemies and evil-wishers of the two Governments will suffer shame and disgrace and lose their credit.

Enclosure 25 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from GHAT' MASHR (General?) MUHAMMAD JAN KHAN, to the AMIR, dated the 5th Shawal=(22nd (23rd?) September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—I beg to inform your Highness that yesterday Monday (sic) the 4th current*, a man in disguise and in appearance a beggar
 * 21st September 1879. entered my camp. By the favour of your Highness' fortune his treacherous and spy-like manner came to my notice. I called him and examined him. But he endeavoured, as much as he could, to avoid mentioning the object (of his visit) and talked nonsense. At last I prevailed upon him, partly by threats, and partly by coaxing, to state that Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan had sent him to spread a report in my camp that the Amir has invited the English of his own accord, and that he is going to make his country over to them, and to transplant the people of Kohistan to Turkestan, as well as to ascertain how the "Ghat Mashr" (General) is treating the officers, and whether he and they are united or not. Having ascertained the above, I have sent him to your Highness with Muhammad Aslam Khan, who will represent the whole circumstance from the beginning to the end.

I have applied to your Highness for some sowars as well as for a physician and a druggist. Both the sowars and the physician are required.

Enclosure 26 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from the AMIR, to the MUSTAUFU and WAZIR SHAH MUHAMMAD, dated 6th Shawal, 1296 H.=(23rd September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Your letters dated 5 P.M., Monday, the 4th Shawal (21st September) have reached me this morning, Wednesday the 6th
 * 23rd September 1879. idem*. I have learnt (from them) the account of the honourable reception accorded to you by the officers of the illustrious British Government as well as of your interview with General Roberts. It is sincerely hoped that through the favour of God the hearts of the representatives of the illustrious Government will be entirely satisfied with and assured of my sincerity and honesty, and that whatever may lead to the welfare of the two Governments and increase their mutual friendship, will be planned and arranged by you and the General, and that the matter will be settled according to our wish and desire:

Enclosure 27 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN, Governor of Kandahar, to the AMIR, dated the 27th Ramazan=(15th (16th?) September 1879).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—Your Highness' sublime letter of the 20th Ramzan (8th September) has reached me and enhanced my honour, and as it contained the news of your Highness' good health I rendered thanks to God.

The state of affairs (here) is that before the news of the disturbances in Kabul was known here, I received a letter from my brother Sirdar Muhammad Yusuf Khan bitterly complaining of the people of Pusht Rud, and stating that he considers it extremely difficult to deal with those ignorant people. As the report of the mutiny of the Kabul troops had not then been verified and was only a rumour I did not reply to him. Although he had heard from your Highness, yet when I received your Highness' royal letter, I addressed him two letters, one in the ordinary form containing the news of my welfare, and another confidentially giving an account of the affairs in Kabul. The former letter, in order to furnish him with an excuse (to leave Pusht Rud) was written to the following effect: "As Major St. John is leaving for Herat and His Highness the Amir has sent strict orders to accord him an honourable reception (on the road), you should come to Girishk to receive him and appoint the Khawanin (officials) to collect the revenue." In the other letter I wrote to him to the effect that "If you think you can deal (with the people) and remain (at the place), well and good, and should you apprehend any danger and think you cannot remain there, show the other letter to the people and come to Girishk."

Yesterday I received another letter from my brother's servant to the effect that "the people of Pusht Rud having heard of the disturbances in Kabul are about to revolt, and as I noticed the improper attitude of those people, I have by a thousand devices

"succeeded in getting to Sirhind to the Kila of Najib-ullah Khan, Ghilzai, who is a faithful servant of His Highness (the Amir). Girishk is too far. I cannot go anywhere else, and I am unable to live here with my men and horses. I am in great straits."

Having received such an account from my brother, I sent Taj Muhammad Khan and Sahib Khan, Ghilzai, yesterday, Sunday the 26th Ramazan (14th September) to bring him from Kila Najib-ullah Khan. The two above-named persons left yesterday.

Nothing else worthy of notice has taken place. Since it was necessary to acquaint your Highness with my brother's state I have done so. Further, rest assured in every respect about this place. Things are going just as I represented before.

Enclosure 28 in No. 32.

No. 250, dated Kandahar, September 29, 1879.

From MAJOR M. PROTHEROE, Extra Political Officer, Kandahar, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, Simla.

I HAVE been desired by the Lieutenant-General Commanding to forward for your information translations of two letters received on the 27th instant by Sirdar Sher Ali Khan from Sirdars Muhammad Hassan Khan and Roshundil Khan, now at Kabul.

2. The letters are somewhat ambiguous, but Sirdar Sher Ali Khan's interpretations have been added in footnotes.

Enclosure 29 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from MUHAMMAD HASSAN KHAN to SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN.

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—I arrived at Kabul on the 5th of September, and waited on the Amir, who told me that he had made proper arrangements (for his government), though contrary to the wishes of the wise men who have brought his government to grief (meaning Mustaufi Habibulla and Daud Shah Khan). It now remained to be seen what would be the result. The Amir also narrated to me the particulars of the fight at the Residency. I replied to the Amir that it was God's will, and he may bring good out of it. My brother Roshundil has sent to you by Kasid "Poyendah" an account of the fight between Sir L. Cavagnari's escort and the mutineers. You who are the wisest men in the world well know that the action of these regiments (the mutineers) emanated from their chiefs. The Amir has received news from the English that the Treaty which had been made is still in force, and that the Cavagnari disaster will not interfere with it, as such incidents have previously occurred in other governments. The English desire to add two articles to the Treaty to strengthen it, and have requested him (the Amir) to send a confidential man with full powers. His Highness accordingly sent Mustaufi Habibulla and Shah Muhammad Khan, who started on the 1st Shawal for the English camp. English troops have passed the Shuturgardan, and halted. We are anxious to know what the two articles are. (The rest of the letter refers to the writer's private affairs.)

[Sher Ali Khan states that the "proper arrangements" referred to in this letter were an intention expressed by the Amir to his Treasurer, Lall Khan, to appoint Sirdar Sher Ali Khan as chief of the administration of Afghanistan, an intention which was subsequently set aside through the intrigues of Daud Shah and Mustaufi Habibulla, and Sirdar Sher Ali Khan was sent to Kandahar.]

Enclosure 30 in No. 32.

Translation of a Letter from ROSHUNDIL KHAN to SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN (without date).

AFTER COMPLIMENTS.—I acknowledge receipt of your letter on the 3rd Shawal (19th September). I have sent you an account of the murder of Cavagnari and of the talk here by the Kasid whom you sent. I send you some more news. There are five* persons belonging to the army who are the instigators of this mutiny. Of course they are known to you, but they could not control the mutiny after it had once begun. The cause of the mutiny was as follows : Ten days before this occurrence the Naibs through Sirdar Yahya Khan claimed the arrears of the accounts. The Amir agreed to the amount of their claims ; the Naibs told the Amir he had been cheated out of 15 or 20 lakhs in the accounts of the army alone. The Amir acted on this statement, and then the mutiny broke out. * *

* Probably means "a few."

The Amir has discharged two cavalry regiments, and has no confidence in his troops, and his army does not obey him. The English have no ill-feeling towards the Amir. * * *

[Sirdar Sher Ali Khan states that the five persons herein referred to who were the instigators of the mutiny are Daud Shah Khan and his adherents. The meaning of the passage regarding the Naibs, &c., is that Daud Shah Khan and the Mustaufi were accused by the Naibs of having misappropriated some 15 or 20 lakhs, and to avert an inquiry which the Amir intended to make, got up the disturbance which they were subsequently unable to control.]

(Signed) M. PROTHEROE, Major,
Extra Political Officer.

No. 33.

Telegram from SECRETARY OF STATE, 22nd October 1879, to VICEROY. (Extract.)

PROCLAMATION, which must now be issued by General Roberts, should leave the future for future consideration, but you may assert present military supremacy of the British Government to this effect :—

“ I, General Roberts, on behalf of the British Government, hereby proclaim that the Amir, having by his own freewill abdicated, has left Afghanistan without a Government. In consequence of the shameful outrage upon its Envoy and suite, the British Government has been compelled to occupy by force of arms Kabul, the capital, and to take military possession of other parts of Afghanistan.

“ The British Government now commands that all Afghan authorities, Chiefs, and Sirdars, do continue their functions in maintaining order, referring to me whenever necessary.

“ The British Government desire that the people shall be treated with justice and benevolence, and that their religious feelings and customs be respected.

“ The services of such Sirdars and Chiefs as assist in preserving order will be duly recognised, but all disturbers of the peace and persons concerned in attacks upon the British authority will meet with condign punishment.

“ The British Government, after consultation with the principal Sirdars, tribal Chiefs, and others representing the interests and wishes of the various provinces and cities, will declare its will as to the future permanent arrangements to be made for the good government of the people.”

No. 34.

No. 224 of 1879 (Extract).

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Hon. VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, October 23, 1879.

WE have the honour to submit a summary of the intelligence received during the past week regarding the state of affairs in Afghanistan, and the progress of our military operations in that country.

2. On the 13th October General Roberts telegraphed that early on the preceding morning the Amir Yakub Khan came on foot to his tent, with two attendants, and that His Highness had declared his resolution to resign the government of Afghanistan. His Highness was treated with great courtesy by General Roberts, who begged him to think over the matter ; but at a second interview, a few hours later, the Amir said that his determination was unchanged, and General Roberts has since reported that he believes it to be irrevocable. This important and unexpected declaration has been communicated to your Lordship for the information and orders of Her Majesty's Government; and General Roberts was at once desired to report further upon the circumstances in which the resignation, as soon as it is publicly known, will have placed him, and upon the various and complicated political considerations involved.

3. General Roberts entered the Bala Hissar on the 12th October. The Amir did not accompany him, but Sirdar Musa Khan, the eldest son of the Amir, and other principal Sirdars were in attendance; and special care was taken that the proceedings upon formal occupation of the capital and its fortress should be impressive. After reaching the Amir's garden in the Bala Hissar, General Roberts issued the proclamation, which will be found among the enclosures to this despatch. It notified to the inhabitants of Kabul the penalties which would be inflicted on the city for participation in the massacre of the British Embassy, the arrangements for repression of disorder, the restrictions as to bearing arms, which would be enforced, and the rewards which would be given for the surrender of guilty persons. General Roberts has found it necessary to detain in safe custody Mustaufi Habibulla, Wazir Shah Muhammad, Yahya Khan, and Zacharia Khan, pending a detailed inquiry into the circumstances of the attack on the Embassy. The Amir Yakub Khan is provided with quarters in the British camp on the Siah Sang hill, outside the Bala Hissar. On the 13th instant the troops marched through the city. There was no kind of opposition, and the demeanour of the inhabitants was respectful. Brigadier-General Hills has been appointed Governor of the city and surrounding district; and martial law has been proclaimed within a radius of 10 miles from the walls. The intelligence since received from Kabul is scanty, owing to interruption of communications; but we enclose a telegram reporting that explosions, causing, we regret to say, some loss of life, have taken place in the Bala Hissar; though the fire, of which the origin is not explained, was extinguished in time to save the principal magazine.

4. The tribes in the vicinity of Ali Khel and the Shuturguridan had been gathering for some time past for a combined attack upon the British posts beyond Ali Khel; and their hostile demonstrations have kept our troops continually occupied during the past week. They destroyed a portion of the telegraph line, and for some days the communications of Ali Khel with the Shuturguridan and Kabul were interrupted. A party threatened the Sirkai Kotal post, and a British detachment was consequently sent in that direction from the Shuturguridan, when the enemy delivered a very bold and obstinate attack upon the camp at the Shuturguridan, charging up to the British guns. They were driven back after five hours' severe fighting, having lost and killed and wounded some 200 men, and leaving two standards in our possession. On receiving news which convinced them that Kabul was actually in the possession of British troops, the tribes began to disperse; and on the 20th General Hugh Gough arrived at Shuturguridan from Kabul, when Colonel Money's position was completely disengaged. A successful demonstration from Kurram along the Chakmani valley dispersed the Chakmanis, Mangals, and Jajis who had assembled and threatened Ali Khel.

5. On the 17th October the advanced guard of the Khyber Column had reached Rozabad between Jellalabad and Gandamak. As soon as communications with General Roberts have been completely established by the Khyber route, the necessary measures will be taken to abandon the line by Ali Khel and the Shuturguridan Pass, which will be no longer required, and would be difficult to hold during the winter.

6. The situation at Kandahar remains unaltered. The country is perfectly tranquil; the Sirdar Sher Ali Khan continues to co-operate unreservedly with General Stewart in maintaining order throughout the province; and the adjacent districts of Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Zamindawar have now been brought under the central authority at Kandahar.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 14th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Bala Hissar, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

[13th October (?)]. Early yesterday morning, Amir walked to my camp, accompanied by only two attendants, and expressed his determination to resign Amirship. He said he had intended doing so before going to Kushi, but had allowed himself to be over-persuaded. He was in very low spirits; said his life had been a miserable one; that he would rather be a grasscutter in the English Camp than Ruler of Afghanistan, and begged he might live in this camp until he could be sent to India, or London, or wherever Viceroy might desire to send him. I placed a tent at his disposal; ordered breakfast to be prepared for him; and begged him to think over the matter for two or three hours; and said that I would see him at 10 o'clock, the time appointed the previous evening for His Highness to come to my camp and accompany me to the Bala Hissar. The Amir knew nothing of the proposed proclamation, and was quite ignorant of any intentions towards the Mustaufi, the Wazir, Yahya Khan and his brother.

At 10, I had a second interview with the Amir, who stated that he had quite decided to give up the throne of Kabul; that he could not possibly accompany me to the Bala Hissar; but that he would send his eldest son; and all his Ministers would be in attendance. I again pointed out the serious step His Highness was taking; but finding his mind (?) was made up, I said I would telegraph to the Viceroy for instructions; that of course he could not be forced to remain on as Amir against his will; but that I should ask him to retain the title until I could receive a reply to this telegram.

The eldest son accompanied me to the Bala Hissar. The programme as telegraphed yesterday was strictly carried out, and the ceremony was most impressive. After reading out the proclamation, a copy of which I am telegraphing to you to-day, I dismissed all the Sirdars, and native gentlemen, except the Mustaufi, the Wazir, Yahya Khan, and Zacharia Khan. I told these four that it was necessary to detain them, until the circumstances connected with the attack on the Embassy had been thoroughly inquired into.

The Proclamation is being translated into Persian, and will be widely circulated at noon to-day. The troops will march through the city; certain positions will be held by guards (there is only one gate); and General Hills will take over military control as Governor, assisted by Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan.

Enclosure 2 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 14th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Shuturguridan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Bala Hissar, Kabul, 13th October. Following is copy of the Proclamation I issued yesterday on taking possession of Bala Hissar:—

In my Proclamation of the 3rd October, Shawal, dated, Zarghun Shahr, I informed the people of Kabul that a British army was advancing to take possession of the city, and I warned them against offering any resistance to the entry of the troops and the authority of His Highness the Amir: that warning has been disregarded. The force under my command has now reached Kabul and occupied the Bala Hissar; but its advance has been pertinaciously opposed, and the inhabitants of the city have taken a conspicuous part in the opposition offered. They have, therefore, become rebels against the Amir, and have added to the guilt already incurred by them in abetting the murder of the British Envoy and his companions. For the treacherous and cowardly crime which has brought indelible disgrace upon the Afghan people, it would be but a just and fitting reward, for such misconduct, if the city of Kabul were now totally destroyed and its very name blotted out. But the great British Government ever desires to temper justice with mercy; and I now announce to the inhabitants of Kabul that the full retribution for their offence will not be exacted, and that the city will be spared. Nevertheless, it is necessary that they should not escape all penalty, and further that the punishment inflicted should be such as will be felt and remembered. Therefore, such portions of the city buildings as now interfere with the proper military occupation of the Bala Hissar, and the safety and comfort of the British troops to be quartered in it, will be at once levelled with the ground, and, further, a heavy fine, the amount of which will be notified hereafter, will be imposed upon the inhabitants of Kabul, to be paid according to their several capacities. I further give notice to all that, in order to provide for the restoration and maintenance of order, the city of Cabul and the surrounding country, to a distance of 10 miles, are placed under martial law. With the consent of His Highness the Amir, a Military Governor of Kabul will be appointed to administer justice and punish with a strong hand all evil-doers. The inhabitants of Kabul and neighbouring villages are hereby warned to submit to his authority. This punishment inflicted upon the whole city will not, of course, absolve from further penalties those whose individual guilt may be hereafter proved. A full and searching inquiry into the circumstances of the late outbreak will be held; and all persons connected with, or bearing a part in it, will be dealt with according to their deserts. With the view of providing effectually for the prevention of crime and disorder and the safety of all well-disposed persons in Kabul, it is hereby notified that for the future the carrying of dangerous weapons, whether swords, knives, or firearms, within the streets, or within a distance of five miles from the city gates, is forbidden. After a week from the date of this Proclamation, any person found armed within those limits will be liable to the penalty of death. Persons having in their possession any articles whatsoever which formerly belonged to members of the British Embassy are required to bring them forthwith to the British Camp. Anyone neglecting this warning will, if found hereafter in possession of any such articles, be subjected to severest penalties. Further, all persons who may have in their possession any firearms or ammunition formerly issued to or seized by the Afghan troops, are required to produce them. For every country-made rifle whether breech or muzzle-loading, the sum of Rupees 3 will be given on delivery, and for every rifle of European manufacture, Rupees 5. Anyone found hereafter in possession of any such weapons will be severely punished. Finally, I notify that I will give a reward of Rupees 50 for the surrender of any person, whether soldier or civilian, concerned in the attack on the British Embassy, or such information as may lead directly to his capture. A similar sum will be given in the case of any person who may have fought against the British troops since the 3rd September, Shawal, last, and therefore become a rebel against His Highness the Amir. If any such person so surrendered or captured be a captain or subaltern officer of the Afghan Army, the reward will be increased to Rupees 75, and if a field officer to Rupees 120.

Enclosure 3 in No. 34.

Telegram dated 14th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 13th October. Bala Hissar was occupied yesterday; very impressive sight. Amir pleaded indisposition. His eldest son accompanied me, and principal Sirdars were summoned to hear proclamation read. 67th Foot and 5th Goorkhas now occupy Lower and Upper Bala Hissar respectively. To-day troops march through city. Guards will be placed at all important points. There is only one gate. General Hills takes over office of Military Governor, assisted by Nawab Gholam Hussan Khan.

Three regiments, with 12 guns, left Ghazni a few days ago to join the Afghan troops fighting against us here; meeting the dispersed Kabul troops they fled, leaving the guns. I have sent regiment of cavalry to bring them in.

Eighty-five guns, mortars, and howitzers were found in Bala Hissar, making a total of upwards of 200 guns in our possession. Vast quantity of powder, accoutrements, arms, saddlery, musical instruments, &c., also found. Snider cartridges have apparently been made locally in great numbers. Wounded doing well.

Enclosure 4 in No. 34.

Telegram dated 16th October 1879.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Finding that Colonel Money has not communicated details of attack on Shuturgardan and Sirkai Kotal on 14th, I now report them. At 9 p.m., 13th, Colonel Money heard wire was cut and enemy intended attacking Sirkai Kotal post at 7 a.m., 14th Despatched wing 21st and two guns under Major Collis to patrol road, at 8 a.m., heavy firing heard, and information given that 2,000 enemy attacked post and were engaged with Major Collis. At same time enemy advanced in force on camp from south. Major Collis was reinforced by two companies. A feint was made with a view of drawing troops from camp and real attack made on camp by 2,000 enemy desperately enough, twice charging up to guns. A decisive bayonet charge was made, and enemy fled leaving 40 dead and two standards. They were pursued for two miles. Enemy must have lost 200 killed and wounded. Our loss, Captain Waterfield severely wounded, two killed and 14 wounded.

Enclosure 5 in No. 34.

Telegram dated 17th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

THE sound of guns was heard yesterday afternoon in direction of Shuturguridan; has proved by intelligence received this morning to have been at Sirkai Kotal, where numbers of enemy still said to be collected on the road, especially between Karatiga and Sirkai Kotal.

There has been considerable destruction of line in that locality, both posts and wire. It has also been cut in three places between this and Karatiga, and also quite close to camp last night. In present insecure state of upper part of road, and the unsatisfactory attitude of the Jajis, I have considered it advisable to suspend further repairs here just now, as it entails constant employment of strong escorts which our numbers do not allow of. Meanwhile I am hourly expecting return of the Jaji Maliks from Kabul, which will no doubt have a quieting effect, for people are not yet reassured of their safety, false reports having been sedulously circulated as to their death or detention.

Received letter General Roberts yesterday, date 13th; says in a few days will be time to give up Shuturguridan communications and open it by Jellalabad, this being arranged to take place very shortly, and saving in time between Shuturguridan and Ali Khel being small. It appears to me, especially as we are unable to patrol road in sufficient strength and frequently, that wisest course at present is to limit telegraphic communication to Ali Khel. General Roberts has proposed to take on 3rd Sikhs and the British or No. 1 Mountain Battery, also 9th Lancers; but 1-8 Royal Artillery and 9th are engaged under General Tytler, now at Balesh Khel. If not sent on at once may be late.

Enclosure 6 in No. 34.

Telegram dated 19th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

LETTER just received from Colonel Money, dated to-day, says been surrounded by large force enemy since 15th. Column under General Gough to reach Kushi (?) to-day. General Roberts' orders were to send 3rd Sikhs and mountain guns to Kabul and return 21st here to reinforce, but if impossible to open Ali Khel road, the whole force to go on to Kabul. General Gough takes up carriage for all.

Enclosure 7 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 15th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 14th October. Infantry and cavalry marched through city yesterday. Streets were crowded. People respectful, and did not appear sullen. Three cases of cholera occurred yesterday—one in 67th, one in 92nd, and one 72nd; first two fatal. All in camp on Siah Sung. Water supply is most impure. Any amount of fruit is to be had. Cavalry found 12 guns from Ghazni abandoned 28 miles from this; six nine-pounders, six mountain, elephants were sent this morning to bring them in. Snow fell on Hindu Kush range yesterday. All well.

Enclosure 8 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

JAJI Maliks returned from interview with enemy, whom they have convinced of fall of Kabul, and inutility of fighting; they are dispersing. Letters from Shuturguridan just received, dated 19th, reporting arrival of 5th Punjab Cavalry, 5th Punjab Infantry, and four mountain guns at Kushi yesterday under General Gough to advance on Shuturguridan to-day. Two guns and two companies 5th Punjab Infantry had occupied Sirkai Kotal. Enemy dispersing; their position having been freely shelled yesterday, and sharpshooters (having) driven back scouting parties with great success. I hope to hear more to-morrow. Steps taken to keep Karatiga road open to pass on daks as well as officers and details waiting here to join regiments at Kabul. Much will depend, however, on the news I receive to-morrow.

Enclosure 9 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Basawul, to VICEROY, and to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 17th October.—Portion of the magazine in upper Bala Hissar blew up soon after noon yesterday, and constant explosions have occurred since. Nothing seems to be left but the large powder magazine, which is said to contain about 250,000 pounds. All small arms, ammunition, and other munitions of war collected by Sher Ali must have been destroyed. Captain Shafto, with two or three Khalassies, are the only people known to have been inside the enclosure at the time. They, with Goorkha guard at gate, and small party of Goorkhas, including the Subadar-Major, who were sitting near, have, I fear, been blown up. Altogether about 20 lives lost. A soldier signaller, 67th Foot, was killed in the garden below by beam falling on him. 67th and Goorkhas were moved out of Bala Hissar at once, and are now encamped with rest of force on Siah Sang range. There is no reason to suppose explosion occurred, except by accident; powder and ammunition were lying all over the place. Every precaution was taken, gate shut, guard placed, and no one admitted except on business. Endeavours are now being made to check progress of fire and save large magazine, the blowing up of which would doubtless cause considerable damage to life and property in city.

General Hugh Gough, with 5th Punjab Cavalry, 5th Punjab Infantry, and four mountain guns, leaves this to-day for Kushi to open communication, and if necessary, reinforce Shuturguridan, which was threatened with another attack yesterday. Communication between Ali Khel and Shuturguridan is interrupted, and there are rumours that Ali Khel was attacked on 13th.

I am sending letter and telegrams by Jellalabad. Two cases of cholera yesterday, one in 72nd, one in 92nd; neither fatal.

Enclosure 10 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

CAMP threatened about noon to-day by parties of enemy supposed to be preceding main body. Cavalry detachments sent out to watch them; shots exchanged. Just at this time the Jaji and Turi Maliks arrived from Kabul, having accompanied General Gough's column as far as Dobandi, and thence taken the Hazro Ghogiza route to this, avoiding Shuturguridan. Gough was to reach Shuturguridan last night or this morning; and enemy was reported to be dispersing. The Jaji Malliks, offering immediately on arrival to interview and disperse the enemy here by acquainting them with true state of affairs at Kabul, went off with this object. Result will be reported when known.

Enclosure 11 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 16th October.—Country quiet. Supplies coming in fairly. Bala Hissar and Sherpur Cantonment being cleared and prepared for occupation by our troops. Wounded doing well. Troops healthy. Post still very irregular, owing to internal feuds amongst Ghilzais, each small section wishing to have its own Chief acknowledged. Padshah Khan's authority is limited. Latest date from Simla, 3rd October; by telegraph 12th. All well.

Enclosure 12 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY.

News by spies from Shuturguridan that besieging force, hearing of approach of two regiments our cavalry from Kabul, and being short of food, have begun to disperse. The enemy still continues to collect in our vicinity, chiefly Chakmanies, our own subjects, and Mangals. I hope in a few days to be able to punish them, and also the Chakmanies themselves, from Kurram direction. In order to make our communications safe, I have asked General Tytler to have two guns, 1—8 R. A., and a Company 86th at Thull. This will bring up strength of Thull to 1,255 cavalry, and infantry with two guns. The road posts are also very strong. I intend to send 1—2 battery, C-4 from Kotal to Kurram on relief by two guns, 1—8 R. A., which will be more useful there. The other two guns, 1—8 R. A., will come here with such portions of 85th, 9th Lancers (as) may be advisable according to circumstances. The cavalry pursuit on 14th had a great effect.

Enclosure 13 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 21st October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

LETTER from General Gough, Shuturguridan, dated 20th. He reached that day without opposition, the enemy having completely dispersed. He took up six companies, 5th Punjab Infantry, and four mountain guns.

To-day he intended sending 21st Punjab Infantry to Kushi with stores; carriage to return for more, himself remaining on Shuturguridan, and awaiting intimation from me as to possibility of opening road; to which I replied at once that I am only awaiting arrival of 4th Punjab Infantry, expected in a day or two, to forward it and details, the former returning, the latter proceeding, in accordance with General Roberts' original programme. I have suggested to Gough that the 21st might return from Kushi and come back with 5th.

The demonstration ordered to be made from Kurram up Chakmani Valley was carried out, and had the desired effect. The news of the approach of the troops spread rapidly to this neighbourhood, and the Chakmanis with Mangals thus immediately dispersed, the Ahmed and Hassan Khels Jajis alone wavering for a while, though they also have now gone.

Our left picket was fired on last night, and nearly half a mile of wire cut and carried away close to Ali Khel, the Maliks of which have been punished.

General Gough begs me to add all well.

Enclosure 14 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 15th October 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Lundikotal, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

General Gough holds Jellalabad with Hazara Battery, four guns C.-3 Artillery, five troops Bengal Cavalry, 9th Foot, and wing 24th Native Infantry. All quiet along line. Jellalabad Governor professes great readiness assist with supplies and transport, but thinks latter difficult.

Enclosure 15 in No. 34.

Telegram, No. A.-917, dated 19th October 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar.

You can place Kelat-i-Ghilzai and subordinate districts under Kandahar authority and control administration, especially revenue collections.

Enclosure 16 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 19th October 1879. (Extract.)

From SIR D. STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR reports to-day that travellers have brought news from Kabul, dated 7th instant, to the effect that, after the massacre, Mustaufi, Daud Shah, some Ghilzai Chiefs, and mutinous regiments met in garden of Bala Hissar, and swore on Koran to resist British advance. Amir was present, and also took the oath, but it is believed under compulsion.

Sirdar proposes to at once issue proclamation declaring his allegiance to British Government, and separating from Amir; but this might be premature.

Enclosure 17 in No. 34.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

ST. JOHN reports news from Kabul that Muhammad Ibrahim Khan, the Amir's brother, who has been under arrest, tried to escape from Kabul in a woman's clothes, but was caught and imprisoned (by?) Nazar Muhammad Khan, the late Amir's brother, who was Acting Governor.

The Governor of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, Muhammad Tahir Khan, has applied for permission to return to Kabul; and, as he is of no use, his resignation has been accepted; and, with reference to your telegram of yesterday, I hope to be able to arrange for the Government of Kelat under a Ghilzai Chief subordinate to Kandahar.

Muhammad Yusaf Khan has resigned Governorship of Pusht-i-Rud. Arrangements will now be made for the Government of this province from Kandahar.

Enclosure 18 in No. 34.

No. 1,049 C; dated Simla, 16th October 1879.

From LEPEL GRIFFIN, Esq., Secretary to Government, Punjab, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B.,
Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I AM desired to submit, for the information of the Government of India, translations of letters dated the 29th September and 1st October, from the Governor of Jellalabad to the address of the Commissioner of Peshawur and the Political Officer, Khyber.

Enclosure 19 in No. 34.

Translation of Letter dated 11th Shawal (29th September 1879) from SIRDAR MUHAMMAD HASSAN KHAN, Governor of Jellalabad, to COMMISSIONER and SUPERINTENDENT, Peshawur.—Received by Post on 3rd October 1879.

AFTER TITLES AND COMPLIMENTS.—I have received by hand of a Hindu of Sourji ten copies of the declaration in Persian and Pushtu, and two letters from you and have understood them. You write that British troops are about to advance via Dakka. As I have received no instructions from the Amir regarding the advance of British troops I must be excused (meaning I cannot allow it). Should I receive information from the Amir in this matter well and good, otherwise the advance of troops viâ Dakka without the permission of the Amir will not be free from resistance and annoyance, because the tribesmen of Afghanistan are headstrong and disobedient and uncontrollable, and I fear lest by the advance of British troops disturbances will be raised and some misconduct by these tribes may take place which may tend to my disgrace and to your anger. It is necessary that the advance be postponed until I receive instructions from the Amir. I will let you know my orders, and it will look better if the troops only advance then.

Enclosure 20 in No. 34.

Translation of Letter dated 13 Shawal (1st October 1879) from SIRDAR MUHAMMAD HASSAN KHAN, Governor of Jellalabad, to CAPTAIN WARBURTON, Political Officer, Khyber.

To-day the Wednesday I have received instructions from His Highness the Amir that the friendship existing between the British Government and the Amir still firmly exists, and that he has invited British troops of his own accord. I therefore write to you, my kind friend, that as I had not hitherto received any instructions from the Amir, excuse me if any fault has been found in your reception. Now that I have received orders from the Amir, I have written to my subordinates to receive British troops with every honour, and I will myself come to Sherpur on Friday the day after to-morrow to wait on the Sahib Bahadur (meaning the General Commanding).

Enclosure 21 in No. 34.

No. 2 P., dated Camp Lundikotal, 10th October 1879.

From Major-General BRIGHT, C.B., Commanding, Jellalabad Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit, for information, English version of Persian letter this day addressed by me to the Governor of Jellalabad, informing him of arrival here of my head-quarters, thanking him for the courtesy and assistance shown by him, so far, to the British forces, and urging him to continue exertions for the facilitating of our advance.

Enclosure 22 in No. 34.

English version of Persian Letter, addressed from Lundikotal, by MAJOR-GENERAL BRIGHT, C.B., to MUHAMMAD HASSAN KHAN, Sahib, Governor of Jellalabad, under date October 10th, 1879.

You are aware that a British army is again advancing by the Khyber route upon Kaḥul for the purpose of supporting the Amir's authority over his rebellious troops. My head-quarters reached this place yesterday, and I take an early opportunity of informing you under my own signature of the satisfaction with which I have from time to time received accounts of the friendly spirit which you have evinced, and the assistance you have afforded, to the advanced portions of the force under my command. The friendly feelings towards the British Government which have prompted you to act in this manner are on my part cordially reciprocated, and I look forward with pleasure to a personal meeting with you at Jellalabad on the head-quarters arriving there. In the meantime further instructions should be issued from time to time to all over whom your influence extends that exertions should be used in order to supply the British camps and forces with provisions and transport, the owners of which will, according to the invariable custom of British armies, receive full prices, while at the same time meriting the favour at once of the British Government and of yourself and other constituted authorities of Afghanistan.

No. 35.

No. 226 of 1879.—(Extract.)

Government of India, Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, October 30, 1879.

WE submit, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, the following summary of the intelligence received during the past week regarding affairs in Afghanistan and the progress of military operations in that country.

2. We enclose copy of a letter, dated 16th* October, from Sir Frederick Roberts,

* (Received 28th October.)

reporting the measures which he has taken in execution of the instructions sent to him by the Government of India on the 29th September last, for his guidance on his arrival at Kabul. General Roberts also describes in this letter the general situation of affairs and the state of parties at the capital. It will be seen that the Amir appears to have retired altogether from participation in affairs, and that Sir Frederick Roberts considers him much broken in spirits and unfit to resume his former position or responsibilities.

3. We also enclose copy of a proclamation which General Sir Frederick Roberts has been directed to issue at Kabul; in consequence of the Amir Yakub Khan's abdication of his government of Afghanistan.† The proclamation was transmitted by telegram to General Roberts on the 23rd October, with orders to issue it immediately; and a copy was also sent to General Sir Donald Stewart at Kandahar. We have just heard by telegraph from Sir Frederick Roberts that he has received and was about to publish the Proclamation.

† See No. 33. p. 133.

4. No complete explanation has yet reached the Government of India of the causes of the explosion in the Bala Hissar reported in paragraph 3 of our despatch, dated 23rd October. The fire was overcome on the 17th October after it had reached and scorched the wall of the principal powder magazine; and Captain Shafto's body was recovered and buried on the 18th October. There is little or no news from the outlying provinces of Afghanistan, and the country round Kabul is reported quiet except in the direction of Tezin and Hissarak where the Ghilzais are stirring. General Saifudin, who commanded the parade of Kabul troops on the 3rd September, was captured on the 21st October, and has since been tried and executed. Very large stores of English made Snider ammunition and other material of war, together with ample stocks of clothing for the troops, have been found in the Bala Hissar, and the cantonment of Sherpur is being rapidly prepared for occupation by British troops, while supplies are now coming in plentifully. Various articles of property belonging to the British Embassy, including books, horses, rifles, and money, have been recently brought in.

5. General Gough remained in position upon the Shuturgurdan, in order to keep open the road thence toward Kabul, and to superintend the passage of the convoy from Ali Khel; but he will have withdrawn by the end of this month. This line of communication will then be suspended for the winter, and a force from Kabul, co-operating with General Bright's advance from Jellalabad, will open and secure communications with Kabul on that route. Before evacuating the Hariob Valley General Gordon proposes to punish some of the tribes who have been prominently active in annoying our posts during October; and he will take measures to this effect on the arrival of General Tytler with some additional troops from Thull.

6. General Bright reached Jellalabad on the 24th October; the Guides and a mountain battery entered Gandamak on the previous day too late to save the grain and flour stored there, which has been plundered by the Ghilzais and Khugianis. A reconnaissance has pushed two miles beyond the Surkhab river on the Jagdallak road, and the country has been found quiet, though there are reports that the Ghilzais are collecting above the Pass to dispute our advance. The Amir's governor at Jellalabad has continued to exercise his functions under the political direction of the British Commandant, has assisted materially in procuring supplies, and has generally attended to the requisitions made on him. General Bright has been instructed to guarantee the Khan of Lalpura and neighbouring Chiefs from any harm in consequence of assistance they may render to the British Government, and at the same time to warn them that, while good service will be rewarded disobedience to orders will entail punishment.

7. From the Kandahar side Major St. John reported that the governor of Ghazni had officially informed the governors of Mukur and Kelat-i-Ghilzai that Yakub Khan had been reinstated in full authority, and that General Roberts had proclaimed that the British forces are merely temporary guests of the Amir and will return immediately to India. As this fabricated story appeared to have spread over the country, and to be producing some effect, the Government of India directed General Roberts to inform the governor of Ghazni of Yakub Khan's abdication, and to warn him that he must obey the orders of the British authorities on pain of being treated as a rebel.

Sirdar Sher Ali Khan reports that the Tarin District is quiet, and that the Hazaras have agreed to pay their land revenue. Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan has resigned the governorship of Pusht-i-Rud and has been advised to return to Kabul. The Ghilzais in the neighbourhood of Kelat-i-Ghilzai are more or less in an unsettled state; though at Kelat itself everything is reported quiet, and supplies are being stored for the use of the British garrison. The Tokhi clan of the Ghilzais is content with the present régime at Kandahar; but the chief of the Hotak clan refused to visit Major St. John at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. News has just arrived from Kandahar that Sahib Jan, a Tarakhi Ghilzai, and a notorious freebooter, who had gathered a force about Mukur with the intention of attacking our camp at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, was himself attacked, defeated with loss, and killed near Shahjui on the 25th. Sahib Jan had advanced to Shahjui, where he was met by Colonel Kennedy of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, and his force completely dispersed, after an action in which the British troops suffered very slightly.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 22nd October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 18th October. Fire ceased yesterday after reaching and scorching wall of main powder magazine. Captain Shafto's body recovered; will be buried to-day. Gough's party reached Charasia yesterday. No news yet from Shuturguridan or Ali Khel. No post for several days. Country round Kabul quiet. All well.

Enclosure 2 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 22nd October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 19th October. Gough will occupy Sirkai Kotal between Shuturguridan and Kushi to-day, and will then be in heliographic communication with Colonel Money. Ghilzais are occupying Hazardarakht; and as General Gordon is evidently unable to re-establish communication with Shuturguridan, and the troops there are dependent on Ali Khel for supplies, I have ordered Gough to withdraw the garrison to Kushi. This will probably be done to-morrow. Ghilzais have assembled in large numbers, so, no doubt, there will be opposition. Country round Kabul quiet but Hissarak and Tezin. Ghilzais are assembling between Khurd Kabul and Jagdallak. General Gough will be kept fully informed. General Saifudin Khan was captured by our cavalry yesterday. Private Mitchell, 72nd, wounded on 6th, died on 17th. Sherpur Cantonment being cleaned out and prepared for occupation. I have sent daily telegrams, please let me know if all have been received. All well.

Enclosure 3 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 20th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Peiwar Kotal, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 15th October. Amount of war material here beyond belief. Nearly 10 lakhs of English made Snider ammunition is stored in the Bala Hissar; all apparently in perfect order. Native troops coming this way need not, therefore, bring more ammunition, with them than may be required for the road. There is also great quantity of local made Snider ammunition, which will be tested shortly. Of powder, we have found upwards of two hundred thousand pounds; a great deal was destroyed before we took possession of the Sherpur cantonment. There is any amount of lead, copper, tin, shot, shell, caps, accoutrements, and clothing for troops. Rifles have been made away with, but some are being brought back daily. Also horses, ponies, and other property belonging to the Embassy. All well.

Enclosure 4 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 25th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 22nd October. No news from Shuturguridan since evening of 19th. Enemy were then said to be dispersing.

Letters and telegrams despatched from this on 14th were destroyed by Ghilzais in Hazardarakht. Those despatched before and since will, I hope, reach destinations.

Sherpur cantonment being rapidly prepared for reception of troops. Supplies being collected fairly well. Troops healthy. All well.

Enclosure 5 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 26th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 20th October. General Hugh Gough reports that on his troops reaching Sirkai Kotal between Kushi and Shuturguridan, enemy dispersed. I hope communication will now be restored with Ali Khel. General Gordon reports that he has urged postponement of General Tytler's expedition. This seems unnecessary; we have enough troops to do all that is required between Ali Khel and this. Small explosions still continue at Upper Bala Hissar, all precautions are being taken to prevent larger powder magazine exploding. All principal men from Kohistan and intervening country have come to Kabul to pay their respects. Country all round quiet. Weather fine; nights cold. Troops healthy. All well.

Enclosure 6 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 27th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 25th October. Letter from Simla, dated 16th, and telegrams dated 21st October, reached this yesterday, also several mail bags of earlier dates, more expected to-morrow. Heliographic communication with Ali Khel was established yesterday. Telegraph lines from Kabul towards Jellalabad will be commenced on 28th. Mr. Josephs' Telegraph Department left Kushi for Kabul yesterday. Large numbers of poles are ready at hand. All well.

Enclosure 7 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 27th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 23rd October. General Hugh Gough heliographs from Shuturguridan that Ghilzais began to disperse on hearing of approach of his small force, and cleared off completely as soon as he occupied the Sirkai Kotal. Ghilzais are said to have numbered not less than eight or ten thousand. Gough had with him five hundred rifles, one squadron of cavalry, and four mountain guns, two squadrons of cavalry being kept at Kushi. Communication with Ali Khel was restored soon afterwards.

I propose now closing Shuturguridan route, sending 21st Native Infantry back to Ali Khel, and bringing on 3rd Sikhs and four guns No. 1 Mountain Battery to Kabul, and, as soon as Gough returns, sending a brigade under Macpherson towards Gandamak to open up communication with Khyber column.

Ghilzais from Tezin and Hissarak have sent messengers to know if I will receive their head men. They will probably come in soon. If not, presence of troops on that road will speedily settle matters, and it is very desirable that safe and regular communication should be established by Khyber route as soon as possible. All well.

Enclosure 8 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 28th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 24th October. All quiet on Shuturguridan and elsewhere below. All other officers detained there leave Kushi for Kabul to-day. Gough remains for convoy from Ali Khel and to keep road open to end of this month. Reconnoitring parties are out in all directions collecting supplies and obtaining information. Weather splendid, nights being cold already. Troops healthy. All well.

Enclosure 9 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 28th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 26th October. Dr. Bellew and officers detained on Shuturguridan arrived this morning. Supplies coming in plentifully. By 15th November I hope to have five months stored, except possibly forage, which, however, is being collected satisfactorily. Improvement of road towards Butkhak will be commenced to-morrow. Shelter for British portion of force nearly complete in Sherpur cantonment. Native regiments have commenced hutting themselves. All well.

Enclosure 10 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 24th October 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad.

THE Khan of Lalpura and all Chiefs should receive positive guarantee of protection by British Government from any harm in consequence of services rendered to us, and it should be made known that, while good service is rewarded, disobedience to orders will be punished.

Enclosure 11 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 22nd October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

THE Governor of Ghazni has officially informed Governors of Mukur and Kelat that the Amir has been reinstated in full authority, and that Roberts has proclaimed by beat of drum that he and the army are only guests of four days, and will retire at once to India. This news has spread over country, and has had bad effect. Governor of Ghazni, Muhammad Saib Agha, is said to be a dangerous intriguer.

Enclosure 12 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 23rd October 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

MAJOR ST. JOHN's telegram, 22nd. We have told Roberts to send to Ghazni Governor notice of Amir's abdication and orders to obey Roberts' authority under pain of treatment as rebel.

Enclosure 13 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 23rd October 1879.

From SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla. (Extract.)

SIRDAR Muhammad Yusaf Khan having resigned his Governorship has been advised to return to Kabul.

In reply to communications asking for his advice, Sirdar Sher Ali Khan has addressed letters to Muhammad Afzal, Hotaki Ghilzai, recommending him to wait on Major St John and afford assistance in collecting supplies at Kelati-Ghilzai. Muhammad Afzal has written to Major St. John declaring himself an adherent of Yakub Khan, and asking at the same time for pay and rank. He alleges that he cannot visit Kelat because his tribesmen are troublesome and require his presence: this is a mere excuse.

Inquiry into thefts at Mundi Hissar and Tuktapul progressing satisfactorily; thieves traced, and some of the stolen goods recovered.

I announced in Durbar on Saturday that the Barakzais would not again be allowed to molest those who had made their submission to us; the announcement afforded great satisfaction.

Sirdar reports that Tarin District is quiet, and that the Hazaras have agreed to pay up their land revenue.

Enclosure 14 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 24th October 1879.

From SIR DONALD STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SIRDAR reports that two Heratis, Naib Futteh-ulla Beg, Firozkoti, and Mirza Gholam Muhammad, son of Mirza Gholam Sadik, and four Kandahari Barakzais, Muhammad Zaman Khan, General Muhammad Jan Khan, Brigadier Ahud Khan, and Dam Muhammad Khan, are at a village a few miles hence, having just arrived via Moraf from Kabul. I have requested Sirdar to secure them, pending receipt of a reply from Roberts, to whom I have telegraphed the above information.

Enclosure 15 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 26th October 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

RETURNED here last night. Everything quiet at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and arrangement made for bringing in Government grain for winter use of garrison. The Tokhi tribe is content with new state of affairs; but Hotaks are less so, their Chief, Muhammad Afzal, refused to come in. Saqu Khan, Chief, who was there last winter, has now returned, and it may be advisable to put him in Afzal's place, but the Hotaks have little power for mischief under any circumstances. Beyond Kelat country is in complete anarchy, but not apparently unsafe for caravans. Governor of Ghazni said to have shut himself up in his citadel. Governors placed by Amir over Taraki and Andari tribes have been plundered and forced to fly to Kabul.

Enclosure 16 in No. 35.

Telegram, dated 28th October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SAHIB JAN, Taraki Ghilzai, a notorious ruffian and freebooter, had assembled force of about thousand men of his tribe about Mukur. On 23rd, he reached General Hughes, through Tokhi Ghilzai, that he had advanced to Shahjui with avowed intention of attacking our camp at Tazi. Hughes sent out Colonel Kennedy, 2nd P. C., with force of all arms at 2 a.m. on 25th to reconnoitre towards Shahjui and followed with remainder of force in morning. Kennedy drove in enemy's pickets near Shahjui and found Sahib Jan in position with 200 horse and 700 foot, which he attacked and completely dispersed. Sahib Jan and 41 others found dead on field. Our loss one private, 39th, one 2nd Punjab Cavalry killed, Captain Sartorius, 59th, Captain Broome, two native officers and 24 men, 2nd P. C. wounded. Neither Broome nor Sartorius dangerously hurt. Affair will have excellent effect, Sahib Jan having been terror of district.

Enclosure 17 in No. 35.

No. 19, dated Bala Hissar, Kabul; 16th October 1879.

From Major-General SIR F. ROBERTS, V.C., K.C.B., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your letter No. 506, dated the 29th September 1879, conveying to me, on the part of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, general instructions for my guidance on arrival at Kabul.

2. His Excellency in Council will have learnt from my telegrams that these instructions had been in great measure anticipated. I have taken possession of the Bala Hissar, and assumed supreme authority in Kabul; and I have announced in a proclamation, of which a copy is enclosed, that the city will be subjected to a heavy fine, and that all buildings which now interfere with the proper military occupation of the Bala Hissar, and the safety and comfort of the troops to be quartered in it, will be levelled with the ground. I am now making inquiries to ascertain the amount which the city is capable of paying, and the buildings whose demolition is desirable are being selected. A considerable extent of ground now covered with streets and houses will probably be cleared, and the fine will be fixed at the highest possible sum, so that I hope the punishment inflicted on the city will be severely felt now, and remembered hereafter.

3. For the thorough investigation of the causes and circumstances of the late outbreak, and the collection of all possible evidence regarding the conduct of individuals since the arrival of the British Embassy in Kabul, I have nominated a Commission consisting of the members marginally named. Their duties will be comprehensive, and will include the submission of recommendations regarding the punishment to be inflicted on all persons whom they may find guilty of participation, direct or indirect, active or passive, in the attack on the Residency, or of other connected offences calling for notice. Every such recommendation will be carefully considered by me, and his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council may rely upon my carrying out most strictly the instructions conveyed in paragraph 8 of your letter under reply.

4. It will be seen from the terms of the proclamation to which I have referred above that in one particular I have not exactly anticipated his Excellency's instructions. I have not considered it necessary or desirable to insist for the present upon the absolute disarmament of the whole city population. But I have prohibited under penalty of death the carrying of arms within the city, or within a distance of five miles from the city gates. This prohibition, backed by the occupation of the Bala Hissar, and the holding of all important points in the city itself, will, I believe, be sufficient to guard against the possibility of any disorder, and to ensure the personal safety of the officers and troops under my command. I have the honour to request that I may be informed whether the arrangement meets with the approval of his Excellency in Council.

5. The exercise of supreme authority in the city, and over the surrounding country to a distance of ten miles from the city walls, I have delegated to Major-General Hills, V.C., C.B. He will be assisted in the performance of his duties by Nawab Sir Gholam Hussan Khan, K.C.S.I., and every measure of importance which he may consider it desirable to introduce will be submitted for my sanction, and carried out under my general supervision.

6. Every effort is being made for the early collection of supplies. Some difficulty has hitherto been experienced in this matter, particularly in procuring forage for the horses and baggage animals, but the difficulty will, I believe, be overcome. I expect to obtain large stores of grain and other necessities from the Khalsa villages, the resources of which His Highness the Amir has placed unreservedly at my disposal; and I have little doubt that by prompt and liberal payments, by enforcing strict discipline among the troops, whose conduct has hitherto been unexceptionable, and by considerate treatment of the people, I shall before long be enabled to draw freely on the produce of the surrounding country.

7. My telegram of the 13th instant will have made known to his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council the Amir's determination to abdicate, and his desire to leave Afghanistan for ever. It will also have informed his Excellency of the fact that I have considered it necessary to place under surveillance, pending the result of the inquiry into the circumstances of the outbreak, Sirdar Yahya Khan, Sirdar

Zakaria Khan, the Mustaufi Habibulla Khan, and the Wazir Shah Muhammad Khan. His Highness' determination, which I believe to be irrevocable, was arrived at without any knowledge of my intentions towards his father-in-law and ministers. It appears to have been prompted by the conviction of his inability to control the Afghan people, by weariness of a life of incessant trouble and intrigue, and possibly in part by the feeling that suspicion had been thrown upon his own action and motives. His Highness is now in my camp, where he wishes to remain until the instructions of his Excellency the Viceroy are received regarding his future movements. He seems much broken in spirits and wholly unfit to resume his former position and responsibilities. There is, so far as I can judge, no influential party in Kabul to which he could now look for support. The Barakzai Sirdars in general form an adverse faction of which Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan is the head. Sirdar Ahmad Ali Jan alone stands aloof from this party, and, putting aside his youth, he has, in my opinion, no political weight whatever. Sirdar Yahya Khan and his brother Sirdar Zakaria Khan are of course attached to the fortunes of the Amir, but their influence by itself is inconsiderable. Nevertheless, it is not improbable that if Yakub Khan could rouse himself to the effort he would still be able to maintain himself as Amir in the event of the retirement of our forces; but he would be weak, and unable to co-operate effectually in furthering the policy of the British Government. This question, however, is not of great importance, for, as I have remarked above, I believe his present determination to be irrevocable. It is probably unnecessary for me to add that none of two Amir's sons (sic) are fitted to take his place. Moreover, His Highness wishes them to accompany him in his retirement. I await the instructions of his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council regarding the measures to be adopted in view of the present situation of affairs. In the meantime the Amir will remain in my camp.

8. Before closing this letter I would observe that the military resources of Afghanistan during the time of the late Amir, and the attention paid to their development, appear to me to have been much greater than was generally supposed. The troops under my command have now in one way or another taken possession of more than two hundred guns. Immense quantities of military stores have been found in Kabul and the neighbourhood, amongst them supplies of home-made Snider ammunition. The number of regular regiments at the time of the outbreak is stated by General Daud Shah at sixty of Infantry and sixteen of Cavalry, and they have certainly not increased in numbers since the death of the late Amir. Very large sums of money must have been expended in the erection of the fortifications near Kabul, in the arming and equipment of the troops, and in the accumulation of the military stores now brought to light. In every way Sher Ali seems to have endeavoured to place the nation in a state of complete preparation for war, and the Afghan army only wanted competent leaders to become a sufficiently formidable military power.

9. In conclusion, I have the honour to request that his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council will rest assured of my earnest desire to respect the religious belief, feelings, and customs of the people of Afghanistan, and to convince them of the justice and benevolence of the British Government, now that they have had unmistakable evidence of its strength. I shall use every endeavour to impress upon the military and political officers under my orders the necessity for treating the population of the country in a just and conciliatory manner; and I trust that the presence of a British army in Kabul will be found in course of time to have removed rather than embittered the feelings of vindictive hostility which are now undoubtedly entertained towards us by a considerable portion of the Afghan people.

Enclosure 18 in No. 35.

Dated Camp Ali Khel, 13th October 1879.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL T. E. GORDON, C.S.I., Commanding Kurram Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

In continuation of my No. 1 of yesterday's date, and my telegram of to-day, I have the honour to report that the people who assailed camp this morning were a mixture of Mangals, Ahmad, and Hassan Khels Jajis aided by some Ghilzais and Shinwaris from across the Lakerai route, also a few Spegawal.

We had previously heard of a projected combination against us by the surrounding tribes and of even a correspondence with this object passing between Ningnabar and the Lujja Mangals. We were also aware that the people who had for some days previously been gathering to attack us were incited thereto by the presence of many Mullahs, one of whom was taken prisoner and proved to be a Mangal resident of Bagiyar Chakmani at the upper end of the Kurram valley.

The comparative absence of fire-arms among the assailants in the early attack on our right, and the confidence with which they crept close up to our position, proved the truth of what we afterwards heard, that their superstitious belief in the Mullahs had been worked on by these unscrupulous agents who had been busy circulating stories to the effect that our troops had been utterly routed in Kabul and their camp plundered. The tribes around us had been induced to believe that we too would fall an easy prey, and the plunder of camp be their reward.

I have sent a detailed military report of the attack and defeat of the enemy by to-day's post to the Chief of the Staff.

The attitude of the surrounding villages was unsatisfactory, no intimation of the approach of the enemy being given by them, and numbers of the assailants having been sheltered by them when retreating, while the bodies of those killed by the cavalry were carried off or concealed when our troops passed on. In one of these villages two killed and wounded, residents of the place, were discovered. The houses of these men have been destroyed.

Twenty-four corpses having been recovered and brought into camp, it was given out that all would be given up on identification by their own relatives or tribesmen. An ambiguous message has since been received from the Lujja Mangals demanding compensation for their killed and threatening revenge if not given up, though they have so far refused to come in for the bodies.

I have decided that such bodies as are not thus disposed of shall be buried according to Mahomedan rites by the captured Mullah. The religious scruples of the people will not have been violated, and the proceeding will, I trust, be held to be in accordance with the conciliatory spirit which Government has lately desired should govern our dealings with the surrounding tribes.

No. 36.

No. 231 of 1879. (Extract.)

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, the 6th November 1879.

IN continuation of previous despatches we have the honour to submit the following summary of the principal political intelligence relating to affairs in Afghanistan received during the past week, and of the progress of military operations in that country.

2. General Macpherson's brigade left Kabul on the 1st November for Butkhak, on the road toward Jellalabad. The position at Siah Sang was then abandoned, and the British force at Kabul has been concentrated at Sherpur. General Roberts himself joined General Macpherson and reconnoitred the Jagdallak and Khurd Kabul passes. General Macpherson's brigade has marched toward Gandamak by the Khurd Kabul pass, while General Bright's force is advancing to meet it from the opposite direction. The principal headmen of the Ghilzais are with the camps; and it is understood that after a conference held at Tezin some days ago the leading chiefs of the tribe decided not to resist the operations of our troops on the line between Gandamak and Kabul. The Khyber is, and has been for some time, entirely quiet under the arrangements recently made by the Commissioner of Peshawur with the tribes who are responsible for the pass; the Mohmands have given no trouble; and the Barakzai governor of Jellalabad is actively assisting the British officers. The telegraph line is being pushed on from both sides without interruption; so that on the whole there is good ground for anticipating that our communications between Peshawur and Kabul will be successfully opened in a few days, and will be firmly established for the winter. General H. Gough was expected to return from Kushi to Kabul about the 3rd or 4th November, marching through the Logar valley. The weather is very cold at Kabul, but the troops are reported to be in excellent health and spirits. Among the enclosures will be found a letter from General Roberts, dated 20th October, reporting the principal occurrences at Kabul since the end of September.

3. General Gordon reports from Ali Khel that the Ahmad and Hassan Khel sections of the Jaji tribe have accepted his terms, which included the payment, within six days, of Rupees 1,000 and the delivery of hostages, four of whom had been sent into Kurram. He is now proceeding to punish other neighbouring tribes who participated in the recent attacks on our posts and in the attempts to interrupt our communications with the Shuturgurdan. The Shuturgurdan line has been finally closed; and the Hariob valley will be immediately evacuated by our troops.

4. The proclamation issued by General Roberts at Kabul, commanding all Afghan authorities to continue their functions and to preserve order in the country, was read in full Durbar at Kandahar on the 4th November. The Sirdar Sher Ali Khan was at the same time formerly invested by General Stewart with the government of the Kandahar province, including Pusht-i-Rud and Kelat-i-Ghilzai. The Sirdar has placed his nephew, Shirindil Khan, in charge of Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and his brother-in-law, Sirdar Abbas Khan, in charge of Zamindawar.

We have, &c.

(Signed).

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

A. J. ARBUTHNOT.

A. CLARKE.

JOHN STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

W. STOKES.

A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 29th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 28th October.—9th Lancers arrived at Kushi yesterday accompanied by 583 native details, 19 officers belonging to regiments, and detachments at Kabul, and with last convoy that will come from Ali Khel this season. All troops will leave Shuturgurdan to-morrow. Gough with small column will then march through Logar valley, reaching Kabul on 3rd November. On 1st November, Macpherson, with 67th Foot, 23rd and 28th N.I., two guns F.-A., with elephant equipment, No. 2 Mountain Battery, and 12th Bengal Cavalry, will march to Butkhak. On 2nd and 3rd route via Latabund will be reconnoitred, and about 7th or 8th November I hope Macpherson will be at Jagdallak to open communication with Khyber column. All well.

Enclosure 2 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 31st October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 29th October.—Shuturgurdan will be abandoned to-day. Letters and telegrams will henceforth be sent to Jellalabad. Country quiet. All well.

Enclosure 3 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 31st October 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

AHMAD and Hassan Khel Jajis submitted yesterday to terms imposed, namely, payment in six days of Rupees 1,000 and delivery of hostages, four of whom were sent to Kurram at once. As there is nothing beyond the fulfilment of these terms to detain the force in this valley, I propose, as soon as surplus stores, baggage, &c., now in course of removal, have all gone, to withdraw from the Hariob and proceed to Chakman to obtain satisfaction for its treachery as previously explained, after which the troops will be available for the Zaimusht expedition. This should be about 15th November.

Enclosure 4 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 1st November 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 30th October.—Siah Sang position will be abandoned when Macpherson marches to Butkhak on 1st November. Remainder of force will then be collected at Sherpur. Gough will return from Kushi on 3rd or 4th November; and as soon as communication with Khyber column has been properly established and country round Hissarak and Tezin thoroughly examined, a small column will proceed from this towards Istaliff, and perhaps as far as Charikar.

Enclosure 5 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 2nd November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 31st October.—No particular news. All well.

Enclosure 6 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 3rd November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 1st November.—Many of the leading men are coming in from the country about the Jellalabad road. They were informed of the Amir's abdication, and received a copy of the proclamation of 28th October. This seems to have reassured them as to the possible consequences of joining us. Asmatulla Khan is expected in a day or two, and several other influential men from Tezin and the neighbourhood are now in camp. The fact of these men being with us will probably prevent any opposition being offered to the advance of Macpherson's and Charles Gough's brigade.

Enclosure 7 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 3rd November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Kabul, 1st November.—Macpherson's brigade marched to-day Butkhak. I join him to-morrow to reconnoitre Latabund Pass, returning to Kabul on 3rd or 4th. Headmen from Tezin and country as far as Surkhab are now with me, and Asmatula Khan is reported to be on his way to Kabul. Communication with Khyber column will probably therefore be opened without opposition. General Bright has been informed. Privates Macready and Conn, 72nd Highlanders, died yesterday of wounds received; former on Shuturgurdan on 14th; other at Charasiab on the 6th October. Nights very cold; thick ice. Warm clothing and blankets urgently required. All well.

Enclosure 8 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 3rd November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Butkhak, 2nd November.—Telegraph wire completed to this. Just starting to reconnoitre Latabund route. All well.

Enclosure 9 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 4th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

Butkhak, 3rd November.—Latabund route is fairly easy, and will probably be adopted as main line of communication. I look at Khurd Kabul route this morning, returning to Kabul by evening. Macpherson's brigade will march towards Gandamak to-morrow by Khurd Kabul and Tezin. All well. Telegraph line finished to this.

Enclosure 10 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 1st November 1879.

From CAPTAIN WARBURTON, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

GENERAL BRIGHT, with his Political Secretary and four members of staff, left this morning for Rozabad, proceeding towards Gandamak.

Everything here very satisfactory. Governor of Jellalabad has expressed a desire to come and see me to-morrow. I will inform you duly of all he mentions at interview, and communicate to General Bright everything that he ought to know that springs up at visit.

Enclosure 11 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 1st November 1879.

From GENERAL GORDON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

LETTER from Gough, Kushi, 31st. Starting for Logar on way to Kabul; evacuating and clearance of Shuturgurda most complete. Convoy with 9th Lancers reached safely. Not a shot fired between Ali Khel and Kushi.

Enclosure 12 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 3rd November 1879.

From CAPTAIN WARBURTON, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

GOVERNOR called on me yesterday. He seemed greatly pleased with the way he has been treated at Durbar—and since we came here—and with some news he had received from Kabul. He himself continues to give every assistance through his officials. All about here the political situation continues very satisfactory.

Enclosure 13 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 4th November 1879.

From CAPTAIN WARBURTON, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

THE Governor has issued orders for all grain paid in as revenue, and remaining stored, to be handed over to Commissariat without payment, merely receiving a receipt for the same. All well here.

Enclosure 14 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 29th October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

It is reported that the Kabuli regiments at Herat have deserted with their arms, and are making their way to their homes in the north in scattered parties via Zamindawar and the Arghandab.

Enclosure 15 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 30th October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

FURTHER reports confirm desertion of Kabuli regiments from Herat, but state that the majority have gone by the Hazarah route towards Kabul.

Enclosure 16 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 30th October 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

WEEKLY summary of news. The only event of importance during the week has been the action at Shahjui, which may be expected to have good results in quieting the southern Ghilzais. The tribe of Tokhi Ghilzais, in whose land action took place, expressed themselves delighted to have got rid of Sahib Jan and his Tarakis; while Muhammad Aslam Khan, Chief of the Kotaks, the other Ghilzai tribe in Kelat, when asked to combine with Sahib Jan against the English, refused and sent intelligence to Kelat. There is no doubt that the false news of proximate withdrawal of British from Kabul, disseminated by Ghazni Governor, emboldened Sahib Jan to plan attack on British camp.

Major St. John returned from Kelat on 25th, having made arrangements for collection of revenue and supply of garrison. Captain Molloy has been appointed Political Agent at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and left for that place yesterday. The district has been placed under the Government of Candahar, from which it was separated about twenty years ago, and Sirdar Sher Ali Khan has appointed his nephew, Sirdar Shirindil Khan, Lieutenant-Governor.

Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan, former Governor of Zamindawar, leaves for Kabul to-morrow. His successor, Abbas Khan, brother-in-law of Sirdar Sher Ali, leaves for Zamindawar shortly with the Alizai chiefs, who have been here for some time and express themselves perfectly satisfied with the new arrangement.

General Hughes' return is not affected by Shahjui affair. He returns here at once with heavy guns, Goorkhas, two companies 59th, and two squadrons 2nd Punjab Cavalry, leaving two field guns, two mountain guns, two companies 59th, the Biluchis, and one squadron cavalry to garrison Kelat-i-Ghilzai, under command of Colonel Tanner.

Weather cold and cloudless. Health of troops good.

Enclosure 17 in No. 36.

Telegram, dated 4th November 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

PROCLAMATION read this morning to full assembly of notables, including Mullahs and merchants. Announcement was then made that in consideration of general peaceable conduct of Duranis of Kandahar and straightforward and loyal conduct of Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, British Government has been pleased to appoint him Governor of the province, including Pusht-i-Rud and Kelat-i-Ghilzai, till new arrangements alluded to in proclamation shall be made. Hope and confidence were expressed that people would show by good conduct that the good will and confidence shown in the appointment of their fellow-townsmen and representative of their old rulers are properly appreciated.

Enclosure 18 in No. 36.

No. 21, dated Kabul, 20th October 1879.

FROM MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

IN continuation of my letters marginally noted I have the honour to submit, for the No. 16 of 29th September 1879. information of his Excellency the Governor-General in „ 19 of 16th October „ Council, the following account of my proceedings since the end of last month.

2. After several interviews with His Highness the Amir, who seemed anxious to meet my wishes and to afford all the assistance in his power, I left Kushi on the 2nd October and marched to Zarghun Shahr, where I was met by Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan and a number of other Barakzai nobles who had accompanied him from Kabul. I thought it desirable to receive them in a friendly manner and to ignore entirely their estrangement from the Amir, of which, however, I was well aware. They were permitted to remain with my camp, space being allotted to them at some distance from His Highness' tents. I have now made the acquaintance of several among them, and have obtained from them a considerable amount of information which would not otherwise have been easily procurable. As stated in my letter No. 19 of the 16th October, and in my telegram of the 18th, the Sirdars form a party adverse to the Amir, and Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, in particular, is at no pains to hide his feelings in the matter. I shall, however, continue to ignore their views in this respect, and shall treat them for the present as loyal subjects of His Highness.

3. On the 3rd October I left Zarghun Shahr for Zahidabad, and halting there one day pushed forward on the 5th to Char Asiab. His Excellency in Council is aware of the severe action which took place on the 6th between a portion of my force and the Afghan troops, supported by a large number of the people of Kabul. The Afghan position was carried, and the enemy defeated with heavy loss. While the action lasted, the people of the neighbouring villages ceased to bring in supplies, which during the morning had been coming in freely; and there were indications that a large number of tribesmen were collected upon the hills in our rear, ready no doubt to take advantage of any opportunity which might be afforded them by a mishap to the force. After the defeat of the Afghan troops these bands apparently dispersed, and the country people again came forward with supplies.

4. I think it desirable to mention here that some doubt has been thrown upon the conduct of His Highness the Amir in connexion with the fight at Char Asiah. It is said that Sirdar Nek Muhammad, uncle of Yakub Khan, who had been left in charge of Kabul during His Highness' absence, came out and had an interview with His Highness on the 5th; that he was directed to return at once and stir up the troops and city people to oppose us; and that the action of the 6th was fought in direct obedience to the Amir's orders. Nek Muhammad after an attempt to treat for pardon has now disappeared, and it is not easy to ascertain the truth of the story; but I have reason to believe that an interview took place, as stated, that Nek Muhammad thereupon called out the troops and city people for a holy war in the name of the Amir, and that he commanded in person during the action of the 6th. I shall do my best to obtain further evidence in the matter.

5. On the 7th October, I advanced to Bini Hissar, a couple of miles from Kabul, and on the 9th the camp was moved to the Siah Sang heights immediately overlooking the city. Three days later, as stated in my telegram of the 13th, I made my formal entry into the Bala Hissar, and announced to the people of Kabul the punishment which would be inflicted upon them for their participation in the massacre of the 3rd September, and in the opposition offered to our advance. Since then all has been quiet, and I have no reason to anticipate any further disorder.

6. In my letter of the 16th October I wrote that a Commission had been appointed to inquire into the causes and circumstances of the late outbreak, and to try all persons suspected of participation in the attack on the British Embassy or other connected offences. I have now found it necessary to relieve the Commission of a portion of their duties, the collection of evidence regarding the outbreak having proved to be a sufficient task in itself. The actual trial of accused persons has been entrusted to a second Commission, of which I have appointed Brigadier-General Massy to be President and Major Moriarty and Captain Guinness to be members. They have begun their work, and five men were hanged this morning in accordance with their recommendations.

7. His Highness the Amir remains in my camp. In my letter of the 16th instant I remarked that His Highness seemed much broken in spirit and unfit to resume his position and responsibilities. He is now more cheerful, and has been of considerable assistance to me in obtaining information and supplies. But he appears to have been crushed by his long imprisonment and to have lost all strength and energy. I have in vain tried to persuade him to leave his tent and ride with me. His answer is that all exercise has become a burden to him, and that he cares for nothing but rest and quiet. He seems to take little interest in what passes round him and even to feel no desire for the society of his children, whom he rarely sees. Altogether I consider him hopelessly incapacitated for a life of action and responsibility, and I am certain that no reliance could be placed on him for the future were he to remain here as Amir.

8. The state of political parties in Kabul I have described. There is in fact one party only, that of Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, who has succeeded in attaching to himself for the time the mass of the Barakzai Sirdars. So far as I can judge there is none else who would be able at present to make a respectable struggle for power in the event of our retirement. Nevertheless, I do not consider that Wali Muhammad is positively strong. I believe he is not popular, and I doubt whether he could maintain himself long even in Kabul unless helped from the outside; while the disorganization of the country consequent on recent events would be entirely beyond his power to overcome.

9. Little or no news reaches me from the outlying provinces. I have to-day addressed the Governor of Turkestan, informing him that I have no intentions against the troops or people in that quarter except such persons as were concerned in the attack on the British Embassy, and requesting him to carry on the Government in accordance with the Amir's instructions, and to supply me with news. But I know nothing of what is passing in the north, and am quite unable to say what line he will take. Nearer home, there is I think a fair prospect of the country becoming settled. Many of the leading men of Kohdaman and Kohistan have come into my camp and asked to see me. They seem well disposed towards us, and I believe that if the country people could only be assured of our permanent protection we should profit very greatly by their recollections of Barakzai tyranny, particularly among the Kohistanis and others whose districts lie within easy reach of the capital.

10. No direct evidence has yet been brought forward against Yahya Khan, Zakariah Khan, the Mustaufi, or the Wazir. In case none should be brought forward I should be disposed to recommend the immediate deportation of these persons to India, with the exception possibly of the Mustaufi. I cannot but feel that they are in fact to a great extent responsible for the outbreak, and that their influence will always be used against us. I think, therefore, that the absence of positive proof of their complicity should not stand in the way of their removal from Afghanistan as an act of State. The Mustaufi it might perhaps be desirable to release and employ. He is generally spoken of here as less hostile to us than any of the others, while his knowledge of the country and long experience of its administration would make him, if he could be depended upon, a very useful servant. But I am not yet convinced that he could safely be treated differently from the rest.

11. I enclose, for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, copy and translation of a letter to my address from Asmatulla Khan. I have written to him and requested him to come in here, which I hope he may do. His help would be invaluable, now that an attempt is being made to open up communication with Jellalabad. The arrangements for the carriage of mails between my camp and Ali Khel have not been altogether successful, and the rapid establishment of a regular postal line between Kabul and the head of the Khyber force is most desirable. With Asmatulla Khan's sincere co-operation this could I believe be easily effected. Padshah Khan and his brother, Allal-ud-din, appear to me either to have overrated their influence with their clansmen or to have acted with questionable good faith. The Shuturguridan has been attacked by Ghilzais; the daks have been slow and irregular, owing to Ghilzai interruptions; some of the mails have, I believe, been robbed; and altogether the line of the road between this and Ali Khel has been disturbed and unsafe. I am inclined to think that Padshah Khan and his brother have not done all they could to keep things quiet.

12. The terrific explosions which occurred in the Upper Bala Hissar on the 16th instant have convinced me that large quantities of powder must have been stored underground. This may also be the case in the Lower Bala Hissar which the troops under my command were to have occupied for the winter. Under these circumstances I have decided, unless his Excellency in Council considers the measure objectionable, to destroy the Bala Hissar and move the whole force into the Sherpur cantonments under the Bamian heights. The position is a strong one, and can be made unapproachable. Moreover, I shall in this way be able to keep all the troops together, which would be impossible if the former arrangement were to hold good, for there is not sufficient room in the Bala Hissar. The total destruction of the Bala Hissar will, if his Excellency in Council sanctions my present proposal, renders unnecessary the partial destruction of the town, which was announced in my proclamation of the 12th instant. It will, I think, be preferable as a measure of national punishment, for it will be more striking to the mass of the nation, and, moreover, the weight of the blow will fall with peculiar severity on the Sirdars and other influential persons, who nearly all have houses within the Bala Hissar, while the destruction of a quarter of the town would chiefly affect the lower orders. I hope, therefore, that my proposed action will be approved.

Enclosure 19 in No. 36.

Translation of a Letter from ASMATULLA KHAN to the Address of MAJOR-GENERAL SIR FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C.

I RECEIVED your kind letter on the 8th of Shawal (28th September) and understood its contents, and also those of the enclosed proclamation to the people of Kabul. I informed all whom I thought fit of the contents of the proclamation.

Some time ago I went to Gandamak to Major Cavagnari. He instructed me to obey the orders of the Amir and made me over to His Highness. When Major Cavagnari returned (to India) the Amir's officials confiscated my property and gave the chiefship to my cousin (or enemy) Bahram Khan.

The oppression I suffered on your account is beyond description. They ruined and disgraced every friend and adherent of mine. On the return of Major Cavagnari to Kabul I sent my Naib to him, who informed him of my state. Major Cavagnari sent a message to me to the effect that I should recover my property by force if I could, otherwise I should go to the hills, and not come to Kabul until I heard from him. In the meantime I received the news of the murder of the Envoy, and I am still in the hills.

The letter is not dated. It was received on the 20th October 1879.

(Signed) H. M. DURAND.

No. 37.

Telegram from VICEROY, 12th November 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

We propose to bring Amir to India, whenever communications are secure.

Amir himself anxious to depart, and his removal is for several reasons, highly expedient.

No. 38.

No. 234 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, the 13th November 1879.

WE have the honour, in continuation of previous despatches, to submit a summary of the principal occurrences reported from Afghanistan during the past week.

2. The chief event has been the establishment of communication between General Roberts' force and the Khyber column. The junction was effected by General Macpherson's brigade which marched through the Khurd Kabul Pass on the 4th November and met the advanced guard of General Bright's forces under the command of General C. Gough at Katta Sang. General Roberts has personally examined the Chinari, Khurd Kabul, and Lataband passes, and has adopted the Lataband pass as his permanent line of communication toward Jellalabad. The country beyond Khurd Kabul is reported to be fairly open, and the road easy. The arrival in General Macpherson's camp of two leading Ghilzai Chiefs from the neighbourhood of Hissarak, has greatly facilitated the arrangements for keeping this road open and quiet. Two Kabul regiments have returned from Turkestan, and disbanded at the Bamian pass, sending in arms and tents to General Roberts at Kabul. General Hugh Gough returned to Kabul on the 4th November, bringing with him the 9th Lancers, the 3rd Sikhs, and No. 1, Mountain Battery. The troops at Kabul continue in excellent health and spirits. General Watson reports from Ali Khel that the Jirgas of the Hassan and the Ahmad Khel have paid their fine of a thousand rupees and given hostages.

The publication at Kandahar of the proclamation inclosed in our Despatch No. 226, dated 30th October 1879, and the confirmation of Sirdar Sher Ali's authority pending a final settlement of the country, has been well received by the mass of the people. Copies of the proclamation and of the order maintaining Sirdar Sher Ali Khan have been forwarded to Furrah and Herat. We have no further news regarding the reported dispersion of the troops at Herat; and from our latest intelligence, via Teheran, the place appears to be in a state of anarchy, while Ayub Khan is unable to manage his mutinous regiments. From another source, indeed, we learn that he is virtually shut up by them in the Herat citadel. The Governor of Ghazni had not yet made up his mind to tender submission to British authority; at Furrah Mir Afzul is still holding aloof; and the general impression is understood to be that the tribal Chiefs and Sirdars in that part of the country which is not yet within the effective range of our authority, will endeavour to maintain a neutral position until it shall have been seen whether the Amir Yakub Khan is to be restored to power.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 6th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 4th November. I reconnoitred yesterday to within three or four miles of Tezin, proceeding by Chinari Pass and returning by the Khurd Kabul. Former is impracticable; latter is easy as regards road; but there is a great deal of water even now after rain, and when snow melts it would be impassable. Besides it is difficult pass to force when occupied by an enemy; it can be turned, but it is doubtful if a cart road could be made over the hill which turns it.

Macpherson will be at Khurd Kabul to-day and Tezin to-morrow, and after meeting Charles Gough will work back towards Latabund, when we can decide on best line of road to adopt. Macpherson is not likely to meet with opposition. Headmen of neighbouring Ghilzais accompanied me yesterday. Hugh Gough returns to Kabul to-day with 9th Lancers, 3rd Sikhs, and No. 1 mountain battery. All well.

Letters dated Simla, 24th, and telegram, 28th, were received here yesterday. Private Cockburn, 92nd Highlanders, who lost his leg at Charasiah, died on 1st instant.

Enclosure 2 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 7th November 1879.

From GENERAL WATSON, Ali Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

HASSAN and Ahmad Khel Jirgas have paid the fine rupees one thousand and given hostages. Force leaves this to-morrow.

Enclosure 3 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 7th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

No special political news. Asmatulla Khan not yet in, but daily expected. On 2nd, I rode to Butkhak, and thence reconnoitred Latabund Pass up to the Kotal. It is fairly open so far, and can be made practicable for guns without much difficulty. On 3rd, rode through Chinari Pass to its junction with Khurd Kabul Pass and back to Butkhak by latter. Both are difficult, and the first not capable of improvement. Khurd Kabul, or Latabund, seems decidedly best for a permanent road. Saw no signs of tribesmen being out. Headmen of Khurd Kabul were with us, and Maliks of Tezin are now here going to join General Macpherson, who advances to Khurd Kabul to-day, and Tezin to-morrow. Ramsay accompanies. No news from outlying provinces. All well here.

Enclosure 4 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 7th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 5th November.—9th Lancers, 3rd Sikhs, and No. 1 Mountain Battery arrived yesterday. Macpherson's brigade marched through Khurd Kabul Pass yesterday, and to-day goes to Padshah-i-Mina near Tezin. This route is the direct one to Katta Sang, and the Haft Kotal is avoided. All well.

Enclosure 5 in No. 38.

Telegram, No. A.-1344, dated 8th November 1879.

FROM FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL WATSON, Ali Khel.

MACPHERSON met Gough at Katta Sang, 7th; his brigade has marched by Khurd Kabul to Tezin. Headmen of villages accompanied. No signs of tribes stirring. 9th Lancers reached Kabul, 5th.

Enclosure 6 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 11th November 1879.

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 8th November.—General Macpherson met General Bright's advance force at Katta Sang on 6th instant. Yesterday road on eastern side of Latabund Kotal, the point I reached on 2nd instant, was reconnoitred by Macpherson and reported easy. As further inspection of Khurd Kabul line confirms its difficulties, I have decided to make main communication by Latabund route. Construction of road and telegraph will now be pushed on rapidly.

Enclosure 7 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 11th November 1879.

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 8th November.—Muhammad Shah Khan and Mazula Khan, two influential Ghilzai Chiefs of Hisarak, have joined General Macpherson, and will be here to-morrow or next day. Their coming in relieves me of anxiety for safety of road about Jagdallak.

Enclosure 8 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 11th November 1879.

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 7th November.—Two Kabul Regiments, stationed in Turkestan, returned of their own accord few days ago, and dispersed on arriving this side of the Bamian. I sent messengers to try and make them come in here and deliver up their arms, promising they should not be in any way molested: they were not to be persuaded, but sent in nearly 500 stands of arms, upwards of 100 camels, and some tents.

Macpherson reports from Camp near Tezin, that country beyond Khurd Kabul is fairly open and road easy. All well.

Enclosure 9 in No. 38.

Telegram, dated 5th November 1879.

FROM MAJOR ST. JOHN to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

PROCLAMATION sent to Herat and Furrab with copies of order entrusting government of Kandahar to Sher Ali. Have enclosed them in letters to Ayub and Mir Afzal, adding only that from these papers actual state of affairs will be seen, and kindness and moderation of British Government be displayed. Letter to Mir Afzal goes by his son, who returns to-day.

Enclosure 10 in No. 38.

Telegram dated 6th November 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

WEEKLY summary of news. We hear from Kelat-i-Ghilzai that the Tarakis gathered in considerable numbers after the action at Shahjui, expecting an advance into their country, but dispersed on becoming assured of the return of the troops to Kelat. Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf Khan left on Sunday for Kabul, accompanied by Subadar-Major Abdullah Khan, 26th N. I., who has done excellent service here in the Political Department, and goes to join General Roberts. General Hughes is expected on the 8th. General Palliser left for India on the 3rd. Captain Molloy has arrived at Kelat-i-Ghilzai.

A recent caravan from Herat does not confirm news of dispersion of Kabuli regiments there. Muhammad Ayub Khan is practically imprisoned by them in the citadel. The result of news of Amir's abdication reaching Herat as yet unknown.

Publication of proclamation and confirmation of Sher Ali's authority until final settlement of future of country has had excellent effect here on mass of people. But the extreme fanatics are much disturbed, though they have little influence. An influential Mullah, disgusted at the apathy of his countrymen, has sold his property and gone to Mecca. Weather still very fine. Health of troops excellent.

Enclosure 11 in No. 38.

Telegram No. A-1326, dated 7th November 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

FOLLOWING from Teheran:—

The Herat correspondent reports, writing on the 12th ultimo, that Ayub Khan was then endeavouring to send the three Kabul regiments, who recognized and killed General Fakir Ahmed Khan, to Kabul, without arms; but that they had refused to go without the other Kabul regiments, their arms, and artillery. In (sic) these a conflict anticipated between the Herat and Kabul regiments. He had collected three thousand Irregular Cavalry outside the town, which is very disturbed; and he has no money, having collected and spent the year's revenue in advance. The correspondent adds that affairs are in such state that, if the English appear at Sabzewar, the troops would disperse without offering resistance. He describes Turkestan as in condition of anarchy.

Enclosure 12 in No. 38.

Telegram dated 7th November 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

A SEPOY of the 15th Sikhs was murdered on Wednesday evening by two men unknown. Sirdar has offered a thousand rupees reward for their detection; and issued proclamation warning people that such outrages may cause the English Government to repent of the lenity with which Kandahar has been treated.

On 1st November a Ghazi attempted to murder men of guard of Captain Molloy on way to Kelat, and stabbed two men, not dangerously. He was secured and made over to Governor of Kelat for execution. He is a Kakar, and was on road to join Sahib Jan when he heard of that Chief's defeat and death.

Enclosure 13 in No. 38.

No. 31, dated Kabul, 29th October 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council, Persian translation of the proclamation forwarded with your telegram of the 23rd instant. It was issued by me yesterday, and copies in Persian will be widely distributed.

2. I also forward copy and Persian translation of a proclamation issued by me to-day, in which I announce that I have assumed control of the State Treasury, the collection of revenue, and the expenditure of public money.

Enclosure 14 in No. 38.

Telegram No. E.-7, dated 28th October 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

PROCLAMATION, as received with your message of 23rd, will be issued to day. Further proclamation, as directed in your telegram of 24th, will be issued to-morrow.

Enclosure 15 in No. 38.

PROCLAMATION to the People of Kabul, dated 29th October 1879.

IN my proclamation of yesterday I announced that His Highness the Amir had of his own free will abdicated, and that, for the present, the Government of Afghanistan would be carried on under my supervision. I now proclaim that, in order to provide for the cost of administration, I have taken possession of the State Treasury; and that until the British Government shall declare its will as to the permanent arrangements to be made for the future good government of the country, the collection of revenue and the expenditure of public money will be regulated by me. All persons concerned are hereby informed that they must obey without dispute or delay such orders as may be issued by me in regard to the payment of taxes and other connected matters; and I give plain warning that any one resisting or obstructing the execution of such orders will be treated with the utmost severity as an enemy of the British Government.

No. 39.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 17th November 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

PRESS letter from Kabul reports atrocities by 72nd on wounded Afghans. On inquiry, Roberts reports charge refers to Goorkhas, not 72nd. Believed to have set fire to clothes of dead Afghans.

Full inquiry ordered.

No. 40.

No. 236 of 1879.

Government of India—Foreign Department.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Simla, the 20th November 1879.

WE have the honour, in continuation of former despatches, to submit a summary of information received from Afghanistan during the past week.

2. General Roberts has reported that on the 11th instant he issued a Proclamation, granting a free and complete amnesty to all persons who have fought against the British troops since 3rd September, provided that they give up any arms in their possession and return to their homes. From this amnesty are excluded all persons concerned in the attack on the Residency, or found in possession of property of the members of the Embassy, and those who, knowing the Amir's position in the British camp, instigated the troops and people of Kabul to take up arms against the British troops.

3. Sirdar Wali Muhammad has offered to undertake the charge of Afghan-Turkestan, and desires to proceed to that province with the object of bringing its administration into subordination to the central authority at Kabul; but his proposals are still under consideration. Sirdar Shahbaz Khan has been sent by General Roberts into Kohistan. The Governor of Ghazni has arrived at Kabul, having been induced to tender his submission to the British authorities mainly, it is understood, by his inability to control the tribes in the neighbourhood of Ghazni, where some disturbances are reported to have occurred. A foraging party from General Macpherson's brigade has been attacked by a number of Safis of Tagao, at Doaba, the junction of the Panjsher and Kabul rivers, but the attacking party was successfully driven off with severe loss. General Watson reports from Kurram that the Chakmanis have submitted to the terms imposed upon them. The troops under General Gordon, which were sent against this tribe, have returned; and General Tytler moves into the Zaimusht country within a few days.

4. At Kandahar and Kelat-i-Ghilzai all is reported quiet; many Chiefs of the Taraki tribe have tendered their submission to the British officer at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. From Herat there have been reports that Sirdar Ayub Khan is levying cavalry among the tribes, but the state of affairs in that part of Afghanistan is still very little known, though it is believed that the Sirdar's situation is precarious; and there are various indications that both he and Mir Afzul (who is still holding Furrah) meditate a retreat towards Persia whenever their independent position at Herat or Furrah becomes no longer tenable.

5. We enclose copy of a letter from Sir Frederick Roberts, reporting his proceedings at Kabul.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 12th November 1879.

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 9th November. Yesterday General Baker with small force surrounded Indiki, a village at south end of Chardeh Valley, and from which our reconnoitring parties were fired at on 5th October. Between 40 and 50 soldiers were made prisoners and information received of whereabouts of some 60 more; 40 muskets and rifles were found, also number of swords and knives. I inflicted, in addition, heavy fine of grain on village for part it took in the opposition we experienced on 6th October.

General Macpherson reconnoitred on 7th instant to entrance of Lughman Valley, crossing Kabul river and encamping about eight miles from Katta Sang. Last three miles of march through cultivated lands of Sarobi, a very prosperous looking settlement; people civil; supplies and forage abundant; elevation of the camp 3,400 feet; climate of course much milder than that of Kabul. All well.

Enclosure 2 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 12th November 1879,

FROM GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 10th November. Macpherson reports that road on left bank of Kabul river leading towards Lughman is good so far as he has been, and that merchants met on road state it is easy to Jellalabad. This information has been sent to General Bright.

Bala Hissar is being rapidly dismantled; all guards will be withdrawn to-day, and destruction of gunpowder commenced to-morrow; sufficient being kept to blow up defences and to meet other requirements.

Letters posted at Simla on 28th October have apparently been lost en route. Latest date by post 31st October; by telegraph 6th November.

Major Cavagnari's watch was brought in yesterday. All well.

Enclosure 3 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 12th November 1879.

From GENERAL WATSON, Kurram, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

CHAKMANIS submitted to our terms. I returned to Kurram to-day, leaving General Gordon and Captain Conolly with the troops to complete arrangements.

Enclosure 4 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 12th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, eleventh November. Following is text of Proclamation which will be issued to-day:—To all whom it may concern. On the twelfth October, Shawal, a Proclamation, was issued, in which I offered a reward for the surrender of any person who had fought against the British troops since the third September, fifteenth Ramazan, and had thereby become a rebel against the Amir Yakub Khan. I have now received information which tends to show that some at least of those who shared in the opposition encountered by the British troops during their advance on Kabul were led to do so by the belief that the Amir was a prisoner in my camp, and had called upon the soldiery and people of Kabul to rise on his behalf. Such persons, although enemies to the British Government, were not rebels against their own Sovereign. And the great British Government does not seek for vengeance against enemies who no longer resist. It may be that few only of those who took up arms were thus led away by the statements of evil-minded men; but rather than punish the innocent with the guilty, I am willing to believe that all were alike deceived. On behalf of the British Government, therefore, I proclaim a free and complete amnesty to all persons who have fought against the British troops since the third September, fifteenth Ramazan; provided that they now give up any arms in their possession and return to their homes. The offer of a reward for the surrender of such persons is now withdrawn, and they will not for the future be molested in any way on account of their opposition to the British advance. But it must be clearly understood that the benefits of this amnesty do not extend to any one, whether soldier or civilian, who was concerned directly or indirectly in the attack upon the Residency, or who may hereafter be found in possession of any property belonging to members of the Embassy. To such persons no mercy will be shown. Further, I hold out no promise of pardon to those who, well knowing the Amir's position in the British camp, instigated the troops and people of Kabul to take up arms against the British troops. They have been guilty of wilful rebellion against the Amir's authority, and they will be considered and treated as rebels, wherever found.

Enclosure 5 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 13th November 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 11th November. Wali Muhammad has agreed to go to Turkestan; and Shahbaz Khan to Kohistan. Wali has orders not to interfere with Shahzada Hassan of Badakshan. After inquiries as to his present position, I will deal with him direct.

Dull grey sky to-day and heavy clouds upon the hills; it looks like snow.

Bala Hissar completely evacuated yesterday, pending destruction of powder. Guards replaced by native chowkidars.

Enclosure 6 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 14th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 12th November. General Macpherson reports that a Company 67th Regiment under Captain Poole, escorting foraging party to Doaba, at junction of Panjsher and Kabul Rivers, was attacked by 700 to 1,000 Safis of Tagao. He went to assistance of Company with 150 of 67th foot, 80 of the 28th Native Infantry, four mountain guns, and a Squadron 12th Bengal Cavalry. The latter arriving first were dismounted and sent forward. The guns came into action twice with good effect. Pursuit continued for six miles. Severe loss inflicted on the enemy who fled, leaving their dead on the ground. Our casualties were three, 67th Foot, and one, 28th Native Infantry, killed. Captain Poole and four, 67th Foot, wounded. All wounded doing well. Macpherson will be at Latabund to-day, and will commence construction of road over that Kotal.

Telegraph line completed eight miles beyond Butkhak will be finished to General Macpherson's camp this evening.

Snow fell here yesterday, but has nearly disappeared. All well.

Enclosure 7 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 14th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jagdallak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 13th November. Six thousand seven hundred and twenty-nine rifles and guns have been brought in to date. Of these, seven hundred and forty-two are English Enfield, and five hundred and sixty English Snider, rifles.

Telegraph line completed to 25 miles beyond Kabul.

I am sending away with the sick and wounded all the elephants, spare bullocks, and sick transport animals to economise consumption of forage here as much as possible. Weather clear. All well.

Enclosure 8 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 14th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 12th November. Snow fell on hills all round last night, and a little fell here.

Enclosure 9 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 16th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 14th November. Convoy of sick and wounded started to-day for India. All sick left at Kabul are now comfortably housed. Quarters for British portion of force will be ready in few days; huts for natives are progressing. Two severe earthquakes yesterday. All well.

Enclosure 10 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 17th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 15th November. There will be no difficulty in making a road from Kabul to Katta Sang, 40 miles on the road towards Gandamak. It will probably be ready for wheeled traffic in a month. Beyond Katta Sang report on road has no doubt been submitted by General Bright. Post now comes in fairly regularly, letters from Simla arriving on seventh day. I am making inquiries about carrier pigeons, and suggest that Officer Commanding at Peshawur and Jellalabad do the same. They would prove useful in event of telegraph line being cut or road communication being temporarily interrupted. All well.

Enclosure 11 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 17th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Jagdallak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 16th November. Governor of Ghazni reached this yesterday. Macpherson's brigade will remain at and near Butkhak, while sick and wounded are en route to Jagdallak. Road to and beyond Butkhak progressing fairly well. No news of importance. Weather fine; troops healthy. All well.

Enclosure 12 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 17th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 16th November. Macpherson reports all quiet about Tezin, and the people very civil. Sirdar Shahbaz Khan has started for Kohistan as Governor, with an advance of twenty thousand for collection of forage. Muhammad Hassan Khan goes to Maisan with ten thousand for same purpose. Abdulla Khan with twenty thousand goes to Logar. I propose to abandon system of district collections and to assess each district for lump payment of bhoosa, grass, &c. Asmatulla Khan has not come in, and I doubt his doing so until he has a promise of being reinstated in all his former possessions and compensated for all loss suffered since the peace. I have now directed Warburton and Tucker to hold no further communication with him, leaving Hastings to do all that is required from this.

Enclosure 13 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 17th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

SUBADAR-MAJOR ABDULLA KHAN, of the 26th Native Infantry, and Sirdar Muhammad Yusaf, a brother of the late Amir Sher Ali Khan, and recently Governor of Girikh and Zamindawar, have been sent in by General Stewart. They report the country about Ghazni very unsettled, and the whole road more or less unsafe.

Enclosure 14 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 18th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

KABUL, 17th November. Macpherson's brigade will return here on Thursday. On same day Baker with small force will proceed towards Maidan in direction of Ghazni to collect supplies and to settle country, reports having reached me that a Mullah is trying to create disturbance, and has collected a certain number of men between this and Ghazni. All well.

Enclosure 15 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 18th November 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

18th November. Telegraph line will be completed between Kabul and India on 20th. I hope sick convoy from this and convoy of treasure from Gandamak met at Seh Baba, 23 miles beyond Butkhak, yesterday. All well.

Enclosure 16 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 19th November 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

TELEGRAPHIC communication open through to Kabul to-day.

Enclosure 17 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 14th November 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

A DESERTER from Kandahar regiment stationed at Herat, which he left 23 days ago, states that Ayub was assembling tribal mounted levies, and had issued five months' pay to soldiers.

Enclosure 18 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 14th November 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

WEEKLY summary of news. General Hughes returned from Kelat-i-Ghilzai on 8th. Captain Molloy writes that everything is quiet at that place. Muhammad Afzal and Sadu Khan, rival chiefs of Hotak clan, were both with him. Many chiefs of the Taraki, Sahib Jan's tribe, had also sent in offering submission. Supplies were coming in plentifully.

On the 10th, Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan, nephew of Sirdar Sher Ali, arrived here from Kabul, where he went with Nawab Ghulam Hassan Khan. He reports road unsafe for small parties. Most of the Duranis in Amir's service are on their way back to their homes at Kandahar.

His Excellency the Governor of Bombay arrived here on short visit to Sir D. Stewart on the 13th. He leaves on the 16th, viâ the Gwajjeh Pass.

There is no news from Herat.

Enclosure 19 in No. 40.

Telegram, dated 18th November 1879.

From SIR D. STEWART Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

CHIEFS of Taraki Ghilzais from country beyond Kelat-i-Ghilzai frontier have come here to submit, and ask for service. Have referred them to Kabul, and informed Roberts.

Enclosure 20 in No. 40.

No. 34, dated Kabul, 4th November 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit, for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, a brief account of the political situation in Kabul during the last fortnight.

With regard to the Amir Yakub Khan, I have already reported by telegraph that the instructions conveyed have been carried out. On the 28th His Highness was informed that his resignation had been accepted; and the Proclamation forwarded to me by order of Her Majesty's Government was published for general information the same day. The government of the country will for the present be carried on under my immediate supervision, without the declared aid of any Afghan Chief or Sirdar. I have explained my reasons for thinking this arrangement preferable to the formation of a provisional native government, and I need not therefore state them here. I am convinced that no good could result from the introduction of any Afghan element into the administration, pending the final orders of Government as to the disposal of the country.

Yakub Khan has surrendered treasure amounting to some eight or nine lakhs of rupees in gold coin; there must be more, as I understand he quite recently took by force from Abdulla Jan's mother the sum of rupees 1,700,000. I have given him a receipt for the money, which he claims as his own property, and have informed him that if his Excellency the Governor-General in Council holds his claim to be valid, the money will be returned to him hereafter. With this arrangement he has expressed himself satisfied. I have also informed him that I shall not be content until he has delivered up the whole of the treasure he was in possession of as Amir of Kabul.

In obedience to instructions I have assumed possession of the State Treasury, and have announced that for the future the collection of revenue and expenditure of public money will be under my control. A copy of the Proclamation in which this announcement was made I have already submitted.

I mentioned in my letter No. 21 of the 20th October that some doubt had been thrown on Yakub Khan's conduct in connexion with the fight at Charasiah. The suspicion has, to a certain extent, been strengthened by the production of a letter supposed to have been written by Yakub's uncle, Nek Muhammad Khan, in which he states that he was personally ordered by the Amir to raise a holy war against us. A copy of this letter has also been submitted for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General in Council. It is not, however, conclusive proof of Yakub's bad faith, for there is some doubt as to its being authentic, and it was brought to me by Sirdar Wali Muhammad, whose feelings towards Yakub are openly unfriendly. I have been unable to ascertain the name of Nek Muhammad's supposed correspondent.

The city is quiet and seems likely to remain so, and I am in hopes that the country in general is settling down. Certainly the collection of supplies has become much easier. I have now nearly enough for the winter, and large quantities of grain and other necessaries are coming in daily. It is probable that the Afghan troops formerly in Kabul, have carried disaffection with them into a good many parts of the country. Some hundreds of men, armed with Enfields or Sniders, are believed to have assisted in the late attack on the British position at the Shuturgurda, and similar bodies would very likely be found elsewhere if any disturbance occurred. Further, there is no certainty as to the intentions of Ayub Khan, and the state of affairs generally in Herat and the northern provinces. But I hope to bring in and disarm a good many of the troops, who are probably holding together from fear rather than from any fixed intention of giving trouble; and I think that I shall ere long succeed in exerting some pressure on the outlying provinces. On the whole, therefore, though the situation is not without its difficulties, I feel that there is a fair prospect of tiding over the winter without disorder here or elsewhere.

The proclamation of the Amir's resignation has I believe, had a favourable effect on the tribes around Kabul. Asmatula Khan seems now resolved to come in; and many other influential men from Tezin, Khurd Kabul, and the neighbourhood have already done so. I have strong hopes that the advance of General Bright's and General Macpherson's forces will now be unopposed, and that regular communication will soon be opened with Jellalabad. As it is, I have only heard of two mail robberies on this road, though runners have been constantly passing over it for the last fortnight. In order to co-operate with the Khyber column, a brigade under the command of Brigadier-General Macpherson, V.C., C.B., marched from here for Butkhak on the 1st November. To-day General Macpherson advances to Khurd Kabul, and he will go on by the Tezin route to meet General Bright.

On the 2nd, I went out myself to Butkhak, and examined the Latabund Pass as far as the Kotal. The hills through which the road passes are fairly open, and the road itself can I think without difficulty be made practicable for guns. On the 3rd I rode through the Chinari Pass to its junction with the Khurd Kabul Pass; and back to Butkhak by the latter. The former pass, so far as I went, was difficult and not capable of improvement. The road lies for considerable distances between precipitous rocks along the bed of the stream, which has to be crossed and re-crossed incessantly, and the heights could not easily be occupied during the passage of a force. I think the Latabund or Khurd Kabul will prove decidedly the best for a permanent route.

The camp was moved on the 31st ultimo from the Siah Sang heights to the Sherpur cantonments, which I propose to occupy during the winter. The buildings inside the cantonment are not yet fit for use, but though frost has now set in at night, the days are warm, and the troops will not suffer any inconvenience from remaining a few weeks longer in the open.

Brigadier-General Gough, after relieving the force which had been surrounded and attacked on the Shuturgurda, arrived in cantonments this morning with the 9th Lancers, No. 1 Mountain Battery, 3rd Sikhs, 5th Punjab Infantry, and 5th Punjab Cavalry.

On leaving Ali Khel I purposely brought with me certain Maliks of the neighbouring tribes, with the view of sending them back later on, after our occupation of Kabul should have been completed. I took the opportunity of General Gough's return to the Shuturgurdan to let those men re-join their people, feeling confident that their account of our successes here would have a quieting effect upon the tribes. I have since heard both from Colonel Money and from General Gordon that their arrival was in fact most opportune. They were able at once to contradict all the unfounded reports then in circulation among the ignorant tribesmen, and to vouch for the fact that a British army was in possession of the Bala Hissar. I am assured that this information had much to do with dispersing the numerous bands which had gathered round Ali Khel and the Shuturgurdan.

Major Hastings is now engaged in collecting information for a report upon the revenue system and financial condition of the country; and I hope to forward at an early date approximate statistics regarding the receipts and cost of administration.

Now that there is a fair prospect of rapid and uninterrupted communication with India, I will submit weekly Political Diaries in the usual form. It seemed useless to do this so long as our communications were slow and uncertain, but from the 8th instant diaries will be despatched regularly; and telegraphic summaries of news will also be submitted twice or thrice a week as may be necessary.

Enclosure 21 in No. 40.

No. A.-1346, dated Simla, 8th November 1879.

From A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Expeditionary Force, Kabul.

I AM directed by His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council to acknowledge receipt of your letter, dated Bala Hissar, Kabul, 16th October 1879.

2. In reply, I am to inform you that His Excellency the Viceroy approves and confirms your nomination, as reported in your letter, of a Commission for the investigation of the causes and circumstances of the attack upon the British Residency at Kabul. The appointment of Major-General Hills, C.B., V.C., to exercise the chief authority in and around Kabul, is also sanctioned.

3. You have prohibited under severe penalty the carrying of arms within or in the vicinity of the city. These orders, with all the other precautions which you have found necessary for the security of your position, the prevention of disorder, and the personal safety of the British officers and soldiers under your command, are approved by His Excellency the Viceroy in Council, who desires me to add that the Government of India fully appreciate the judgment and ability with which you are executing your instructions.

4. With regard to the measures to be taken in consequence of the Amir's definite abdication, and in view to the existing situation of affairs in Afghanistan, I am to observe that you have already received and published the Proclamation ordered by Her Majesty's Government. Upon these matters, and in respect to the future movement and position of His Highness the Amir [who is to remain for the present in your Camp] you will await further instructions from the Government of India.

No. 41.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 30th November 1879, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

ROBERTS telegraphs that the movements of a well-known Mullah are causing uneasiness in the country, especially in Wardak and Kohistan, where people are reported under some excitement. Roberts expects that departure of Ameer from Kabul for India tomorrow, 1st, may have quieting effect. His proposal to deport also Yahya Khan and Ministers, arrested 12th October, has been sanctioned as politically necessary.

No. 42.

To His Excellency the Right Honourable the GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL
(No. 49).

MY LORD,

India Office, London, 11th December 1879.

PARA. 1. I have to acknowledge the receipt of the letters of your Excellency's Government, marginally noted, reporting the particulars, received from various sources, of the attack made on the British Mission at Cabul on the 3rd September, the measures taken under the orders of your Excellency in Council to enforce redress for that murderous outrage, and the course of events in Afghanistan subsequent to the renewal of military operations.

Letter, No. 202, dated 15th Sept. 1879.
" " 204, " 25th " "
" " 210, " " " "
" " 215, " 2nd Oct. "
" " 216, " " " "
" " 217, " 9th " "
" " 219, " 16th " "
" " 224, " 23rd " "
" " 226, " 30th " "
" " 231, " 6th Nov. "
" " 234, " 18th " "

2. In my despatch of the 18th September, written upon receipt of the telegraphic reports of the disaster of the 3rd idem, I reserved the expression of any opinion on the part of Her Majesty's Government as to the causes to which the catastrophe might be attributed. The further details which have since reached them in your letters under reply are so conflicting in character that they throw but little light on the question. It is clear, from the last reports and letters received from the late Sir L. Cavagnari, that, in spite of some manifestations of turbulence by certain of the Amir's regiments, that able and experienced officer was, under no apprehension in regard to the immediate future; and it is still impossible for Her Majesty's Government to arrive at any positive conclusion whether the outbreak, which had such deplorable consequences, was a mere ebullition of mutinous troops not in the first instance directed against the British Mission, whether it was the result of popular discontent at the residence of a foreign Envoy at the Court of the Amir, or whether it was the outcome of intrigue on the part of Afghan notables at Cabul or elsewhere, set on foot for their own purposes. Scarcely less obscure up to this time is the further question of the complicity of the Amir Yakub Khan, who cannot, however, even if wholly innocent of participation in the crime, be acquitted of discreditable timidity and want of resource in the presence of a grave emergency.

3. Her Majesty's Government have followed with gratification the military movements which resulted in the occupation of the city of Cabul by the force under Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts. They highly appreciate the skill with which the operations were conducted, and the cheerfulness and courage shown by all ranks in their execution in the face of a foe, not insignificant in numbers, with the advantage of strong positions, and having the sympathy probably of many thousands who would have become open allies had the success of the British arms been less rapid and decisive. It is also very satisfactory that the communication between Cabul and India by the Khyber Pass, and the military re-occupation of Candahar, should have been effected without opposition.

4. Her Majesty's Government entirely approve the measures taken by General Roberts after his arrival at Cabul for the conviction and punishment of persons concerned in the attack on the Embassy, and for the maintenance of order in the city and surrounding district. They still await information of the amount of fine intended to be levied on the inhabitants as a penalty for the part taken by them in the outbreak.

5. Her Majesty's Government will be glad to receive at an early date, the views of your Excellency in Council in regard to the re-organization of the administration of Afghanistan. The determination of the Amir Yakub Khan to retire from the position to which, by his father's appointment and the assent of the Sirdars and people, he so lately succeeded, left no alternative but to proclaim the temporary assumption by the British Government of authority throughout the country. At Candahar, under the judicious supervision of Lieutenant-General Sir D. Stewart, the native Governor, Sirdar Shere Ali Khan, to whom control over a wide district has been delegated, appears to be conducting affairs with ability and success; but elsewhere the ordinary functions of Government are necessarily in abeyance.

6. Pending further information, Her Majesty's Government will not attempt to decide the mode in which the several provinces of Afghanistan shall eventually be governed, but it seems clear that there is no chance of the establishment of one Government for the whole of the late kingdom which would give promise of permanence. They reserve their final opinion on the point until they are in possession of the views of your Excellency in Council. Her Majesty's Government fully recognise the many difficulties by which the question is surrounded, but they trust that, with the assistance of your Excellency, it may be possible to frame arrangements which will reconcile the interests of the Afghan Chiefs and people with the essential condition of security to the British Empire in India.

I have, &c.
(Signed) CRANBROOK.

No. 43.

No. 243 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, the 19th December 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter No. 24, dated 24th October 1879, from the Political Assistant, Kabul Expeditionary Force, with accompanying translation of a letter from Major-General Ivanoff, Governor of Zarafshan, to the address of Muhammad Musa Khan (son of Amir Yakub Khan) and others, mentioned in the margin.

General Gholam Hyder Khan, late Deputy Governor of Afghan-Turkistan. Habibulla Khan.

Nur Muhammad Khan, son of the late Sirdar Sultan Muhammad Khan, half-brother of the late Amir Dost Muhammad Khan.

Lal Muhammad, a confidential servant of the late Amir Sher Ali Khan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure in No. 43.

No. 24, dated Kabul, 24th October 1879.

From H. M. DURAND, Esq., Kabul, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I AM directed to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Governor General in Council, a letter, in original, with translation, from Major-General Ivanoff, Governor of Zarafshan, to the address of His Highness the heir-apparent, Muhammad Musa Khan, and others.

Translation of a Letter from MAJOR-GENERAL IVANOFF, Governor of Zarafshan, to the Address of the Heir-apparent, MUHAMMUD MUSA KHAN, and others.

ON the 26th of Rabi-ul-Awul, at an auspicious moment, I received your letter which you sent to me, and understood its contents. I was very much pleased and at once communicated it to General Kauffmann, the Governor-General. With regard to what you wrote about the friendly relations between the Russian and Afghan Governments, and your own desire for friendship, I have the honour to state that we are also desirous of being friends. The friendship between the two Governments existed in the time of the late Amir, and I hope that it will be increased and strengthened by Amir Muhammad Yakub Khan. May God change the wars in your country to happiness; may peace reign in it; and may your Government be strengthened. I have been forwarding all your letters to the Governor-General, General Kauffman. May God keep you safe.

The Zarafshan Province, Governor Major-General Ivanoff.

Written and sealed by the General.

Written on 29th Mart (March) 1879=5th Rabi-ul-Sani 1296.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William December 19, 1879.

WE have the honour to transmit, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts, reporting the substance of a conversation between himself and the ex-Amir Yakub Khan regarding the political events and transactions which preceded the negotiations between the Russian authorities at Tashkend and the late Amir Sher Ali Khan, and led to the Amir's eventual rupture with the British Government.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
H. J. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure in No. 44.

No. 50, dated Kabul, 22nd November 1879. (Extract.)

FROM LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit a brief account of an interview which took place between the Amir Yakub Khan and myself on the 22nd October. The interview was a private and informal one; but recent events have lent some interest to what passed on the occasion, and I have, therefore, thought it desirable that a report should be prepared for the information of the Governor-General in Council.

2. After some conversation upon matters of no special importance, the Amir introduced his father's name, and thus gave me the opportunity I had often wished to have of leading him on to speak naturally and unconstrainedly about Sher Ali Khan's feelings and policy during the last ten years. I was most careful to avoid any expression of my own views upon the subject in order that I might, if possible, obtain from the Amir a perfectly spontaneous and truthful account of the circumstances which led, in his opinion, to Sher Ali's estrangement from ourselves and rapprochement to Russia. In this I think I succeeded. Yakub Khan spoke readily and freely of all that had passed, and needed no question or suggestion from me to declare his conviction regarding the cause of his father's unfriendly attitude towards us during the past few years.

3. The substance of the Amir's statement was as follows:—

“In 1869 my father was fully prepared to throw in his lot with you. He had suffered many reverses before making himself secure on the throne of Afghanistan; and he had come to the conclusion that his best chance of holding what he had won lay in an alliance with the British Government. He did not receive from Lord Mayo as large a supply of arms and ammunition as he had hoped, but, nevertheless, he returned to Kabul fairly satisfied, and so he remained until the visit of Nur Muhammad Shah to India in 1873. This visit brought matters to a head. The diaries received from Nur Muhammad Shah during his stay in India, and the report which he brought back on his return, convinced my father that he could no longer hope to obtain from the British Government all the aid that he wanted; and from that time he began to turn his attention to the thoughts of a Russian alliance. You know how this ended.

“When my father received from the Government of India the letter informing him that a British Mission was about to proceed to Cabul, he read it out in Durbar. The members of the Russian Embassy were present. After the reading was finished, Colonel Stolietoff rose, saluted the Amir and asked permission to leave Kabul. If permitted, he would, he said, travel without delay to Tashkend, and report the state of affairs to General Kauffmann, who would inform the Tsar, and thus bring pressure to bear on England. He promised to return in six weeks or two months, and urged the Amir to do everything in his power meanwhile to prevent the British Mission from reaching Kabul.

"Colonel Stolietoff never returned to Kabul. He lost no time in reaching Tashkend, where he remained for a few weeks, and he then started for Russia.

"The Afghan official, Mirza Muhammad Hassan Khan generally known as the 'Dabir-ul-Mulk,' who had travelled with Colonel Stolietoff from the Oxus to Kabul, accompanied him on his return journey to Tashkend. Here the Mirza was detained under pretence that orders would shortly be received from the Emperor, until the news of my father's flight from Kabul reached General Kaufmann. He was then permitted to leave. Two Aides-de-Camp were sent with him, one an European, the other a Native of Bokhara.

"My father was strongly urged by General Kauffmann not to leave Kabul. At the same time the members of the Embassy were ordered to return to Tashkend, the Doctor being permitted to remain with my father if his services were required.

"Throughout, the Russian Embassy was treated with great honour, and at all stations between Mazar-i-Shariff and Kabul, orders were given for the troops to turn out, and for a salute to be fired on their arrival and departure."

4. I cannot, of course, vouch for the exact words used by Yakub Khan, but I am confident that the foregoing paragraph, which is written from notes taken at the time, contains a substantially accurate record of the conversation.

5. It would be superfluous for me to advance any proof of the fact that for one reason or another, Sher Ali did during the latter part of his reign fall away from us and incline towards an alliance with Russia. But I think the closeness of the connexion between Russia and Kabul, and the extent of the Amir's hostility towards ourselves, has not hitherto been fully recognised. Yakub Khan's statements throw some light upon this question, and they are confirmed by various circumstances which have lately come to my knowledge. The prevalence of Russian coin and wares in Kabul, and the extensive military preparations made by Sher Ali of late years, appear to me to afford an instructive comment upon Yakub Khan's assertions. Our recent rupture with Sher Ali has, in fact, been the means of unmasking and checking a very serious conspiracy against the peace and security of our Indian Empire:

6. The magnitude of Sher Ali's military preparations is, in my opinion, a fact peculiar significance. I have already touched upon this point in a former letter, but I shall perhaps be excused for noticing it again. Before the outbreak of hostilities last year the Amir had raised and equipped with arms of precision 68 regiments of infantry and 16 of cavalry. The Afghan artillery amounted to near 300 guns. Numbers of skilled artizans were constantly employed in the manufacture of rifled cannon and breach-loading small arms. More than a million pounds of powder and I believe several million rounds of home-made Snider ammunition, were in the Bala Hissar at the time of the late explosion. Swords, helmets, uniforms and other articles of military equipment were stored in proportionate quantities. Finally, Sher Ali had expended upon the construction of the Sherpur Cantonments an astonishing amount of labour and money. The extent and cost of this work may be judged of from the fact that the whole of the troops under my command will find cover during the winter within the cantonment and its outlying buildings, and the bulk of them in the main line of rampart itself, which extends to a length of nearly two miles under the southern and western slopes of the Bemaru hills. Sher Ali's original design was apparently to carry the wall entirely round the hills, a distance of five miles, and the foundations were already laid for a considerable portion of this length. All these military preparations were quite unnecessary except as a provision for contemplated hostilities with ourselves, and it is difficult to understand how their entire cost could have been met from the Afghan Treasury, the gross revenue of the country amounting only to about eighty lacs of rupees per annum.

7. I have referred to the prevalence of Russian coin and wares in Kabul as evidence of the growing connection between Russia and Afghanistan. I am unable to find proof that the Tsar's coin was introduced in any other way than by the usual channels of trade. It is quite possible that the bulk of it, if not the whole, came in gradually by this means, the accumulation of foreign gold in particular being considerable in this country, where little gold is coined. Nevertheless, it seems to me a curious fact that the amount of Russian money in circulation should be so large. No less than 13,000 gold pieces were found among the Amir's treasure alone; similar coins are exceedingly common in the city bazaar; and great numbers of them are known to be in possession of the Sirdars. Of course English goods of all kinds are plentiful here—that is inevitable, particularly with a considerable body of Hindu merchants settled in the city, but Russian goods also abound. Glass, crockery,* silks, tea, and many other things which would seem to be far more easily procurable from India than from Russian territory, are to be found in great quantities. A habit, too, seems to have been growing up among the Sirdars and others of wearing uniforms of Russian cut, Russian buttons, Russian boots, and the like. Russian goods and Russian ways seem, in fact, to have become the fashion in Afghanistan.

No. 45.

No. 246 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To The Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD

Fort William, 19th December 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter* from Major-General Sir F. S. Roberts, K.C.B., V.C., submitting his Kabul Diary for the period from 1st to 8th November 1879.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

A. J. ARBUTHNOT.

A. CLARKE.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

W. STOKES.

A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure in No. 45.

No. 39, dated Kabul, 9th November 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Depôt.

I HAVE the honour to submit Diary for the period between the 1st and 8th November, both days inclusive.

Kabul Diary, dated 1st to 8th November 1879. (Extract.)

1st November 1879.—A brigade under Brigadier-General Macpherson, V.C., C.B., marched this morning for Butkhak, to open up communications with the Khyber column. Many of the leading men about Khurd Kabul, and Tezin have come in, and arrangements have been made with them for the establishment of a regular postal service between Butkhak and Seh Baba. They have now been ordered to report themselves to General Macpherson.

Lieutenant Ramsay arrived in camp this afternoon. He has been ordered to join General Macpherson as Political Officer.

2nd November 1879.—This morning I rode out to Butkhak, and afterwards reconnoitred the Latabund Pass as far as the Kotul.

3rd November 1879.—Rode through the Chunari Pass to its junction with the Khurd Kabul, and back by the latter to Butkhak, 32 miles.

In the evening I rode back to Sherpur Cantonments, following the line of telegraph, which has now been laid as far as Butkhak. The distance as measured by the Telegraphic Department is about 15 miles.

4th November 1879.—Captain Turner, who has been in political charge of arrangements on the Ali Khel road, came into camp to-day. He brought a number of prisoners, among whom were some Ghilzai Maliks, who had instigated the recent rising of the clans round the Shuturguridan, and some Afghan soldiers. These will be tried by the Military Commission.

5th November 1879.—The Kohistani headmen, who have been here for some time and have a good many grievances against Sher Ali and Yakub Khan, were assembled by Major Hastings this afternoon, and told that to prove their good faith they should at once gather and give up all arms formerly belonging to the Amir, a large number of which are believed to have found their way to Kohistan. For this purpose some of the headmen were dismissed, the remainder being retained as a measure of precaution. I do not think the Kohistanis will prove very tractable about the surrender of arms, which are valued by them beyond everything; but the experiment is worth a trial. Before being dismissed the headmen were informed that a Governor would shortly be appointed to the district, who would inquire into their complaints. They seemed satisfied.

Amin Khan of Hangu, who accompanied me here, was allowed to return to-day; his presence being no longer of any use.

6th November 1879.—General Macpherson reports that on the 5th he advanced to within a short distance of Tezin.

This afternoon news arrived in camp that two Turkestani regiments which were marching on Kabul, had disbanded at Kot-i-Ashen, nine miles from here, and dispersed to their homes. Four hundred and fifty stands of arms, some tents, and 110 camels, belonging to these regiments, have been brought in. They had no guns.

7th November 1879.—I have determined to appoint Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan Governor of Turkistan, which I am assured he has more chance of holding than anyone else. He was asked to-day whether he would go. I caused him to be informed that if so I would advance him a lac of rupees, which would be recoverable from the revenues of the province; that he could raise and take with him 1,000 Jezailchis and 500 horse, and that his great object must be to conciliate the troops and people, and preserve quiet in the province during the winter. The Sirdar objected to the sum offered as too small, and said that if he went he must have at least two lacs to start with, as a good deal of money would be required for the pay of his force, and for other purposes. I agreed to give the larger sum, and expect the Sirdar's final answer to-morrow. If he goes, one of his sons remains in my camp.

For Kohistan, I think Shahbaz Khan is perhaps best fitted. His mother was a Kohistani, which makes him more acceptable to the people than other Sirdars; but he is not a man of any talent, and I propose to send with him Sayud Muhammad, son of the late Nur Muhammad Shah, who will, I think, supply the deficiency.

The Kohistani headmen will be informed to-morrow of the appointment of Shahbaz Khan, and ordered to accompany him without delay.

Careful inquiries are being made regarding the manufacture of guns, rifles, ammunition, saddlery, and military equipments in general during the time of Sher Ali. Considering the very rough means at their disposal, the Amir's artisans have turned out some remarkably good work. They are now being examined.

General Bright, after meeting General Macpherson near Tezin, has marched back to Jagdalak.

The eastern side of the Latabund Pass is reported easy and open. I am sending out the Chief Engineer to make a thorough examination, and if I find no unforeseen difficulties in the way, I shall try to make the pass practicable at once before the snow sets in.

8th November 1879.—Muhammad Shah Khan and Mazulla Khan, two leading Ghilzais of Hissarak, have come in. This will, I hope, ensure the safety of the road as far as Jagdalak.

The Bala Hissar will be completely evacuated by our troops to-day or to-morrow. I am having the powder destroyed, and I think it safer to keep all troops out of the way for the present. I have made arrangements for guarding the gates and principal points by means of chowkidars.

The principal medical officer reports that the searching parties have failed to find any European bodies among those buried near the Residency. I have ordered the pits to be closed, as further search seems useless.

No. 46.

No. 248 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 19th December 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of a letter from Lieut.-General Sir F. S. Roberts, K.C.B., V.C., commanding Kabul Field Force, No. 45, dated 19th November 1879, submitting his diary for the week ending 15th November.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

A. J. ARBUTHNOT.

A. CLARKE.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

W. STOKES.

A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure in No. 46.

No. 45, dated Kabul, 19th November 1879.

From LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit diary for the week ending 15th November 1879.

Kabul Diary, 9th to 15th November 1879. (Extract.)

9th November 1879.—The Kohistani head men were informed to-day that Shahbaz Khan was to go to Kohistan as Governor. They seemed satisfied with the arrangement.

Letters received from Ghazni give news of disturbances there. It is said that Mullah Mushk-i-Alam has assembled a number of people with the intention of raising a holy war. Muhammad Sayad, the Governor of Ghazni, professes his willingness to come in, and assures me he is doing his best to keep matters quiet.

10th November 1879.—Abdul Jabbar, formerly a Captain of Artillery in the Afghan army, and his father, Muhammad Akram, who had been sent down to collect information by Colonel Macgregor, have brought in a report about the disturbance at Ghazni and the state of affairs in the surrounding country. Muhammad Akram speaks of large bodies of tribesmen having assembled about the town under the orders of Mushk-i-Alam, but his evidence is not altogether to be depended upon. He did not himself see any of the insurgents. The Wardak country he reports perfectly quiet, but full of disbanded soldiery. Abdul Jabbar calculates that four and a half or five complete regiments of infantry could be brought together in Wardak, all well armed, but says they have no guns.

A letter, dated the 5th, received from the Governor of Ghazni professing his willingness to come in, and his hope of dispersing the insurgents. In a second letter he announces that he has left Ghazni, and is on his way to Kabul.

Abdul Kadir, a former Governor, writes, accusing Muhammad Said of fomenting this disturbance himself.

11th November 1879.—Heavy clouds on the hills all day, and a dull grey sky. At 2 o'clock a dust storm came on which was succeeded about sunset by a slight fall of snow.

I have completed my arrangements for the safe custody of the Bala Hissar during the destruction of the powder stored in the citadel. The gates will be held, and the walls and streets patrolled, by some 60 native chowkidars under the orders of Najaf Ali Khan, head man of the Arab community in Kabul. All military guards have been withdrawn.

12th November 1879.—A proclamation was published to-day granting an amnesty to all persons who have fought against the British troops since the 3rd September. I am assured by General Daud Shah and others that this will have a quieting effect on the country and facilitate the collecting of supplies.

This morning a telegram came in from General Macpherson reporting that a small party of the 67th Foot had been attacked on the 10th near Doaba, that a force had been sent out in support, and that the enemy, who were in considerable strength, had been defeated, and pursued for several miles. The assailants were Safis of Tagoo on the left bank of the Kabul river.

I have arranged to discontinue the direct collection of forage. Each district will now be required to produce a certain amount of bhoosa, grass, &c. An influential man will be sent out to each with an advance of money, and made responsible for the collection of the whole amount assessed. This plan seems likely to prove less troublesome and more effective than the system of direct collection.

13th November 1879.—Two shocks of earthquake were felt to-day.

Some Tajiks, who have come in from Ghazni, report the disturbance quieted and the insurgents dispersed. They say the Governor has left the city and is on his way to Kabul, or professes to be so.

Sirdar Shahbaz Khan and the Kohistani head men were dismissed this afternoon. The head men were told that they must submit to the Sirdar's authority, and exhorted to give up their family feuds and live quietly. I also impressed upon them the necessity for procuring the surrender of Government arms. Muhammad Afzul Khan, son of Abdul Karim Khan, was anxious for leave to avenge his father's murder. He was told that inquiries would be made, and that in the meantime he must keep the peace.

Shahbaz Khan gets an advance of Rupees 3,000 for immediate expenditure, and Rupees 20,000 to collect forage. He will be accompanied by Mirza Habibulla Khan, son of Khan Shirin, Sayad Muhammad Shah being unwilling to go, and by any other Mirza he may name.

14th November 1879.—Lieutenant Ramsay came in from Butkhak.

Letters arrived from Lal Muhammad and other men sent by Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan to Asmatulla Khan, with the view of inducing the latter to come in. They think he will not come unless his fort and all other property formerly held by him are first restored, and compensation promised for all losses inflicted on him since the Treaty of Gandamak.

15th November 1879.—The Governor of Ghazni came in to-day.

General Macpherson reports all quiet at Tezin, and the demeanour of the tribes friendly.

Shahbaz Khan has not yet gone. He starts to-morrow morning.

Sirdar Muhammad Hussein Khan, brother of Wali Muhammad, goes to Maidan to collect supplies. He has been given rupees 10,000 advance. Sirdar Abdulla Khan, son of Sirdar Sultan Muhammad Khan, will collect supplies in Logar. I have advanced him Rupees 20,000.

The work upon the Lataband road is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible. The Chief Engineer will go out himself in a day or two to superintend.

Telegraphic communication with India will, I hope, be established in a few days. The line is now complete from here to Barikab.

The Military Commission disposed of 16 cases during the past week. 78 persons in all have now been executed upon the recommendation of the Commissioners.

No. 47.

No. 249 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 19th December 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of the letters noted on the margin, from
 No. 54, dated 26th November 1879. Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Roberts, K.C.B., V.C.,
 „ 58, „ 1st December „

Commanding Kabul Field Force, submitting his political diaries for the weeks ending 22nd and 29th November 1879, respectively.

We have &c.
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 47.

No. 54, dated Kabul, 26th November 1879.

From LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit Kabul Diary for the week ending the 22nd instant. The despatch of the diary has been delayed until to-day by my absence from Kabul.

KABUL DIARY, 16th to 22nd November 1879.

16th November.—I have asked Dr. Bellew to make a complete inquiry into the case of Muhammad Syud, Governor of Ghazni. There are a good many people now in camp who have, or profess to have, information regarding the recent disturbances in that quarter.

17th November.—It is reported that five Kabuli regiments from Turkestan have arrived near Charikar on their way to their homes. They are said to have two guns with them, and to number about three thousand men. I have sent out General Parvez Shah Khan with orders to prevent their dispersion if possible, and to bring them in here. They are to be assured that no harm will happen to them, and I have sent them word that they will get something more than the usual reward for surrendered weapons if they march in in a body and lay down their arms. I fear they will hardly be persuaded to do so; but it is important to keep them from dispersing and carrying away their arms, if this can in any way be managed. General Daud Shah and others think it probable that all the Kabuli troops in Turkestan will come down before the winter sets in. They are receiving no pay, and seem to have no reason for remaining away from their homes.

18th November.—I have sanctioned, subject to Government approval, the establishment of a civil dispensary in Kabul. A large number of applications for treatment have already been received, and among the applicants are several ladies belonging to the families of Sirdars and other well-to-do people.

19th November.—Letter from Baz Muhammad Khan, son of Sirdar Nur Muhammad Khan, who accompanied Shahbaz Khan to Kohistan, reports that General Ghulam Hyder Khan and Nek Muhammad have crossed the Amu.

The line of telegraph has been completed from here to Jalalabad. A sowar from a cavalry regiment stationed at Ghorī, who came down with the Kabuli troops mentioned in my entry of the 17th, reports that the Turkestan road is unsafe for small parties. The troops were fired upon by villagers during their march from Ghorī and lost some men. The same Sowar also reports that Muhammad Khan, Uzbek, has seized Shihurghan and Saripul. He says the troops in Turkestan are disaffected for want of pay, and that Ghulam Hyder Khan has lost a great deal of his power.

Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan tells me he has heard the report about Shihurghan and Saripul, but attaches no importance to it.

General Parvez Shah Khan has returned, and reports that he has failed to induce the Turkestan regiments to come in with their arms. They have dispersed to their homes, leaving a gun and some tents at Charikar.

20th November.—Hassan Raza, an Afghan official in Turkestan, writes from Ghorī that Abdul Rahman is at Tashkend, and that Nek Muhammad, after being plundered by the Ghorbandis, has gone to Mazar-i-Sharif. He says the people of Turkestan are in a disturbed state and anxiously expecting British interference.

500 men, 92nd Highlanders.
400 „ 5th Punjab Infantry.
400 „ 3rd Sikhs.
4 Mountain guns.
2 Guns G.-3.
1 Squadron, 9th Lancers.
2 Squadrons 14 B. „

21st November.—Brigadier-General Baker marched this morning for Maidan with the force marginally noted, to aid Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan in the collection of forage and to disperse any armed bodies of men who may be found in the neighbourhood.

22nd November.—I left cantonments this morning and rode out to Arghandeh to join General Baker, but found he had gone on to Maidan. It is reported that a force has been collected by Mullah Mushk-i-Alam in the Wardak country, and is advancing in this direction. I propose to go on to Maidan to-morrow.

Enclosure 2 in No. 47.

No. 58, dated Kabul, 1st December 1879

From LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit Political Diary for the week ending the 29th November 1879.

POLITICAL DIARY FROM 23RD TO 29TH NOVEMBER 1879. (Extract.)

23rd November.—I rode this morning from Urghandeh to Maidan, where I found Brigadier-General Baker encamped. He had received information that a number of men had assembled in the north of the Wardak district with the intention of crossing over into the Nirkh valley immediately to the west of Maidan. Further, Bahadur Khan, headman of the Umar Khel section of Ghilzais in that valley, had refused to come in, and the neighbouring villages were believed to be withholding their quota of bhoosa in anticipation of a disturbance. The disaffection was said to be due to the influence of Mullah Mushk-i-Alam, who is now in Wardak. I at once ordered Captain Turner to go out to Nirkh with two squadrons of cavalry, and bring in Bahadur Khan quietly, if possible, if not, by force. Near sunset this evening I received news that the cavalry had been received with a heavy fire from Bahadur Khan's village, which was found to be strongly fortified, and that the enemy had appeared in force on all sides. I had, however, no doubt that our men would be able to effect their retirement without serious difficulty, and determined, as it was getting late, to send out no reinforcements. Later in the evening the cavalry returned to camp. They have lost three horses. No other casualties.

24th November.—The camp was struck this morning at daybreak, and the whole of the tents and baggages being collected in a small fort close by, the force moved off in the direction of Nirkh. I was in hopes, from the information brought to me, that the enemy might attempt a stand in their former position, and that an example might be made. Before our arrival, however, they had deserted Bahadur Khan's fort and made off to the hills. Small bodies of them were seen, but they were far out of reach and on ground that made pursuit hopeless. Under these circumstances, I gave orders that Bahadur Khan's fort and the whole of the Umar Khel villages in its neighbourhood should be destroyed.

I rode back to Maidan, arriving about 4 o'clock. Since then a strong wind has been blowing with clouds of dust, and the cold is intense.

The country which I saw to-day is apparently rich and populous. From our camp, and from the road to Nirkh, a number of fertile valleys are to be seen studded with villages and full of cultivation. Good timber, a rarity in this country, is not altogether wanting here, and water is plentiful.

25th November.—Rode into Sherpur. The view from several points of the road was exceedingly fine, particularly about Urghandeh, where the ground is high, and the hill slopes comparatively well-wooded. The line of the Hindu Kush, which is almost entirely shut out from view at Kabul by nearer ranges of hills, was from this point clearly visible. The whole range was covered with snow.

I arrived in the afternoon and found awaiting me news that a small party of Kabul mounted police were treacherously attacked yesterday in a village near Dakir, where they had been sent by General Hills in the hope of securing some of Nek Muhammad's property. They were set upon by the villagers, who had received them in a most friendly manner, and lost five killed and three wounded. The men were all Kabulis.

A letter from Sara Khan Beg, formerly Mir of Kulab, who is now in Turkestan, states that the country is in a very unsettled condition. Nek Muhammad is believed to have crossed the Amu, and it is reported that the Russians are urging the Amir of Bokhara to occupy Balkh. Malik Hamid, Lal Muhammad, and others, sent by Sirdar Wali Muhammad to induce Asmatulla Khan to come in, returned this morning. They report that he is holding back partly on account of the dissuasion of Mullah Muskh-i-Alam, his spiritual backer, and partly from the fear that we may again retire from the country and leave him in the lurch.

26th November.—Rumours have reached Kabul to the effect that a rising is contemplated by the Kohistanis and men of Tagao. I have not received any trustworthy information on the subject.

27th November.—Further reports of an impending disturbance in Kohistan and the neighbourhood. It is said that emissaries from Mullah Muskh-i-Alam have been at work in this part of the country, and that a holy war is being assiduously preached.

Brigadier-General Baker informs me that he to-day fell in with a small body of insurgents near the village of Beni Badam while reconnoitring with the cavalry. A few shots were exchanged.

28th November.—Brigadier-General Baker reports that he went out to-day and destroyed the village of Beni Badam, the inhabitants of which he believes were in league with the insurgents. The latter dispersed. They are said to have been Wardaks raised by Mullah Muskh-i-Alam. According to information brought in by neighbouring villagers, their leader was killed yesterday by a chance shot from one of our men.

Sirdar Fakir Muhammad Khan, a cousin of Yahya Khan's, and father-in-law of Abdur Rahman, came into Kabul to-day. He has for the last five or six years been living in Kohdaman on a small pension granted him by the Amir Sher Ali. He says that the people of Kohistan and the neighbourhood are in an excited state, and that an outbreak may be expected at any moment.

29th November.—Early this morning a letter came in from Shahbaz Khan reporting that the headmen and people of Kohistan are on the point of rising. He had sent for some of the headmen, but they refused to come in, and openly declared that they intended to raise a holy war and destroy the British force in Kabul. A reply was sent to Shahbaz Khan urging him to do all in his power to keep matters quiet, and he was furnished with letters for the most influential men of the Kohistani Maliks calling upon them to come in. It is generally believed that a considerable force is assembling in this quarter with the avowed intention of making a night attack upon our cantonments.

Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan has been sent to Kohistan, where he is believed to possess some influence, with orders to re-assure the people and bring the Maliks in if possible.

General Baker reports that all is going well in the direction of Maidan. The Wardak insurgents have completely dispersed, and have returned to their homes, in spite of the exhortations of Mullah Mushk-i-Alam. Supplies are coming in freely, and the greater portion of the amount stipulated for the district has already been produced.

A Peshawuri merchant from Tashkurghan has come in to camp. He says the country beyond the Hindu Kush is thoroughly unsettled, and that the roads between this and Ghoris are impassable for small parties. According to him Ghulam Hyder Khan is making great efforts to secure the troops who have kept together in Turkestan. He has promised them an increase of pay and regular payments. He is said to have seven regiments of infantry at Mazar-i-Sharif.

It is confidently asserted here by city bankers and others that the Kohistanis are in force at Khoga Sarai, and that a night attack upon cantonments is imminent. Muhammad Usman Khan of Tagao is said to be acting in concert.

(Signed) H. M. DURAND,

for Lieut.-General Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force.

No. 48.

No. 251 of 1879. (Extract.)

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honourable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 19th December 1879.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a further collection of telegrams, received from our officers in Afghanistan.

* From General Roberts, No. 37, dated 7th November 1879.

To General Roberts, No. 28C.P., dated 30th November 1879.

From General Roberts, No. 42, dated 14th November 1879.

From General Roberts, No. 44, dated 15th November 1879.

2. We further enclose copy of letters* received from Lieutenant-General Roberts, K.C.B.; V.C.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

A. J. ARBUTHNOT.

A. CLARKE.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

W. STOKES.

A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 1st December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY.

GENERAL BAKER's force returns here to-day. He reports that the forage demanded from the Maidan district has all been provided, and that the neighbourhood is quiet. The Wardak people have been trying to make the Logaris join them, in view to giving trouble. They have not responded, and are daily sending in large quantities of forage. In Kohistan there is some excitement; but I am in hopes matters will quiet down, and that it will not (be) necessary to send troops there at present. Weather is very cold, and all hands are well employed in providing shelter for the winter. Convoy which started on 27th November, met up convoy at Seh Baba yesterday. General Kennedy and party expected here to-day. All well.

Enclosure 2 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 3rd December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY.

HELIOGRAPHIC communication has now been established between Kabul and Landi Kotal, with intermediate stations at Lataband, Jagdalak, Gandamak, Jalalabad, and Ali Boghan. Some of the headmen from Kohistan are now on their way to Kabul. The excitement there will probably cease. All well.

Enclosure 3 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 7th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

KOHISTANIS are assembling and inclined to give trouble. Some men under a Mullah, named Mushk-i-Alam, have collected again near Beni-Badam; these people and the Kohistanis are too far away at present to take notice of. I am endeavouring to settle matters without proceeding to extremities. City and neighbourhood of Kabul quiet. All well.

Enclosure 4 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 7th December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

AFFAIRS round Kabul less satisfactory of late. In Maidan, Sirdar Muhammad Hosain Khan has been murdered, apparently by men of Mushk-i-Alam's raising. Sirdar Abdulla Khan has been attacked by armed bands in Logar, and for a time besieged in a fort. Some Kohistani Maliks have come in; but the leading man sends excuses, and the country is reported very unquiet. Anxious as I am to avoid any further expeditions at present, I may be forced, if this movement spreads, to send the troops out again.

Enclosure 5 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 8th December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp, Gwalior.

Parade of all troops was held this morning to present distinguished conduct medals to men of 72nd Highlanders. The sight of the splendid-looking troops cannot but impress the people of Kabul, a large number of whom attended the parade. As the excitement in Maidan and Kohistan directions continued, General Macpherson will move this afternoon a short distance on direct road towards Maidan, and to-morrow General Baker will proceed to Charasia, and on Wednesday by the valley of the Kabul river to a point on the Ghazni road in rear of Maidan. As bringing up troops from the direction of Jellalabad will have a good political effect, I have ordered the Guide Corps to Kabul. They will probably only remain a few days here.

Enclosure 6 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 10th December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

Baker continues his movements to-day by Valley of Kabul river towards Maidan. Macpherson has altered his course somewhat in consequence of the enemy being yesterday discovered trying to reach Kohistan from Arghandi, and this morning he occupied the Surkh Kotal, which divides Kohistan from Paghman. He will probably be engaged with the enemy this afternoon or to-morrow. Baker will then be on their line of retreat.

Enclosure 7 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 11th December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

General Macpherson occupied the Surkh Kotal yesterday morning, and prevented the enemy from Ghazni direction, joining the Kohistanis. He was just in time, for shortly after his arrival 5,000 or 6,000 Kohistanis reached near Kotal. Their advance party was met at close quarters and driven back on the main position, which was assaulted and taken in good style by 67th Foot, 3rd Sikhs, and 5th Goorkhas. Kohistanis fled, leaving six standards in our hands, and losing number of men. Our loss, Lieutenant-Colonel Fitz-Hugh and one Goorkha, two, 67th Foot, four, 3rd Sikhs, all slightly wounded. Practice of Captain Morgan's battery was very effective, also dismounted practice of 14th Bengal Lancers. General Macpherson's brigade with cavalry and horse artillery under General Massy will advance to-day towards Arghandi and Maidan, and should effect a junction with General Baker.

Enclosure 8 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 11th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to VICEROY and FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

GOUGH reports from Gandamak, Ghilzai state of feeling very suspicious. Asmatulla's influence supposed cause; he believes thwarting us every way. Rumours prevail Jagdalak may be attacked. Vague impression here that when winter becomes severe our Kabul position will be seriously threatened by hordes from direction Kohistan and Ghazni. Increased preparations and vigilance requisite.

Enclosure 9 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 12th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY and FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

As reported in my telegram of yesterday Macpherson's brigade advanced by Paghman Valley toward Arghandi, while the cavalry and horse artillery under Massy made for Ghazni road. Enemy appeared in very great number and quite outflanking Massy forced him to retire. Ground is much cut up by deep water-cuts, the guns upset, and had to be temporarily abandoned. Cavalry charged several times, but the numbers against them were too great. Macpherson's brigade came up soon afterwards and drove off the enemy. Meanwhile Colonel Macgregor had been enabled to recover the guns. Macpherson bivouacked for the night at Deh Mozang, which had been previously occupied by 200 of 72nd Highlanders. Large body of enemy retreated to hills south of Bala Hissar with the intention of capturing that position, and thus getting command of the city. The picquets on this point had been strengthened, enemy assaulted it repeatedly during the night, but were beaten off with loss by detachment of 67th and 72nd under command of Captain Jervis of former regiment. Macpherson is now reinforcing the position and will then drive enemy off neighbouring heights. Baker is on return march to Kabul; he engaged enemy repeatedly yesterday and inflicted great loss. He reports in high terms of work done by 5th Punjab Cavalry under Major Williams, his advance guard under Major White, 92nd Highlanders, and by a company of that regiment under Lieutenant J. Napier. The combination against us is undoubtedly very extensive. Guides arrived last night. Thinking that excitement might spread along line of communication have requested General Bright to reinforce Gandamak to admit of troops there being used as a moveable column; it is very desirable tribes should see that our communications are strongly held. At same time I don't think more troops are required from India. Wali Muhammad Hassan Khan and all other Sirdars are with me and affording every assistance. City is quiet. I entrusted command of Sherpur cantonments to General Hugh Gough during my absence, his arrangements were admirable. Our loss yesterday was 18 killed and 25 wounded. Amongst the killed Lieutenant Hardy, Royal Horse Artillery, and Lieutenants Hearsey and Ricardo, 9th Lancers, and amongst the wounded Colonel Cleland and Captain Mackenzie, 9th Lancers, former dangerously. Lieutenant Cook, 3rd Sikhs, and Forbes, 14th Bengal Lancers, both severely.

Enclosure 10 in No. 48.

* Telegram, dated 13th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

Enemy continued collecting. Yesterday a few appeared to the north-east on lower spurs of Kohistan hills. Large number assembled in and around Benishahr, while those in neighbourhood of Indiki were considerably strengthened. Macpherson held point above Bala Hissar, but failed to dislodge enemy from high peak, where their position was of great strength and held by a large force, chiefly men of the Ardal regiments. Baker returned by evening, having engaged the enemy repeatedly during the day, with but slight loss to his own troops. Night passed quietly. This morning Baker moved out with 72nd Highlanders, Guide Infantry, Wing 3rd Sikhs, 4 guns, G-3, 4 guns No. 2 Mountain Battery, 1 Squadron 9th Lancers, and 5th Punjab Cavalry. He found the enemy in great force near Benishahr. Attacked and drove them before him until his men ultimately occupied the high peaks which the enemy were holding all yesterday, and which the 5th Goorkhas from the Bala Hissa Hill had reached a few minutes previously. Casualties yesterday: Lieutenant Ferguson, 72nd Highlanders; Major Cook, 5th Goorkhas; and Lieutenant Fasken, 3rd Sikhs, wounded; one man, 67th Foot, three of 72nd, five of 5th Goorkhas wounded, and two men of the 3rd Sikhs killed yesterday. No report of casualties yet received from General Baker. Will telegraph again shortly.

Enclosure 11 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 13th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

The enemy have been defeated on all sides to-day. A combined attack was to have been made on our position to-night. City people had agreed to join the tribesmen who amount, at a moderate estimate, to about twenty thousand men, a large number of whom were armed with Snider rifles, and fought to the last, especially with their knives, against our cavalry on taking the initiative to-day; the very heavy loss the enemy suffered have, I hope, broken up the combination, but large bodies of the enemy are still hanging about southern end of Chardeh valley, and north-western slopes of Kohistan hills. They will be attacked to-morrow unless they disperse during night. 92nd Highlanders led the advance of General Baker's brigade under Major White. The attack on the enemy's position was most brilliantly headed by Lieutenant Forbes, who, with his Colour Sergeant Drummond, was killed in a hand-to-hand fight. The Guides Cavalry under Major Stewart were very successful and made a grand charge, as did the 9th Lancers under Captain Butson, who was killed with one Sergeant-Major and three of his men. Captain Chisholm and Lieutenant Trower, of same regiment, with eight men, are wounded. The 5th Punjab Cavalry under Major Williams distinguished themselves, Majors Hammond and Stewart both leading successful charges. Our total loss during last three days is 43 killed, of whom six are officers, and 76 wounded, of whom ten are officers. Lieutenant Forbes, 14th Bengal Lancers, reported as wounded in my telegram of 11th, was, I regret to say, killed. The troops have behaved admirably, and, notwithstanding the hard work and extreme cold at night, are in good health and famous spirits. The large proportion of killed to wounded is mainly owing to the enemy killing all wounded men who may have fallen into their hands. I am deeply indebted to Brigadier-General Baker.

Enclosure 12 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 14th December 1870.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

We have been fighting all the morning and gained great success at first, but the enemy are coming on in such numbers that I have decided to collect my force within Sherpur entrenchments giving up heights above city and Bala Hissar as it is not possible to hold such an extended position while the enemy are so numerous. Keeping up communication with the outposts would be very difficult. I have ordered Gough to push on from Gandamak as fast as he can, withdrawing Latabund detachments as he passes by, as this excitement and combination are now sure to spread along line of communication. I strongly recommend more troops being pushed up so as to admit of General Bright being able to keep open communication and to enable me to clear the country should I find it impossible to do so with my present force, which seems likely, looking to the overwhelming numbers and the great determination the enemy exhibit. Your Excellency may depend on my doing all that is possible, but I foresee that I shall not be able to do all I ought unless strongly reinforced, which should be done without delay. I have ordered Arbuthnot's brigade from Jalalabad to Kabul immediately.

Enclosure 13 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 15th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

SIRDAR MUHAMMUD HASSAN, Governor, left city secretly about three this morning presumed fled.

Enclosure 14 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 15th December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

THE force is now collected in Sherpur. Our losses to-day 19 killed, including Captain Spens and Lieutenant Gaisford, 72nd Highlanders, and 88 wounded, including Captain Gordon, 92nd Highlanders, Captain Battye, Guides Corps, and Lieutenant Egerton, 72nd Highlanders. To-morrow the force, if not attacked, will be employed in completing our defences; afterwards shall move out daily and prevent enemy from surrounding our position, but while they are in such numbers nothing is gained by capturing difficult hills, which are far from Sherpur.

Enclosure 15 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 17th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

No communication with Kabul by telegraph since 14th. On 15th General Gough reported from Jagdallak line cut on both sides of him. Is so still, but is open to Pezwan, which is within 13 miles of him.

Enclosure 16 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 17th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

I HEARD last night from Gandamak that Gough's posts were being attacked, and he had called for reinforcements. Three companies, 51st, were to go to him from Gandamak this morning. I ordered remaining wing, 45th Sikhs, and 4th Goorkhas relieved from Ali Boghan to start for Gandamak this morning. Arbuthnot and staff also go there to-day. The telegraph is still working to Pezwan, but we have no communication either with Kabul or Gough. Weather is cloudy and heliograph useless. From information received Warburton believes the attack on Gough is from the south, not by Asmatullah; but it is probably both.

Enclosure 17 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 9th December 1879.

From SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, Punjab, Lahore, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

YAKUB KHAN reached Peshawur last night. Leaves to-morrow. Reaches Meerut on morning of 14th as at present arranged. Kindly send orders regarding destination and treatment of Mustaufi and others who were at Gandamak to-day.

Enclosure 18 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 9th December 1879.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp, to PUNJAB GOVERNMENT, Lahore.

YAHYA and Zakaria Khan and Wazir, not Mustaufi, should be sent to Lahore to await further orders. They should be treated as State prisoners. Otherwise well.

Enclosure 19 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 16th December 1879.

From PUNJAB, Government Lahore, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

THE three State prisoners (Yahya Khan, Zakari Khan, and Wazir,) from Kabul have reached Peshawur and leave this morning for Attock, spending night there, and following nights at Rawul Pindi and Jhelum, reaching Lahore on 19th.

Enclosure 20 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 27th November 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

WEEKLY summary of news. Everything remains profoundly tranquil in the province. The proclamation and announcement of the government of Kandahar being entrusted to Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, we read at Kelat-i-Ghilzai to an assembly of Ghilzai Chiefs of the Hotak and Tokki classes, who afterwards presented a written paper, declaring their great pleasure at the arrangement and willingness to pay revenue. Many chiefs of the Andali and Taraki clans of Ghilzais, living between Ghazni and Shahjui, have come or sent in to Kelat, professing submission and asking for service. They have been referred to Kabul. A sufficiency of supplies for the winter has been collected at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. The Hazarabs on the northern frontier, who showed symptoms of rebellion, have quieted down on receiving assurances that Sher Ali's officials are acting under orders of British Government. From the Herat side there is nothing new. The Idi-i-Kurban occurred on the 25th. As on a former similar occasion, the usual procession outside the city was dispensed with by the Sirdar, who, however, gave an entertainment at his house to the principal people of the town, at which he delivered an address on the justice, moderation, and religious toleration of the British Government, as exhibited both in India, and by their present treatment of the Durani nation. Weather colder, thermometer falling to 15 or lower at night. Health of troops excellent.

Enclosure 21 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 6th December 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

EVERYTHING quiet throughout Kandahar district. Rumour is current in city that Ayub Khan is marching on Kandahar with troops, but it is not generally credited on account of his known want of money. Mir Afzul's son who attempted to raise money and men in Bakwa has been expelled by the people. Yar Muhammad Khan, chief of the Augizai clan of the Barakzais, resident on the Helmund below Girishk, has come in to pay his respects to General Stewart.

Enclosure 22 in No. 48.

Telegram, dated 11th December 1879. (Extract.)

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Viceroy's Camp.

WEEKLY summary of news. Rumours of Ayub Khan's having proclaimed a "ghaza" and moved to Wadubagh, a few miles out of Herat, with the intention of marching on Kandahar, have gained strength, and the townspeople are convinced of their truth. Some apprehension was at first caused and people began to lay in store of grain, but a counter rumour that Sirdar Sher Ali would march out to meet the Herat force has restored confidence. The cessation of the storage of wheat by the Commissariat, and the sale of small quantities by the Sirdar, have caused the price to fall 25 per cent. The district is tranquil.

Enclosure 23 in No. 48.

No. 37, dated Kabul, 7th November 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B. Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

It has occurred to me that the Governor-General in Council might wish to be informed in greater detail of my reasons for arresting Sirdar Yahya Khan and other leading men on the 12th October, and for keeping Yakub Khan under more strict restraint since the 28th.

2. As regards the latter point, the consequences of the Ex-Amir's escape might be very serious; and, however small the probability of his attempting flight, I think this fact would in itself have justified me in taking all necessary precautions to ensure his being safely guarded. But besides this I had some positive reasons for supposing that an attempt at flight was not altogether unlikely. Between the 12th October, when the Amir tendered his resignation, and the 28th, when he was informed that his resignation had been accepted, he was practically under no restraint. I was convinced of his desire to leave the country at once, a desire possibly strengthened by the dread of an inquiry into the circumstances of the outbreak and the opposition afterwards offered to our advance. After my interview with Yakub Khan on the 23th October, I no longer felt sure of his wishes and intentions. Certain evidence had lately been brought before the Inquiry Commission which tended to prove him guilty of culpable weakness and neglect during the attack on the Residency, and to show that he was using his influence against us while the force was advancing to Char Asiah. I thought it most probable that he knew something of the charges brought against him; and at the same time I was confidently assured by Sirdar Wulli Muhammad Khan that an escape would be shortly attempted. Nevertheless, my first idea was to entrust the safe custody of the Ex-Amir to Nawab Sir Ghulam Hassan Khan, refraining from any measures of actual restraint; and arrangements were accordingly made for the Nawab's residence close to Yakub Khan's tent. This plan, however, I found impossible to carry out. The Nawab expressed his utter inability to guarantee the Ex-Amir's safety unless further precautions were taken; and earnestly begged that I would increase the number of sentries over Yakub Khan's quarters. Under these circumstances, I felt that any further attempt to spare the Ex-Amir's feelings in the matter would amount to neglect of the orders of Government; and effectual means were therefore taken to prevent any possibility of escape on his part.

3. As regards the arrests made on the 12th October, I had several reasons for not leaving Yahya Khan and the Amir's ministers at large. From all sides I had long been assured that they were the Amir's most trusted advisers, and possessed of great power; and that this power was being steadily used against British interests. During the advance of the force from Khushai it became clear, from the small amount of aid which reached me in the way of supplies, and from the opposition offered to our advance, that these men either were acting against us, or were generally credited with an amount of influence which they did not possess. The latter explanation I could not accept. All my information went to show that they were in fact the most influential men in the country. Yahya Khan had been Governor of Kabul, and the others had held very high posts both under Sher Ali and Yakub Khan. The Wazir Shah Muhammad had been selected to go to Tashkend on the part of Sher Ali, and was holding the office of Foreign Minister. The Mustaufi had for years been the most trusted and powerful statesman in Afghanistan. The only conclusion I could draw was that all three were against us, and I therefore thought it necessary to check at once and effectually their power of doing mischief. After their arrest, I found that Nawab Sir Ghulam Hassan Khan and others who had special opportunities of ascertaining the truth, strongly approved of the step I had taken and were of opinion that every one of the three if left at large would have proved a resolute and dangerous enemy.

4. Zakaria Khan I caused to be arrested because, although not a man of special influence, he was reported to have joined with the ladies of Yakub Khan's and Yahya Khan's families in distributing bread to the city people immediately before the Char Asiah fight, and in stirring them up to a holy war.

5. Some surprise has I believe been felt here, and perhaps elsewhere, at my having omitted to arrest General Daud Shah Khan at the same time as the ministers. In case his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council should have noted this point, I would explain that I heard nothing of importance against Daud Shah Khan; and I consider that his attempt to assist Major Cavagnari on the 3rd September entitled him to be treated with less suspicion than the others. Since their arrest he has lived close to my camp, and has been of great use to me in supplying information regarding the Afghan army, and other matters. I anticipate nothing but advantage from his remaining at large.

6. I am not aware whether any such explanation as I have given will be considered necessary. But I have thought it desirable that his Excellency the Governor-General in Council should be very fully informed of my reasons for putting the Ex-Amir and his advisers under restraint; and I hope those reasons may be regarded as sufficient to justify the measures I have adopted.

7. I would take this opportunity of expressing my confident opinion, formed after careful thought, that the explosions in the Bala Hissar on the 16th October were not premeditated. At first I was inclined to believe that they might have been due to treachery. From the time at which they occurred, their partial nature, and other circumstances, I am now fully convinced that they were in fact due to accident alone; and this conviction is, I believe, universally held.

Enclosure 24 in No. 48.

No. 28 C.P., dated Governor-General's Camp, 30th November 1879.

From A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force.

I AM directed to acknowledge your letter No. 37, dated 7th November 1879, reporting in greater detail your reasons for arresting Sirdar Yahya Khan and other leading Afghan Sirdars on the 12th October, and for keeping Yakub Khan, Ex-Amir, under more strict restraint since the 28th of that month.

2. In reply, I am to say that his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General approves your proceedings in putting the Ex-Amir and his Ministers under restraint.

Enclosure 25 in No. 48.

No. 42, dated Kabul, 14th November 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

Two letters from Muhammad Said Agha, Governor of Ghazni, to the address of General Sir F. Roberts.
One from Abdul Kadir Khan, one of the Chiefs of the Ghazni district, to the address of General Sir F. Roberts.
One from Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan, Governor of Jelalabad, to the address of General Sir F. Roberts.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Governor-General in Council, the letters marginally noted, with abstract translations.

Enclosure 26 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of Letter from MUHAMMUD SAID AGHA, dated 17th Zi KADA=3rd November 1879.

I HAVE received your order (letter) sent to me through the Nawab. You ordered me to come to you after making arrangements for this place, and I am ready to obey your order. You are perfectly aware of the faithlessness of the Afghans, especially of the people of Ghazni. I am not like these men, and shall not be faithless, especially to the British Government. When the British troops arrived at Khushi, three infantry regiments and a battery of artillery came to me and said they had selected me as their leader for the Ghaza. After two days I managed to disperse them with great difficulty. A few days later I received orders to send Government grain to Kabul. I loaded 84 Government camels with wheat, and was about to send them off, when the son of Mullah Mushki Alam and other Mullahs and influential men came and said they would not let the Government grain go, and that they had selected me as their leader for the Ghaza. The second day I pacified these men and sent them to their homes. I then sent the wheat to Kabul. When they were informed of this, Mullah Mushki Alam assembled some of the influential men and Chiefs, and they decided to select me as their leader. They have not come to me yet. Hence my delay. I am trying my best to calm the people. Let us see what will happen. Afterwards I will come to pay my respects to you. On account of this disturbance I have not yet published the proclamation. If you want me to leave the people as they are and come to you, please inform me, and as soon as your order reaches me I will start.

Enclosure 27 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of Letter from MUHAMMUD SAID AGHA, Governor of Ghazni, to the Address of the GENERAL, dated 19th Zi Kada=5th November 1879.

THREE days ago I sent a letter by the hand of the servant of the Nawab to you, in which I gave an account of affairs here. You will have read and understood it. The following are the news:—

The same mutineers assembled and came yesterday to a place one koh from here. They said they wanted to read the Khutba in my name and had selected me as their leader for the Ghaza. As I knew these ignorant people well, I privately won over some of their leaders. The men who had collected them went home, and the leaders themselves came to me in the town. I have also sent letters of advice to the people of Wardak, and have won over some of the influential men by money presents. Yesterday I read and published your proclamation. The mutineers who remained here are discussing matters with me. As the people of Afghanistan are all ignorant and faithless, no trust can be placed in them. Nevertheless, I hope I shall be able to disperse them, either by means of money or otherwise. I stated before that you would not hear a single false word from me. Everything else will be explained to you verbally. Please send an order in easy and clear words which may be understood by the ignorant people of this place, to the effect that any man of Ghazni who disobeys the order of Government, or of the Governor, or commits any misdeeds will be very severely punished.

With regard to my being summoned, I beg to say, as I said before, that I have been waiting here only for the sake of these mutineers. If you order me to come to you leaving these men in this state, I am ready to obey. I will come with my own followers only if you like; or if you wish it, I will, after quieting the people, come to you with some of the influential men.

Enclosure 28 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of a Petition from ABDUL KADIR KHAN, of Ghazni, to GENERAL ROBERTS.

I HAVE received your letter sent by the hand of Mirza Muhammad Yusuf. As regards Khushdil Khan, I beg to state that he and his brother never entered Ghazni. He came from Wardak and passed at a distance of 10 kos from the city and going on to Karabagh which is 18 kos from here. He then sent his man to Muhammad Said, and said he had no money. The latter sent Rupees 500 for his expenses, and told him to stay where he was for some days. He did so. It is said that Muhammad Said afterwards sent him with a servant of his own to the son of Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, Hazara, and asked the Sirdar to send him viâ Jaghari to Herat. As soon as I received your order I sent two men to find out where he was. They have not returned yet. As soon as I find where he is I will go after him and arrest him.

Two or three days ago Muhammad Said sent for Akhundzada Mushki Alam and informed him that he wanted to wage jihad and asked him to collect men. The Akhundzada has collected some Mullahs and vagabonds for this purpose and brought them to Ghazni. Muhammad Said now pays his expenses. First the expenses were being realised from the people, who were ordered to supply cooked food. When I was informed of this I assembled the Tajik Maliks and went to the city to Muhammad Said Agha and Akhundzada Mushk-i-Alam, and after a long discussion stopped them from taking the expenses from the people. I have told the people not to give a single pie to them. I have also told them (Muhammad Said and Mushki Alam) that if they did anything I would oppose them, as, I said, we were subjects to the British Government. I await your orders, and if you allow me I will settle with them. Muhammad Said has altogether wasted the Government grain. He issues Barats every day in the name of Khasadars, and also sells it.

What do you want done about the Government camels and horses which are here? Shall they be sent to Kabul or remain here?

Enclosure 29 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of Letter from SIRDAR MUHAMMUD HASSAN KHAN, Governor of Jelalabad, to GENERAL ROBERTS, received on 10th November 1879.

I HAVE received the proclamation which you sent by the hand of Abdul Ghafur, and have understood its contents. You wrote that the Amir had abdicated, and that I was Governor as before, and that I must try my best to serve Government.

From the time that the British troops moved from Lundikotal, and the Amir sent orders to me, up till now, I have rendered service to the utmost of my power, and I am ready to do so henceforward in any way you please—at Jelalabad or elsewhere.

Enclosure 30 in No. 48.

No. 44, dated Kabul, 15th November 1879.

From MAJOR-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Expeditionary Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq. C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of his Excellency the Viceroy Letter from Sultan Murad Khan, Mir of Kadaghan.

Letter from Mahomed Said Agha, Governor of Ghazni.

Letter from Abdul Kadir Khan, one of the Chiefs of Ghazni.

and Governor-General in Council, the letters marginally noted, in original, with abstract translations.

2. I also enclose with translations copies of my replies to Sultan Murad Khan and Mahomed Said Agha.

Enclosure 31 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of a Letter from SULTAN MURAD KHAN, Mir of Kadaghan, to the Address of GENERAL ROBERTS.

I HAVE heard that you have occupied Kabul. All India has benefited by the British rule, and I also have now become a servant of the British Government. This country of Kadaghan has from one end to the other been in the possession of my family for several generations. It is now yours. So long as I live I will serve you. In former days when the great Lord Sahib came to Kabul, my grandfather made friends with him. Afterwards when the kingdom fell into the hands of Amir Dost Mahomed Khan and his sons, they became a barrier between us and India. We were reduced to submission, and our communication with the Indian Government was stopped. Now you have returned, and the road which was closed is re-opened.

The state of affairs in this part of the country is as follows:—

One Mahomed Karim Beg, my uncle, had for a long time been an exile at Aibak. Lately he went to Kabul to make arrangements about his allowance, and returning from there to Andarab joined the Andarabis, and began to do mischief. He raided the people as far as Nahrain and plundered their property. Considering the punishment of this tribe to be necessary, I arrived at Andarab on the 25th October and occupied the country. General Najm-ud-deen Khan, Colonel Ghulam Hassan Khan, five troops of cavalry, and one infantry regiment were with me. If God please, after settling the country I will return to Kunduz.

Andarab, Ghori, Khost, and other hilly tracts belong to Kadaghan. As the Amir increased the taxes on these countries and the people were unable to pay them, they were constantly raising disturbances. The Amir several times offered me the (government) of these hills, but as I saw that the taxes on the tribes were very heavy, I refused it, because I knew I should get a bad name. He (the Amir) then gave (me?) back the Uzbek country, but taking my hills, appointed his own officials to them. Nevertheless I served him and did not give up my loyalty.

When the late Amir entered Turkestan and died there, the whole country was disturbed. The Mirs of Badakshan, who were exiles at Mazar-i-Sharif, returned to their country and occupied it.

Although they (the Afghans) had occupied our hilly tracts, and the people also came and said that it was time they should be set free, and (asked me) why I would not take them over, yet I told them to wait as the Afghans might return the hills to me. The exiles of all countries have gone and occupied their native countries. I could have raised disturbances also, but I did not do so as it would have given me a bad name. Now, if the British treat me kindly, I will serve them as long as I live. I have served even those who did not show favour to me according to my services. I will serve the British to the utmost.

I have received a letter from Sayid Guhar to the effect that Nek Mahomed Khan with six or seven sowars came from Kabul to Doshi via Khinjan, and that he sent him with his brother to Mazar-i-Sharif. You should know this.

Enclosure 32 in No. 48.

Translation of a Letter from GENERAL ROBERTS, to SULTAN MAHOMED KHAN, Mir of Kadaghan, dated 7th November 1879.

My desire is that remaining a friend and well-wisher of the British Government, you may enjoy comfort and ease, and occupy yourself in keeping your country quiet and safe. It would be well if you sent one of your trusted agents to me, so that I might communicate my friendly sentiments to you through him.

You should devote your attention to the government and protection of your country.

Enclosure 33 in No. 48.

Translation of a Letter from MAHOMED SAID AGHA, Governor of Ghazni, to GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., received on 10th November 1879.

I HAVE before informed you that the ignorant rebels came to a distance of one mile from here, and that they wanted to enter into a discussion with me. I discussed the matter with them. It was decided that I should go alone to you and make arrangements with you about the rebels and bring reassuring letters for them. Mullah Mushk-i-Alam, Ahmad Khan, and Amin Andari agreed to this. I sent the people who had assembled to the Ghazni villages with letters, but I brought some of their leaders whom I had won over to the city, and kept all whom I considered mischievous outside. At night Abdul Kadir Khan, Ahmad Khan, and Amin Andari broke the above agreement, and early in the morning they sent a man to me and asked me to come out of the city as they had something to say to me. When I went to their place I saw that their attitude had changed. They said that they wanted to wage a ghaza; I was hiding. These ignorant faithless men tried to fire three shots at me, but the guns did not go off. When I came to the city Abdul Kadir took Mullah Mushk-i-Alam and other Mullahs to his fort. The next day Ahmad Khan, Amin Andari, and Abdul Kadir collected some 7,000 men and besieged the city. I then sent letters to some of my friends among the Sayids, the Hazaras, and the Wardaks. By the afternoon I had filled the Bala Hissar with my men. I passed the night there, and in the morning I left six Andaris as my lieutenants in the Bala Hissar, and leaving the fort I went to Siah Sang, where lives the son of Akor Shah Ali Akbar Sayid, who is a relative of mine. If God please, I will leave for your camp to-morrow, and will explain the matter to you verbally. Let us see how the rebels will treat my deputies.

P.S.—After I left the rebels were ashamed of what they had done and dispersed to their homes. When I come to you I will make good arrangements for the affairs of this country.

Enclosure 34 in No. 48.

Translation of a Letter from GENERAL ROBERTS to the address of MAHOMED AGHA, Governor of Ghazni, dated 10th November 1879.

I HAVE received your letter and understood its contents. As you have now come out of Ghazni you had better come to me and explain everything verbally. When I have heard everything I will give suitable orders.

Enclosure 35 in No. 48.

Abstract Translation of a Letter from ABDUL KADIR KHAN, one of the Chiefs of Ghazni, to the Address of GENERAL ROBERTS, dated 22nd Zil Kuda=9th November 1879.

WITH regard to the sons of Shahghassi Sherdil Khan I wrote to you that men had been sent after them to Kara Bagh and Jaghori to find out all about them. To-day my servant returned and said that Mahomed Said Agha had detained them at Kara Bagh, as he wanted to send his family also with them. A few days ago, with the help of Abdulla Khan, Hakim of Kara Bagh, and a servant of Mahomed Said, they went to Mukar. The two sons of the Shahghassi, leaving their families at Mukar, have now gone on.

I mentioned in my former letter that Mahomed Said had collected some Mullahs, Maliks, Chiefs, and vagabonds at Ghazni, and had given them barats on the Tajiks. I stopped the barats by force. As their expenses were not paid, and my force was also strong, Mahomed Said ordered that government grain and camels might be given to them. I protected the stores and appointed my men over them. I have also kept the government camels safe and did not give them up. On this account Mahomed Said, with General Mahomed Jan Khan and some Mullahs went towards Jagatu in Wardak. Some other Mullahs and the Andaris dispersed to their homes. I hope Mahomed Said and Mahomed Jan Khan's party will also disperse.

Baz Ali Khan will explain some matters verbally to you.

No. 49.

Telegram from SECRETARY OF STATE to VICEROY, 19th December 1879. (Extract.)

WE think that you should retain regiments which have not left India, and for which reliefs are on their way, and a good regiment from the Cape will come to India instead of home.

No. 50.

Telegram from VICEROY to SECRETARY OF STATE, 20th December 1879. (Extract.)

I SHALL be glad to retain relief regiments, and have regiment from Cape, but do not consider present needs justify application for reinforcements from England.

No. 51.

No. 254 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honorable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, December 31, 1879.

WE have the honor to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of the Kabul Diary* from the 30th of November to the 6th of December, both days inclusive.

* Received with letter from Sir F. Roberts, No. 66, dated 7th December 1879.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure in No. 51.

No. 66, dated Kabul, 7th December 1879.

FROM LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honor to submit a diary for the week ending 6th December 1879.

Kabul Diary, November 30th to December 6th, 1879. (Extract.)

30th November.—A report received to-day to the effect that Usman Khan of Tagao had advanced with his followers to Deh-i-Sabz. He is said to be concerting with the Kohistanis and General Muhammad Jan, Wardak, a plan for attacking cantonments.

Sirdar Abdulla Khan writes from Logar under date the 29th, that some insurgents from Zurmat and Kharwar had arrived at Charkh and were threatening Logar. The Logar people had promised to stand by him, and to have nothing to do with the insurgents.

At the suggestion of General Daud Shah I have sent a letter to Mir Bacha Khan, the reputed leader of the malcontent party in Kohistan. I have called upon him to come in and assured him of honourable treatment if he does so.

Yakub Khan was informed this evening that his departure was fixed for to-morrow.

1st December.—At daybreak this morning the Ex-Amir left Kabul for Peshawur. He seemed in good spirits.

Brigadier-General Baker came in from Maidan.

It is said that the Kohistanis and Tagao men have fixed upon to-night for a combined attack upon our position.

2nd December.—Sirdar Shahbaz Khan writes from Charikar, under date the 1st of December, that he has assembled the Khans of Kohistan, and that they have now abandoned all intention of raising a disturbance. Mir Bacha has not obeyed his summons, but all the rest have consented to come in and pay their respects. Sirdar Ibrahim Khan writes from Balab in Kohdaman that he has distributed to the headmen the letters sent by me. Mir Bacha Khan has come in to him, and expressed his willingness to present himself at Kabul after quieting the people. Mir Bacha himself writes to me to the same effect. He says the people are much alarmed, and that they require to be reassured before he can leave them. This of course is only an excuse.

Sirdar Abdulla Khan reports that the people of Kharwar and Zurmat are assembling and threaten a disturbance. Daud Shah appears to anticipate a general outbreak of disorder in Kohistan, Wardak, Logar, and Maidan. According to his information Usman Khan, Mir Bacha, and General Faiz Muhammad have promised to throw in their lot with the insurgents.

Captain Burton heliographs from Seh Baba that Usman Khan has received letters from Mulla Mushk-i-Alam of Ghazni, inciting him to attack Lataband and Seh Baba.

I held a Durbar this afternoon for the reception of any one who wished to be presented to me or to present any petition.

Sirdar Fakir Muhammad of Khodaman attended and requested permission to return to his home, which I granted. The Bokhara Shahzada was also present, and a number of Barakzai Sirdars and city merchants. None had any special request to make. For the future I propose to hold a Durbar twice a week.

A small amount of bhoosa was brought in to-day from Kohistan.

3rd December.—Sirdar Abdulla Khan writes* that the insurgents from Zurmat and

* Letter undated. Kharwar advanced on the 1st from Charkh towards Logar, and that he went out to meet them with some Logaris. On the approach of the insurgents nearly all the Logaris deserted him, and he was forced to take refuge in a fort at the foot of the hills, where he was besieged at the time of writing.

Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan reports from Maidan that two companies of Ardal Sepoys have entered the district under the leadership of the Mullas. He says the people of Maidan are disaffected, and that he is himself helpless, having with him only twenty unarmed men.

Sirdar Ibrahim Khan came in this afternoon with some of the Kohistani headmen. Mir Bacha Khan was not of the number.

It is rumoured that General Ghulam Haidar Khan has come down from Turkistan to Charikar with eight guns.

4th December.—Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan has been murdered in Maidan. It is said that a body of insurgents entered his fort suddenly while he was writing, and cut him down.

I wrote to Sirdar Abdullah Khan to-day, telling him that if he found himself in serious danger he was to come in. If too hard pressed to make his escape he was to let me know, and measures would be taken to send him aid.

I also sent a letter to Sharbaz Khan, urging him to send in Mir Bacha and other Kohistani headmen if possible.

5th December.—This morning I rode out to Charasiah with Sir Michael Kennedy, who has come up here for a few days, and went over the scene of the late engagement.

A Hindu servant who came in from Maidan yesterday, reports that on the evening of the 3rd two or three hundred men, adherents of Mulla Mushk-i-Alam, arrived at Muhammad Azam Khan's fort, where Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan was staying, and forced their way in after firing the gate. The Sirdar told his men, about 50 in number, not to resist, as he would settle the business himself. When the insurgents got in, they called upon him to come down from the tower in which he had taken refuge. He did so, and was beginning to loose his horse when he was cut down by an Ardal Sepoy and two Ghazis. The fort was then looted, and the Sirdar's property carried off.

Shahbaz Khan writes that he has succeeded in dispersing a body of insurgents who had assembled near Charikar.

6th December.—I held a Durbar to-day, at which Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, Sirdar Hashim Khan, and many others were present. No special requests were preferred.

Sirdar Shahbaz Khan writes that a number of Kohistanis have assembled and marched towards Kabul, proclaiming a Ghaza. The factions of Sher Ali and Sarwar Khan are fighting among themselves. The Sirdar thinks that the rising in Kohistan is likely to become serious if not speedily checked. He forwards some letters from the insurgents, calling upon him to place himself at their head. I have sent word to him that he had better come in to Kabul for a day or two.

In the afternoon I had an interview with Sirdar Wali Muhammad and Sirdar Hashim Khan, and informed them that I proposed to make some change in existing arrangements, Wali Muhammad remaining here for the present to help me in settling the country round Kabul, and Hashim Khan taking his place as Governor of Turkistan. I gave them both clearly to understand that this was only a temporary measure, and that it had not yet received the sanction of Government. Both expressed themselves satisfied. Afterwards I called in all the Kohistani headmen in camp, and warned them that unless the insurgents returned at once to their homes, or come in here and submitted, I should march a force into the district and destroy their villages. The headmen promised to do what they could to restore order.

No. 52.

No. 255 of 1879.

Government of India.—Foreign Department.

To the Right Honorable VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, December 31, 1879.

WE have the honor to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further papers relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed) LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 18th December 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

LETTERS from Mushk-i-Alam of Ghazni have reached Mohmands. Mulla Khalil is in correspondence with Moghal Khan of Goshta. Gandoo and Pandili quiet, but it is possible that Khawaizai, Baizai, Kandahari, and Safi Mohmands may rise under Mulla Khalil; and Fakir Mizan Khan of Lalpura requires careful management. He has been moved to summon and deal with all Mohmand Jirgas. Nearly all Afridis are down in their winter settlement. Afridis and Shinwaris all perfectly quiet. Every hope of their remaining so.

Enclosure 2 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 18th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

TELEGRAM just received from Colonel Acton, Pezwan, thus:—Telegram begins. Communicated with Gough's force to-day. Convoy, four companies 24th, going to Jagdallak to-morrow. No serious opposition. Gough goes on as soon as gets supplies. Will hold Jagdallak. Convoys will go daily. Telegram ends.

Enclosure 3 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 18th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to His Excellency the VICEROY, Calcutta.

TELEGRAM come Pezwan to-day as follows:—Here begins. Gough went out from Jagdallak yesterday. No details of operations received. Colonel Norman left this mid-day yesterday to support Gough, taking two Hazara guns, detachment 24th, 2nd Goorkhas, detachment Sappers, and forty men 72nd, to co-operate. Colonel Acton, with two companies 51st, left this morning in further support. This leaves Gandamak held by details aggregating only one hundred and eighty-six men. Telegram ends. No news from Kabul. I shall keep Your Excellency fully informed.

Enclosure 4 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 19th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

TELEGRAM received last night from Colonel Acton, Pezwan:—Here begins. Last night Colonel Norman bivouacked, but was fired on. Two men slightly wounded. Returned to Pezwan to-night all well. Yesterday Macnaughten dispersed, with loss, body of Ghilzais. Macnaughten's casualties, two men wounded. Jagdallak fired on last night. One man severely wounded. Numbers of Ghilzais out, but seem only rabble; attack so far contemptible. Telegram ends. Khugiani tribes between Rozabad and Surkub seem still on our side. All depends on our display of strength.

Enclosure 5 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 20th December 1879.

From GENERAL GOUGH, Jagdallak, to PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY.

I WAS reinforced yesterday by 24th Punjab Native Infantry, and obtained some supplies. I expect convoy to-day with more. I heard to-day from Latabund, with message from General Roberts ordering me to advance on Kabul. I purpose carrying out his orders and march to-morrow with following force: 9th Foot with details; 72nd 500; 2nd and 4th Goorkhas 800; 10th Bengal Lancers 20; one company Sappers 80; H. M. Battery 4 guns: total, 1,400. To Seh Baba on 21st, Latabund 22nd, Butkhak 23rd, Kabul 24th. I purpose holding post as follows: under Colonel Norman, 24th Punjab Native Infantry; Pezwan, 45th Sikhs about 600; one company Sappers 80; 10th Bengal Lancers 50; two guns I. A.; R.H.A.; Jagdallak Kotal; two companies Sappers 200; one company 24th Punjab Native Infantry, about 80; 10th Bengal Lancers 12; Jagdallak Fort, 24th Punjab Native Infantry, 7 companies, about 520; 10th Bengal Lancers 180; two guns H. M. Battery. I shall pick up Colonel Hudson with about 700 men and two guns at Latabund, and take him on towards Kabul.

Enclosure 6 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 21st December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

GENERAL GOUGH telegraphs to-day from Jagdallak that Asmatulla's followers appear to be deserting. I myself have intelligence that Asmatulla was wounded other day during attack on one of Gough's posts.

Enclosure 7 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 21st December 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

MOGHUL KHAN of Goshta fled to hills, will combine with Mulla Khalil. Also brother of Mahmud Shah, formerly Khan of Lalpura, said to have gone towards Gandol. Dakka fort and Lundikhana should be kept sufficiently strong to send out troops to keep open road and communications between the two places, if Mohmands should cross the river and threaten them. Meanwhile Mohmands, Afridis, Shinwaris, all absolutely quiet. Khan of Lalpura expressing himself as answerable for safety of road; no cause for anxiety as yet.

Enclosure 8 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

KABUL, 16th December.—We have been employed the last 48 hours in completing the defences of Sherpur. Enemy still occupy the hills overlooking city, but have not yet ventured into the plains. Our cavalry is constantly employed reconnoitring, and yesterday afternoon a small column of infantry cleared the close country which intervened between Sherpur and the city. Gough's brigade should be here on the 20th instant. Communication with India should then be restored, as the troops now at Latabund will remain there, and Butkhak will be re-occupied. I am waiting only for an opportunity to strike a blow. If none offers before Gough arrives I will attack the following day, as I shall be strong enough then to hold the Bala Hissar and other important positions, and also I hope to disperse the enemy. Though I was aware the excitement was widespread, I had no reason to suppose such a gathering would take place, nor apparently did any of the Sirdars, or those on whom I have been mainly depending for information. Wali Muhammad and all the influential people who joined me on first reaching Kabul are with me in Sherpur, and it is not in their interests to conceal matters from me. It is evident that a strong religious feeling is at the bottom of the movement. The Mulla Mushk-i-Alam was joined by large numbers as he came along, and no one probably could have foretold that his following would have been anything like as great as it is at the last. The city and large villages in the neighbourhood of Kabul each furnished their quota, and our force on the 14th found itself opposed to such overwhelming numbers that it was necessary to concentrate it to prevent small parties being cut off. This I was enabled to do before dark. Your Excellency must not suppose that we cannot move out of Sherpur, or that I have any anxiety about the safety of my force, and, collected as we now are, I am quite confident of being able to maintain our position, and to beat the enemy whenever I get a chance. We are fairly off for ammunition, on an average about 350 rounds per rifle, and strict orders have been issued to economise expenditure, but it is desirable that more ammunition, both for rifles and guns, should be sent up without delay. The troops are well and in good health. Our losses on 14th were more than reported in my message of that day. We had 28 killed and 99 wounded, of whom 8 have since died of their wounds.

Enclosure 9 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879.

From GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

KABUL, 17th December.—All quiet since my telegram of yesterday. Weather unfortunately cloudy, thus preventing communication by heliograph with Latabund. I have no news of Gough's brigade, but expect it here not later than 20th. There will then be no delay in clearing the enemy out of the neighbourhood of Kabul. Further reports agree as to heavy loss suffered by enemy on 13th and 14th. Asman Khan, of Tagao, and some other influential were killed. Large numbers of killed and wounded have been taken away, and, from what I hear, the total number of the enemy is less than it was. At the same time I think it better to wait for reinforcements before attacking again, and do the work thoroughly. Majority of the wounded are doing well, but some of the knife and sword wounds are very severe. There was a good deal of fighting at close quarters. All well.

Enclosure 10 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879.

From GENERAL SIR F. S. ROBERTS, Kabul, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

KABUL, 18th December.—All quiet since my telegram of yesterday. Enemy appeared shortly before noon on Siah Sang range and heights to west of Sherpur; they were quickly dislodged with some loss. Our casualties, one Sepoy, 5th Punjab Infantry, slightly wounded, and a Goorkha accidentally shot on picquet. Weather still cloudy. No heliographic communication possible with Latabund. Latest dates from India by telegraph 13th and by letter 6th December. Wounded doing well, except Major Cook, 5th Goorkhas. The majority of the Ghilzais do not seem at present to have taken a very active part in the combination against us; and, as Gough's brigade doubtless advancing, the eastern Ghilzais will probably keep quiet until they see the result of more troops reaching Kabul. Asmatulla Khan has sent word to the enemy that he will soon join them with 5,000 men. His neighbour Osman Khan of Tagao having been killed and good many of his followers dispersed, Asmatulla may hesitate to come so far from his own country. He will, I think, if Gandamak and Jagdallak are strongly held. Of this I have no information. No news having been received from the Khyber line since 13th instant, when I got short telegram from General Gough, saying that he would advance rapidly on Kabul. I am doing all I can to break up combination against us, but nothing short of driving off the enemy by force from the neighbourhood of Kabul will have any real effect. Mahomed Jan, the Wardak General and practical leader of the enemy, has proclaimed Musa Khan, eldest son of Yakub Khan, Amir. It is reported that Yakub Khan's wife has distributed large sums of money to the enemy, and that the houses and property of Wali Muhammad and other Sirdars with me have been plundered. All well.

Enclosure 11 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879. (Extract.)

From GENERAL ROBERTS to VICEROY.

KABUL, 19th December.—Slight skirmishes with enemy yesterday. One or two of their principal men were killed. Our loss, Lieutenant Sunderland, 72nd; a private 67th Foot, slightly wounded; one Sepoy, 5th Punjab Infantry, killed. Snow fell during the night, but it is disappearing off southern slopes of hills. Heliographic communication with Latabund for some hours to-day. Garrison there has rations up to and for 23rd. I have sent Gough peremptory orders to move on Kabul without delay. The longer city is occupied by the enemy, the more our prestige suffers. When joined by Gough's and Hudson's forces, I hope to have no difficulty in re-asserting our supremacy. Troops are hard-worked, but continue well and in famous spirits.

Enclosure 12 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

KABUL, 20th December.—Colonel Hudson heliographs from Latabund that letters and telegrams despatched from this on 18th and 19th instant have reached. I hope, therefore, that you are now in possession of all that has occurred here to date, as I sent copies of all former telegrams by the messengers of yesterday and day before. I also hope General Gough will advance without further delay. Sixty Yaboos laden with grain travelled safely last night from this to Latabund, showing that the road so far is open.

Position here is unchanged. The enemy lost several men yesterday. Our casualties were Lieutenant Montanaro, R.A., dangerously wounded, six of 67th, one 9th Lancers, one 12th Bengal Cavalry, six 3rd Sikhs, and two camp-followers, all wounded. Major Cook, 5th Goorkhas, I deeply regret to report, died yesterday of his wounds.

I hope officers will be sent to replace casualties. Four are required for artillery, two for I.-A., and one for each mountain battery. Bailward having been invalided, 9th Lancers are very short of officers, 12th and 14th Cavalry, 3rd Sikhs, 5th Punjab Infantry, and 5th Goorkhas, each require two officers. Captain Connellan and Lieutenant Tuite, 67th, and Captain Frome, 72nd, are laid up with small-pox. No assistance can be afforded by British to Native regiments. Lieutenant Liddell has been attached temporarily to Horse Artillery battery, and Sir Charles Wolseley of the Yeomanry Cavalry to 9th Lancers. For the 12th and 14th Cavalry, trained cavalry officers should, if possible, be sent.

There are only 4 per cent. British troops sick, and including wounded a little over 6 per cent. Pneumonia is on the increase, owing to great cold and exposure; but considering everything, the force is very healthy, and the sick and wounded are well cared for. All well.

Enclosure 13 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

HUNDRED and fifty men, 8th N. I. reached Dakka to-day, setting free detachment 22nd, which came on to Basawal escorting ammunition. Head-quarters 3rd B. C. reached Barikab to-day, head-quarters, 22nd P. I., and remainder, 45th Sikhs, reached Gandamak. I have no news of Gough, and it is now cloudy, so I shall probably get none till to-morrow. I hear that the Khugianis are just awaiting the turn of events, but are quiet at present. Colonel Acton reported all quiet at Pezwan yesterday, and a convoy went on from there to Jagdallak to-day.

Enclosure 14 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 24th December 1879. (Extract).

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

CUNNINGHAM reports from Khyber that Mulla Khalil has failed to raise the Baizai, who demand that Bajouris should move first. No armed gathering of Mohmands likely for some time. Khan of Lalpura will hold the river bank. No reason to apprehend trouble in the Khyber.

Enclosure 15 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 24th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

24TH December 1879.—The political situation to the south of this amongst the Shinwaris, and to the north and eastwards continues good. Rumours of Mohmund gathering under Mulla Khalil are still heard, but they have not as yet committed any overt act of hostilities.

Colonel Tweedie left yesterday for Gandamak, and will inform me of the state of affairs there and the feelings of the Khugianis. General Gough has passed Latabund in safety, and should be in Kabul to-day. Report just received that the Jagdallak post, which is very strongly fortified, was being attacked by the Hisarak Ghilzais in force. Reinforcements are being rapidly pushed up. Little cause for anxiety.

Enclosure 16 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 24th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

TELEGRAM just in from Pezwan reporting that attack on Jagdallak had ceased, and enemy dispersed.

Enclosure 17 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 24th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

COLONEL NORMAN, P.N.I., commands at Jagdallak, and reports, further, that the attack on his post, when Major Thackeray was badly hit yesterday, was made in force, but enemy was repulsed with loss. Only one sepoy killed and one wounded. Norman says sapper carbines are of little use. He adds that there is no cause for alarm, and that the Ghilzais will keep quiet now for some time. General Arbuthnot has ordered up reinforcements from Pezwan to Jagdallak, distance of only eight miles; shall stay here two days.

Enclosure 18 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 25th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

LAST night the Dalangai post in Choragalli near Ali Boghan was attacked by a strong band of raiders, supposed to be Mandezai Shinwaris. Some cartmen, contrary to all orders, had taken shelter there for the night, instead of going on to Barikab camping ground, and would not return to Ali Boghan, although warned by the post men. Of these cartmen 15 were killed and six wounded, of whom two were post-men. The same band moved against another station at the Ziarat, close to Ali Boghan, but were driven away by the guard, assisted by the villagers who turned out on the alarm. No other disturbance reported.

Enclosure 19 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 25th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

YOUR telegram yesterday. Not certain where Sirdar Musa Khan is. All natives here and Jellalabad believe him to be in Kabul city with the enemy. But no one believes Mushk-i-Alam will at present proclaim a new Amir.

Enclosure 20 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 25th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

ATTACK on Jagdallak Kotal happened thus:—Major Thackeray had been ordered out to burn small villages two miles from post; village proved empty and was burned. As he returned, he was followed by about 3,000 Ghilzais, who attacked post from three afternoon to midnight; left no wounded behind. Asmatulla supposed to have commanded them. Thackeray's wound, bullet in elbow. Khugianis still uncertain. Ghilzais seem up in arms very generally. Our strength lies not in maintaining small posts, but in concentration of our troops until decisive movements feasible. At guerilla warfare Afghans have many advantages. Daily small convoys most harassing to our troops while inviting attack. Communications when only nominally maintained, and that at great cost, are of questionable value in country like this.

Enclosure 21 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 26th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

MUHAMMUD HASSAN KHAN, accompanied by Fez Muhammad Khan and a gathering, has proceeded towards Jagdallak with the intention of joining Asmatulla; and in all probability the two met yesterday. Asmatulla is said to have followed General Gough's force for a short way, and then turned back to his old post. Our positions in front have been well strengthened, and no attack on them yesterday reported.

Mohmands have kept quiet up to date.

Strong parties of cavalry sent out yesterday and this morning to trace the raiders who attacked the Dalangai Chowkie already reported. The wounded sufferers have been brought in here for medical treatment.

Enclosure 22 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 26th December 1879.

From COLONEL TWEEDIE, Gandamak, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

NORMAN signals to-day from Jagdallak that, as he yesterday returned from Pezwan, Asmatulla with 300 men tried to intercept, but beaten off with loss. Norman had three wounded. Snow fell last night Jagdallak. Norman says his men overworked and infantry reinforcement required. Norman had no news up to this morning from Gough or Kabul. Two mountain guns leave this to-morrow for Pezwan and Jagdallak, and Pezwan will send on with them to Jagdallak two companies 51st Foot. Am trying to open communication with Gough's rear through Kuch camelmen.

Enclosure 23 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 27th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

News received from Pezwan says, that in the attack of 23rd Ghilzais suffered very severely, and they are said to be getting disheartened in consequence of their want of success. News from Laghman shows that Asmutulla and Muhammad Hassan's gatherings are beginning to desert already, and are returning secretly to their homes. The raid on Dalangai post was committed by the Hassan Khels section of the Mandezai Shinwaris. The Mohmands still keep quiet, but the Khans of Goshta and Giadah are constantly fitting up to the hills, where they have sent up their families, and their attitude is unfriendly. All well.

Enclosure 24 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 27th December 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

TRIBES all quiet, although Mullas are agitating among Mohmands and Shinwaris.

Enclosure 25 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 28th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Barrackpoor.

KABUL, 21st December.—I received report to-day, heliograph, from Latabund that Gough's brigade was to be at Seh Baba to-day, Latabund to-morrow, and here on 24th. Enemy are still very numerous, but with troops Gough is bringing I hope to be able to clear them out of Kabul. To assist in this I shall withdraw the Latabund post, if troops sufficient to hold it and Seh Baba cannot be pushed up from the rear. Communication between Kabul and Jagdallak will, I fear, be uncertain, until I can send back a couple of regiments from this. One casualty yesterday, man of 92nd wounded; Lieutenant Montanaro died yesterday of his wound. Total casualties to last night, 77 killed, including eight officers and one follower; 220 wounded, including 15 officers and four followers, and two missing; two officers and ten men have since died of their wounds. Native troops have four per cent. sick, and including wounded, between five and six per cent. Officer commanding 72nd Highlanders, asks that Lieutenants Drummond, Gore-Langton, and Campbell may be ordered to rejoin the regiment. Captain Guinness has returned temporarily from staff regimental duty. Situation unchanged. All well.

Enclosure 26 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 27th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Barrackpore.

KABUL, 23rd December.—Desultory attacks all yesterday, one casualty, a private, 67th Foot, wounded. During the day information was received that a general attack would be made at day-break to-day, the signal being a fire lighted on Asmi heights. Large numbers of the enemy were seen occupying the more distant villages during the day and coming into the near ones as it got dark. At 6 a.m. the light appeared, and immediately afterwards attack commenced on three sides. We were all prepared. On the south and west sides, the enemy did not show much determination, but on the north-east corner of Bemaru heights some thousands collected, and evidently contemplated assaulting the position. General Hugh Gough commanded. He, with the able assistance of Colonel Jenkins, made an admirable disposition. As soon as the intention of the enemy was fully developed, I determined on a counter attack with cavalry and artillery; these issued by the gorge between the Bemaru heights, and opening fire on the enemy's flank, speedily dislodged them from the place they had taken up on the north-east corner. The cavalry pursued and cut up numbers of the enemy, who, retiring from all points, beat a hasty retreat into the city. We have now occupied some of the advanced villages, more particularly those on the Butkhak road, so as to ensure the advance of General Charles Gough's brigade to-morrow unmolested; his camp is visible about six miles to the east. I shall take the initiative either to-morrow afternoon or the following morning, and hope soon to report that Her Majesty's troops have again got possession of the Bala Hissar and city of Kabul. Our casualties to-day have been few. Numbers will be telegraphed to-morrow. I grieve to report the death of two gallant officers, Captain Dundas and Lieutenant Nugent, Royal Engineers, caused by an untimely explosion while engaged in blowing up the towers of a neighbouring village.

Enclosure 27 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 24th December 1879.

From GENERAL ROBERTS, Kabul, through Pezwan, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

KABUL, 24th December.—Our success yesterday was more complete and the enemy's loss more severe than I was aware of when despatching my telegram last evening. The Kohistanis and Logaris, also people living near Kabul, went straight to their houses after being defeated. The remainder went to the city for a few hours, but during the night they all fled. Mulla Mushk-i-Alam and General Muhammad Jan, the two leaders, went off early. Tahir Khan, son of Muhammad Sharif Khan, who has been very active against us, has, it is reported, taken away Musa Khan, eldest son of Yakub Khan, and escaped towards Wardak. Cavalry have gone in pursuit. The Bala Hissar and city will be taken possession of this afternoon, and the former will be occupied, if I can be satisfied that there is no danger to the troops from gunpowder. Yakub Khan's wife and mother, and Yahia Khan's wife, who is a daughter of the celebrated Sirdar Akbar Khan, will be brought into Sherpur to-day. They have done all in their power to keep up the excitement, and it is reported that they contemplate flight. Our losses yesterday were (not?) great, five killed, including the two Royal Engineer officers accidentally blown up, and 33 wounded, including Lieutenant Gambier, 5th Punjab Cavalry, severely, and Lieutenant Burn-Murdoch, R.E., slightly wounded.

I have telegraphed to General Bright to occupy Seh Baba by detachment of Native Infantry from Jagdallak, and to send a regiment of Native Infantry to Latabund; it is very important this should be done without delay. Butkhak will be occupied by troops from this to-morrow; in this way communication with India will be rapidly restored.

Her Majesty's gracious message has been received and published to the troops, who are much gratified.

The majority of the wounded are doing well.

General Charles Gough's brigade arrived this morning. Slight snow last night. All well.

Enclosure 28 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 28th December 1879.

From COMMISSIONER, Peshawur to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Barrackpoor.

KHYBER tribes perfectly quiet ; every prospect of their remaining so. Mulla Khalil's efforts to raise Mohmands and Bajouris are ineffectual. Reconciliation effected between Khan of Lalpura and his brother Akbar.

Enclosure 29 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 28th December 1879.

From GENERAL BRIGHT, Jellalabad, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Barrackpoor.

YESTERDAY the Daronta gorge was reconnoitred by a strong party from here under Colonel Limond, with a view to ascertaining the feasibility of making a road along it into the Lughman valley should the route be taken in hand later on ; the party returned to camp the same evening unmolested. Asmatulla forts and villages in Lughman were reported to be denuded of men ; the gathering with him consists mainly of Jubbar Khel Ghilzais, few of the Tajik population of that valley having joined as yet against us. The Governor of Lughman, who is son of Sirdar Yahia Khan, is stated to have kept aloof from them up to date. Mohmands and Khugianis continue quiet. General Robert's victory at Kabul, the flight of Mushk-i-Alam and Muhammad Jan, and the dispersion of Kohistanis and others, have been widely circulated here by our present Governor, Sirdar Maddad Khan, amongst surrounding tribes, and will have good effect.

Enclosure 30 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 27th December 1879.

From CAPTAIN A. CONOLLY, Peiwar Kotal, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

LETTER just in from Mirak Shah Ali Khel, to say reliable news from Dobundi that, on the 24th, 6,000 men, having prepared scaling ladders, assaulted the Sherpur entrenchments in a most determined manner ; that Padshah Khan, who was supposed to be acting under secret orders from us, first desisted and fled, on which he was followed by the rest. Our troops, issuing from the entrenchment, pursued, inflicting frightful slaughter. The ground round Sherpur lay thick with corpses. Those who escaped spread consternation far and wide. This message has been sent to General Watson, and is also repeated to you direct, as the General is at Shinak to-day, where there is no telegraph office, and considerable delay might ensue in the further transmission of this news, which is most important, if true, as I believe it to be.

Enclosure 31 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 28th December 1879.

From GENERAL WATSON, Balesh Khel, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Barrackpoor.

Two inches of snow fell at Kuram yesterday, heavy on Peiwar Kotal. No movements of tribes reported.

Enclosure 32 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 19th December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

THERE is nothing to relate this week. No further details regarding affairs at Herat have reached Kandahar. Mir Afzul is meeting with increased opposition from Duranis of Farah district. His family is at Lash Juwain. That of Ghulam Muhaiuddin has crossed into Persia, where both Sirdars are preparing to follow. The news of Ayub's imprisonment has excited much grief among certain of the Barakzai ladies, who were predicting his triumphal march to Kandahar. Captain Molloy reports all quiet in Kelat-i-Ghilzai and Mukur districts. The Andari and Taraki Chiefs continue to make unasked-for professions of friendship. It has been found necessary to despatch a body of Afghan troops to the Hazara frontier beyond Tirin, where the people have refused to pay their revenues. All quiet here. Health of Europeans excellent: natives not quite so good. Weather colder, sky cloudy, and threatening rain or snow.

Enclosure 33 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 21st December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

MOLLOY writes, on 19th, that all is quiet as far as Kukur, but chiefs of Tokhi and Hotak Ghilzais have left Kelat without permission. Rumours of approaching abandonment of country by us appear to have unsettled them more than news of actual events at Kabul.

Enclosure 34 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 22nd December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

SYUD MUHAMMUD SHAH, son of late Sirdar Azam, has arrived at Kelat-i-Ghilzai from Kabul, after being twice robbed on road. He reports fighting to have taken place between Hazaras and Ali Khel Ghilzais, in which latter were worsted. No other sign of disturbance among Southern Ghilzais.

Enclosure 35 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 25th December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

WEEKLY summary of news. Christmas day. The events at Kabul have not as yet had any effect in disturbing the tranquillity of the Durani country, though the Ghilzais of Kelat are somewhat uneasy, but no open outbreak has taken place, or is expected. The events at Herat, on the contrary, have produced some excitement, but more curiosity to know what the English Government intends to do (with?) Abu Bekr, the Alizai, who murdered Colonel Morris. Mirza has been committing robberies, and orders were sent to Sahib Khan, another Alizai Chief, to arrest him. He fled, but his fort has been destroyed. The messenger from the Taimuni Char Aimak Chiefs has been sent back with letters and presents to them.

Syud Muhammad Shah, formerly collector of revenue here, returned from Kabul yesterday, having been robbed on the road. He reports country beyond Mukur in a state of complete anarchy. The Ali Khel Ghilzais are fighting with the Hazaras, and have been defeated in one action. Rain fell on the 24th, but weather has now cleared again.

Enclosure 36 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 26th* December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

MIR AHMAD KHAN, a Popalzai of good family, with three attendants, attempted to run a muck through the cantonment this morning. The leader and two followers were cut down, the fourth escaped, but is being pursued: none of our people hurt. Two of Mir Ahmad's uncles have been conspicuous on our side from the time of our entry, and a third is the trusted adviser of Sirdar Sher Ali.

Enclosure 37 in No. 52.

Telegram, dated 26th December 1879.

From MAJOR ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

SIRDAR ABEL-ES-SALAM KHAN has just returned from Herat, which he left 12 days ago. He has letters from Muhammad Ayub not yet delivered. His account of the disturbance there is as follows:—There were three Herati regiments quartered at Maimena under command of Faizullah Khan, Ishakzai, when Ayub camped outside with the intention of marching on Kandahar. He sent for Faizullah and his three regiments and left them in the city, making over civil charge to Abdullah Khan, Nasiri. A few days afterwards Faizullah declared himself governor, shut the gates, and mutilated some 50 soldiers of the Kabuli regiments, who had returned to the city. The next day Ayub having sworn the regiments and tribal horsemen with him on the Koran, sent two Kabuli and the Kandahar regiments to attack Herat. The three Herati regiments came out to meet them, and were completely worsted with the loss of 300 men. In the fight that ensued Faizullah and the rest fled the city, was then plundered by the Kabulis, and Ayub returned to it with the rest of the troops. He has now given up his intention of moving on Kandahar, and wishes to treat with us.

Enclosure 38 in No. 52.

No. 62, dated Kabul, 3rd December 1879.

From LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding Kabul Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit, for the information of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, the following report regarding Mulla Mushk-i-Alam of Ghazni.

2. The Mulla's movements first attracted my attention some weeks ago, when it was reported that he had collected a force in the neighbourhood of Ghazni, and was busily inciting the Wardak people to a holy war. I was not at first disposed to attach any great importance to the news, for Mushk-i-Alam was generally spoken of as a very old man, disabled by bodily infirmity from taking an active part against us, and possessing little power over the chiefs and people. But there can be no doubt, from all that has lately come to my knowledge, that the Mulla's reputation as a religious teacher has gained for him some influence in various parts of the country, and the course of events during the last few months has enabled him, in spite of his age and reputed infirmities, to bring this influence to bear with considerable effect. By coming forward as the champion of a holy war, he has succeeded in collecting bodies of armed men in Wardak and the neighbourhood, and the preaching of his emissaries has caused some uneasiness in Kohistan, Tagao, and Logar. For some days past it has been confidently reported in Kabul that Usman Khan, a leading Malik of Tagao, was concerting with the Kohistanis an attack upon the British position at Sherpur. Of course any such attempt could only end in the discomfiture of the attacking force, but the fact of its being generally spoken of as possible, and even probable, shows the Mulla's exhortations, coming at a time when the natural reaction of feeling against us as foreigners was setting in, have done harm in this part of the country. Further, it is almost certain that the continued reluctance of Asmatulla Khan to leave the hills has been due in great measure to Mushk-i-Alam, who is his peer or spiritual guide.

3. The excitement seems at present to be subsiding. The Wardak insurgents are said to have completely dispersed. On the 27th November a number of them tried to surprise a small party of General Baker's cavalry at the village of Beni Badam, but were repulsed with the loss of their leader, after exchanging a few shots, and this seems to have thoroughly disheartened the rest.

An attempt made to intimidate the Logaris into refusing supplies has wholly failed, and they are bringing in bhoosa freely. The Tagao men have not assembled or have assembled at a distance in insignificant numbers.

Finally, it is evident that the Kohistanis are shrinking from any open act of aggression.

Their leading Maliks have been in communication with Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan, whom I sent out to reassure the people, and I have reason to believe that the most influential among them will come in to pay their respects before many days are over.

4. Nevertheless there can be no doubt that a certain amount of uneasiness and latent discontent, due in great measure to the intrigues of Mushk-i-Alam, prevails in the country round Kabul; and I shall watch most carefully for any symptoms of its increase. The Mulla himself I shall do my best to secure. This will of course be difficult, but it is possible that during the winter I may be able to effect his capture and surrender.

LONDON :
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

AFGHANISTAN (1880) No. 2.

P A P E R S

RELATING TO THE

ADVANCE OF AYOOB KHAN ON KANDAHAR.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.
1880.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1880.

[C.—2690.] Price 3d.

LIST OF PAPERS.

No.	—	From	To	Date.	Subject.	Page.
1	Telegram - -	Viceroy -	Sec. of State	1880. 27 June	Advance of Ayooob Khan, Proposed military measures.	3
2	" - -	"	"	1 July	Arrival of Ayooob Khan at Farrah. Consequent orders.	3
3	Letter; with 9 enclosures.	Govt. of India	"	6 " (No. 154)	Telegraphic news reports	3
4	Diary of military events.	—	—	6 July	Advance of force under General Burrows.	5
5	Letter; with 5 enclosures.	Govt. of India	Sec. of State	13 " (No. 157)	Telegraphic news reports	6
6	Letter; with 10 enclosures.	"	"	20 July (No. 162)	" " " Mutiny of the Wali's troops.	7
7	Letter; with 9 enclosures.	"	"	27 July (No. 169)	Telegraphic news reports	10
8	Telegram - -	Governor of Bombay.	"	28 July	Defeat of General Burrows	12
9	" - -	Viceroy -	"	" "	" " "	12
10	Letter; with 23 enclosures.	Govt. of India	"	3 Aug. (No. 175)	Summary of events preceding the defeat of General Burrows.	13

P A P E R S.

No. 1.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 27th June 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

TELEGRAM from Thomson at Teheran says, Ayub Khan marching against Kandahar with large force. I think we should leave Shere Ali to defend himself beyond the Helmund, but it seems to me, after communicating with Stewart, that it would be inconsistent with security of our military position at Kandahar to allow hostile forces to cross that river. I propose, therefore, to instruct Primrose, if Ayub reaches Furrah, to advance towards Girishk with sufficient force to prevent passage of Helmund. This would necessitate moving up reinforcement from Phayre's reserve. No troops would be moved until necessity actually arose.

No. 2.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 1st July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

AYUB's advance guard reported to have arrived at Furrah. Orders sent to Primrose and Phayre in accordance with my telegram of the 27th.

No. 3.

No. 154 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 6, 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

F. P. HAINES.

JOHN STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

WHITLEY STOKES.

JAMES GIBBS.

Enclosure 1 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTERS from Herat of 5th instant report that Ayub had some time before sent 1,200 letters to Kabul, addressed to different chiefs and officers, announcing his approach with a powerful army. Informant reports Ayub more than ever in the hands of the Kabulis, and personally unwilling to make any move; also expresses disbelief that any move will be made, and predicts that if it does, the Herati and Kabuli troops are sure to quarrel before they have gone far.

Enclosure 2 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

SEVERAL caravans have arrived from Herat in last few days with news up to 5th. Some preparations were being made for the intended march, and six regiments were at Rozabad. The Governor of Meshed was preventing the exportation of gun caps to Afghanistan. The harvest at Herat has been very fine.

Enclosure 3 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NINTH June is day on which regular troops known to have camped outside Herat. Actual start probably some days later. Nevertheless I recommend despatch of brigade to Maiwand as quickly as possible, if only to confirm fidelity of Wali's troops, overawe Zemindawar tribes, and establish confidence here. Am asking General Primrose to make preparatory arrangements in anticipation of orders.

Enclosure 4 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTER from Wali's nephew in Washir, dated 26th, states intelligence reached him that Luinab with advance guard of horsemen had left Herat some days before Ayub, who was then probably at Subzawar. Luinab supposed to have reached Furrah.

Enclosure 5 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

WALI sends second letter from his nephew in Washir, giving intelligence that Luinab has arrived in Furrah with 800 Sowars, and is collecting Furrah levies. Travellers, who have arrived from Herat in 12 days, say that when they left, Ayub Khan was at Rozabagh with regulars.

In answer to letter of mine about report of desertions written some days ago, Wali writes that 50 or 60 men had returned to their homes when ordered to Washir, that a few of his men were mutinous, but the majority quite trustworthy.

His monthly disbursements for pay amount to one lakh six thousand rupees.

Enclosure 6 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, No. 2122 E.P., dated 1st July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar.

YOUR telegrams, 27th and 30th. Orders are issuing for brigade to Maiwand. Your political instructions are that no hostile troops must cross Helmund, and Wali must be supported, if necessary, in maintaining order this side river. Beyond Helmund he must rely on his own resources.

Enclosure 7 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

WALI writes on afternoon of 29th, that messengers from Furrah state Luinab with 1,000 horse arrived there about the 23rd, and was collecting supplies for army which was at Kushkaba, 16 miles north of Furrah. Ayub was with army. Kabul troops had their families with them. Wali calculated Ayub arrived Furrah six days ago, inquires anxiously whether force will move to his support, and asks orders regarding his advancing forces in Washir.

Second letter written night of 29th states messengers from Bakwa report Luinab at Khor Malik, 21 miles, and his advance guard at Chargaz 50 miles, this side Furrah and four marches from Kandahar frontier.

I am writing to Wali not to risk collision with Ayub's regular troops in Washir, but in absence of (orders?) not giving him definite assurance of active support from here. But I strongly urge immediate advance of brigade.

It is possible that Ayub may delay on frontier; but he may be at Girishk in 10 days or less.

Enclosure 8 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NOTHING of importance has occurred during the week in Kandahar territory; but the menaced invasion from Herat is causing much excitement in the city and neighbourhood.

Ayub Khan appears to have left the city finally about the 18th, and to have reached Furrah, where he was at the date of the latest advice, about the 24th. He has with him 2,500 horse, including 900 regulars, 10 regiments of infantry, varying from 350 to 500 men each, and six batteries of artillery, including at least one mule battery. He is said to be well provided with ammunition, except caps, of which a supply expected from Meshed had been seized by the Persian authorities at the frontier. A party of 1,000 cavalry under the Luinab, Khushdil Khan, are four or five days' march in frontier, and at date of latest report were in Bakwa.

Before leaving Herat the Ulema assembled in a mosque and invested Ayub with title of Amir. He has also had money coined in his name.

The Wali is at Girishk with main body of his forces, two regiments of infantry, four guns, and 1,500 horse being in Washir under his nephew, Roshndil Khan.

The weather is much cooler.

Enclosure 9 in No. 3.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Two regiments cavalry and a battery Horse Artillery marched this morning for the Helmund. There is no news from the Herat direction.

No. 4.

MILITARY DIARY OF EVENTS FOR PERIOD FROM 3RD TO 6TH JULY 1880. (Extract.)

3rd July.—Instructions have been issued for the advance of a brigade from Kandahar to Girishk, but it is not to cross the Helmund. Also for a brigade of the Reserve Division to be pushed forward from Karachi to Kandahar.

5th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 4th:—

“Five hundred sabres 3rd Cavalry and 3rd Sind Horse, E-B Royal Horse Artillery

“ 40 Sappers and two companies infantry, left to-day for Helmund, under command of General Nuttall. Six companies 66th, and 1st and 30th Native Infantry, leave to-morrow under General Burrows' commanding column.”

6th July.—The following message has been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar, dated the 5th :—

“ Your telegram of 3rd July. My telegram of yesterday to you will have informed you of the departure of cavalry and artillery for Helmund near Girishk. The infantry, 66th Regiment (six companies), 1st Grenadiers, and 30th Native Infantry, left this morning, the whole under command of Brigadier-General Burrows. A month's supplies have been forwarded with the troops. Lieutenant-Colonel St. John accompanies the force.

No. 5.

No. 157 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 13, 1880.

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 154, dated the 6th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RIPON.
F. P. HAINES.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
WHITLEY STOKES.
JAMES GIBBS.
C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 5.

TELEGRAM, dated 8th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KHUSK-I-NAKHU, 43 miles from Kandahar, July 7th :—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning. All well. Some difficulty about supplies at last halting place, but abundance here. General Burrows with infantry nine miles in rear.

Wali writes yesterday from Girishk that enemy's cavalry had reached bank of Khashrud, and that remainder were in Bakwa. Doubtful whether he means remainder of cavalry or regular troops, probably the former.

Enclosure 2 in No. 5.

TELEGRAM, dated 9th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

9TH JULY 1880.—Mir Karez, 23 miles from Helmund, July 8th :—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning. All well. Have arranged to break march to-morrow at Oograkh, about 14 miles from here. Infantry brigade at Kushk-i-Nakhud to-day. All well.

Wali sends letter from Washir of 6th, giving intelligence that Ayub arrived at Farah on 30th, with entire force. The families of Kabul regiments reached Farah three days previously; and Muhammad Omar Khan, Nurzai, has undertaken to protect them. The Lulab has collected a depôt of provisions at Dilaram, and his cavalry patrol daily up to the Khash river.

Enclosure 3 in No. 5.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Choghak, six miles from Helmund, July 9th:—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning, after 18 miles march over rather heavy ground. Ample supplies sent by Wali from Girishk. Heat much increased. Nothing fresh from Herat direction.

Enclosure 4 in No. 5.

TELEGRAM, dated 7th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received information from fairly reliable sources to the effect that Ayub's march on the Helmund is not so much with the object of fighting with Sher Ali as to keep the country in a state of anarchy, and make its administration and collection of revenue as difficult as possible. Ayub will, if he can, avoid fighting with the British troops. Sirdar Abdulla Khan, Nassar, is with Ayub Khan, and is said to have been mainly instrumental in adjusting the differences existing between the Herat and Kabuli troops, which formerly prevented the march of Ayub's army. Dissensions still exist. One of Wali Sher Ali's regiments is said to have deserted.

Enclosure 5 in No. 5.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE march of the Herat army under Ayub Khan towards the Helmund has caused much excitement in country, but the impression seems to be that Ayub Khan does not intend to oppose the British, but merely Wali Sher Ali. Four railway coolies were killed near Hari gorge by, it is supposed, the relations of the six Marri reported last week as having been killed by the Sind Horse near Thall. The Marri Chiefs have promised Mr. Duke, Political Officer, to surrender the murderers.

No. 6.

No. 162 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's
Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 20, 1880.

IN continuation of our Despatch, No. 157, dated 13th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.
(Signed)

RIPON.
F. P. HAINES.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
WHITLEY STOKES.
JAMES GIBBS.
C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th July 1880.

From Lieutenant Muir, Kandahar, to FOREIGN UNDER, Simla.

News confirmed that Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan and Habibulla, son of Sirdar Khairulla Khan, have deserted from Wali's force and gone to Naozad. They had accompanied advanced force to Washir. Nothing further is known of their intentions. They had no following. Wali has written to his son here to confiscate their property.

Enclosure 2 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 13th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla

CAMP, bank of Helmund, opposite Girishk, July 10th.—Arrived here this morning. All well. No news from Farah. Three days ago Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, cousin of the Wali, attempted to excite the Wali's troops in Washir to mutiny and join Ayub. On their refusal he quitted the camp with some 80 horsemen, and has gone to Naszad, 40 miles to north-west of this. Wali has sent Sirdar Gul Muhammad Khan after him.

Enclosure 3 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 13th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP near Girishk, 11th July.—General Burrows with infantry brigade arrived this morning. All well. The Helmund is fordable everywhere, and presents no obstacle to passage of an army. Forage and wood in any quantity about the river. Other supplies are being furnished in abundance by Wali. Sirdar Gul Muhammad Khan marched for Naozad yesterday evening with a strong body of cavalry. Trustworthy news has arrived that Ayub's main body was at Saki in Bakwa on 6th, and that Luinab was to turn off from that place with the cavalry into Zamindawar. A spy, however, states that Luinab's main body was two days ago at Dilaram, and that his advance guard of 100 men had arrived in Washir. The advanced column of Wali's troops is about 20 miles north-east of this.

Enclosure 4 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 14th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 12th.—An intercepted letter from Luinab shows that he was at Washir on the 10th, and that Ayub was not far in rear. Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, failing to persuade the Naozad people to rise, has gone to Washir. A son of Sirdar Ghulam Muhiuddin Khan deserted the Wali's advanced guard yesterday with 20 men to join the Sartip.

Enclosure 5 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 14th, 9.30 a.m.—All arrangements having been made by Wali for crossing to our side river and his baggage packed, Kabul regiment, mutinied, seized guns and Wali's baggage, and drove his cavalry across river. Rest of infantry joined them, and they are now moving along west bank. Cavalry are going in pursuit.

Enclosure 6 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 14th.—Cavalry, horse artillery, and eight companies infantry pursued mutineers, who were marching along west bank of river for several miles, and captured all their six guns which came into action to cover retreat, but after a few rounds from horse artillery were abandoned. Majority of infantry had previously dispersed, but a few desperate men held some enclosures and had to be dislodged by infantry. Mutineers' loss not great; may have amounted to 40 or 50; our loss one man, 66th, killed, and two wounded, with some horses. Captured guns and waggons brought in to our camp.

Ayub's army is to-day at Bibanak, three marches distant. Seven deserters from Ayub's regular cavalry arrived here. They left army at Washir, and state Sartip Nur Muhammad has replaced Luinab in command of advanced cavalry, having declared to Ayub that Luinab was in correspondence with Wali. They also declare that Nur Muhammad has advised Ayub to remain in Zamindawar with regulars, while he raised the country with the tribal cavalry.

Enclosure 7 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, 14th, 9.30 a.m.—Ayub Khan is probably at Lar, two marches distant.

Enclosure 8 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 17th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP MIRKAREZ, July 16th.—Loss and discomfiture of mutineers greater than at first reported. Forty-six bodies were found and buried by villagers, among them colonel of artillery and a captain of Kabul regiment, in which most casualties took place. Part of this regiment marched westward yesterday, but all the others dispersed to their homes on evening of 14th. I found that all the flour and ghee collected by Wali for our use in his camp and the fort had been plundered and carried off. This left force entirely dependent on foraging, from which little was to be expected in neighbourhood of Girishk. The river offering in its present condition no obstacle in any place to the passage of troops, the Wali's army having ceased to exist, and reports reaching me from different quarters that Ayub's intention was to cross river further north, if at all, General Burrows determined rightly, in my opinion, to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud, where several roads from Helmund to Kandahar meet, where supplies are abundant and communication with Kandahar easy. Accordingly entire force marched last night 23 miles to this place, and goes on to Kushk-i-Nakhud, eight miles further, to-morrow. The Wali is with us, part of his cavalry has dispersed; part is at Kushk-i-Nakhud with his nephews and other Sirdars.

Post from Kandahar interrupted for one day and bags lost, but is now coming in regularly. Captured guns brought with us, but three waggons with their ammunition destroyed for want of carriage.

Enclosure 9 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 19th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 17th.—Force arrived here this morning. All well. Principal Sirdars and Chiefs are here, with about 500 horses. The Alizais of Zamindawar accompanied them, but asked and obtained leave to return to their homes to protect their families and property.

Many of the mutineers have been seized and disarmed, while passing through this on the way to their homes.

As far as can be ascertained the country about here is quiet.

No news of Ayub's force.

Enclosure 10 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 19th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP, Kushki-i-Nakhud, July 18th.—All quiet in this vicinity en route to Kandahar, whence post and single messenger's pass constantly without trouble. All accounts tend to show that mutineers, with few exceptions, have returned to their homes, many without arms. Two hundred of Ayub's cavalry reached Girishk yesterday and sent back word of its evacuation to main body then at Mahmudabad, some 16 or 20 miles distant. A servant of Wali's taken off by mutineers to camp of advanced cavalry, states that story of Luinab having been disgraced is untrue, and that he was apparently preparing to cross the river above Girishk. The camp here moves two miles nearer Girishk to-morrow. Supplies are plentiful; immense quantities of grain lying unthrashed in fields round camp, but wood is scarce.

No. 7.

No. 169 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 27, 1880.

In continuation of our Despatch, No. 162, dated 20th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

F. P. HAINES.

JOHN STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

WHITLEY STOKES.

JAMES GIBBS.

C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 20th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushki-i-Nakhud, July 19th.—This morning General Burrows shifted his camp three miles back towards Girishk. Fifteen hundred or two thousand of Ayub's sowars arrived at Girishk yesterday. Main body still at Mahmudabad. Considerable numbers of ghazis have passed along by roads to join Ayub, Abubekr, Alizai, who murdered Colonel Moore's Munshi last year, and headed the force at Colonel Malcolmson's engagement here, is said to have brought a number of men from Zamindawar. In our neighbourhood all quiet. Cavalry patrols regularly for ten miles in every direction.

Enclosure 2 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL BROOKE and Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster-General, escorted by four sowars, were fired at by two men this morning in the Kotal-i-murch, a steep pass leading into the Arghandab valley, about five miles distant from cantonments. One of the sowar's horses was killed. Parties of cavalry and infantry were immediately sent out to surround the hills, and it is hoped that the men may be caught.

Shortly afterwards a report, probably caused by our troops being seen leaving cantonments, spread among the town people that the enemy were approaching, and a panic ensued. Order was quickly restored, and all is quiet and as usual.

Enclosure 3 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushki-Nakhud, July 20th.—No symptoms of advance by Ayub, whose cavalry have not yet crossed the river. The country in this vicinity quiet, except about the Arghandeh, where Achakzai nomads are committing depredation.

Enclosure 4 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 21st, 9 a.m.—Enemy's main body reached Helmund about 12 miles above Girishk yesterday, and sent back camels to bring up baggage and stores left behind at last stage for want of carriage. A considerable number of tribal sowars, mutineers, and ghazis had joined them. It is stated to be Ayub's intention to attack us here, moving by Sangbar road. Luinab with a large number of cavalry is reported to have moved down the Helmund with intention of crossing to Arghandab and attacking our camp; but this requires confirmation.

Enclosure 5 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 23rd July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 22nd.—Spies report that Ayub's troops have crossed the Helmund at Haidarabad. A party of his cavalry came yesterday to Sangbar, 14 miles from here, but returned again. A small party of ghazis, who have collected there, state that they expected 4,000 horsemen to arrive to-day, and the main body to-morrow. Few supplies being available at Sangbar, Ayub cannot halt there beyond a day. Being apprehensive of a night attack by the enemy's numerous cavalry, General Burrows has shifted his camp to a new position, in which the stores, sick, and baggage animals are in an enclosure. Report raises number of ghazis and men, who have joined Ayub, to 4,000.

Enclosure 6 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 23rd, 9 a.m.—Intelligence brought last night that Luinab with 400 sowars was moving on Maiwand to collect provisions. Main body of enemy was yesterday still at Haidarabad on this side river. Cavalry reconnaissance going towards Sangbar met about 400 enemy's sowars moving towards Maiwand. A demonstration of cavalry and artillery made them retreat by the road they had come. They state that regular troops will remain in reserve pushing forward cavalry and ghazis. Neither will attempt to move by main road, but keep along foot of hills. Herati regiments reported to be very uneasy at being taken so far from home.

Enclosure 7 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

In and around the city all is quiet. A few shots were fired from outside last night at the Shikarpur Gate, where a guard of our troops is stationed. No one was hurt. The Arghastan, Kadanai, and Derawat districts are slightly disturbed. The rest quiet. No more reports of gatherings. Most of the malcontents having probably left to join Ayub, no further news of Abu Said's sons, who were reported trying to raise a gathering in Kadanai.

On the 14th, Muhammad Aslam with a body of sowars attacked a fort near Kelat-i-Ghilzai, occupied by Sirdar's men collecting revenue. He was repulsed. By latest accounts he was near Shahjui, with a following of about 40 men. District otherwise quiet.

Enclosure 8 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, 24th.—Retirement of enemy's cavalry this morning complete. None have passed us.

Enclosure 9 in No. 7.

TELEGRAM, dated 25th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 24th.—Reconnoitring parties sent out to Sangbar and Maiwand this morning saw no signs of the enemy. The cavalry driven back yesterday was commanded by the Luinab and fell back from Sangbar to the Helmund. Last night a body of 450 cavalry crossed the hills to the north three days ago, and came down to the Arghandab valley in our rear. It is believed to have been sent by the Sartip to bring away his family hidden in the villages there. A Populzai Khan of Khakrez has brought in letter from Ayub, calling on him to join his army, and reports that Habibulla Khan, Barakzai, has passed up the valley trying to make the people rise. He has as yet had little success, though there is much excitement throughout the country. Much mischief is caused by false reports that the Wali is a prisoner in our camp. Fifty sowars of the Sind Horse arrived here from Kandahar on the 21st, and found road quiet.

No. 8.

TELEGRAM FROM GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY, 28th July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

PRIMROSE telegraphs to-day from Kandahar:—Terrible disaster. General Burrows' force annihilated. We are going into citadel. General Phayre telegraphed to collect what forces he can, and march on Kandahar. Posts are being concentrated at Chaman. Message ends. I have telegraphed Simla. We can send another brigade if necessary.

No. 9.

TELEGRAM FROM VICEROY, 28th July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

GENERAL BURROWS has been seriously defeated by Ayub Khan. Primrose has vacated cantonments at Kandahar and retired to citadel. We are pushing forward reinforcements already on their way, as quickly as possible, and sending large additional reinforcements from India. It may be necessary to anticipate despatch of troops from England intended for this season's reliefs.

No. 10.

No. 175 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, August 3, 1880.

IN forwarding, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copies of further telegrams regarding the state of affairs in Afghanistan, in continuation of those forwarded with our Despatch, No. 169, dated 27th July 1880, we have the honour to summarize, as follows, the information which they contain regarding the reverse sustained by the force under command of Brigadier-General Burrows.

2. On the 12th July news reached Colonel St. John, the Political Officer with General Burrows' force, that the advanced portion of Ayub Khan's army was at Washir, and that Ayub Khan himself was not far in rear. The British brigade was then encamped on the Helmund opposite Girishk, the troops of the Wali of Kandahar being on the further bank of the river. On the 13th, it appeared that the infantry in the service of the Wali was in such an unsatisfactory state and so untrustworthy, that General Burrows and Colonel St. John deliberated on the question of disarming them. But the next morning, before any steps could be taken, the Wali's infantry deserted in a body, taking with them a battery of artillery. The mutineers were pursued by a portion of General Burrows' brigade and dispersed, the guns and baggage being recovered. At this time [14th July], Sirdar Ayub Khan's army was reported to be three marches distant from Girishk.

3. As the mutinous troops had plundered the stores of supplies collected at Girishk by Sher Ali Khan, and as reports had reached Colonel St. John that it was Ayub Khan's intention, if he crossed the river Helmund at all, to do so at a point to the north of Girishk, General Burrows determined on the 15th July to retire to Kushk-i-Nakhud, a distance of 30 miles from Girishk and 45 miles from Kandahar, where several roads from the Helmund to Kandahar converge, and where supplies were plentiful. This retirement was effected on the 17th. On the 18th all was reported quiet in the vicinity of Kushk-i-Nakhud, and it was believed that the majority of the mutinous troops had dispersed to their homes. The advanced portion of Ayub's cavalry had reached Girishk the day before. On the 19th, General Burrows shifted his camp three miles nearer Girishk, and on the 22nd he again moved it to a new position, in which he was able to place his sick, stores, and baggage, in an enclosure, being apprehensive of a night attack by the enemy.

4. On the 21st it had been reported that Ayub Khan's force had reached Haidarabad on the Helmund, 12 miles above Girishk, and that the intention was to advance by way of Sangbar. On the 22nd, our cavalry appear to have come in sight of that of the enemy, who retired without coming into action, a demonstration with cavalry and artillery having sufficed to cause them to fall back. On the 25th Ayub Khan with his entire force was known to be at Haidarabad, while his cavalry occasionally occupied Sangbar, and it was reported to be his intention to advance on the 25th by Sangbar and Maiwand, and to endeavour to pass by General Burrows' force into the Arghandab valley above Kandahar. This news was received by us on the 27th July.

5. On the morning of the 28th we received a telegram from Lieutenant Muir, Assistant Political Officer at Kandahar, announcing the total defeat and dispersion of General Burrows' force, with heavy loss in officers and men, and reporting that, in consequence, General Primrose had vacated the cantonment at Kandahar, moving all his troops into the citadel. This intelligence was gradually supplemented, during the 28th and 29th, by telegrams from Sir R. Sandeman at Quetta, who reported that telegraphic communication was broken down before noon on the 28th, between the Chaman Post, west of the Khojak Pass, and Kandahar; the last message received in Quetta intimating that the disaster, though severe, was not so complete as General Primrose had at first believed. The report that the whole of General Burrows' force had been annihilated, which was transmitted to England, and which is inconsistent even with the few details contained in the first account of the affair received at Kandahar, seems to have been founded upon a telegram sent direct by General Primrose to the Bombay Government. Nevertheless, the account of the action received this morning from Colonel St. John by a telegram, dated Kandahar 29th, leaves no doubt that the British force encountered an enemy, greatly superior in numbers, well posted, and of formidable strength in artillery and cavalry, that our force was defeated, and that it fell back in great disorder on Kandahar, suffering heavy loss during the retreat, mainly through the exhaustion of the troops. At Kandahar General Primrose was reported to be making preparations against an attack by fortifying himself in the citadel, where provisions and ammunition are said to be plentiful.

6. We are taking all possible measures for speedily pushing forward reinforcements to the relief of the troops now in Kandahar. As the first step towards the attainment of this object, all the troops at Quetta, in Pishin, and on the railway line between Sibi and Quetta are being concentrated in Pishin, the railway works being temporarily abandoned, until the advance of reinforcements from India make it again possible to arrange suitably for their protection. Troops are also being forwarded from India as rapidly as possible, and a strong division, now under formation at Kabul, will be ready in a few days to march for Kandahar via Ghazni.

7. In Kabul and its neighbourhood all is reported quiet, and the necessary arrangements are now being made with Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan, the newly-recognised Amir of Kabul.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RIPON.
F. P. HAINES.
JOHN STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
WHITLEY STOKES.
JAMES GIBBS.
C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 10.

No. 394, dated Camp Kushk-i-Nakhud, 17th July 1880. (Extract.)

From Lieutenant-Colonel O. B. C. ST. JOHN, C.S.I., Resident, Southern Afghanistan, to
A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit for the information of Government a detailed account of the events of the last few days, with the leading incidents of which my daily telegrams will have kept you informed.

2. The advanced column under Brigadier-General Nuttall, with which I marched, reached Girishk on Saturday morning the 10th, and the main body under Brigadier-General Burrows the following day. The total force then consisted of one battery Royal Horse Artillery, two regiments of Cavalry, one company of Sappers, six companies of British Infantry, and two regiments of Native Infantry.

3. Our camp was pitched in comparatively low ground on the left bank of the Helmund almost immediately opposite the fort of Girishk, from which it was separated, first by the river itself, fordable at the present time at intervals of half a mile at most, and secondly by a belt of grass and jungle over a mile in width. A bridged road leads from the ford to the fort. The camp of his Highness the Wali was pitched about a mile below the fort, partly on the high sloping banks of the river's bed, and partly in the low land below. His force then consisted of three regiments of infantry, numbering about 1,300 men, two six-pounder smooth-bore guns, and about 1,000 tribal cavalry. The remainder of his force was in advance under his nephew Sirdar Roshdil Khan at Karezat, 20 to 25 miles distant, and consisted of 800 infantry, the remaining four guns of his battery, and about 1,500 tribal cavalry.

4. In the evening of the day of our arrival the Wali visited me, and gave me details of what I had heard by message from him in the morning, that his cousin Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan had deserted the advanced camp at Karezat with his own sowars, 50 in number, after an ineffectual attempt to induce the rest of the troops to accompany him to Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan's camp, then in Washir. The Wali then told me that in spite of this evidence of fidelity on the part of the troops, he felt by no means confident in their loyalty. He was anxious for us to cross and camp on the west bank of the river, but I did not then think right to tell him definitely that the General in command had most stringent orders not to do so, hoping that Brigadier-General

Burrows, who would arrive the next morning, would bring permission to act on his own discretion.

5. No such permission having been received, I told the Wali the next evening that under no circumstances should we cross the river. He was much depressed, and said that in that case it would be impossible for him to do anything to oppose Ayub's advance, and that he would concentrate all his troops at Girishk. To this I agreed, considering that if their fidelity was doubtful, it would be better to have the whole of them within reach than to leave a large proportion in a place where there would be no obstacle to their going over to the enemy.

6. The next day (Monday the 12th), I did not see the Wali, but finding from various sources that the disaffection among his troops was far more serious than he had led me to believe, and seeing that he was unwilling that I should go to his camp, I sent for his confidential Secretary, who confirmed the information. By him I sent a message to the Wali asking him whether it would not be better to disarm the whole or part of his regular troops, or, if he was unable to do so himself, to authorise us to take measures for the purpose. To this he eagerly assented, and he appointed the next morning to meet and talk the matter over.

7. At sunrise the next morning I met his Highness on the west bank of the river, and rode with him to the fort and across again to our camp, where he spent a considerable time in discussing the situation with General Burrows and myself. He freely admitted the untrustworthiness of his men, placing the blame mainly on the Sartip and on a certain Sardaru Khan, the principal officer of his army, who was known to have received many communications from Ayub Khan, some of which he had made over to the Wali. "But the only really disaffected corps," he declared, "was the Kabir regiment, about 450 strong, which had been sent to him last September from Kabul, where it had been stationed for 10 years." If this regiment was disarmed there would be no cause to fear the others, but he himself could not disarm it without our assistance. This the very stringent orders received by General Burrows prevented his doing as long as the Wali's force remained on the right bank, and his Highness therefore offered, on receipt of a written request from me, which he could show his officers, to bring the whole of his force to the left bank the next morning. Later on, General Burrows, as reported by telegram, determined to cross the river to disarm the Wali's troops should the step appear necessary. The next morning, while our own camp was being shifted to a better position a mile and a half up stream, I watched the Wali's encampment from the opposite heights. The tents were struck about six, and half-an-hour later the Wali's cousin, Sirdar Dilawar Khan, came across to fix a site for the new camp. Everything was, he said, proceeding satisfactorily, but a quarter of an hour later news was brought me that the troops had mutinied, seized the guns and baggage and driven the Wali and the whole of his cavalry and principal officers across the river. Riding back to the ford I met the Wali with a large number of horsemen; he said that after striking the tents and packing the baggage, the Kabir regiment had marched up to the high bank where the guns were, had seized them, forced the gunners to join them, and driven him and all but a few sowars who joined the mutineers out of the camp. The Wali added that many of the sowars who had accompanied him were untrustworthy, and begged me to fall back in the Kandahar direction at once. I told him that this would be quite unnecessary with our strong force, and that we would first punish the mutineers, and recover the guns. After some delay, mainly caused by uncertainty whether the mutineers intended to hold a position about the fort or move off

Battery, Horse Artillery.
2nd Regiment of Cavalry.
Company Sappers.
Four companies, 66th Regiment.
Four companies, Jacob's Rifles.

towards Herat, and of the attitude of the Wali's sowars, the troops, as per margin, moved across the river by a ford directly in front of our new camp, two miles above Girishk, at 9.30 a.m., the mutineers being then seen streaming along the opposite bank two miles distant. After the troops had crossed the ford I rode on to the advanced guard, which brought the mutineers to bay a few minutes before 11 a.m. at a distance of four miles from the camp. Half-an-hour later they moved to a second position a mile further on, and opened fire with the 6-pounder guns on the cavalry. This they kept up at intervals till the Horse Artillery, whose passage was much delayed by irrigation channels and rough ground, came into action at half-past 12.

8. On the brief engagement that ensued it is not my province to enlarge: suffice to say that at 2 p.m. all firing had ceased and I returned to camp five miles off by a different road and ford to that by which I had come. I mention this to show the feebleness of the obstacle which the Helmund in a season like the present offers to military operations. During my stay of five days I crossed it in nine different places with a guide, in a distance of five miles.

9. On my return I found the Wali with a few servants in our camp; he informed me that the majority of his sowars were still with him, though a few had, he found, joined the mutineers, and a few more fled to Kandahar. Most of those that had remained had sent their baggage in the same direction. Before leaving camp, I had asked that a party with camels should be sent to bring across the atta, grain, and ghee stored for us by the Wali in the fort; this had been done, but the atta and ghee had disappeared, though large quantities of raw grain remained.

10. The next morning after consultation with the Wali as to the possibility of feeding the troops at Girishk, I reluctantly came to the conclusion to recommend General Burrows to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud, whither the Wali had sent the whole of his sowars the night before.

11. The position of Kushk-i-Nakhud offers many advantages. Should the enemy cross at Girishk and follow the road we came, he would have to meet us either in an entrenched position here, or on ground of our own choosing, covering the first water-course on this side of the desert which separates us from Girishk. Should he take the northern road, he would have to meet us at Maiwand, 10 miles off, or, if he keeps to the river line, the Arghandab is less than that distance to the south. In fact, we are half way between the mountains to the north and the sandy desert to the south, at the point where these approach each other most nearly.

12. Should Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan, however, carry out what is, according to some reports, his intention of moving to Tirin and Darawut, and stirring up the country from there, the situation would be entirely changed, and the presence of so large a force here useless.

13. In conclusion, I have the honour to make a few remarks with reference to the effect on the country of this so far successful invasion. It is well known to you, that for many months Ayub Khan and his partisans have used every effort to inflame the religious and patriotic feelings of the chiefs and people against us and our protégé, Sher Ali Khan. These had apparently little or no effect at the time and as long as the possibility of an invasion from Herat seemed more than remote, particularly after the failure of the first attempt. But the actual presence on the frontier of an army of their own fellow tribesmen, under a prince of their recent ruling family, the memory of whose oppression a year and a half of prosperity has sufficed to obliterate from the minds of this fickle people, has, I have reason to suspect, created a more powerful and general feeling in Ayub's favour than one who had only known Kandahar a year ago would believe possible; and it is far from improbable that, unless Ayub Khan's army be defeated and dispersed at once, something very like a general rising may take place. That this could attain the formidable dimensions which have been reached in Kabul, the unwarlike character of the modern Durani and the physical features of the country forbid, but it may cause considerable trouble and annoyance and involve somewhat extended operations.

Enclosure 2 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 25th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 24th.—If enemy moves up Helmund, General Burrows proposes sending back superfluous baggage and sick to Kandahar and moving up Khakrez valley, opening up fresh line of communications.

Enclosure 3 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL Phayre has received information from the Kandahar Road commandant corroborating what I previously told him that Ayub's cavalry meditate an attack in the Gulistan direction on our communication. The general is sending there to-morrow from Quetta a small column consisting of 450 infantry, 2 guns, and a few cavalry.

The 24th Native Regiment is at Darwaza, and hopes to reach Quetta to-morrow or next day.

Enclosure 4 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 25th.—Ayub, with his entire force, is still about Haidarabad. His cavalry outposts occasionally occupying Sangbar, near which two men of Sind Horse on outpost duty were surprised and killed. This morning spies report that he intends moving on the 28th by both roads through Sangbar and through Maiwand. His object being to get past us into the Arghandab valley above Kandahar.

Enclosure 5 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

TOTAL defeat and dispersion of General Burrows' force. Heavy loss in both officers and men. General Primrose has vacated cantonments and brought all his troops into citadel. Officers and men returning in small parties. Wali has arrived. Colonel St. John safe.

Enclosure 6 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

News of this morning from Kandahar. General Phayre and I have consulted together, and these are our views: That our line of communication with India for troops must be the Bolan Pass. The question we beg to refer to Government is what is to be done under present circumstances with the railway line under construction. We consider that the force from Thal-Chotiali to Quetta should be concentrated in Pishin with the least possible delay, and we recommend that the protection of the railway line and Thal-Chotiali should, if possible, be taken by Punjab troops. The Bombay troops, in which we include the whole of General Phayre's division, ought to be concentrated here at once.

General Primrose has telegraphed that he is abandoning Kandahar cantonments and will defend himself in citadel. He has directed General Phayre to march on Kandahar as soon as he can collect army. Primrose says Ayub's army is strong in artillery, which numbers 35 guns well served. We trust as much artillery as can be spared will be sent from India, also Europeans and horses to equip the guns at Quetta. We are quite aware of the very bad political effect the abandonment of the railway line and Thal-Chotiali by the present garrison must have upon the country, unless troops from the Punjab can be sent to relieve them, but state of country and strength of tribes, in our opinion, leave no alternative.

Primrose telegraphed two of our guns had been taken by enemy, who pursued our retreating troops for three miles.

Enclosure 7 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2511 E.F., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

VICEROY entirely approves the measures proposed by yourself and General Phayre, and decides that the forces employed for protection of railway line must be at once withdrawn as proposed. We are sending reinforcements from Bengal, and will re-occupy railway line when possible, but present exigencies necessitate pushing forward all available forces toward Kandahar. Viceroy relies on you to use all exertions to co-operate with Phayre in relieving posts and pushing forward reinforcements.

Enclosure 8 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram to-day just received. General Phayre has issued the necessary orders for the troops now protecting railway line to concentrate on Pishin. Movement commences from Thul-Chotiali, and I hope the order for the march will reach Thul-Chotiali on the third day from this. I have directed political officers to heartily co-operate with commanding officers in carrying out General's orders, and to arrange as best they can with the head men of villages to take care of all stores, telegraph line, &c. left behind, until reoccupation of country by our troops. I am in constant communication with General Phayre, who is strenuously exerting himself to push forward all available forces towards Kandahar. His Excellency the Viceroy may rely on myself and officers using our best exertions to aid General Phayre.

Enclosure 9 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

BEFORE telegraphic communication ceased at 11 o'clock this morning, the following news was received from General Primrose:—Following officers belonging to General Burrows' force had safely reached Kandahar:—Doctor Burrows, Eaton, Harvey, Mainwaring, Geoghegan, Oliver, Griffiths, Whitecot, Dane. Small parties of Burrows' force constantly arriving. Enemy appear only to have pursued for three or four miles. Extent of our losses not yet ascertained, but feared to be very severe. Two guns lost. Jacob's Rifles lost, Smith, Justice, and Coles killed; in Bombay Grenadiers, Anderson severely wounded, Haslet killed. Of R.H.A., Osborne killed, Blackwood wounded. In 3rd Cavalry, Mayne and Reid wounded. In 66th, Roberts killed, Lynch wounded. Enemy very strong in guns; believed to have 35, which they work well. General Primrose mentions that he has sent out General Brooke to bring in stragglers.

Enclosure 10 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

COMMUNICATION with Kandahar stopped at 11 this morning. I will inform General Phayre of your instructions.

Enclosure 11 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2521 E.P., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

We hear wire cut towards Kandahar. Please use every endeavour to collect and send me early intelligence of passing events there.

Enclosure 12 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2,524 E.P., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

Do you know what day and time and where action was fought; also whether Burrows attacked or enemy attacked him.

Enclosure 13 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

HIS Highness the Khan has sent me the following message in reply to telegrams informing him of substance of what had happened, and asking him to assist us with camels:—Begins. Thanks for your three telegrams. I am certain that the enemy will get their due reward soon. I am glad to afford help. My head and my all belongs to the British. I shall never draw back. One hundred and fifty camels, and one hundred horses are ready at Mustang just now; inform me and I shall happily send them to you immediately.

Musa Khan left this three days ago for Quetta with 100 camels. Whatever grain or money is required by the British I am ready to supply. I am certain you will always keep me informed of what is going on for the future. Ends.

Enclosure 14 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE this morning again visited General Phayre, and have recorded a memorandum of our deliberations which will be posted to-day. After carefully reviewing the situation we are again forced to the conclusion that, unless other troops can at once occupy the railway line of works, it must be abandoned. I telegraph this to show Government that the abandonment of the line and valuable plant is imperatively necessary, though we have come to this decision most unwillingly.

Enclosure 15 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram, dated this morning, asks where and when Burrows' action was fought, and whether he attacked. I regret I cannot give any information in addition to what I telegraphed yesterday. Primrose at the time wire was cut did not know the extent of the defeat. The last words that I understood he sent were to the effect that disaster was not so great as at first believed, but very severe; enemy only pursued for three or four miles; two of our guns taken, the others expected in; Brooke sent out to bring in stragglers; intended to abandon cantonments and occupy citadel; his only fear was scarcity of water.

Enclosure 16 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2531 E.P., dated 29th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

VICEROY entirely approves your decision to abandon railway line temporarily. Two strong brigades are being sent up and reinforcements coming from England at once. Send all particulars of Burrows' action as early as possible.

Enclosure 17 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2534 E.P., dated 29th July 1880

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

YOUR telegram 29th. Please convey at once to his Highness the Khan of Kelat, Viceroy's cordial acknowledgments of the friendship and loyalty toward the British Government attested by his prompt and valuable offer of co-operation.

Enclosure 18 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram of last evening expressing anxiety for news from Kandahar. Within a few hours of the receipt of the news about Burrows, I had sent off reliable men to Kandahar for information last night. The news from Chaman fort was that the Mel Abdul Rahman and Dubrai post, retreating from the line of communication on Chaman, had arrived at Gatai. Fighting was going on, but they were holding their own. Assistance is to be sent this morning from Chaman to help them in. They number 180 infantry and 70 cavalry. The country between Kandahar and Khojak Pass is in a state of insurrection, the difficulty therefore of communicating with Kandahar is very great. I have sent six letters to St. John and Major Westmacott yesterday at Chaman, despatched to him by messenger, with telegram from me. The country people say that the fight between the British and Ayub's army was severe and both sides lost heavily. I will again despatch letters; but even if my messengers succeed in reaching St. John, an answer to my first letters on account of distance must take, counting from date of despatch, 10 days.

The Kakars and Aitchakzais are reported collecting; but in a few days, I trust, we will be strong enough to hold the country from Quetta to Chaman post.

Enclosure 19 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

From Chaman I hear that Major Westmacott went out this morning with 50 sabres, Poona Horse, to assist Major Jacob retreating with road outpost detachments on Chaman. A skirmish took place near Gatai, but I understand there were no casualties on our side. Major Westmacott and Jacob are bringing their men safely into Chaman.

Enclosure 20 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

My telegram this morning. The detachments named therein have arrived at Chaman. No casualties.

Enclosure 21 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 31st July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

WE have received no direct news from our army at Kandahar. Native sources do not describe Burrows' defeat as crushing. They say that British cavalry and guns were induced to follow the enemies' cavalry, who pretended to fly and led them into a complete ambushade. Ayub's army then delivered its attack, and our troops suffered very severely in officers and men. A battle was then fought, resulting in our retirement on Kandahar, but Ayub's army suffered much. This news, I am sorry to say, requires confirmation. I send it because received from several sources.

Enclosure 22 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received the following news from a fairly reliable source :—Ayub Khan's army did not follow up British retreat to Kandahar. Burrows' force has arrived at Kandahar, and our whole army is now in the citadel. When messenger left Ayub was encamped where action was fought. This intelligence seems to corroborate news sent you yesterday that Burrows' defeat was not so crushing as at first believed by Primrose, and that Ayub Khan's army had suffered so much that they were vacillating regarding their further course of action.

Enclosure 23 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, No. 2571 E.P., dated 1st August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

HER Majesty the Queen has expressed her satisfaction at the news of the Khan of Kelat's loyal offers of assistance. Please inform Khan.

Enclosure 24 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

29th. Arrived here yesterday afternoon with General Burrows and Nuttall and remnant of force. Telegraph has been interrupted ever since my arrival. No chance of restoration, so send this by messenger to Chaman. Burrows marched from Kushk-i-Nakhud on morning, 27th, having heard from me that Ayub's advanced guard had occupied Maiwand, about three miles from the latter place. Enemy's cavalry appeared advancing from direction of Haidrabad, their camp on Helmund ten miles above Girishk. Artillery and cavalry engaged them at 9 A.M., so shortly afterwards whole force of enemy appeared and formed line of battle—, seven regiments, regulars in centre, three others in reserve; about 2,000 cavalry on right; 400 mounted men and 2,000 Ghazis and irregular infantry on left; other cavalry and irregulars in reserve; five or six batteries of guns, including one of breechloaders, distributed at intervals. Estimated total force 12,000. Ground slightly undulating, enemy being best posted. Till one P.M., action confined to artillery fire, which so well sustained and directed by enemy that our superior quality armament failed to compensate for inferior number of guns. After development of rifle fire, our breechloaders told; but vigorous advance of cavalry against our left, and Ghazis along the front caused native infantry to fall back in confusion on 66th abandoning two guns. Formation being lost, infantry retreated slowly; and, in spite of gallant efforts of General Burrows to rally them, were cut off from cavalry and artillery. This was at 3 P.M., and followers and baggage were streaming away towards Kandahar. After severe fighting in enclosed ground, General Burrows succeeded in extricating infantry and brought them into line of retreat. Unfortunately no efforts would turn fugitives from main road, waterless at this season. Thus majority casualties appear to have occurred from thirst and exhaustion. Enemy's pursuit continued to ten miles from Kandahar, but was not vigorous. Cavalry, artillery, and a few infantry reached banks of Argandab, 40 miles from scene of action, at 7 A.M.; many not having tasted water since previous morning.

Nearly all ammunition lost, with 400 Martini, 700 Sniders, and 2 nine-pounder guns. Estimated loss, killed and missing,—66th, 400; Grenadiers, 350; Jacob's Rifles, 350; Artillery, 40; Sappers, 21; Cavalry, 60. Officers killed, or missing,—Major Blackwood, Osborne, MacLaine, Artillery; Henn, Engineers. Galbraith, McMath, Garratt, Cullen, Roberts, Rayner, Honywood, Barr, Chute, 66th; Owen, 3rd Cavalry; Hinde, Whitby, Grenadiers; Smith, Justice, Cole, Jacob's Rifles. Wounded,—Fowell, Artillery; Lynch, Preston 66th; Anderson, Grant, Grenadiers; Iredell, Jacob's Rifles.

Preparations being now made for siege. Durani inhabitants expelled. Provisions and ammunition plentiful. Wali was present during action, and is now with us, assisting actively. Of course, whole country will rise.

L O N D O N :
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

AFGHANISTAN (1880) No. 3.

P A P E R S

RELATING TO THE

ADVANCE OF AYUB KHAN ON KANDAHAR.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.
1880.

L O N D O N :

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1880.

[C.—2736.] Price 1s. 10d.

LIST OF PAPERS.

No.	—	From.	To.	Date.	Subject.	Page.
1	Telegram -	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State	1880. 27 June	Advance of Ayub Khan. Measures proposed.	3
2	" -	" - -	"	30 "	Requesting reply to the above	3
3	" -	Secretary of State	Viceroy - -	"	Approving proposals	3
4	" -	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State	1 July	Despatch of instructions to Generals Primrose and Phayre.	3
5	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 3rd July 1880					3
6	Letter - - with	Government of India. 8 enclosures.	Secretary of State	6 July (No. 154.)	Movements of Ayub Khan. Strength of his force.	4
7	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 10th July 1880					6
8	Letter - - with	Government of India. 4 enclosures.	Secretary of State	13 July (No. 157.)	Advance of General Burrows to the Helmund.	8
9	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 17th July 1880					9
10	Letter - - with	Government of India. 8 enclosures.	Secretary of State	20 July (No. 162.)	Mutiny of the Wali's troops. Retirement of General Burrows to Khushk-i- Nakhud.	12
11	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 24th July 1880					14
12	Letter - - with	Government of India. 9 enclosures.	Secretary of State	27 July (No. 169.)	Passage of the Helmund by Ayub's army. Cavalry re- connaissance.	18
13	Telegram -	Governor of Bombay.	"	28 July	Reported annihilation of General Burrow's force.	21
14	" -	Viceroy - -	"	" "	Serious defeat of General Burrows. Consequent mili- tary measures.	21
14A	" -	Secretary of State	Viceroy -	" "	Suggested despatch of force from Kabul or Kurram to Kandahar.	21
15	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 31st July 1880					21
15A	Telegram -	Viceroy -	Secretary of State	3 Aug.	Despatch of force from Kabul to Kandahar.	24
16	Letter - - with	Government of India. 24 enclosures.	"	" " (No. 175.)	Summary of information con- nected with the defeat of General Burrows. Report by Colonel St. John of the mutiny of the Wali's troops.	24
17	Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 7th August 1880					33
18	Letter - - with	Government of India. 17 enclosures.	Secretary of State	10 Aug. (No. 179.)	Affairs in the Bolan Pass and neighbourhood. Reports from Kandahar.	36

No.	—	From.	To.	Date.	Subject.	Page.
1880.
19		Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 14th August 1880 - - -				40
20	Letter - -	Government of India.	Secretary of State	17 Aug. (No. 185.)	Narrative of events and circumstances which preceded and attended the march of Ayub Khan to Kandahar.	44
21	" - with	" 20 enclosures.	"	17 Aug. (No. 186.)	Evacuation of the railway line. News from Kandahar to 11th August.	47
22		Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 21st August 1880 - - -				52
23	Letter - - with	Government of India. 4 enclosures.	Secretary of State	24 Aug. (No. 363.)	Military despatches relative to the mutiny of the Wali's troops.	56
24	" - - with	" 7 enclosures.	"	24 Aug. (No. 194.)	Affairs at Kelat-i-Ghizai. Reports from Kandahar.	59
25	" - - with	" 2 enclosures.	"	24 Aug. (No. 196.)	Attempts to communicate with Kandahar.	62
26		Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 28th August 1880 - - -				64
27	Letter - - with	Government of India. 24 enclosures.	Secretary of State	31 Aug. (No. 201.)	Sortie from Kandahar. Movements of Sir F. Roberts. Mutiny of troops of Khan of Khelat. Retirement of Ayub Khan.	66
28		Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 4th September 1880 - - -				73
29	Telegram -	Secretary of State	Sir F. Roberts -	4 Sept.	Congratulations on victory over Ayub Khan.	77
30	Letter - - with	Government of India. 23 enclosures.	Secretary of State	7 " (No. 205.)	March of Sir F. Roberts; arrival of his force at Kandahar, and defeat of Ayub Khan.	77
31	Telegram -	Secretary of State	Viceroy - -	7 Sept.	Congratulations of the Queen to the Commander-in-Chief on success of the measures for the relief of Kandahar.	85
32		Military Diary of Events during the week ending the 11th September 1880 - - -				85
33	Letter - - with	Government of India. 8 enclosures.	Secretary of State	14 Sept. (No. 209.)	Movements of the Kabul-Kandahar field force.	87
33A	Telegram -	Governor, Bombay	"	19 Sept.	Explanation of telegram from General Primrose.	90
34	Letter - - with	Government of India. 3 enclosures.	"	28 Sept. (No. 213.)	Correspondence between Ayub Khan and Sir F. Roberts.	90
35	" - - with	" 7 enclosures.	"	5 Oct. (No. 434.)	Military despatches relative to the defeat of General Burrows at Maiwand.	91
36	" - - with	" 7 enclosures.	"	12 Oct. (No. 219.)	Review of events connected with Ayub Khan's invasion of Kandahar.	107
37	" - - with	" 7 enclosures.	"	12 Oct. (No. 439.)	Despatches from General Primrose relative to the siege of Kandahar.	112

LIST OF PAPERS.

V

No.		From.	To.	Date.	Subject.	Page.
38	Letter - - with	Government of India. 4 enclosures.	Secretary of State	1880. 12 Oct. (No. 442.)	Despatch of Sir F. Roberts, describing the march of his force from Kabul to Kandahar, and the defeat of Ayub Khan.	125
39	Despatch -	Secretary of State	Government of India.	15 Oct. (No. 43.)	Appreciation by Her Majesty's Government of the services of Sir F. Roberts and his force, and of Sir D. Stewart.	141
40	Letter - - with	Government of India. 1 enclosure.	Secretary of State	19 Oct. (No. 223)	Diary of the Kandahar Residency from 1st to 28th July 1880.	141
41	" - - with	" 4 enclosures.	"	26 Oct. (No. 460)	Operations of Brig.-General Brooke, on the 28th July 1880.	152
42	" - - with	" 3 enclosures.	"	2 Nov. (No. 473.)	Conduct of the 66th Foot in the action at Maiwand.	155
43	" - - with	" 4 enclosures.	"	2 Nov. (No. 474.)	Operations of the 1st September near Kandahar; proceedings of troops under the command of General Primrose.	157
44	" - - with	" 6 enclosures.	"	9 Nov. (No. 485.)	Burial of the dead on the field of Maiwand.	160

P A P E R S.

No. 1.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 27th June 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

TELEGRAM from Thomson at Teheran says, Ayub Khan marching against Kandahar with large force. I think we should leave Shere Ali to defend himself beyond the Helmund, but it seems to me, after communicating with Stewart, that it would be inconsistent with security of our military position at Kandahar to allow hostile forces to cross that river. I propose, therefore, to instruct Primrose, if Ayub reaches Furrah, to advance towards Girishk with sufficient force to prevent passage of Helmund. This would necessitate moving up reinforcement from Phayre's reserve. No troops would be moved until necessity actually arose.

No. 2.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 30th June 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

My telegram of 27th. Early answer requested.

No. 3.

TELEGRAM from SECRETARY OF STATE, 30th June 1880, to VICEROY.

Yours, 27th and 30th. Instructions to Primrose approved.

No. 4.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 1st July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

AYUB's advance guard reported to have arrived at Furrah. Orders sent to Primrose and Phayre in accordance with my telegram of the 27th.

No. 5.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 3RD JULY 1880. (Extract.)

28th June.—The following reports, dated the 26th, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar:—

I.—“On evening of 24th a Ghazi attacked a party of officers near Baba Wali. He was at once killed by a soldier of 66th Regiment. No one wounded.”

II.—“Two men of the 5th Native Infantry and three followers killed near Harnai some few days ago. As doubts have arisen as to how they met their death, General Phayre is causing inquiry to be made. Report will be furnished soon as details received from him.”

1st July.—The following reports, dated 30th June, have been received from Kandahar from Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

I.—“The following intelligence just received from Political Resident:—“Letter from Wali's nephew in Washir, dated 26th, states intelligence reached him that Luinab with advanced guard of horsemen had left Herat some days before Ayub, who was then probably at Sabzawan. Luinab supposed to have reached Farrah.””

II. "The following further intelligence received from Political Resident :—' Wali sends second letter from his nephew in Washir, giving intelligence that Luinab has arrived in Farrah with 800 sowars, and is collecting levies there. Travellers who have arrived from Herat in twelve days say that when they left Ayub was at Rozabad with regulars.'"

2nd July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports that the health of the troops under his command at Kandahar is "fair."

3rd July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose telegraphs as follows from Kandahar on the 1st :—

"The Political Resident furnishes the following intelligence this day :—' Wali writes on afternoon of 29th that messengers from Farrah state Luinab with 1,000 horsemen arrived there about 23rd June, and was collecting supplies for army which was at Kush Kaba, sixteen miles north Farrah. Ayub was with army. Kabuli troops had their families with them. Wali calculates Ayub arrived Farrah six days ago. Enquires anxiously whether force will move to his support, and asks orders regarding his advanced force at Washir. Second letter, written evening of 29th, states messengers from Bakwa report Luinab at Khormalik, twenty-one miles, and his advanced guard at Chahigez, fifty miles this side Farrah and four marches from Kandahar frontier.' Political Resident strongly urges immediate advance of brigade."

Instructions have been issued for the advance of a brigade from Kandahar to Girishk, but it is not to cross the Helmand. Also for a brigade of the Reserve Division to be pushed forward from Karachi to Kandahar.

No. 6.

No. 154 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 6, 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)	RIPON.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	JOHN STRACHEY.
"	E. B. JOHNSON.
"	WHITLEY STOKES.
"	JAMES GIBBS.

Enclosure 1 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTERS from Herat of 5th instant report that Ayub had some time before sent 1,200 letters to Kabul, addressed to different chiefs and officers, announcing his approach with a powerful army. Informant reports Ayub more than ever in the hands of the Kabulis, and personally unwilling to make any move; also expresses disbelief that any move will be made, and predicts that if it does, the Herati and Kabuli troops are sure to quarrel before they have gone far.

Enclosure 2 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

SEVERAL caravans have arrived from Herat in last few days with news up to 5th. Some preparations were being made for the intended march, and six regiments were at Rozabad. The Governor of Meshed was preventing the exportation of gun caps to Afghanistan. The harvest at Herat has been very fine.

Enclosure 3 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NINTH June is day on which regular troops known to have camped outside Herat. Actual start probably some days later. Nevertheless I recommend despatch of brigade to Maiwand as quickly as possible, if only to confirm fidelity of Wali's troops, overawe Zemindawar tribes, and establish confidence here. Am asking General Primrose to make preparatory arrangements in anticipation of orders.

Enclosure 4 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th June 1880. (Extract.)

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

In answer to letter of mine about report of desertions written some days ago, Wali writes that 50 or 60 men had returned to their homes when ordered to Washir, that a few of his men were mutinous, but the majority quite trustworthy.

His monthly disbursements for pay amount to one lakh six thousand rupees.

Enclosure 5 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, No. 2122 E.P., dated 1st July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar.

YOUR telegrams, 27th and 30th. Orders are issuing for brigade to Maiwand. Your political instructions are that no hostile troops must cross Helmund, and Wali must be supported, if necessary, in maintaining order this side river. Beyond Helmund he must rely on his own resources.

Enclosure 6 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

WALI writes on afternoon of 29th, that messengers from Furrah state Luinab with 1,000 horse arrived there about the 23rd, and was collecting supplies for army which was at Kushkaba, 16 miles north of Furrah. Ayub was with army. Kabul troops had their families with them. Wali calculated Ayub arrived Furrah six days ago, inquires anxiously whether force will move to his support, and asks orders regarding his advancing forces in Washir.

Second letter written night of 29th states messengers from Bakwa report Luinab at Khor Malik, 21 miles, and his advance guard at Chargaz 50 miles, this side Furrah and four marches from Kandahar frontier.

I am writing to Wali not to risk collision with Ayub's regular troops in Washir, but in absence of orders not giving him definite assurance of active support from here. But I strongly urge immediate advance of brigade.

It is possible that Ayub may delay on frontier; but he may be at Girishk in 10 days or less.

Enclosure 7 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Nothing of importance has occurred during the week in Kandahar territory; but the menaced invasion from Herat is causing much excitement in the city and neighbourhood.

Ayub Khan appears to have left the city finally about the 18th, and to have reached Furreh, where he was at the date of the latest advice, about the 24th. He has with him 2,500 horse, including 900 regulars, 10 regiments of infantry, varying from 350 to 500 men each, and six batteries of artillery, including at least one mule battery. He is said to be well provided with ammunition, except caps, of which a supply expected from Meshed had been seized by the Persian authorities at the frontier. A party of 1,000 cavalry under the Luinab, Khushdil Khan, are four or five days' march in frontier, and at date of latest report were in Bakwa.

Before leaving Herat the Ulemas assembled in a mosque and invested Ayub with title of Amir. He has also had money coined in his name.

The Wali is at Girishk with main body of his forces, two regiments of infantry, four guns, and 1,500 horse being in Washir under his nephew, Roshndil Khan.

The weather is much cooler.

Enclosure 8 in No. 6.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Two regiments cavalry and a battery Horse Artillery marched this morning for the Helmund. There is no news from the Herat direction.

No. 7.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 10TH JULY 1880. (Extract.)

5th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 4th :—

“Five hundred sabres 3rd Cavalry and 3rd Sind Horse, E-B Royal Horse Artillery, 40 Sappers and two companies infantry, left to-day for Helmund, under command of General Nuttall. Six companies 66th, and 1st and 30th Native Infantry, leave to-morrow under General Burrows' commanding column.”

6th July.—The following message, dated Poona, the 5th, has been received from the Governor of Bombay :—

“General Phayre telegraphs to Commander-in-Chief here as follows :—‘Kach, July 4th. I have just heard that telegraphic communication with Kandahar interrupted near Takht-i-pul. Four hundred Pathan sepoys of Khan of Khelat's State troops have deserted. Sibi Railway interrupted by floods at unbridged nallahs; Traffic Superintendent says it cannot be restored within ten days.’ Message ends.”

6th July.—The following message has been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar, dated the 5th :—

“Your telegram of 3rd July. My telegram of yesterday to you will have informed you of the departure of cavalry and artillery for Helmund near Girishk. The infantry, 66th Regiment (six companies), 1st Grenadiers, and 30th Native Infantry, left this morning, the whole under command of Brigadier-General Burrows. A month's supplies have been forwarded with the troops. Lieutenant-Colonel St. John accompanies the force.

As regards reinforcement from the Reserve Division, I have, in accordance with your instructions, requested the General Commanding at once to forward up two Native infantry regiments in the first place, to be followed as soon as possible by battery of artillery, 15th Foot and 1st Madras Cavalry, the three latter to proceed direct to Kandahar. The Native Infantry regiments were to replace two others ordered from line of communications to Kandahar. The head-quarters and wing 4th Native Infantry are now on the march from Quetta. Since these orders were issued, the telegram sent yesterday regarding break in railway line was forwarded to you. This morning I received the following telegram from General Phayre:—Message begins, Following received from General Wood,—‘Telegram begins, Jacobabad, 3rd July. Engineer-in-Chief reports breaks in line from heavy floods; transport of troops impracticable; have postponed move of 24th.’ Telegram ends. I have asked where breaks are and on what line. Will report further.—Message ends. Under these circumstances, it appears therefore to me for the present impracticable to bring any forces or reinforcements from the Reserve Division.”

II.—Dated the 6th.—Your telegram of 5th July. My telegram of yesterday will have informed you of all details of scheme. Head-quarters and wing, 4th Native Infantry, left Quetta for Kandahar on 3rd, and are to-day at Kila Abdulla. No further intelligence to-day as regards railway, but General Phayre reports he will endeavour to get 9th and 24th Native Infantry moved without delay.”

7th July.—General Phayre telegraphs from Kach on the 6th July:—

“I am doing all I can to push on the troops of the reserve. The breach in the railway line is about three miles. Colonel Lindsay will be here to-morrow; after consulting him will report again. I hope to get two Native regiments across in two or three days, and the Artillery and 15th Foot soon afterwards. The Bolan route is in good order and passable for all arms. Colonel Smith, R.H.A., and Dr. Bruce have just travelled by it from this to Sibi. The Sibi-Harnai line was closed for 10 days, owing to the Nari being in flood, but just now open. But if we get the usual heavy rains at the end of this month and in August, it will be again closed between Spintangi, Chotiali, and Harnai. The Marris and Pathan tribes have been giving a great deal of trouble lately. As regards the transport, the Director is collecting what we require at Nari. In order to preserve the health and efficiency of Europeans, I propose to push the men on in carts by double marches from Sibi to Dozan, one hundred at a time. Nothing will interfere with the progress of the troops as soon as transport is collected, if the railway stands and the Nari at Sibi is not flooded. The first 250 carts should arrive Sibi on 8th. I shall be here to-morrow, but go to Quetta on 8th to push on arrangements in in Bolan.

The following reports have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar:—

I.—Dated the 6th. “On 1st July Colonel Tanner, commanding at Khelat-i-Ghilzai, hearing that Mahomed Aslam had brought a gathering of about 200 horsemen within striking distance of Khelat, marched to Sir-i-Asp, 10 miles off, with 200 of the Biluch Regiment and squadron of Sind Horse, against him. Mahomed Aslam retired, and our infantry could not get up to him. Sind Horse pursued, charged and killed 14. Loss on our side one sowar slightly wounded. Enemy dispersed in all directions.”

II.—Dated the 7th. “Lieutenant-Colonel St. John writes advanced brigade under General Nuttall reached Karez-i-Ak morning 6th, all right. He had no news from the Wali that day.”

8th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose telegraphs as follows from Kandahar on the 7th:—

“Following message received yesterday evening from General Phayre:—Message begins, ‘Kach, 6th July. Damage to railway appears between 91st and 93rd miles, so that the break is three miles long. General Wood is, however, trying to arrange for passage of two Native regiments at once.’ Message ends.”

9th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports from Kandahar on the 8th:—

“Lieutenant-Colonel St. John reports our advanced party arrived Khúsh-i-Nakhúd morning 7th, and marched to Mir Karez to-day. Last news is Ayúb’s cavalry have reached the Khash Rúd; whether he has left Farráh is doubtful.”

10th July.—Sir Robert Sandeman telegraphs from Quetta on the 7th, as follows :—

“I have received information, from fairly reliable sources, to the effect that Ayúb's march on the Helmand is not so much with the object of fighting with Sher Ali as to keep the country in a state of anarchy, and make its administration and collection of revenue as difficult as possible. Ayúb will, if he can, avoid fighting with the British troops. Sardar Abdúlla Khan Nassar is with Ayúb Khan, and is said to have been mainly instrumental in adjusting the differences existing between the Herat and Kabuli troops, which formerly prevented the march of Ayúb's army. Dissensions still exist. One of Wali Sher Ali's regiments is said to have deserted.”

The Governor of Bombay telegraphs as follows on the 9th :—

“The 2-11th embark on Sunday in fast steamer for Karachi. Commander-in-Chief, on report of medical authorities, proposes to forward 2-11th instead of 2-15th, in consequence of epidemic fever in latter; but one or other will be ready to move as soon as line is clear. Most undesirable to have block of troops at Sibi or elsewhere.”

No. 8.

No. 157 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 13, 1880.

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 154, dated the 6th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RIPON.
„ F. P. HAINES.
„ JOHN STRACHEY.
„ E. B. JOHNSON.
„ WHITLEY STOKES.
„ JAMES GIBBS.
„ C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 8.

TELEGRAM, dated 8th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KHUSK-I-NAKHUD, 43 miles from Kandahar, July 7th :—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning. All well. Some difficulty about supplies at last halting place, but abundance here. General Burrows with infantry nine miles in rear.

Wali writes yesterday from Girishk that enemy's cavalry had reached bank of Khashrud, and that remainder were in Bakwa. Doubtful whether he means remainder of cavalry or regular troops, probably the former.

Enclosure 2 in No. 8.

TELEGRAM, dated 9th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

9TH JULY 1880.—Mir Karez, 23 miles from Helmund, July 8th :—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning. All well. Have arranged to break march to-morrow at Oograkh, about 14 miles from here. Infantry brigade at Kushk-i-Nakhud to-day. All well.

Wali sends letter from Washir of 6th, giving intelligence that Ayub arrived at Farah on 30th with entire force. The families of Kabul regiments reached Farah three days previously; and Muhammad Omar Khan, Nurzai, has undertaken to protect them. The Luinab has collected a depôt of provisions at Dilaram, and his cavalry patrol daily up to the Khash river.

Enclosure 3 in No. 8.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Choghak, six miles from Helmund, July 9th:—Cavalry brigade arrived here this morning, after 18 miles march over rather heavy ground. Ample supplies sent by Wali from Girishk. Heat much increased. Nothing fresh from Herat direction.

Enclosure 4 in No. 8.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE march of the Herat army under Ayub Khan towards the Helmund has caused much excitement in country, but the impression seems to be that Ayub Khan does not intend to oppose the British, but merely Wali Sher Ali. Four railway coolies were killed near Hari gorge by, it is supposed, the relations of the six Marri reported last week as having been killed by the Sind Horse near Thall. The Marri Chiefs have promised Mr. Duke, Political Officer, to surrender the murderers.

No. 9.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 17TH JULY 1880. (Extract.)

12th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 10th:—

“Following telegram received yesterday evening from General Phayre:—Message begins,—‘Quetta, 9th July. The Kasmore band burst yesterday, and as it is possible that the line may be flooded between Shikarpur and the desert. General Wood, in consultation with Chief Engineer of Railways, is pushing 24th and 9th Native Infantry across the Nari bank, where there are about 250 carts for their transport by Bolan to Quetta. Intelligence received last night that road from Sibi to Harnai impassable, and at Spintangi there is a lake thirty feet deep, sixty yards long; consequently 24th cannot go by that route, as I had intended.’ Message ends.”

The Brigadier-General commanding at Jacobabad telegraphs as follows:—

I.—On the 10th. “Your telegram. Flood subsided. Through communication will be restored to Sibi on 17th. Line temporarily repaired, and I have ordered 9th and 24th Native Infantry to proceed immediately, as, owing to breach in Kasmore band, big floods are imminent, which might otherwise delay troops till September. Troops now proceeding by hand-shunt waggons over temporary repaired portions of line.”

II.—On the 10th. “Engineer hopes to repair breach, and prevent floods from Kasmore.”

III.—On the 11th. “All danger from Kasmore breach over.”

13th July.—The following messages, dated the 12th, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar:—

I.—“The week has passed very quietly, without any alarm. No news of Ayub Khan’s movements received from Colonel St. John. I have heard here, from the Assistant Political, that the Sartip of Kokeran and Sirdar Habibulla Khan have fled from the Wali’s camp to a place called Naozad in Zamindawar. The Wali has sent in orders to confiscate property of these Sirdars at Kokeran and in Terin. Family of Sartíp fled from Kokeran two days ago; their present whereabouts unknown. A son of the Sartíp made a prisoner here by Wali's son. Head quarters 4th Native Infantry, with 270 men, arrive here to-morrow."

II.—The following telegram, dated Quetta, 11th July, received from General Phayre:—Message begins, 'Report received last night that Surgeon Easton and Lieutenant Slater, Royal Engineers, whilst returning from Chapar to Kach with escort of 2nd Sind Horse, were fired on about midway. Lieutenant Slater's horse killed, Dr. Easton's wounded in two places; no further harm done. Captain H. Wylie at Kach. Am expecting further particulars.' Message ends. I will telegraph these to you so soon as received.

14th July.—Major-General Phayre telegraph from Quetta on the 13th July as follows:—

"Your telegram of 9th, conveying approval of Government for pile bridge across Nari Ford at Sibi, and branch rail to Pir Chauki. Please let me know to whom I am to apply for aid in crossing the ford. Part of 9th Native Infantry will arrive there this evening, and 24th Native Infantry was to have been brought to the river bank to-morrow, but the Nari came down in flood yesterday, and move of 24th has been temporarily countermanded. Unless some means are devised of crossing the men over the ford, the Kandahar reinforcements will be checked, as it is most inadvisable to collect Native troops at Nari bank if that river is impassable."

The following reports have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar:

I.—Dated the 13th. "I now have to report that the cavalry and artillery arrived on the bank of the Helmand on the 10th, and the remainder of brigade on the 11th; troops in capital health. The Wali has established a daily post between Girishk and Kandahar. The Superintendent of Telegraphs is expected here 15th, with materials for telegraph line; he will commence laying it as soon as practicable. Head quarters and 270 all ranks, 4th Native Infantry, arrived here to-day; other detachments en route. Three companies, 9th Native Infantry, arrived yesterday at Nari, and 24th Native Infantry at Jacobabad for line of communication."

II.—Dated the 13th. "Lieutenant-Colonel St. John reports Ayúb left Farráh; advance guard of his cavalry in Washir. Wali's forces at Girishk and Sádat Kila; he has sent strong body of cavalry to Naozád after the Sartíp. It is said that Lúináb with part of cavalry has left direct road and is moving northwards, probably with the object of raising Zamindawar and getting food."

III.—Dated the 14th. "In continuation of my telegram this morning, St. John writes that an intercepted letter shows Lúináb to have been in Washir on Saturday. Letter says Ayub close behind; they were not then aware of a force having left Kandahar, nor any of our troops being at Girishk."

The following messages have been received from Colonel St. John:—

I.—"Camp, bank of the Helmand, opposite Girishk, July 10th.—Arrived here this morning. All well. No news from Farráh. Three days ago Sartíp Nur Mahomed Khan, cousin of the Wali, attempted to excite the Wali's troops in Washir to mutiny and join Ayúb. On their refusal, he quitted the camp with some 80 horsemen, and has gone to Naozád, 40 miles to north-west of this. Wali has sent Sirdar Gul Mahomed Khan after him."

II.—"Camp, near Girishk, 11th July. General Burrows with infantry brigade arrived this morning. All well. The Helmand is fordable everywhere, and presents no obstacle to passage of an army. Forage and wood in any quantity about the river. Other supplies are being furnished in abundance by Wali. Sirdar Gúl Mahomed Khan marched for Naozád yesterday evening with strong body of cavalry. Trustworthy news has arrived that Ayúb's main body was at Saki in Bakwa on 6th, and that Lúináb was to turn off from that place with the cavalry into Zamindawar. A spy, however, states that Lúináb's main body was two days ago at Dilaram, and that his advance guard of a hundred men had arrived in Washir. The advance column of Wali's troops is about 20 miles north-east of this."

III.—“Girishk, the 13th.—Wali's regular infantry is utterly untrustworthy, having been corrupted by regiment brought by him from Kabul. I am taking measures, in concert with Wali and General Burrows, to minimise (by disarming a ———? or depriving of ammunition) the danger of this disaffection of force in our vicinity; but in face of orders forbidding passage of river, this is no easy matter. I beg that General Burrows may be authorized to use his discretion about crossing river.”

IV.—Dated Girishk, the 13th.—“My telegram to-day. As Ayúb Khan may appear before Girishk on Friday, General Burrows has decided to cross the river to disarm Wali's infantry without waiting for orders, should such a step appear imperatively necessary. If possible he will await authority.”

General Phayre telegraphs from Quetta as follows, on the 14th July:—

I.—“Transport, &c., will be ready at Nari bank for the move of the Europeans, to take place as follows:—

On 20th instant, Head Quarters wing, 11th Foot, will commence moving by 100 a day from Karachi. Next in succession the remaining wing of that regiment will move at 100 men a day from Hyderabad; after this F-2nd Royal Artillery will move in similar way.”

II.—“Your telegram to General Wood, Jacobabad, of this date. Three companies, 9th Native Infantry, crossed Nari ford on night of 12th instant, and marched on Quetta. Yesterday morning a flood was reported, and move of 24th Native Infantry was stopped; but as the water was reported to be rapidly going down it was ordered to move on. I have just received following, of this day, from Major Colvin, Assistant Quarter-master General, who, with Captain Watlin, left Quetta on 11th to arrange camps in Bolan. Message begins.—‘Sibi, 11 a.m., 14th. Road to Kirta good; thence to Pir Chauki very fair; from Chauki on, very heavy,—wants attention.’ Message ends. Superintending Engineer sent down party of labourers from this on 10th to clear ford between Kirta and Pir Chauki and repair bad nullah at Muskaff to which Major Colvin refers. We should, I think, avail ourselves of present break in weather to push up troops as fast as possible. In August the heavy floods may be expected to commence.”

The following reports have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

I.—Dated the 14th.—“Agent Governor-General, Biluchistan, wired yesterday that Kasmore band almost closed; no apprehension of flood reaching railway.”

II.—Dated the 15th.—“Letter received this day from Colonel St. John. No date to it, but presumed 12th July. Ayúb reached Farráh on 1st July, and his advanced cavalry left on 8th. He has 2,500 effective and 1,000 disaffected infantry, 800 regular cavalry, and 1,000 tribal cavalry, with 30 guns. Wali's troops shaky; one regiment all but openly mutinous, rest tainted; they have no ammunition, and St. John told Wali to take measures to put it out of reach. One other Sirdar deserted with his immediate followers, but failed to persuade others to follow him.”

16th July.—The following reports, dated Kandahar the 15th instant, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

I.—Head quarters 9th crossed the Nari river yesterday morning, with all baggage.”

II.—“Your telegram 14th July. The Wali's troops are encamped on the right bank of the river.* They are in a state of mutiny, and it has been decided to disarm them. All supplies are drawn from the right bank. The fort also on right bank. Should Ayúb's army advance to Girishk, if troops cannot cross, the fort must be abandoned, and supplies of grain would be unobtainable.”

III.—“On the Wali ordering his force to retire from their camp at Kandanak to Girishk, his infantry deserted in a body except officers, taking arms and some ammunition. Cavalry stuck to Wali, and treasury is safe. Wali came across to St. John's camp yesterday. Above news came by sowar sent by Wali to his son here; no news of above from St. John or General Burrows, their latest date being 13. Have requested General Phayre to hasten up 28th and remainder of 4th; on arrival of former purpose sending it to Kúshk-i-Nakhúd. After writing above, following news received by second sowar from Wali,—the Wali's guns and the whole of our† ammunition for guns and small arms were carried off.”

IV.—Information received from Wali that his mutinous troops were followed up by a force despatched by General Burrows. The enemy were overtaken, totally dispersed, 200 killed; gun and baggage taken. I have received no confirmation from General Burrows or Colonel St. John, but I think the information may be relied upon."

* The Helmand.

† i.e., given by us to the Wali for his use.

The following telegram, dated Simla the 15th July, has been addressed by the Commander-in-Chief to Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

"15th July.—Wali's troops having deserted, the situation has completely changed. General Burrows must act according to his own judgment, reporting fully. He must act with caution on account of distance of support."

Sir Robert Sandeman telegraphs as follows from Quetta this day:—

"Telegram from General Primrose states Wali's infantry and guns with ammunition have deserted. General has ordered 28th Regiment from line of communication to Kandahar to ensure peace. I recommend Thal-Chotiali garrison, which is immediately equipped, being relieved by troops from Punjab, to enable it to act as moveable column along Harnai-Chaman line of communication."

17th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 16th:—

I.—"Following movements reported along the line yesterday:—Head Quarters 9th Native Infantry arrived at Pir Chauki; 24th Native Infantry crossed Nari: detachment 4th Native Infantry arrived Quetta; one company 10th Native Infantry marched for Gulistan; detachment 230 men of 16th Native Infantry marched from Chapar to relieve 28th at Chaman."

II.—Information received from General Burrows of the mutiny of Wali's infantry and their deserting him, taking with them artillery and baggage. He went in pursuit with E-B, Royal Horse Artillery, five companies 66th Foot, three companies Jacob's Rifles, and 400 cavalry. Guns and baggage recovered and brought back to camp about 8 p.m. Enemy's loss computed 40 killed; our loss three men 66th wounded, and several horses killed. Full particulars to Adjutant-General on receipt. No certain news of Ayub's movements.

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta under date the 16th:—

"The 9th and 24th Native Infantry are now marching up Bolan, and I am trying to push the Madras cavalry to Kandahar as quickly as possible without interfering with the transport of European troops. Colonel Lindsay has placed an Engineer to construct raft for crossing Nari ford, in anticipation of construction of pile bridge."

No. 10.

No. 162 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's
Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 20, 1880.

In continuation of our Despatch, No. 157, dated 13th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

"

F. P. HAINES.

"

JOHN STRACHEY.

"

E. B. JOHNSON.

"

WHITLEY STOKES.

"

JAMES GIBBS.

"

C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th July 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN UNDER, Simla.

News confirmed that Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan and Habibulla, son of Sirdar Khairulla Khan, have deserted from Wali's force and gone to Naozad. They had accompanied advanced force to Washir. Nothing further is known of their intentions. They had no following. Wali has written to his son here to confiscate their property.

Enclosure 2 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 14th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 12th.—An intercepted letter from Luinab shows that he was at Washir on the 10th, and that Ayub was not far in rear. Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, failing to persuade the Naozad people to rise, has gone to Washir. A son of Sirdar Ghulam Muhiuddin Khan deserted the Wali's advanced guard yesterday with 20 men to join the Sartip.

Enclosure 3 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 14th, 9.30 a.m.—All arrangements having been made by Wali for crossing to our side river and his baggage packed, Kabul regiment mutinied, seized guns and Wali's baggage, and drove his cavalry across river. Rest of infantry joined them, and they are now moving along west bank. Cavalry are going in pursuit.

Enclosure 4 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, July 14th.—Cavalry, horse artillery, and eight companies infantry pursued mutineers, who were marching along west bank of river for several miles, and captured all their six guns which came into action to cover retreat, but after a few rounds from horse artillery were abandoned. Majority of infantry had previously dispersed, but a few desperate men held some enclosures and had to be dislodged by infantry. Mutineers' loss not great; may have amounted to 40 or 50; our loss one man, 66th, killed, and two wounded, with some horses. Captured guns and waggons brought in to our camp.

Ayub's army is to-day at Bibanak, three marches distant. Seven deserters from Ayub's regular cavalry arrived here. They left army at Washir, and state Sartip Nur Muhammad has replaced Luinab in command of advanced cavalry, having declared to Ayub that Luinab was in correspondence with Wali. They also declare that Nur Muhammad has advised Ayub to remain in Zamindawar with regulars, while he raised the country with the tribal cavalry.

Enclosure 5 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GIRISHK, 14th, 9.30 a.m.—Ayub Khan is probably at Lar, two marches distant.

Enclosure 6 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 17th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP MIRKAREZ, July 16th.—Loss and discomfiture of mutineers greater than at first reported. Forty-six bodies were found and buried by villagers, among them colonel of artillery and a captain of Kabul regiment, in which most casualties took place. Part of this regiment marched westward yesterday, but all the others dispersed to their homes on evening of 14th. I found that all the flour and ghee collected by Wali for our use in his camp and the fort had been plundered and carried off. This left force entirely dependent on foraging, from which little was to be expected in neighbourhood of Girishk. The river offering in its present condition no obstacle in any place to the passage of troops, the Wali's army having ceased to exist, and reports reaching me from different quarters that Ayub's intention was to cross river further north, if at all, General Burrows determined rightly, in my opinion, to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud, where several roads from Helmund to Kandahar meet, where supplies are abundant and communication with Kandahar easy. Accordingly entire force marched last night 23 miles to this place, and goes on to Kushk-i-Nakhud, eight miles further, to-morrow. The Wali is with us, part of his cavalry has dispersed; part is at Kushk-i-Nakhud with his nephews and other Sirdars.

Post from Kandahar interrupted for one day and bags lost, but is now coming in regularly. Captured guns brought with us, but three waggons with their ammunition destroyed for want of carriage.

Enclosure 7 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 19th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUD, July 17th.—Force arrived here this morning. All well. Principal Sirdars and Chiefs are here, with about 500 horses. The Alizais of Zamindawar accompanied them, but asked and obtained leave to return to their homes to protect their families and property.

Many of the mutineers have been seized and disarmed, while passing through this on the way to their homes.

As far as can be ascertained the country about here is quiet.

No news of Ayub's force.

Enclosure 8 in No. 10.

TELEGRAM, dated 19th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP, Kushki-i-Nakhud, July 18th.—All quiet in this vicinity en route to Kandahar, whence post and single messengers pass constantly without trouble. All accounts tend to show that mutineers, with few exceptions, have returned to their homes, many without arms. Two hundred of Ayub's cavalry reached Girishk yesterday and sent back word of its evacuation to main body then at Mahmudabad, some 16 or 20 miles distant. A servant of Wali's taken off by mutineers to camp of advanced cavalry, states that story of Luinab having been disgraced is untrue, and that he was apparently preparing to cross the river above Girishk. The camp here moves two miles nearer Girishk to-morrow. Supplies are plentiful; immense quantities of grain lying unthrashed in fields round camp, but wood is scarce.

No. 11.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA FOR THE WEEK ENDING THE 24TH JULY 1880. (Extract.)

17th July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 16th:—

I.—“Following movements reported along the line yesterday:—Head Quarters 9th Native Infantry arrived at Pir Chauki; 24th Native Infantry crossed Nari; detachment

4th Native Infantry arrived Quetta; one company 10th Native Infantry marched for Gulistán; detachment 230 men of 16th Native Infantry marched from Chapar to relieve 28th at Chaman."

II.—"Information received from General Burrows of the mutiny of Wali's infantry and their deserting him, taking with them artillery and baggage. He went in pursuit with E-B, Royal Horse Artillery, five companies 66th Foot, three companies Jacob's Rifles, and 400 cavalry. Guns and baggage recovered and brought back to camp about 8 p.m. Enemy's loss computed 40 killed; our loss three men 66th wounded, and several horses killed. Full particulars to Adjutant-General on receipt. No certain news of Ayúb's movements.

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta under date the 16th:—

"The 9th and 24th Native Infantry are now marching up Bolan, and I am trying to push the Madras Cavalry to Kandahar as quickly as possible without interfering with the transport of European troops. Colonel Lindsay has placed an Engineer to construct raft for crossing Nari ford in anticipation of construction of pile bridge.

18th July.—Extract from the diary of the Kandahar Residency, under date the 26th June 1880.

"Letters, the last dated 5th instant, arrived from an agent in Herat that Ayúb Khan, with all the regular troops, was encamped outside the city. The writer did not think it probable that he would be able to march, and felt sure that if they did, the Heratis and Kabulis would fall out on the road. He gives the detail of Ayúb Khan's army as follows:—

Kabulis.—Five infantry regiments, three batteries of artillery, three regiments of cavalry, (each about 300 men).

Kandaharis.—One regiment of infantry of 480 men, and one battery of artillery.

Heratis.—Four regiments of infantry of 360 men each, with one field and one mule battery.) This includes one regiment and one battery at Farraháh).

"Four thousand tribal horsemen had been ordered to assemble, but there were no signs of their doing so.

"The carriage required was estimated at 1,200 camels, of which 700 were ready."

19th July.—The following telegrams have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose, from Kandahar:—

I.—Dated the 17th.—"General Burrows reports that he has moved his force back from Helmand to Kúshk-i-Nakhúd, there to wait events or orders. This move was necessitated by there being no supplies for troops, nor grain for horses; the little there was on right bank was carried off or destroyed by mutineers. This point is of most strategic importance, having several roads converging on it. As the river Helmand is fordable, Ayúb could cross anywhere. I am of opinion General Burrows has acted judiciously in the matter."

II.—Dated the 18th.—"All quiet here, but there is an uneasy feeling in country around and along the line towards Chaman. Precautionary measures, however, have been taken, and the successive march of detachments now on move towards Kandahar will have the necessary reassuring effect."

III.—Dated the 18th.—"No letters or reports have been received to-day from General Burrows or Colonel St. John."

20th July.—General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 19th:—

"The European artillery and infantry, which were to have commenced moving tomorrow, have been put off until 23rd instant, owing to difficulty of getting their commissariat stores across break in railway."

The following reports, dated the 19th, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Kandahar:—

I.—"Yesterday a gházi attacked a man, 4th Native Infantry, in city bazar; ghazi was felled and bayoneted, since dead. At 2.30 a.m. this morning a patrol was fired at from behind a wall close to cantonment bazar; one native officer slightly, one sowar mortally wounded, one horse killed, one wounded. The men who fired supposed to be some of Wali's mutinous infantry returned from Girishk. Wing 28th Native Infantry and detachment 4th Native Infantry left Chaman last night for Kandahar."

II.—“Your telegram 18th.—Taking into consideration that the Helmand is now fordable everywhere, it presents no obstacle to the advance of Ayúb at any point he chooses to cross it. Khúshk-i-Nakhúd is an important position, covering roads leading from the Helmand to Kandahar. Whilst remaining on the Helmand forage and grain could hardly be obtained, whereas they are plentiful at Khúshk-i-Nakhúd. Between the latter place and Girishk there is a desert, 25 miles broad. General Burrows, at Khúshk-i-Nakhúd, is within fair supportable distance from Kandahar. The presence of a force there has the effect of keeping the people quiet. At present I am unable to obtain any definite intelligence of Ayúb's movements; an impression is abroad that he will not meet our troops in the open, but that, if he crosses the river at all, he will do so to the north of Girishk, and perhaps make for Ghazni, for political reasons. As regards Kandahar, great uneasiness prevails in the city; large numbers of the families are leaving daily, fearing the approach of Ayúb. There are of course a number of disaffected men in and about Kandahar ready for a disturbance if they get a chance. I keep the city constantly patrolled, and have placed three 40-pounders of 5-11th in the citadel, which has had the effect of quieting the minds of the peaceably disposed.

“Units of reinforcements will probably arrive here,—detachment 4th Native Infantry on 24th; details 28th Native Infantry on 25th, 26th, and 27th; last detachment 4th Native Infantry on 28th; 9th and 24th Native Infantry are now in Bolan, and will be in position probably 24th and 30th July. The 11th Foot come up Bolan in cart carriage, beginning by companies, on 20th, and doing double stages to Dozan; one wing will be concentrated at Quetta on 1st August, leave Quetta 3rd, and reach Kandahar about 15th; two more companies will leave three days later, and last two form escort to F-2nd Royal Artillery. Information about Madras Cavalry not yet received from General Phayre. Will wire to-morrow.”

III.—“Advanced guard of Ayúb Khan appears to have reached Girishk. Nothing certain known about Ayúb himself to-day.”

21st July.—Lieutenant-General Primrose reports as follows from Kandahar on the 20th:—

I.—“Following telegram received from General Phayre. Message begins, ‘Quetta, 19th July. Have just heard from Karachi that European infantry cannot move until 23rd, owing to delay in getting their commissariat stores across break in railways.’—Message ends.”

II.—“General Phayre has ordered Madras Cavalry to move at once; they will take posts furnished by the Poona Horse, which will be concentrated here.”

It has been ascertained that the Wali's mutinous infantry succeeded in carrying off with them 1,700 out of 2,000 muskets that had been given to the Wali by the British Government.

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 21st instant.

Report from Sibi that Nari in high flood since yesterday evening. Arrangements for raft and wire ropes will be completed this evening; horses must swim across. Fresh break of fifty feet said to have occurred in railway twenty-four miles south of Sibi. The 9th and 24th Native Infantry are marching steadily up Bolan.”

22nd July.—Major-General Phayre telegraphs from Quetta on the 21st instant:—

“Agent, Governor-General, has just sent following to Foreign, Simla:—‘I have received fairly trustworthy information that Ayúb Khan meditates a night attack on General Burrows' camp with a combined body of cavalry and gházis; also on our communications in the Gúlistan, from Shoráwák. There is much excitement amongst the tribes. Múllahs of influence are moving about preaching jehád. The movement in Ayúb's favor is more extended and determined than, I think, believed at Kandahar. Message ends.”

The Brigadier-General commanding at Jacobabad telegraphs as follows:—

I.—On the 21st. “Another slight break in railway from hill floods, but will be repaired by to-morrow.”

II.—On the 22nd. “The whole of the Madras Cavalry, as follows: 10 European officers, 16 Native officers, 389 rank and file, 601 followers, 407 horses, leave for Sibi to-night in three trains.”

The following telegrams, dated the 21st, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose, from Kandahar:

I.—“General Phayre reports Nari in high flood yesterday evening. Arrangements have been made to pass over Madras Cavalry, but delay may occur, owing to fresh break of fifty feet in railway line.”

II.—“Information from General Burrows, dated 19th. He has shifted his camp to a very eligible spot, three miles nearer Girishk. He reports 2,100 Ayúb's cavalry have arrived at Girishk, he (Ayúb) himself being at Mahmúdabad, 17 miles in rear, with his infantry and guns. It is reported that he intends to move either to the north of Girishk or the south of the Arghasán Valley, but this is merely surmise. He (General Burrows) has utilized the guns taken from the Wali by manning them from E.-B. and 66th regiment. I am sending out to-night, by forced marches, 12 of the Wali's artillery horses and harness, &c., to complete this battery as far as practicable, under an escort of 50 sabres, 3rd Sind Horse, whom I have directed to remain as a temporary arrangement with General Burrow, as he wished his cavalry increased.”

III.—General Burrows, under date 20th, writes:—“Situation remains unchanged. Travellers who have passed Ayúb's camp say things are not going on smoothly there, and that in all probability there will be a split before they reached the Helmand. General Burrows ready for them. Troops healthy and in excellent spirits.”

IV.—“News just received from Colonel St. John and General Burrows that Ayúb with his regulars, reached the Helmand on 20th. He has sent back his carriage for baggage, left a day's march in rear. Tribal sowars and some gházis have joined him. His intention stated to be to move viâ Sangbúr and Mir Karéz and attack General Burrows. At Sangbúr there are 200 gházis, with two standards. Spy states Lúinab with cavalry had moved down river, intending to skirt desert and attack.”

V.—“Three companies, 9th Native Infantry, arrived at Quetta this evening. Two hundred rifles of 10th and fifty sabres 2nd Sind Horse marched to-day on Kach, to accompany Captain Wylie to Kawás to collect revenue.”

VI.—“General Brooke and Major Adams, returning from the Argandab Valley, were shot at by men in hills at the Kotal-i-Múrchá this morning; one horse of escort shot dead. Parties sent out to capture the men unsuccessful up to 4 p.m.”

23rd July.—The following letter (No. 435-K, dated Kandahar, 8th July) has been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

“With reference to my telegram of the 26th ultimo, I have the honour to report that the Political Officer at Harnái having ascertained that the men implicated in killing the followers belonged to Lekeram near Babian, parties were sent out from the detachments of the 5th Native Light Infantry at Sínári and Spene Kach, with fifteen sabres of the 2nd Sind Horse, under Captain Lucas, to exact retribution, and accompanied by the Political Officer.

“The Malik's house was burnt down, one Pathan shot, nine made prisoners, and a large number of cattle, sheep, and goats brought in, together with the wives and children of those who bolted, without any loss on our side.”

The following telegram has been received from General Primrose, dated the 22nd July 1880:—

“General Phayre has sent me copy of a telegram forwarded by Agent, Governor General, to Foreign, extract from which is as follows:—‘In the Gulistan direction from Shorawak there is much excitement amongst the tribes. Múllahs of influence are moving about preaching jehad. The movement in Ayúb's favour is more extended and determined than is, I think, believed at Kandahar.’”

“With reference to above and present state of affairs, I would strongly recommend for consideration of Commander-in-Chief that General Phayre should concentrate a brigade or flying column, according to his judgment or further political news, either at Chaman or Killa Abdúla, as he may decide; the troops to be taken from the line between Sibi and Gwal, but on no account should the regiments under orders for Kandahar be interfered with, as the chief line of communication is the Bolan and viâ Quetta.”

His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has sent the following reply to Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

“Yours of to-day. Chief concurs that troops under orders for Kandahar should not be interfered with. Arrange with Agent, Governor General, and General Phayre, regarding concentration of flying column at Chaman or Kila Abdúlla, if found necessary; no reference here needed. It has been ascertained, however, that there are considerable quantities of railway plant and stores between Sibi and Harnái; these must not be left unprotected.”

The following messages, dated the 22nd, have also been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose:—

I.—“Madras Cavalry leave Jacobabad this evening; all ready for them at Nari. First detachment European Infantry leave Karachi to-morrow. First detachment 9th Native Infantry arrive here to-morrow. All through Bolan.”

II.—“Letter from General Burrows, dated evening of 21st. No further news.”

The health of the 68th Foot having deteriorated to such an extent as to unfit it for field service if called upon, the 70th Foot (now at Sabáthú and Umballa) has been substituted for it on the rolls of the Bengal Reserve Division.

24th July.—The following messages have this day been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose, from Kandahar:—

I.—Dated the 23rd. “Report received from General Burrows, dated 22nd. No further news regarding Ayúb. Our force at Khúshk-i-Nakhúd well entrenched and defended against any night attack. Supplies plentiful, except wood, which is very scarce.”

“A detachment, 4th Native Infantry, escorting ammunition, arrives here to-morrow, and 200 rifles, 28th Native Infantry, the day after.”

II.—Dated the 23rd. “Report just received from Colonel St. John. Spies state that Ayúb has crossed the Helmand at Háidarabad. Party of his cavalry came yesterday to Sangbúr and returned again. Small party of gházis collected there; stated that they expected 5,000 horsemen to arrive to-day and main body to-morrow. Few supplies at Sangbúr, so Ayúb cannot halt there more than one day. Report raises number of men who have joined Ayúb to 4,000.

III.—Dated the 24th. “On morning of 23rd, our cavalry patrol, proceeding in the direction of Sangbúr, came upon the enemy’s advanced parties. Lieutenant Monteith, 3rd Sind Horse, who was in command, sent in word to camp, and dismounting some of his men, checked the enemy, who retired out of range. Brigadier-General Nuttall, with 180 sabres, 3rd Light Cavalry, and two guns, E.-B., Royal Horse Artillery, now came up, and a reconnaissance reported 600 sowars marching parallel with a body of infantry, three miles beyond our advanced post. General Nuttall advanced with 160 sabres and two guns for about three miles, the enemy retiring. When he got within 1,800 yards of the cavalry, our men opened on them, and they bolted faster than ever, making for cover. General Nuttall pursued until he was six miles from camp, when he gave up the chase. Some horses of the enemy were killed, and men carried off wounded. No infantry were seen.”

No. 12.

No. 169 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty’s Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, July 27, 1880.

In continuation of our Despatch, No. 162, dated 20th July 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty’s Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed) RIPON.
 ” F. P. HAINES.
 ” JOHN STRACHEY.
 ” E. B. JOHNSON.
 ” WHITLEY STOKES.
 ” JAMES GIBBS.
 ” C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 20th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 19th.—This morning General Burrows shifted his camp three miles back towards Girishk. Fifteen hundred or two thousand of Ayub's sowars arrived at Girishk yesterday. Main body still at Mahmudabad. Considerable numbers of ghazis have passed along by roads to join Ayub, Abubekr, Alizai, who murdered Colonel Moore's Munshi last year, and headed the force at Colonel Malcolmson's engagement here, is said to have brought a number of men from Zamindawar. In our neighbourhood all quiet. Cavalry patrols regularly for ten miles in every direction.

Enclosure 2 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL BROOKE and Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster-General, escorted by four sowars, were fired at by two men this morning in the Kotal-i-murch, a steep pass leading into the Arghandab valley, about five miles distant from cantonments. One of the sowar's horses was killed. Parties of cavalry and infantry were immediately sent out to surround the hills, and it is hoped that the men may be caught.

Shortly afterwards a report, probably caused by our troops being seen leaving cantonments, spread among the town people that the enemy were approaching, and a panic ensued. Order was quickly restored, and all is quiet and as usual.

Enclosure 3 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushki-Nakhud, July 20th.—No symptoms of advance by Ayub, whose cavalry have not yet crossed the river. The country in this vicinity quiet, except about the Arghandeh, where Achakzai nomads are committing depredation.

Enclosure 4 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 21st, 9 a.m.—Enemy's main body reached Helmund about 12 miles above Girishk yesterday, and sent back camels to bring up baggage and stores left behind at last stage for want of carriage. A considerable number of tribal sowars, mutineers, and ghazis had joined them. It is stated to be Ayub's intention to attack us here, moving by Sangbar road. Luinab with a large number of cavalry is reported to have moved down the Helmund with intention of crossing to Arghandab and attacking our camp; but this requires confirmation.

Enclosure 5 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 23rd July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

CAMP Kushk-i-Nakhud, July 22nd.—Spies report that Ayub's troops have crossed the Helmund at Haidarabad. A party of his cavalry came yesterday to Sangbar, 14 miles from here, but returned again. A small party of ghazis, who have collected there, state that they expected 4,000 horsemen to arrive to-day, and the main body to-morrow. Few supplies being available at Sangbar, Ayub cannot halt there beyond a day. Being apprehensive of a night attack by the enemy's numerous cavalry, General Burrows has shifted his camp to a new position, in which the stores, sick, and baggage animals are in an enclosure. Report raises number of ghazis and men, who have joined Ayub, to 4,000.

Enclosure 6 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUJ, July 23rd, 9 a.m.—Intelligence brought last night that Luinab with 400 sowars was moving on Maiwand to collect provisions. Main body of enemy was yesterday still at Haidarabad on this side river. Cavalry reconnaissance going towards Sangbar met about 400 enemy's sowars moving towards Maiwand. A demonstration of cavalry and artillery made them retreat by the road they had come. They state that regular troops will remain in reserve pushing forward cavalry and ghazis. Neither will attempt to move by main road, but keep along foot of hills. Herati regiments reported to be very uneasy at being taken so far from home.

Enclosure 7 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

IN and around the city all is quiet. A few shots were fired from outside last night at the Shikarpur Gate, where a guard of our troops is stationed. No one was hurt. The Arghastan, Kadanai, and Derawat districts are slightly disturbed. The rest quiet. No more reports of gatherings, most of the malcontents having probably left to join Ayub. No further news of Abu Said's sons, who were reported trying to raise a gathering in Kadanai.

On the 14th, Muhammad Aslam with a body of sowars attacked a fort near Kelat-i-Ghilzai, occupied by Sirdar's men collecting revenue. He was repulsed. By latest accounts he was near Shahjui, with a following of about 40 men. District otherwise quiet.

Enclosure 8 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUJ, 24th.—Retirement of enemy's cavalry this morning complete. None have passed us.

Enclosure 9 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 25th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUJ, July 24th.—Reconnoitring parties sent out to Sangbar and Maiwand this morning saw no signs of the enemy. The cavalry driven back yesterday was commanded by the Luinab and fell back from Sangbar to the Helmund. Last night a body of 450 cavalry crossed the hills to the north three days ago, and came down to the Arghandab valley in our rear. It is believed to have been sent by the Sartip to bring away his family hidden in the villages there. A Populzai Khan of Khakrez has brought in letter from Ayub, calling on him to join his army, and reports that Habibulla Khan, Barakzai, has passed up the valley trying to make the people rise. He has as yet had little success, though there is much excitement throughout the country. Much mischief is caused by false reports that the Wali is a prisoner in our camp. Fifty sowars of the Sind Horse arrived here from Kandahar on the 21st, and found road quiet.

No. 13.

TELEGRAM from GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY, 28th July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

PRIMROSE telegraphs to-day from Kandahar :—Terrible disaster. General Burrows' force annihilated. We are going into citadel. General Phayre telegraphed to collect what forces he can, and march on Kandahar. Posts are being concentrated at Chaman. Message ends. I have telegraphed Simla. We can send another brigade if necessary.

No. 14.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 28th July 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

GENERAL BURROWS has been seriously defeated by Ayub Khan. Primrose has vacated cantonments at Kandahar and retired to citadel. We are pushing forward reinforcements already on their way, as quickly as possible, and sending large additional reinforcements from India. It may be necessary to anticipate despatch of troops from England intended for this season's reliefs.

No. 14A.

TELEGRAM from SECRETARY OF STATE, 28th July 1880, to VICEROY.

In event of reinforcements at Kandahar being urgently required, cannot Stewart spare force now with Roberts or Watson.

No. 15.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 31ST JULY 1880. (Extract.)

26th July.—The following messages have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose from Candahar :—

I.—Dated the 24th.—“Report received this morning from General Burrows that a cavalry reconnoitring patrol towards Sangbúr sighted 600 enemy's cavalry yesterday morning. Patrol kept them in check; was reinforced by 180 sabres and two guns; opened fire at 1,800 yards; killed two horses of enemy, who bolted and could not be caught up. News of this had spread in the city. Madras cavalry crossed Nari last night, and march to-night to Pir Chauki. Thirty sabres Poona Horse from Khúshdil Khan arrived Chaman to-day en route to Kandahar.”

II.—Dated the 24th.—“The guard on the ramparts over the Shikárpúr gate was fired at from outside by eight or nine men concealed behind wall of a garden. The fire was returned by the guard, and the men disappeared. The Superintendent of Telegraphs finds it impossible to lay line at present to Khúshk-i-Nakhúd, as no labourers will work outside the city walls.”

III.—Dated the 25th.—“Information received this evening that Ayúb's cavalry fell back last night to Helmand. Report received to the effect that 150 cavalry crossed into the Argandáb three days ago; believed to have been sent to take back Sartíp's family, hidden in village there. Efforts appear to be made by Habibúlla Khan, Barakzái, to raise people in Kakrez, without much success. There is much excitement throughout the country.”

IV.—Dated the 25th.—“General Burrows reports that in the event of enemy moving up north, he purposes sending back superfluous baggage and sick to Kandahar, and moving up Kakrez Valley, opening up fresh line of communication.”

Brigadier-General Wood reports from Jacobabad on the 26th :—

“One hundred men, 2-11th Regiment, passed through last night for Sibi.”

27th July.—The following reports, dated Kandahar the 26th, have been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose :—

I.—“General Phayre writes :—Message begins, ‘First detachment 11th Foot expect to arrive Nari bank this morning; remainder are en route in succession; will reach Nari Bank at 4 a.m. daily. Transport officer had gone himself to Múskaff to assist Madras Cavalry. Weather much cooler there.’—Message ends.”

II.—Your telegram 21st July. General Burrows states that should the enemy advance direct on Maiwand or on Khúshk-i-Nakhúd, he is prepared to attack him, should he attempt to reach Maiwand via Malwand, he would intercept him by Gúrmá Valley. Should Ayúb's force try to avoid him by taking road to Nish via Melwand and Ghorak, he proposes to move by Maiwand in Kakrez. To do this he will reduce his baggage and send back some sick reported unfit, and I will assist him in every way to lighten his column and make it more moveable."

III.—"General Phayre reports that, owing to information received of an intended attack, he proposes to move head-quarters 9th (250) strong and two mountain guns to Gúlistán as nucleus of a moveable column. Last night at Kandahar some men outside the city walls fired a volley at the sentry on the rampart and then bolted; no one hurt."

28th July.—General Phayre telegraphs from Quetta on the 27th:—

"Two mountain guns and head-quarters 9th (373 all ranks), left last night for Gúlistán to form nucleus of flying column, and will arrive on 30th instant. As 24th arrive here to-morrow morning, I can use part of them to support Pishin, if necessary. I can manage to collect 250 cavalry from Quetta and outposts."

The following telegram has been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose, dated Kandahar the 27th:—

"General Burrows' force completely defeated. We take refuge in citadel. Thirty sowars have escaped."

General Phayre telegraphs from Quetta on the 28th that the telegraph beyond Chaman is stopped.

Consequent on the disaster to Brigadier-General Burrows' brigade near Khúshk-i-Nakhúd on the 26th instant, the following corps have been warned for immediate service in Southern Afghanistan:—

H-1st Royal Artillery	-	-	Mooltan.
8th Bengal Cavalry	-	-	Mooltan.
2nd Battalion 2nd Foot	-	-	Bareilly.
63rd Foot	-	-	Umballa.
3rd Bengal Native Infantry	-	-	Dinapore.
4th " " "	-	-	Ferozepore.
14th " " "	-	-	Umballa.
38th " " "	-	-	Meerut.

The Bombay Government having, however, intimated that they can spare M-1st Royal Artillery, the 2nd Battalion 15th Foot, and two regiments of Native infantry, it is probable that the 2nd Foot and the 14th and 38th Native infantry will not be required to move.

The Commander-in-Chief has intimated that A-C, Royal Horse Artillery, is also available if required for active service in the field.

The following message, dated Quetta the 28th, has been received from Sir Robert Sandeman:—

"Before the telegraphic communication ceased at 11 o'clock this morning, the following news was received from General Primrose:—Following officers belonging to General Burrows' force had safely reached Kandahar: Dr. Burroughs, Eaton, Harvey, Mainwaring, Geoghegan, Oliver, Griffith, Whittuck, Dane. Small parties of Burrows' force constantly arriving. Enemy appear only to have pursued for three or four miles. Extent of our losses not yet ascertained, but feared to be very severe. Two guns lost. Jacob's Rifles lost Smith, Justice, and Cole killed. In Bombay Grenadiers, Anderson severely wounded, Aslett killed. Of Royal Horse Artillery, Osborne killed, Blackwood wounded. In 3rd Cavalry, Mayne and Reid wounded. In 66th, Roberts killed, Lynch wounded. Enemy very strong in guns; believed to have 35, which they work well. General Primrose mentions that he has sent out General Brooke to bring in stragglers."

The following are the officers referred to in the preceding message:—

Killed.

Lieutenant E. G. Osborne	-	-	E-B, Royal Horse Artillery.
Captain W. Roberts	-	-	66th Foot.

Lieutenant W. C. Aslett	-	-	1st Bombay Native Infantry.
Captain H. F. Smith	-	-	} 30th Bombay Native Infantry.
Lieutenant D. Cole	-	-
Lieutenant W. N. Justice	-	-

Wounded.

Major G. F. Blackwood	-	-	E-B, Horse Artillery.
Captain M. Mayne	-	-	} 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry.
Lieutenant J. H. E. Reid	-	-
2nd-Lieutenant H. Lynch	-	-	66th Foot.
Lieutenant-Colonel H. S. Anderson	-	-	1st Bombay Native Infantry.

Escaped unhurt.

Surgeon-Major C. H. Harvey, M.D.	-	-	E-B., Royal Horse Artillery.
Lieutenant T. P. Geoghegan	-	-	3rd Bombay Light Cavalry.
Surgeon G. E. Burroughs	-	-	3rd Sind Horse.
Major C. V. Oliver	-	-	66th Foot.
Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Griffith	-	-	} 1st Bombay Native Infantry.
Lieutenant F. Whittuck	-	-
Surgeon A. H. C. Dane	-	-	} 16th Bombay Native Infantry.
Surgeon J. B. Eaton, M.B.	-	-
Colonel W. G. Mainwaring	-	-	30th Bombay Native Infantry.

Lieutenant-Colonel O. B. St. John, Royal Engineers, the Political Officer, is also reported to have escaped.

30th July.—General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 28th :—

“ I have seven Native infantry regiments on line of communication. Three of these will be required,—one for Sibi and Bolan, one for Quetta, one for line of posts to Chaman. This leaves four regiments for field column. In addition I have 2-11th Foot and F-2nd Royal Artillery, coming up from Sind. If in addition to these you send me one European infantry regiment and a field battery in succession to F-2nd, I think I shall have enough infantry and artillery to advance with. As regards cavalry, I ought to have at least nine squadrons, which I think I can make up from that on the line of communication, including Madras Cavalry. It would take at least fifteen days to form and equip this force here, and in Pishin, and within that time I hope to have sufficient transport. But certain movements of the enemy reported to be now taking place against Chaman may oblige me to push troops to the Kojak. I have Major Westmacott there, giving me information; and Agent Governor General also sent out men. I commence withdrawal of troops from railway line by retiring the Thal-Chotiali force on Harnái, whence it will march on Pishin, making over station to maliks and collecting the troops now posted along that line. Simultaneously with the advance from Harnái the Political Officer and Officer Commanding at Sibi will return to each post and settle with the maliks about stores, materials, &c., left behind between Spin Tangi and Nari mouth. The posts of the 23rd Native Infantry thus withdrawn take up the line of communication from Sibi to Siriáb by Bolán. In answer to your question about F-2nd, I do not think there is any necessity for altering the present arrangement. But H-1st should bring everything. I would recommend Colonel James, of 10th Bombay Native Infantry, now in command at Quetta, for the command of the line of communications. With regard to Native infantry and cavalry named in your telegram, I will communicate with you hereafter.

The following reply, dated Simla the 29th July, has been sent to Major-General Phayre by the Quarter Master General :—

“ Yours 28th Chief considers very satisfactory and assuring. Carry out original arrangement about F-2nd, and H-1st will be sent with equipment complete. Let me know as soon as possible when you will be ready for it. 63rd to be at Sukkur in detachments. There will perhaps be some modification in troops from this side, as Bombay can furnish some more. Do you wish for a British cavalry regiment ? ”

31st July.—The following arrangements for the provision of troops for service on the Kandahar line have been approved :—

To proceed from the Bengal Presidency :—

H-1st Royal Artillery.
8th Bengal Cavalry.
63rd Foot.

3rd Native Infantry.
 4th
 To be detailed from Bombay :—
 M-1st Royal Artillery.
 15th Foot.
 ———Native Infantry.

The 3rd Bombay Native Infantry, belonging to the Reserve Division, being in a weakly state, the 8th will be substituted for it. The 78th Highlanders and the 15th Bombay Native Infantry will be sent to Sind immediately to replace corps pushed forward from that province to the Kandahar line.

No. 5-8th Royal Artillery is to be sent from Kirkee to Kandahar via Allahabad and Lahore, in order that the sea passage to Karachi, which is considered dangerous at this season, may be avoided. It is possible, however, that this arrangement may yet have to be altered, cholera having appeared at Allahabad.

The following messages, dated Quetta, the 30th, have been received from Major-General Phayre:

I. Quetta, 30th July.—Your telegram of last night, ending with question about British cavalry. The cavalry work between Chaman and Kandahar, for nearly eighty miles, will be severe. The enemy, it is said, has some Turcoman cavalry with him. The great difficulty with us now is want of forage, no rain to speak of having fallen since end of 1878. I was about to apply for the services of Lieutenant-Colonel Gonne, 17th Lancers at Mhow, as brigadier of cavalry. Of course I should like to have his regiment also; and if we get rain shortly, the forage difficulty may be overcome. It is clear that with regard to cavalry and artillery, Ayúb Khan's force is far superior to any we have yet encountered, and I want to be strong in both."

II.—"Following report just received from Sibi:—Begins—'Your telegram. Sowars will be posted at once to bring in news if flood in Bolan occurs. General Wood arrived this morning. Morning cool. The 11th Regiment men look in splendid order and spirits.'—Telegram ends. First detachment 11th is at Dozan this morning; second detachment and Madras Cavalry at Mach."

III.—"On the morning of the 28th General Primrose ordered the Abdul Rehman, Mel Karez, Dabrai and Gatai posts to fall back on Chaman. The march has been accomplished safely under command of Major Jacob, 19th Native Infantry; and 96 sabres, Poona Horse, 25 sappers under Lieutenant D'Aguilar, R.E., and 190 rifles of the 19th Native Infantry have reached Chaman. They were attacked twice en route by villagers and killed several of the enemy. Particulars will be ascertained."

The 15th Hussars have been placed under orders to proceed immediately on service towards Kandahar.

No. 15a.

TELEGRAM FROM VICEROY, 3rd August 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

In consequence of telegrams received this morning, a powerful force of all arms under command of Sir Frederick Roberts has been ordered to march on Kandahar from Kabul.

No. 16.

No. 175 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, August 3, 1880.

In forwarding, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copies of further telegrams regarding the state of affairs in Afghanistan, in continuation of those forwarded with our Despatch, No. 169, dated 27th July 1880, we have the honour to summarize, as follows, the information which they contain regarding the reverse sustained by the force under command of Brigadier-General Burrows.

2. On the 12th July news reached Colonel St. John, the Political Officer with General Burrows' force, that the advanced portion of Ayub Khan's army was at Washir, and that Ayub Khan himself was not far in rear. The British brigade was then encamped on the Helmund opposite Girishk, the troops of the Wali of Kandahar being on the further bank of the river. On the 13th, it appeared that the infantry in the service of the Wali was in such an unsatisfactory state and so untrustworthy, that General Burrows and Colonel St. John deliberated on the question of disarming them. But the next morning, before any steps could be taken, the Wali's infantry deserted in a body, taking with them a battery of artillery. The mutineers were pursued by a portion of General Burrows' brigade and dispersed, the guns and baggage being recovered. At this time [14th July], Sirdar Ayub Khan's army was reported to be three marches distant from Girishk.

3. As the mutinous troops had plundered the stores of supplies collected at Girishk by Sher Ali Khan, and as reports had reached Colonel St. John that it was Ayub Khan's intention, if he crossed the river Helmund at all, to do so at a point to the north of Girishk, General Burrows determined on the 15th July to retire to Kushk-i-Nakhud, a distance of 30 miles from Girishk and 45 miles from Kandahar, where several roads from the Helmund to Kandahar converge, and where supplies were plentiful. This retirement was effected on the 17th. On the 18th all was reported quiet in the vicinity of Kushk-i-Nakhud, and it was believed that the majority of the mutinous troops had dispersed to their homes. The advanced portion of Ayub's cavalry had reached Girishk the day before. On the 19th, General Burrows shifted his camp three miles nearer Girishk, and on the 22nd he again moved it to a new position, in which he was able to place his sick, stores, and baggage, in an enclosure, being apprehensive of a night attack by the enemy.

4. On the 21st it had been reported that Ayub Khan's force had reached Haidarabad on the Helmund, 12 miles above Girishk, and that the intention was to advance by way of Sangbar. On the 22nd, our cavalry appear to have come in sight of that of the enemy, who retired without coming into action, a demonstration with cavalry and artillery having sufficed to cause them to fall back. On the 25th Ayub Khan with his entire force was known to be at Haidarabad, while his cavalry occasionally occupied Sangbar, and it was reported to be his intention to advance on the 25th by Sangbar and Maiwand, and to endeavour to pass by General Burrows' force into the Arghandab valley above Kandahar. This news was received by us on the 27th July.

5. On the morning of the 28th we received a telegram from Lieutenant Muir, Assistant Political Officer at Kandahar, announcing the total defeat and dispersion of General Burrows' force, with heavy loss in officers and men, and reporting that, in consequence, General Primrose had vacated the cantonment at Kandahar, moving all his troops into the citadel. This intelligence was gradually supplemented, during the 28th and 29th, by telegrams from Sir R. Sandeman at Quetta, who reported that telegraphic communication was broken down before noon on the 28th, between the Chaman Post, west of the Khojak Pass, and Kandahar; the last message received in Quetta intimating that the disaster, though severe, was not so complete as General Primrose had at first believed. The report that the whole of General Burrows' force had been annihilated, which was transmitted to England, and which is inconsistent even with the few details contained in the first account of the affair received at Kandahar, seems to have been founded upon a telegram sent direct by General Primrose to the Bombay Government. Nevertheless, the account of the action received this morning from Colonel St. John by a telegram, dated Kandahar 29th, leaves no doubt that the British force encountered an enemy greatly superior in numbers, well posted, and of formidable strength in artillery and cavalry, that our force was defeated, and that it fell back in great disorder on Kandahar, suffering heavy loss during the retreat, mainly through the exhaustion of the troops. At Kandahar General Primrose was reported to be making preparations against an attack by fortifying himself in the citadel, where provisions and ammunition are said to be plentiful.

6. We are taking all possible measures for speedily pushing forward reinforcements to the relief of the troops now in Kandahar. As the first step towards the attainment of this object, all the troops at Quetta, in Pishin, and on the railway line between Sibi and Quetta are being concentrated in Pishin, the railway works being temporarily abandoned, until the advance of reinforcements from India make it again possible to arrange suitably for their protection. Troops are also being forwarded from India as rapidly as possible, and a strong division, now under formation at Kabul, will be ready in a few days to march for Kandahar via Ghazni.

7. In Kabul and its neighbourhood all is reported quiet, and the necessary arrangements are now being made with Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan, the newly-recognised Amir of Kabul.

We have, &c.
 (Signed) RIPON.
 " F. P. HAINES.
 " JOHN STRACHEY.
 " E. B. JOHNSON.
 " WHITLEY STOKES.
 " JAMES GIBBS.
 " C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 16.

No. 394, dated Camp Kushk-i-Nakhud, 17th July 1880. (Extract.)

From Lieutenant-Colonel O. B. C. ST. JOHN, C.S.I., Resident, Southern Afghanistan, to
 A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit for the information of Government a detailed account of the events of the last few days, with the leading incidents of which my daily telegrams will have kept you informed.

2. The advanced column under Brigadier-General Nuttall, with which I marched, reached Girishk on Saturday morning the 10th, and the main body under Brigadier-General Burrows the following day. The total force then consisted of one battery Royal Horse Artillery, two regiments of Cavalry, one company of Sappers, six companies of British Infantry, and two regiments of Native Infantry.

3. Our camp was pitched in comparatively low ground on the left bank of the Helmund almost immediately opposite the fort of Girishk, from which it was separated, first by the river itself, fordable at the present time at intervals of half a mile at most, and secondly by a belt of grass and jungle over a mile in width. A bridged road leads from the ford to the fort. The camp of his Highness the Wali was pitched about a mile below the fort, partly on the high sloping banks of the river's bed, and partly in the low land below. His force then consisted of three regiments of infantry, numbering about 1,300 men, two six-pounder smooth-bore guns, and about 1,000 tribal cavalry. The remainder of his force was in advance under his nephew Sirdar Roshndil Khan at Karezat, 20 to 25 miles distant, and consisted of 800 infantry, the remaining four guns of his battery, and about 1,500 tribal cavalry.

4. In the evening of the day of our arrival the Wali visited me, and gave me details of what I had heard by message from him in the morning, that his cousin Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan had deserted the advanced camp at Karezat with his own sowars, 50 in number, after an ineffectual attempt to induce the rest of the troops to accompany him to Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan's camp, then in Washir. The Wali then told me that in spite of this evidence of fidelity on the part of the troops, he felt by no means confident in their loyalty. He was anxious for us to cross and camp on the west bank of the river, but I did not then think right to tell him definitely that the General in command had most stringent orders not to do so, hoping that Brigadier-General Burrows, who would arrive the next morning, would bring permission to act on his own discretion.

5. No such permission having been received, I told the Wali the next evening that under no circumstances should we cross the river. He was much depressed, and said that in that case it would be impossible for him to do anything to oppose Ayub's advance, and that he would concentrate all his troops at Girishk. To this I agreed, considering that if their fidelity was doubtful, it would be better to have the whole of them within reach than to leave a large proportion in a place where there would be no obstacle to their going over to the enemy.

6. The next day (Monday the 12th), I did not see the Wali, but finding from various sources that the disaffection among his troops was far more serious than he had led me to believe, and seeing that he was unwilling that I should go to his camp, I sent for his confidential Secretary, who confirmed the information. By him I sent a message to the Wali asking him whether it would not be better to disarm the whole or part of his regular troops, or, if he was unable to do so himself, to authorise us to take measures for the purpose. To this he eagerly assented, and he appointed the next morning to meet and talk the matter over.

7. At sunrise the next morning I met his Highness on the west bank of the river, and rode with him to the fort and across again to our camp, where he spent a considerable time in discussing the situation with General Burrows and myself. He freely admitted the untrustworthiness of his men, placing the blame mainly on the Sartip and on a certain Sardaru Khan, the principal officer of his army, who was known to have received many communications from Ayub Khan, some of which he had made over to the Wali. "But the only really disaffected corps," he declared, "was the Kabir regiment, about 450 strong, which had been sent to him last September from Kabul, where it had been stationed for 10 years." If this regiment was disarmed there would be no cause to fear the others, but he himself could not disarm it without our assistance. This the very stringent orders received by General Burrows prevented his doing as long as the Wali's force remained on the right bank, and his Highness therefore offered, on receipt of a written request from me, which he could show his officers, to bring the whole of his force to the left bank the next morning. Later on, General Burrows, as reported by telegram, determined to cross the river to disarm the Wali's troops should the step appear necessary. The next morning, while our own camp was being shifted to a better position a mile and a half up stream, I watched the Wali's encampment from the opposite heights. The tents were struck about six, and half-an-hour later the Wali's cousin, Sirdar Dilawar Khan, came across to fix a site for the new camp. Everything was, he said, proceeding satisfactorily, but a quarter of an hour later news was brought me that the troops had mutinied, seized the guns and baggage and driven the Wali and the whole of his cavalry and principal officers across the river. Riding back to the ford I met the Wali with a large number of horsemen; he said that after striking the tents and packing the baggage, the Kabir regiment had marched up to the high bank where the guns were, had seized them, forced the gunners to join them, and driven him and all but a few sowars who joined the mutineers out of the camp. The Wali added that many of the sowars who had accompanied him were untrustworthy, and begged me to fall back in the Kandahar direction at once. I told him that this would be quite unnecessary with our strong force, and that we would first punish the mutineers, and recover the guns. After some delay, mainly caused by uncertainty whether the mutineers intended to hold a position about the fort or move off

Battery, Horse Artillery.
2nd Regiment of Cavalry.
Company Sappers.
Four companies, 66th Regiment.
Four companies, Jacob's Rifles.

towards Herat, and of the attitude of the Wali's sowars, the troops, as per margin, moved across the river by a ford directly in front of our new camp, two miles above Girishk, at 9.30 a.m., the mutineers being then seen streaming along the opposite bank two miles distant. After the troops had crossed the ford I rode on to the advanced guard, which brought the mutineers to bay a few minutes before 11 a.m. at a distance of four miles from the camp. Half-an-hour later they moved to a second position a mile further on, and opened fire with the 6-pounder guns on the cavalry. This they kept up at intervals till the Horse Artillery, whose passage was much delayed by irrigation channels and rough ground, came into action at half-past 12.

8. On the brief engagement that ensued it is not my province to enlarge: suffice to say that at 2 p.m. all firing had ceased and I returned to camp five miles off by a different road and ford to that by which I had come. I mention this to show the feebleness of the obstacle which the Helmund in a season like the present offers to military operations. During my stay of five days I crossed it in nine different places with a guide, in a distance of five miles.

9. On my return I found the Wali with a few servants in our camp; he informed me that the majority of his sowars were still with him, though a few had, he found, joined the mutineers, and a few more fled to Kandahar. Most of those that had remained had sent their baggage in the same direction. Before leaving camp, I had asked that a party with camels should be sent to bring across the atta, grain, and ghee stored for us by the Wali in the fort; this had been done, but the atta and ghee had disappeared, though large quantities of raw grain remained.

10. The next morning after consultation with the Wali as to the possibility of feeding the troops at Girishk, I reluctantly came to the conclusion to recommend General Burrows to fall back on Kushk-i-Nakhud, whither the Wali had sent the whole of his sowars the night before.

11. The position of Kushk-i-Nakhud offers many advantages. Should the enemy cross at Girishk and follow the road we came, he would have to meet us either in an entrenched position here, or on ground of our own choosing, covering the first water-course on this side of the desert which separates us from Girishk. Should he take the northern road, he would have to meet us at Maiwand, 10 miles off, or, if he keeps to the river line, the Arghandab is less than that distance to the south. In fact, we are half way between the mountains to the north and the sandy desert to the south, at the point where these approach each other most nearly.

12. Should Sirdar Muhammad Ayub Khan, however, carry out what is, according to some reports, his intention of moving to Tirin and Darawut, and stirring up the country from there, the situation would be entirely changed, and the presence of so large a force here useless.

13. In conclusion, I have the honour to make a few remarks with reference to the effect on the country of this so far successful invasion. It is well known to you, that for many months Ayub Khan and his partisans have used every effort to inflame the religious and patriotic feelings of the chiefs and people against us and our protégé, Sher Ali Khan. These had apparently little or no effect at the time and as long as the possibility of an invasion from Herat seemed more than remote, particularly after the failure of the first attempt. But the actual presence on the frontier of an army of their own fellow tribesmen, under a prince of their recent ruling family, the memory of whose oppression a year and a half of prosperity has sufficed to obliterate from the minds of this fickle people, has, I have reason to suspect, created a more powerful and general feeling in Ayub's favour than one who had only known Kandahar a year ago would believe possible; and it is far from improbable that, unless Ayub Khan's army be defeated and dispersed at once, something very like a general rising may take place. That this could attain the formidable dimensions which have been reached in Kabul, the unwarlike character of the modern Durani and the physical features of the country forbid, but it may cause considerable trouble and annoyance and involve somewhat extended operations.

Enclosure 2 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 25th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUJ, July 24th.—If enemy moves up Helmund, General Burrows proposes sending back superfluous baggage and sick to Kandahar and moving up Khakrez valley, opening up fresh line of communications.

Enclosure 3 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL Phayre has received information from the Kandahar Road commandant corroborating what I previously told him that Ayub's cavalry meditate an attack in the Gulistan direction on our communication. The general is sending there to-morrow from Quetta a small column consisting of 450 infantry, 2 guns, and a few cavalry.

The 24th Native Regiment is at Darwaza, and hopes to reach Quetta to-morrow or next day.

Enclosure 4 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th July 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KUSHK-I-NAKHUJ, July 25th.—Ayub, with his entire force, is still about Haidarabad. His cavalry outposts occasionally occupying Sangbar, near which two men of Sind Horse on outpost duty were surprised and killed. This morning spies report that he intends moving on the 28th by both roads through Sangbar and through Maiwand. His object being to get past us into the Arghandab valley above Kandahar.

Enclosure 5 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From Lieutenant MUIR, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

TOTAL defeat and dispersion of General Burrows' force. Heavy loss in both officers and men. General Primrose has vacated cantonments and brought all his troops into citadel. Officers and men returning in small parties. Wali has arrived. Colonel St. John safe.

Enclosure 6 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

News of this morning from Kandahar. General Phayre and I have consulted together, and these are our views: That our line of communication with India for troops must be the Bolan Pass. The question we beg to refer to Government is what is to be done under present circumstances with the railway line under construction. We consider that the force from Thal-Chotiali to Quetta should be concentrated in Pishin with the least possible delay, and we recommend that the protection of the railway line and Thal-Chotiali should, if possible, be taken by Punjab troops. The Bombay troops, in which we include the whole of General Phayre's division, ought to be concentrated here at once.

General Primrose has telegraphed that he is abandoning Kandahar cantonments and will defend himself in citadel. He has directed General Phayre to march on Kandahar as soon as he can collect army. Primrose says Ayub's army is strong in artillery, which numbers 35 guns well served. We trust as much artillery as can be spared will be sent from India, also Europeans and horses to equip the guns at Quetta. We are quite aware of the very bad political effect the abandonment of the railway line and Thal-Chotiali by the present garrison must have upon the country, unless troops from the Punjab can be sent to relieve them, but state of country and strength of tribes, in our opinion, leave no alternative.

Primrose telegraphed two of our guns had been taken by enemy, who pursued our retreating troops for three miles.

Enclosure 7 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2511 E.P., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

VICEROY entirely approves the measures proposed by yourself and General Phayre, and decides that the forces employed for protection of railway line must be at once withdrawn as proposed. We are sending reinforcements from Bengal, and will re-occupy railway line when possible, but present exigencies necessitate pushing forward all available forces toward Kandahar. Viceroy relies on you to use all exertions to co-operate with Phayre in relieving posts and pushing forward reinforcements.

Enclosure 8 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram to-day just received. General Phayre has issued the necessary orders for the troops now protecting railway line to concentrate on Pishin. Movement commences from Thul-Chotiali, and I hope the order for the march will reach Thul-Chotiali on the third day from this. I have directed political officers to heartily co-operate with commanding officers in carrying out General's orders, and to arrange as best they can with the head men of villages to take care of all stores, telegraph line, &c. left behind, until reoccupation of country by our troops. I am in constant communication with General Phayre, who is strenuously exerting himself to push forward all available forces towards Kandahar. His Excellency the Viceroy may rely on myself and officers using our best exertions to aid General Phayre.

Enclosure 9 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th June 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

BEFORE telegraphic communication ceased at 11 o'clock this morning, the following news was received from General Primrose:—Following officers belonging to General Burrows' force had safely reached Kandahar:—Doctor Burrows, Eaton, Harvey, Mainwaring, Geoghegan, Oliver, Griffiths, Whitecot, Dane. Small parties of Burrows' force constantly arriving. Enemy appear only to have pursued for three or four miles. Extent of our losses not yet ascertained, but feared to be very severe. Two guns lost. Jacob's Rifles lost, Smith, Justice, and Coles killed; in Bombay Grenadiers, Anderson severely wounded, Haslet killed. Of R.H.A., Osborne killed, Blackwood wounded. In 3rd Cavalry, Mayne and Reid wounded. In 66th, Roberts killed, Lynch wounded. Enemy very strong in guns; believed to have 35, which they work well. General Primrose mentions that he has sent out General Brooke to bring in stragglers.

Enclosure 10 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

COMMUNICATION with Kandahar stopped at 11 this morning. I will inform General Phayre of your instructions.

Enclosure 11 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2521 E.P., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

WE hear wire cut towards Kandahar. Please use every endeavour to collect and send me early intelligence of passing events there.

Enclosure 12 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2,524 E.P., dated 28th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

Do you know what day and time and where action was fought; also whether Burrows attacked or enemy attacked him.

Enclosure 13 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

HIS Highness the Khan has sent me the following message in reply to telegrams informing him of substance of what had happened, and asking him to assist us with camels:—Begins. Thanks for your three telegrams. I am certain that the enemy will get their due reward soon. I am glad to afford help. My head and my all belongs to the British. I shall never draw back. One hundred and fifty camels, and one hundred horses are ready at Mustung just now; inform me and I shall happily send them to you immediately.

Musa Khan left this three days ago for Quetta with 100 camels. Whatever grain or money is required by the British I am ready to supply. I am certain you will always keep me informed of what is going on for the future. Ends.

Enclosure 14 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE this morning again visited General Phayre, and have recorded a memorandum of our deliberations which will be posted to-day. After carefully reviewing the situation we are again forced to the conclusion that, unless other troops can at once occupy the railway line of works, it must be abandoned. I telegraph this to show Government that the abandonment of the line and valuable plant is imperatively necessary, though we have come to this decision most unwillingly.

Enclosure 15 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram, dated this morning, asks where and when Burrows' action was fought, and whether he attacked. I regret I cannot give any information in addition to what I telegraphed yesterday. Primrose at the time wire was cut did not know the extent of the defeat. The last words that I understood he sent were to the effect that disaster was not so great as at first believed, but very severe; enemy only pursued for three or four miles; two of our guns taken, the others expected in; Brooke sent out to bring in stragglers; intended to abandon cantonments and occupy citadel; his only fear was scarcity of water.

Enclosure 16 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2531 E.P., dated 29th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

VICEROY entirely approves your decision to abandon railway line temporarily. Two strong brigades are being sent up and reinforcements, coming from England at once. Send all particulars of Burrows' action as early as possible.

Enclosure 17 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2534 E.P., dated 29th July 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

YOUR telegram 29th. Please convey at once to his Highness the Khan of Kelat, Viceroy's cordial acknowledgments of the friendship and loyalty toward the British Government attested by his prompt and valuable offer of co-operation.

Enclosure 18 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram of last evening expressing anxiety for news from Kandahar. Within a few hours of the receipt of the news about Burrows, I had sent off reliable men to Kandahar for information last night. The news from Chaman fort was that the Mel Abdul Rahman and Dubrai post, retreating from the line of communication on Chaman, had arrived at Gatai. Fighting was going on, but they were holding their own. Assistance is to be sent this morning from Chaman to help them in. They number 180 infantry and 70 cavalry. The country between Kandahar and Khojak Pass is in a state of insurrection, the difficulty therefore of communicating with Kandahar is very great. I have sent six letters to St. John and Major Westmacott yesterday at Chaman, despatched to him by messenger, with telegram from me. The country people say that the fight between the British and Ayub's army was severe and both sides lost heavily. I will again despatch letters; but even if my messengers succeed in reaching St. John, an answer to my first letters on account of distance must take, counting from date of despatch, 10 days.

The Kakars and Aitchakzais are reported collecting; but in a few days, I trust, we will be strong enough to hold the country from Quetta to Chaman post.

Enclosure 19 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

From Chaman I hear that Major Westmacott went out this morning with 50 sabres, Poona Horse, to assist Major Jacob retreating with road outpost detachments on Chaman. A skirmish took place near Gatai, but I understand there were no casualties on our side. Major Westmacott and Jacob are bringing their men safely into Chaman.

Enclosure 20 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

My telegram this morning. The detachments named therein have arrived at Chaman. No casualties.

Enclosure 21 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 31st July 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

We have received no direct news from our army at Kandahar. Native sources do not describe Burrows' defeat as crushing. They say that British cavalry and guns were induced to follow the enemies' cavalry, who pretended to fly and led them into a complete ambushade. Ayub's army then delivered its attack, and our troops suffered very severely in officers and men. A battle was then fought, resulting in our retirement on Kandahar, but Ayub's army suffered much. This news, I am sorry to say, requires confirmation. I send it because received from several sources.

Enclosure 22 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received the following news from a fairly reliable source:—Ayub Khan's army did not follow up British retreat to Kandahar. Burrows' force has arrived at Kandahar, and our whole army is now in the citadel. When messenger left Ayub was encamped where action was fought. This intelligence seems to corroborate news sent you yesterday that Burrows' defeat was not so crushing as at first believed by Primrose, and that Ayub Khan's army had suffered so much that they were vacillating regarding their further course of action.

Enclosure 23 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, No. 2571 E.P., dated 1st August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

HER Majesty the Queen has expressed her satisfaction at the news of the Khan of Kelat's loyal offers of assistance. Please inform Khan.

Enclosure 24 in No. 16.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

29th. Arrived here yesterday afternoon with General Burrows and Nuttall and remnant of force. Telegraph has been interrupted ever since my arrival. No chance of restoration, so send this by messenger to Chaman. Burrows marched from Kushk-i-Nakhud on morning, 27th, having heard from me that Ayub's advanced guard had occupied Maiwand, about three miles from the latter place. Enemy's cavalry appeared advancing from direction of Haidrabad, their camp on Helmund ten miles above Girishk. Artillery and cavalry engaged them at 9 A.M., so shortly afterwards whole force of enemy appeared and formed line of battle—, seven regiments, regulars in centre, three others in reserve; about 2,000 cavalry on right; 400 mounted men and 2,000 Ghazis and irregular infantry on left; other cavalry and irregulars in reserve; five or six batteries of guns, including one of breechloaders, distributed at intervals. Estimated total force 12,000. Ground slightly undulating, enemy being best posted. Till one P.M., action confined to artillery fire, which so well sustained and directed by enemy that our superior quality armament failed to compensate for inferior number of guns. After development of rifle fire, our breechloaders told; but vigorous advance of cavalry against our left, and Ghazis along the front caused native infantry to fall back in confusion on 66th abandoning two guns. Formation being lost, infantry retreated slowly; and, in spite of gallant efforts of General Burrows to rally them, were cut off from cavalry and artillery. This was at 3 P.M., and followers and baggage were streaming away towards Kandahar. After severe fighting in enclosed ground, General Burrows succeeded in extricating infantry and brought them into line of retreat. Unfortunately no efforts would turn fugitives from main road, waterless at this season. Thus majority casualties appear to have occurred from thirst and exhaustion. Enemy's pursuit continued to ten miles from Kandahar, but was not vigorous. Cavalry, artillery, and a few infantry reached banks of Argandab, 40 miles from scene of action, at 7 A.M.; many not having tasted water since previous morning.

Nearly all ammunition lost, with 400 Martini, 700 Sniders, and 2 nine-pounder guns. Estimated loss, killed and missing,—66th, 400; Grenadiers, 350; Jacob's Rifles, 350; Artillery, 40; Sappers, 21; Cavalry, 60. Officers killed, or missing,—Major Blackwood, Osborne, MacLaine, Artillery; Henn, Engineers. Galbraith, McMath, Garratt, Cullen, Roberts, Rayner, Honeywood, Barr, Chute, 66th; Owen, 3rd Cavalry; Hinde, Whitby, Grenadiers; Smith, Justice, Cole, Jacob's Rifles. Wounded,—Fowell, Artillery; Lynch, Preston 66th; Anderson, Grant, Grenadiers; Iredell, Jacob's Rifles.

Preparations being now made for siege. Durani inhabitants expelled. Provisions and ammunition plentiful. Wali was present during action, and is now with us, assisting actively. Of course, whole country will rise.

No. 17.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, DURING THE WEEK ENDING 7TH AUGUST 1880. (Extract.)

2nd August.—Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 1st:—

“Have given orders to occupy crest of Kojak with 25 sappers, two mountain guns, and head-quarters and 300 rifles 9th Native Infantry, who will entrench themselves there. Thus I hope to secure road and telegraph between Chaman and Killa Abdulla, where the wire has been cut since last evening. Colonel Sibthorpe wires from Kila Abdulla this morning a vague native report of two generals and a force in retreat; that one of the generals was badly wounded. This I conclude to be the first news of General Burrows' and General Brookes' (? Nuttall's) retiring force approaching Kandahar. Both Sir Robert Sandeman and I have sent several letters by independent means to General Primrose; the distance is very great and we cannot expect any reply for some days; but directly the troops from the railway line begin to reach Pishin, we shall be in a better position to make further efforts to obtain reliable information. I need scarcely assure his Excellency that no effort shall be wanting on my part to aid General Primrose with least possible delay.

Brigadier-General H. H. A. Wood reports from Jacobabad on the 2nd, that half of F-2nd Royal Artillery passed through that place for Sibi on the night of the 1st.

3rd August.—Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 3rd :—

“ Your telegram last evening about military reports received ; will be attended to. Yesterday’s Kandahar news has had a most exciting effect on tribes. I have occupied crest at Kojak. Detachment sent there drove off about 150 men who had seized head of pass, killing a few of them. Am pushing all available men to front, including Engineer officers and sappers, to secure the Kojak position and outposts connected with it.”

The Government of India have this day directed Sir Donald Stewart to prepare a strong division to march on Kandahar from Kabul, under the command of Sir Frederick Roberts. This force will proceed, of course, viâ Khelat-i-Ghilzai, a threatened attack on which post has been rumoured.

4th August.—Sir Donald Stewart telegraphs from Kabul on the 3rd, that the following force has been detailed to be in readiness for special service under the command of Sir Frederick Roberts :—

INFANTRY DIVISION	1st Brigade.		Under Major-General Ross.
	92nd Foot.	23rd Pioneers.
	2nd Goorkhas.	24th Native Infantry.
	2nd Brigade.
	72nd Foot.	2nd Sikhs.
	5th Goorkhas.	3rd „
	3rd Brigade.
	60th Rifles.	15th Sikhs.
	4th Goorkhas.	25th Native Infantry.
	Cavalry Brigade.
9th Lancers.		3rd Punjab Cavalry.
3rd Bengal Cavalry.		Central India Horse.
Artillery.
6th Battery 8th Brigade.		No. 2 Mountain Battery.
11th Battery 9th Brigade.

This force is intended for a movement on Kandahar in aid of Lieutenant-General Primrose.

6th August.—The following message, dated Kandahar, the 27th July, has only now been received from Lieutenant-General Primrose.

“ General Burrows, under date evening 25th, reports situation unchanged. Two Sind horsemen shot while patrolling near Sangbûr. At Kandahar, I hear that Habíbûlla has been to Kakrez, and has tried to raise the people without success. He was at Taznee on Sunday, and then proposed crossing into the Argandâb. The second detachment 11th Foot left Sibi last night. Five men of 1st detachment struck down by sunstroke at Nari ; are all doing well. Head-quarters 9th and the mountain guns left Quetta for Gulistan this morning.”

Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 4th :—

“ I beg to submit the following outline of the military situation, as it is at present, for his Excellency’s information :—

“ Chaman, at the northern foot of Kojak, is now our advanced post, with a garrison of 50 sabres, two mountain guns, and 400 Native Infantry. It is connected with our main position on the heights of that pass by a defile five miles long. Since we drove out the 150 Atchakzáis from their position on the heights on the 30th ultimo, they have collected more men, and a good deal of brisk skirmish has been going on in the defile and adjacent heights for the last three days, with a loss to the enemy of 20 to 30 killed, whilst our own loss has been trifling. They are now constructing sangas at certain points, from which they will be driven in a day or two on the arrival of more infantry under Colonel James. I have ordered Colonel Lindsay, Lieutenant Whiteford, and other engineer officers now arriving at Kila Abdulla to arrange for the entrenchment of such commanding points as it may be necessary to hold for offensive and defensive purposes. Colonel James, with one company 11th Foot and a wing of 10th Native Infantry, will reach Gulistan to-morrow, and assume command of the troops between Chaman and Sigghi, whose movements he will direct in communication with me. The head-quarters wing 11th Foot will be placed in the Gulistan fort until we are ready to advance; the remaining wing, with F-2nd, will be pushed forward to the same point when ready. The troops from Thal-Chotiali and railway line ought to reach Pishin within a week.

"Yesterday a body of two or three hundred Kakars from beyond Toba attacked a convoy of empty carts near Dina Karez. The havildar, 10th Native Infantry, in command lost three killed and three wounded of his party, but killed six of the enemy and secured his convoy. Detachments of Biluch Guides and Native Infantry have been sent after these Kakars by Sir Robert Sandeman and myself.

"The above shows that the Pathan tribes of the Kojak and adjacent country are determined to molest our communications between Chaman and the Ghazaband Pass, and that they must be secured by strong detachments. The cavalry will be massed towards Khush-Dil-Khan, where forage is said to be plentiful.

"I this morning received a letter from Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster General, Kandahar, dated the 29th. After the force had withdrawn into the citadel, he says that the entry of General Burrows' force into camp had to be covered against the attack of villagers as far as Singiri. After all had got into the citadel, the kacha buildings of the cantonment were fired by natives. He details the force now in the citadel of Kandahar as follows: Guns, C.-2nd Royal Artillery, heavy battery of four 40-prs. and two mortars; about 120 of 66th Foot, 271 of 1st Grenadiers, 300 of Jacob's Rifles, 500 of 7th Foot, 4th, 28th, and half of 19th Native Infantry; also 40 of 3rd Cavalry, 200 Sind Horse, 200 Poona Horse. He mentions that a great number of townspeople have been turned out; that they have bhusa for animals for 20 days; supplies for men for over two months. His chief anxiety is water, because the season has been a dreadfully dry one; consequently whole country is parched up. After searching for wells, he says he has found hundreds, but water very low indeed in them. His description of Ayub's force and its attack is much the same as that already reported. The 66th Foot is said to have fought splendidly, and lost 400 out of 520 men present, and 10 officers killed. Some of Ayub's cavalry reached Kandahar on the 29th, but none of his footmen. They hope to have a chance of defeating some of his forces outside; and, just as he wrote, Colonel Phillips, Poona Horse, had cut up some men when reconnoitering outside the walls. He says that one good downpour of rain would give them their great want—water; but if rain fails they must go out and fight for it. He says, in conclusion, that he will try and send another messenger in a day or two, when he has succeeded in getting news of Ayub's force, its disposition, &c."

7th August.—Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 6th:—

"Officer Commanding Chaman reports he sent a gun and company native infantry to clear defile between Chaman and Kojak position they drove enemy with loss out of sangas. Simultaneously Lieutenant-Colonel Sibthorpe from top of pass sent a party to dislodge another gathering of enemy from their sangas, with loss of five killed. On our side Major Morse and one sepoy slightly wounded. Since these operations a convoy has passed unmolested. Colonel Lindsay reports that telegraph wire in defile has been cut to bits, and from other information of this morning it appears that wire between Chaman and Kandahar has been carried away on camels. Regarding Kojak position, Colonel Lindsay says that it is quite defensible; that no tribal gathering can touch it, but that he will extend and improve it. Now that native infantry are closing up and working parties available, communication with Chaman by heliograph will be opened directly instruments, on way there with Sappers, arrive."

Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs from Jacobabad on the 7th:—

- I. "One hundred men 2-15th Foot passed through last night for Sibi."
- II. "Half wing 2nd Cavalry left last night for Sibi."

No. 18.

No. 179 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.To The RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's
Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, August 10, 1880.

IN continuation of our Despatch, No. 175, dated 3rd August 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.
(Signed) R. P. HAINES.
" F. P. HAINES.
" JOHN STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSON.
" WHITLEY STOKES.
" JAMES GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

My telegram of this morning. My informant also states that the inhabitants of the villages round Kandahar and the city itself have fled to the hills. I also know from the conversation which passed between Primrose and Phayre at the Telegraph Office on the morning of 28th that Primrose intended turning all Afghans out of the city. I think these circumstances may account for the fact that St. John has not been able to communicate with me.

The crest of the Kliojak Pass was occupied by the 9th Native Infantry and two guns this morning. Telegraphic communication between Chaman and Killa Abdulla is still interrupted, but expected to be restored very shortly.

Enclosure 2 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From COLONEL ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

28th. Defeat of our force most complete, mainly attributable to unsteadiness of infantry. Cavalry and artillery covered retreat to certain extent, but infantry could not be rallied. Estimated loss killed and missing, 66th, 400; Grenadiers, 350; Jacob's Rifles, 300; Artillery, 40; Sappers and Miners, 21; Cavalry, 50. Situation here matter for grave anxiety. Relief from Quetta difficult on account of want of water on the road for large force. Might not division of army be sent from Kabul? Would meet with little opposition, tribes being unprepared.

Enclosure 3 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

It is reported that Syud Khan, Nurzai, and Shah Muhammad Sahibzada, Kakar, were the leaders of the attack on the Dubrai Kadui and Mel Manda post, between Chaman and Kandahar. They are said to have been joined by some 2,000 tribesmen from Toba. Nur Muhammad Khan, Governor of Kadui under Wali Sher Ali, is reported to have fled. Ayub Khan is stated to have sent Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan with two cavalry regiments and a number of Herati and Turcoman horsemen to Kakran, to prevent the people taking supplies into Kandahar. Ayub Khan himself is said to have marched from Kushk-i-Nakhud to Mir Karez, the head-quarters of Umr Khan, Sahibzada. It is rumoured that he has detailed two guns for the purpose of attacking Chaman. Yesterday ten Poona Horse were attacked in Khojak pass by party of Aitchakzai robbers; a fight ensued and resulted in the killing of seven Aitchakzais, without loss on our side. Last night a few shots were fired into post at Killa Abdulla. From Shorawak the news is that men are assembling under Pir Muhammed Khan, Barechi, with the object of attacking our posts at Segi and Dinar Karez in Pishin, at the request of Abu Syud Khan and Shah Muhammed Sahibzada. Pir Muhammad is believed to have sent a party to Kelat to endeavour to purchase ammunition from Sibi. Rai Hittu Ram reports that, on 25th July, Marri carried off from near Thalli a number of sheep and camels belonging to Brahuīs. In retaliation, Brahuīs have since raided from same neighbourhood 15 camels belonging to Mir Hazur, Chief of the Ghazni Marri. Rai Hittu Ram insisted on Brahuīs surrendering their plunder, and camels are now in his possession at Sibi. The Marri Chief, Sirdar Mehrulla Khan, is said to discountenance Marri raids, and to have left Kahan for the purpose of putting a stop to them.

Enclosure 4 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

My news telegram of to-day. Rai Hittu Ram reports favourable settlement of Marri—Brahui raiding, and has arranged for mutual restitution of stolen property.

Enclosure 5 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I THINK that every exertion should be made to send troops to Kandahar. I have been informed attack in force is meditated on Kelat through Shorawak, with object of seizing Khan's treasure, said to amount to 30 lakhs. Could not troops be sent from Kabul to create diversion from that direction? Situation very serious.

Enclosure 6 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 3rd August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

News received of a meditated attack on Kelat, via Shorawak. Brahui Sirdars express themselves ready and anxious to assist His Highness the Khan, if anything of the kind is attempted. The Brahui clans are strong enough to defeat any invasion of His Highness' kingdom, unless undertaken by regular organized army.

The occupation of the Khojak Pass has been accomplished without much opposition. The tribes lost 12 men, our loss nil. Sirdar Mehrulla Khan, Marri, has sent his eldest son to Sibi, accompanied by several of his principal headmen, and has expressed his desire to keep his tribe in order and prevent raiding. In this he is believed to be sincere.

Regiment of Madras Cavalry arrived at Quetta this morning; also 2nd detachment of 2-11 Foot, 1st detachment of same regiment, with detachment 10th Native Infantry, marched early this morning for the Khojak Pass, which is being strongly held by our troops. No further news from Kandahar.

Enclosure 7 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, No. 2616 E. P., dated 3rd August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

YOURS, 2nd, regarding meditated attack on Kelat. We are sending strong division from Kabul, but report whether you consider any special measures necessary for security of Khan, whom it is essential to protect effectually.

Enclosure 8 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, No. 2637 E. P., dated 4th August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

PLEASE endeavour to let St. John know that his telegrams, 28th, 29th, have reached us, that we are most anxious for more news, and glad he is safe; also that very strong division under Roberts marches at once from Kabul. Send special messenger to communicate with Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and obtain news. Your exertions at this time are much appreciated here and in England.

Enclosure 9 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th August 1880, 15h. 20m. Received 5th, 1 p.m.

From Agent, Governor-General, Quetta, to Foreign, Simla.

No further definite news from Kandahar. The main body of Ayub's army is reported to have been four days ago on march to the west of Kandahar.

A convoy returning from Killa Abdulla to Quetta was attacked before daylight yesterday morning near Dinar Carez by a large number of tribesman. A Havildar of 10th Native Infantry, commanding escort, showed much skill in successfully resisting attack. A Naik, two sepahis, and three cartmen were killed, also five of the enemy. Captain Mosley, with 60 Biluch Guides and 100 infantry, marched from Quetta last night to Guzaband Pass to hunt up the marauders.

This morning there was a skirmish near Chaman; about two of the enemy were killed. On our side three men were wounded and five horses killed. The tribes have erected strong sangars at the entrance to Khojak Pass on south side. Major Westmacott was attacked this morning on his way to Chaman from Killa Abdulla, but beat off his assailants with loss of only two horses.

Field Telegraph Office has been opened at Gulistan Karez, and telegraphic communication with Killa Abdulla still continues.

Colonel James is on his way to the Khojak Pass with 200 of the 10th Native Infantry and 100 of the 2-11 Regiment. He will command line of communication with Quetta. Major Blowers from Kowas with 200 rifles, 10th Native Infantry and 50 Sabres, 2nd Sind Horse, reached Killa Abdulla this morning, and marches at once for crest of the Khojak Pass. Lieutenant Whiteford, R.E., with Sappers and Miners, accompanies Blowers to fortify the heights.

The Thull-Chotiali garrison has reached Spin-Tangi, and is expected at Hurnai tomorrow. A 3rd detachment of the 2-11 Regiment arrived here this morning. 2,500 transport bullocks have safely reached Sibi from Sangan through the Marri Hills.

Enclosure 10 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTER from Kandahar from Quartermaster General to Phayre gives strength British force as follows:—Eight guns Royal Horse Artillery, four forty-pounder-guns and two mortars; 120 66th Regiment Europeans, 300 Jacob's Rifles, 270 Grenadiers, 600 7th Regiment, Fusilier, whole of 4th and 28th Regiments, Native Infantry, and half of 19th Regiment Native Infantry; 900 Cavalry, native. Ample supplies for two months; forage for twenty days. Many wells contain little water, which is the principal difficulty, but good showers would remedy this.

Ayub's army consists of ten Regiments, some thousands Ghazis, and 35 guns. Troops admirably handled. Burrows was outnumbered and surrounded. 66th European Regiment behaved splendidly, but conduct of Jacob's regiment of Rifles described as very bad.

Enclosure 11 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

BRAHUI Sirdars' messengers, who were despatched to obtain news of Ayub Khan's movements, have returned, and state that up to 1st August army was at Sangbar, the leaders were in perplexity, not knowing whether to advance or remain where they were. Ayub's loss very heavy. Messengers say he had no hope of successfully attacking Kandahar. I give this news as received. Doubtless there is truth in it.

Enclosure 12 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 5th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LIEUTENANT JENNINGS telegraphed yesterday from Spin-Tangi that the Thull-Chotiali garrison marched from Thull-Chotiali without any opposition whatever from the people. On the contrary, they maintained a friendly attitude to the end, and aided the march of the force with bullock carriage.

Enclosure 13 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 5th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

It is reported on good authority that, on 1st instant, Ayub was at Sanjiri, one march north-west of Kandahar. His army is stated to have suffered much in Burrows' engagement, and to doubt its power to attack Kandahar. Large numbers of Ghazis are collecting round Kandahar.

Henry Wylie arrived at Killa Abdulla this morning. Yesterday he reported from Gulistan that there does not yet appear to be any regular rising of the tribes in the neighbourhood of the Khojak Pass, and the attacks on convoys have been committed by gangs of thieves. The news from Shorawak is more satisfactory. Some supplies are still coming thence to Gulistan. General Phayre has heard from Chaman that the post has been made strong enough to resist any tribal attack, though not tenable against artillery fire. Colonel Lindsay has also reached Killa Abdulla, and has gone to mark out position on crest of Khojak which is now occupied by 300 of 9th Native Infantry, and 200 of 10th Native Infantry, and two mountain guns. At Gulistan there are 200 of the 2-11th Regiment, the head-quarters of which arrived here this morning.

The Madras Cavalry marched early this morning for Khusdil Khan from Sharig. The Officer Commanding telegraphs that owing to reported gathering of Wanechis and Kakars, he withdrew two small posts at Nassak and Shor near Poongi. The Nassak party was attacked by eighty Pathans, one of our sowars and two or three of the enemy were killed. The Pathans fled on reinforcements coming up. A few other Pathans attacked a convoy near Spin-Tangi, but were beaten off with a loss of eight killed. Lieutenant Tobin received the thanks of the General for his good management.

Enclosure 14 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 5th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram, dated the 3rd. His Highness the Khan has to-day replied as follows :—
Begins. Many thanks for your kind offer of assistance. Certainly I will ask you for help should I require it. Kabul, Kandahar, Pishin, and Quetta, are all Sulh-dád (?), belong to British Government. I do not fear. The Pathans are my enemies, because they know I am a true ally of the British. By God's help I shall look to my affairs properly. I have sent my men to fetch news from those places. I shall inform you as soon as I receive any news. I hope you will, for the future, also keep me informed of all news. Ends.

I am keeping a good look-out, and, should any further measures be necessary will at once telegraph.

Enclosure 15 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

ALL going on well. Excitement among the tribes seems to have partially subsided. There has been some little skirmishing in Khojak Pass between Killa Abdulla and Chaman. Major Morse, 9th Bombay Native Infantry very slightly wounded. Enemy easily driven out of Sangars by shots from one mountain gun.

The Aitchakzai levies still remain at their posts.

No further news from Kandahar.

Enclosure 16 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th August 1880.

From COLONEL ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Kandahar, 3rd August. Beyond slight skirmishes between country people and troops covering working parties nothing has occurred last three days. Ayub reported to intend reaching Kokaran to-morrow or next day. No news from Chaman or Kelat-i-Ghilzai since we shut ourselves up in city. Preparations for defence proceeding satisfactorily, all buildings outside walls being demolished. With very few exceptions entire Pathan population has left or been expelled city. Wounded officers doing well. Colours of both 66th and Grenadiers lost. Accurate loss not yet ascertained, but estimate given in former telegram not far wrong. About 1,100 out of 2,800 killed and missing.

Enclosure 17 in No. 18.

TELEGRAM, dated 7th August 1880, 16h. 7m. Received 8th, 10 a.m.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YESTERDAY a telegram, dated 3rd August, was received through Killa Abdulla from St. John, reporting all well at Kandahar. Ayub's army had not marched Kokaran, and no troops had been detached against Kelat-i-Ghilzai, or Pishin.

A large tribal gathering exists about Takht-i-pul. St. John's messengers were obliged to pass through Registan. The Rhoghani pass in the Amran Mountains is said to be held by 200 tribesmen. The messengers also stated that Ayub's loss in action on 27th was extremely heavy.

Some Pathan Maliks in the Lora Valley who showed signs of disaffection have been seized by Mr. Ingle, escorted by party of the Madras Cavalry and brought to Quetta.

Captain Henry Wylie reports bodies of Badozai robbers from Shorawak in Lora Tangi.

On night of 6th, 26 contract camels conveying Commissariat stores were carried off with their loads by Aitchakzais from Kuchali on Hurnai line.

Mr. Duke, Political Officer, reports that the Marris are giving some trouble to the troops evacuating the railway line. First Detachment 2-15th Regiment arrived at Nari bank this morning.

Rain was threatening in the plains. Bridge over Nari river commenced.

No. 19.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 14TH AUGUST 1880. (Extract.)

8th August.—The 63rd Foot, proceeding on service to Kandahar, will probably leave as follows :—

						Men.
On the 12th	-	-	-	-	-	200
„ 13th	-	-	-	-	-	200
„ 14th	-	-	-	-	-	198
„ 15th	-	-	-	-	-	197
„ 16th	-	-	-	-	-	101
Total	-	-	-	-	-	896

The several detachments will be looked through to the Nari bank. They will reach Sukkur on the 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, and 20th August.

9th August.—The following messages have been received from Sir Donald Stewart from Kabul :—

I. Dated the 7th.—“March to Kandahar force deferred to Monday, and the rest of force to Wednesday, owing to non-arrival of sick carriage.”

II. Dated the 9th.—The following is a detail of the force proceeding to Kandahar under Sir Frederick Roberts :—

	EUROPEANS.		NATIVES.
	Officers.	Non-commissioned officers and men.	Officers.	Non-Commissioned officers and men.
Staff - - -	79	—	—	—
No. 6-8th Royal Artillery -	6	95	—	139
No. 11-9th „ „ -	6	95	—	139
No. 2 Mountain Battery -	5	—	—	140
9th Lancers -	19	318	—	—
3rd Bengal Cavalry -	7	—	—	394
3rd Punjaub „ -	9	—	—	408
Central India Horse -	11	—	—	495
60th Foot -	21	616	—	—
72nd „ -	23	787	—	—
92nd „ -	19	651	—	—
15th Bengal Native Infantry -	10	—	—	650
23rd „ „ -	8	—	—	701
24th „ „ -	7	—	—	575
25th „ „ -	8	—	—	629
2nd Goorkha Regiment -	7	—	—	501
4th „ „ -	7	—	—	637
5th „ „ -	8	—	—	561
2nd Sikh Infantry -	7	—	—	612
3rd „ „ -	7	—	—	570
Total -	274	2,562	—	7,151
9,987

Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs as follows from Jacobabad :—

I. On the 8th.—“One hundred men, 2-15th, passed through last night for Sibi. Also remaining half wing 2nd Light Cavalry left for Sibi.”

II. On the 9th.—“One hundred men, 2-15th Foot, and one squadron 8th Bengal Cavalry, passed through for Sibi last night.”

The following messages have been received from Major-General Phayre, from Quetta :—

I. Dated the 8th.—“Tribes have been threatening communication between Ghazaband and Kojak for last day or two, but each post is being placed in a defensive state, and they are checked for the present. Maliks of refractory villages have been seized. Madras cavalry reached Khúshdil Khan in time to prevent strong attack there. Headquarters wing 11th Foot gone to Gúlistán escorting large convoy. Left wing now here and with F-2nd, which will arrive to-morrow, will shortly proceed to Gúlistán. All reported quiet on Kojak position and Daman. Reports this morning from Sibi state first detachment 15th Foot left for Bolan last evening. Nari in high flood. Raft wire across has slackened so as to be useless. Large boat expected to-day from Sukkur, by which guns and infantry will be crossed. Bolan also said to be in flood. First party 15th will therefore halt at Pir-Chauki until fords passable. Large tribal gatherings on hills at Takht-i-Pul, said to amount to 2,000; occupation of Kojak and concentration of troops there has prevented this body from joining other tribes in harassing our Pishin communications. Messenger with letters from Kandahar avoided them by skirting desert to westward. As already reported, Ayub's forces were not to reach Kandahar until 5th."

II. Dated the 8th.—"Following received by Sir Robert Sandeman from Mr. Duke, Assistant Agent, Governor General, Nari. Begins—"We have reached this place. The sick and wounded are within two miles; will have to be brought in on camels and bullocks, owing to state of roads. The whole of the Quothnand (?) at Imeris (?) are up; have broken away entirely from chiefs. * * * * rode under fire with us, and believe did their best. We were compelled to abandon all our baggage and treasure in passes between Kúcháli and Gandakindaff. Five European * * * * cut up. The loss of followers and coolies very heavy. Estimated ten sepoy killed and wounded. Will report particulars later."—Ends.

III. Dated the 9th.—"It was in the Kuchali and Gandakindaff defile, within their own territory, that the Marris attacked Lieutenant Tobin's retiring force, referred to in yesterday's telegram. The defile is four miles long and very narrow in parts, being enclosed between lofty precipices. The road crosses the river several times. This part of the line, namely, between Spintangi, Kuchali, Gandakindaff, &c., is not mentioned in paragraphs 20, 29, 37 of Sir Richard Temple's minute, dated 25th of November 1879, and the Marris are extremely discontented at our occupation of it.

"Last night Officer Commanding at Sibi reported Lieutenant Tobin's arrival as follows; Begins—"Lieutenant Tobin and party arrived here. Tobin badly wounded in left elbow; nine or ten men killed and few wounded. Tents, kits, and baggage of party wholly abandoned. Men have nothing but what they stand in. Gatacre and his detachment also arrived: has brought in all his baggage, &c., except one tent lost in river."

Captain Shephêrd telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 9th:—

"Major Peter wires,—'Attacked by Marris on march Sibi side Kuchali. Six clerks and 20 coolies killed; baggage and treasure lost.' Have called for report, and on receipt will forward details."

The Deputy Quartermaster General, Bombay, telegraphs from Sukkur on the 9th:—
"Last squadron 8th Bengal Cavalry left yesterday for Jacobabad."

10th August.—The following message, dated Quetta the 9th, has been received from Major-General Phayre:—

"In consequence of what has occurred between Spintangi and Nari Gorge, Sir Robert Sandeman and I consider that Sibi and its vicinity should be held as follows: At Nari Gorge, 50 sabres and 100 rifles; Gulo-ki-Sher, 50 sabres and 50 rifles; Thalli, 50 sabres and 100 rifles; at Sibi, one troop cavalry and 200 Native infantry. For the present we must use the 8th Bengal Cavalry and 23rd Bombay Native Infantry for these posts. The 4th Bengal Native Infantry will, on arrival at Sibi, relieve the 23rd Native Infantry at the above post, and will also take those in the Bolan up to Siriab."

Brigadier General Wood reports as follows from Jacobabad on the 10th:—

"One hundred men, 2-15th Foot, and 8th Bombay Native Infantry passed through for Sibi last night. Also one troop 8th Bengal Cavalry left for Sibi."

11th August.—Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 10th:—

I. "Your telegram of last evening. I will make my estimate of transport to-day, and give an approximate idea of force and date of March. I fear I shall have to take on some carts to save time. A very cheering letter come from Adam, just received, dated 5th; all in capital spirits, and only want some guns to take offensive. Ayub got hurt in trying to stop a fight between Kabuli and Herati regiments. This Marri rising between Sibi and Kuchali is going on, taking away troops I require for front. I reported yesterday the steps taken to check it; further information shows tribe to be unmanageable."

II. "The following is my programme of movement for the relief of Kandahar. By 24th instant I shall have collected at Quetta and in Pishin for above service exclusively, European artillery, 310 and 12 guns ; Native Artillery, 186 men and six mountain guns ; also a rocket party ; cavalry, European 410, Native, 950 ; Sappers and Miners, 200 ; infantry, European, 1,350, Native, 3,000. As far as Chaman there is no difficulty about transport, there being a fair cart-road. It is on the 80 miles of road from that to Kandahar that difficulty exists. In order therefore to reduce transport I shall march as light as possible with the above force, leaving behind as many grass-cutters and superfluous followers as possible to follow with the reserve. Executive Commissariat Officer calculated that ten days' rations for above force can be carried on 800 camels, including German horse-biscuits. All heavy kits and most of tents will be left at Kojak in charge of a small party of each corps, ready to be brought on to Kandahar as soon as information from me, by heliograph or other means, reaches Chaman. If all goes right, the whole of the above force should be collected at Chaman on 29th instant, whence I shall endeavour to reach Kandahar in four marches, arriving there about the 2nd September.

"Recent occurrences require alteration of force for line of communication originally submitted, which will be as follows :—

Sibi and Bolan.—4th Bengal Native Infantry and three troops 8th Bengal Cavalry ; if more infantry should be required at Sibi in consequence of yesterday's information, an extra Native infantry regiment would have to be sent there until the Marris quiet down ; at all events the three troops Bengal Native Cavalry and 4th Bengal Native Infantry, should be relieved as soon as possible, as they are required for the front. For Quetta Station, 23rd Native Infantry and one squadron Madras Cavalry.

"Next, with regard to the communication between Quetta and Chaman, I have been obliged, in consequence of the state of the country, to occupy fortified posts as follows, a measure which has had the desired effect of securing our communications :

Mehtarzai, 25 sabres ; crest of Ghazaband pass, 30 rifles and 26 sabres ; Sighi, 75 rifles and 25 sabres ; Gulistan, 100 rifles and 25 sabres ; Kila Abdulla, 150 rifles and 25 sabres ; Khushtil Khan, 150 rifles and 150 sabres ; Kojak position, 500 rifles, three 9-pr. guns from Quetta Arsenal (? manned) by detachment from 14-9th Royal Artillery, and 25 sappers ; Chaman, 230 rifles and 40 sabres ; on north-east at Kach, 300 rifles. Thus, for the Pishin line of communications two strong Native Infantry regiments and one cavalry regiment are required, instead of one Native Infantry as before estimated. These can be held by the 24th Native Infantry, 3rd Bengal Native Infantry and 1st Madras Cavalry. Lastly, for the reserve there remain H-1st and A-4th Royal Artillery and three troops 8th Bengal Cavalry and 63rd Foot and two Bombay regiments ; and as I take only ten days' supplies with me from Chaman, a reserve force, with 20 days' supplies and baggage left behind, ought to be ready to march from Chaman 2nd September at latest."

Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs as follows from Jacobabad on the 11th :—

"One hundred men 2-15th Foot and half-battery D-B, Royal Horse Artillery, passed through last night for Sibi."

The following telegram, dated 11th, has been addressed by the Quartermaster-General in India to Major-General Phayre :—

"Following telegram, dated 10th, received from Quartermaster-General, Bombay : Begins—'The 78th Highlanders embarked at Bombay yesterday, the 15th Native Infantry will embark on 12th, and the 13th Native Infantry about 17th. All will wait orders from General Phayre at Karachi.'—Ends. The 78th will remain for the present at Karachi."

12th August.—Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs as follows from Jacobabad :—

I. On the 10th.—"Your telegram yesterday. Three troops 8th Bengal Cavalry ordered to Sibi by General Phayre for protection of railway."

II. On the 12th.—"One hundred men 2-15th, and half battery D-B, passed through for Sibi last night."

Major-General R. Phayre telegraphs from Quetta on the 12th :—

"Messenger arrived at Chaman from Khelat-i-Ghilzai with the following letter from Colonel Tanner, dated Sunday, 8th August :—Begins—'As I cannot get news from Kandahar (the last received here was dated 25th July), I send the bearer with this

'note, he promises to return on eighth day or earlier. Please write all news of what has happened at Kandahar, and regarding its relief. We heard that Kandahar force is shut up, but do not know anything for certain. Here we are all right at present, but the people about will rise en masse if they hear of a reverse at Kandahar. I am very well off for supplies, so am in no danger at present.'

13th August.—Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 12th:—
 "Your telegram yesterday. Sir Robert Sandeman and I have several times endeavoured to communicate with Primrose, but messengers cannot obtain entrance. I have now received letter from Adam, explaining how messenger can be admitted, and have informed Sir Robt. Sandeman, and hope to succeed."

Brigadier-General Wood reports from Jacobabad on the 13th:—
 "One hundred men 2-15th and first detachment 15th Hussars passed through Sibi last night."

14th August.—Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 13th:—

"Your telegram of this day. I have made arrangements for fifteen days' supplies for the whole force at Kandahar, including Roberts, to follow me within four days of my departure from Chaman, escorted by 3rd Brigade. With this brigade military posts will be established and the telegraph lines re-laid. Sir Robert Sandeman and I had a meeting this morning with several officers, and the whole plan has been arranged. Copy of these proceedings by post. We should do the above work from both ends, viz., from Chaman and Kandahar after my arrival there. I have no doubt that ten days' supplies will be ample under these circumstances; to take more with my force would hamper my movements in the face of a powerful enemy. Even travelling light, as I intend to do, I shall have at least 2,000 camels or their equivalent. To-day I informed Chief, Bombay, fully on this subject, in reply to a reference from him. I can assure His Excellency I am not running any risk."

Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs from Jacobabad on the 13th:—
 "One squadron 15th Hussars passed through for Sibi this afternoon."

No. 20.

No. 185 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

TO THE RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, HER MAJESTY'S
 SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, August 17, 1880.

IN continuation of our letter, dated 3rd August,* we have the honour to submit, for your Lordship's information, a connected account of the events and circumstances, so far as they have come to our knowledge, which preceded and attended the march of Sirdar Ayub Khan from Herat to Kandahar, up to the time when his army appeared upon the Helmund. It will be remembered that this account is based upon intelligence received at different times from various quarters, much of it being necessarily unauthenticated; and that we are still imperfectly informed of the motives and objects of the Sirdar in attacking Kandahar.

2. In September 1879, two Kabul regiments at Herat broke out into mutiny, and murdered General Fakir Ahmed Khan, who was commanding the army there under Sirdar Ayub Khan. This occurred two days after the outbreak at Kabul against the British Embassy; but the news of this latter event, and of the march on Kabul of a British force, must have reached Herat soon afterwards, and from that time all the Kabuli regiments, which are mainly composed of men from the North-Eastern tribes, appear to have been anxious to leave Herat for their own country. The best and easiest route from Herat toward Kabul and Eastern Afghanistan is by Kanahar; the Kabuli soldiery, whom Ayub Khan could not pay, and whose excesses soon exhausted

Herat, where they lived at free quarters, had every incentive to regain their homes and to rejoin their clans. Ayub Khan tried at first to disarm and disband them; but they refused to leave Herat except as an organized body, with their artillery. So early as in November 1879, reports were received at Kandahar that the Kabul regiments were pressing Ayub Khan to lead them against Kandahar, that they were quite beyond the Sirdar's control, that they had seized all the revenues collected, and that the standards were already set up outside the city for their march. Ayub Khan himself telegraphed to the Persian Minister on the 24th November, announcing that, since Yakub Khan appeared to have made terms with the English, he (Ayub Khan) had proclaimed the Jehad, and was moving off that day to Kandahar with his whole force to attack the English there. The Sirdar appears to have brought into Herat, in November, some regiments from Maimenah. Between these regiments [generally called afterwards the Herati troops] and the local levies on one side, and the Kabuli troops on the other side, there soon broke out disputes and fighting. Ayub Khan actually marched out of Herat with all his forces early in December, but an opposite faction seized the city, and closed the gates on him; whereupon a battle ensued between the Kabuli and the Herati regiments, ending in the defeat of the latter party. This affair probably stopped the march of the Kabuli troops; and it also induced Ayub Khan to abandon for the time his projected expedition against Kandahar, which he was supposed to have undertaken mainly under compulsion of the mutinous regiments.

3. At the beginning of January 1880, it was reported through Teheran that the Kabuli and Herati parties in the army had become reconciled, from fear lest Persia should take advantage of their disputes to seize Herat. Ayub Khan's chief advisers were Sirdar Khushdil Khan (usually called the Luinab) and other military commandants, most of whom are connected with Kandahar; and these were probably the real planners and leaders of the expedition, for all our intelligence supported the belief that the Sirdar himself was at this time entirely in the hands of the army, while it was suggested that the dissensions among the troops had been fomented by him with the object of breaking their power. The Kandahar reports of January contained frequent references to military disturbances, and to the loss of power by Ayub, who was apparently endeavouring to get help from Persia and other quarters. Nevertheless, during January and February rumours of Ayub's advance were prevalent, intermixed, however, with stories of fresh quarrelling among the regiments, of the discomfiture of the Kabulis, and of their partial dispersion.

4. The arrival at Herat of a Persian Commissioner created much speculation early in March; but throughout the month the rumours were conflicting; while the constant repetition of the news that a Jehad had been proclaimed and the march of the troops about to begin, rather weakened than strengthened the force of these warnings. It was evident that the Kabuli regiments were anxious to return to their own country, and that intrigues for the purpose of raising disturbance were rife in Furreh and Zamindawar; but Ayub seemed to be steadily losing authority over the troops and the country. Letters received from Herat at Kandahar in April said that he was a prisoner in the hands of his troops, and that his administration was in great confusion. On the whole, therefore, although there could be little doubt that the Kabuli troops were likely soon to abandon Herat, the general impression was that the Heratis would not join them, and that no organized expedition, regularly led and equipped, was to be expected; nor did the Wali Sher Ali Khan appear to have any apprehension that a formidable invasion of South Afghanistan was impending. He had brought the western districts up to the Khash river under his authority, and his levies occupied Washir.

5. During the month of May the reports of Ayub's movements and intentions continued to be uncertain and inconsistent. At Kandahar it was first said that he intended to leave on the 11th, afterwards on the 26th, and that the Kabuli and Herati troops were reconciled. But in reply to a reference to Teheran, information was received that dissensions still continued, that Ayub's arrangements had fallen through, that the Kabuli troops were on bad terms with the Herati troops, and that they intended returning toward Kabul by Turkistan, with or without Ayub Khan's permission. The presence of Ayub's troops in Furreh was to some extent accounted for by a report, from Meshed, that, owing to some apprehension of the approach of Sher Ali Khan's troops, a detachment would be sent there from Herat to protect the place. Affairs at Herat were generally described, by a letter dated 13th May, to be in a state of disorder and discontent; while Ayub's preparations for departure were supposed to be dictated by a desire to escape from his own troops. On the 29th May, a report reached Kandahar from Herat that Ayub Khan had encamped at Rozabagh outside the city; and that a body of horsemen had started on the Kandahar road; but on the 4th June came intelligence that the march was again postponed, owing to the internal quarrels of the troops. This was corroborated by further reports which reached Kandahar on the 12th June; and in the meantime it was reported that the intelligence of the defeat inflicted on the tribes by Sir Donald Stewart near Ghazni had produced a profound impression on the Kabuli soldiers, increasing their anxiety to return to their homes. Up to the 17th June, the messengers from Herat reported at Kandahar that no attempt had been made at an advance, beyond planting the standards outside the gate; and at Kandahar the expectation of Ayub's coming was said to be subsiding.

6. On the 21st June, however, the Wali of Kandahar, who had been at Girishk since June 1st, sent word to Colonel St. John that he had received authentic news of the regular infantry having gone into camp outside Herat, and that the Luinab was reported to be intending a movement on Zamindawar, with 2,000 horsemen. The news was at once communicated to Teheran with inquiry for intelligence through Meshed. On the 25th, Mr. Ronald Thomson telegraphed that a special messenger had reached Meshed with a letter, dated 18th June, from Herat, announcing that Ayub Khan had left Herat for Kandahar on the 9th June. The strength of his force was variously estimated; it was known to be strong in artillery and cavalry, with 10 regiments of regular infantry. On the 30th June, a letter was received by Colonel St. John from the Wali, reporting that the Luinab with Cavalry had arrived in Furrah.

7. Upon the receipt of Mr. Thomson's telegram of the 25th, the question of the measures to be taken in consequence of the intelligence that Ayub Khan's army was actually moving toward Kandahar, was at once considered. After consulting Sir D. Stewart, and Colonel St. John, with whom General Primrose concurred, we determined that a British force should advance to the Helmund, and that reinforcements should be pushed up to Kandahar as quickly as possible from the line of communication and from reserves collected in Sind. The necessary orders were issued as soon as possible, and a brigade under General Burrows marched for the Helmund. In the opinion of all those best qualified to advise upon the situation, it was essential, upon political and still more upon military grounds, that Ayub Khan's advance should be checked by a demonstration toward the Helmund. The advance of the Herat army directly threatened our military position at Kandahar, which had been declared to be the point upon which his movement was directed; and the consequences of our troops remaining in cantonments there while Ayub crossed the river and gradually approached the capital, might have been seriously disadvantageous in various ways. The Alizai chiefs of Zamindawar had been reported to have joined the Wali's camp at Girishk; and Colonel St. John considered that the despatch of a brigade to Maiwand would help to confirm the fidelity of the Wali's troops, to overawe the Zamindawar tribes, and to maintain confidence at Kandahar. There was every probability that Ayub Khan's force, if allowed to draw near without interruption, would gather Ghazis and other recruits from the armed and disaffected population of the districts, and that his foraging parties would create disturbances throughout the whole province, and along our line of communications. For these and other reasons it appeared unadvisable to await the enemy at Kandahar, while if Sirdar Ayub Khan, avoiding the city, had moved without interruption from the Helmund straight upon Kelat-i-Ghilzai (where we have a garrison) and Ghazni, the effect upon our military reputation, and upon the political situation generally in Afghanistan, would have been exceedingly damaging. It was thought probable at Kandahar that the appearance of a British brigade on the Helmund would check the progress of Ayub Khan, that the Herati troops might hold back, and that the Kabuli regiments, whose main object was to reach their homes might break up and leave his standard.

8. We have already, in our despatch of the 3rd August, reported to your Lordship the course of events, so far as they were known to us, that followed the arrival of General Burrows' brigade upon the Helmund. We have as yet received no information whatever from General Primrose of the circumstances under which General Burrows engaged the enemy on the 27th, of his defeat, or of the present situation of the British troops in Kandahar and Kelat-i-Ghilzai. The occasional communications from Kandahar, and the scanty intelligence from other sources, that from time to time reach Sir R. Sandeman and General Phayre at Quetta, are regularly transmitted to your Lordship by telegraph.

We have, &c.

(Signed)	RIPON.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	JOHN STRACHEY.
"	E. B. JOHNSON.
"	WHITLEY STOKES.
"	JAMES GIBBS.
"	C. U. AITCHISON.

No. 21.

No. 186 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT. HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's
Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, August 17, 1880.

In continuation of our despatch, No. 179, dated the 10th August 1880, we have the honour to forward for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

"

F. P. HAINES.

"

JOHN STRACHEY.

"

E. B. JOHNSON.

"

WHITLEY STOKES.

"

JAMES GIBBS.

"

C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th August 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kabul, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Zurgun Shahr, 10th August.

WE are getting on well. Sun is hot between ten and four. Troops are healthy and in grand spirits.

It seems likely that we shall meet with opposition in neighbourhood of Ghazni, where I hope to be on 15th August.

Enclosure 2 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 14th August 1880.

From VICEROY, Simla, to General Sir D. M. STEWART.

In view of questions in House of Commons, Secretary of State is anxious for answer as to supplies for Roberts' force. I should therefore be glad of a reply to mine of 12th as soon as you can send one.

Enclosure 3 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 14th August 1880.

From General Sir D. M. STEWART, Seh Baba, to VICEROY, Simla.

YOUR Excellency's telegram, 12th. There is no ground for alarm about supplies on the road. Sheep, grain, and forage plentiful at this season. Roberts has all European supplies for a month. There probably will be a difficulty in regard to tea, sugar, and rum at Kandahar; but the troops can do very well without these for a time, though every effort should be made to push them on from Sind.

Enclosure 4 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 8th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FOLLOWING from Captain Henry Wylie: Begins—Spy, who left Pishin on 1st, has returned with news of everything being right at Kandahar up to 5th. Ayub had reached Kokaran, but had made no advance towards Kelat-i-Ghilzai, or Pishin, nor attack on city. Particulars by special sowar.—Ends.

Enclosure 5 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 9th August 1880.

From COLONEL ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 6th. Ayub arrived Kokaran, six miles from city. Preparations for defence complete. Provisions, except forage, for thirty-five days. Our losses exaggerated in previous reports; do not exceed one thousand killed and missing, of which 400 Europeans and twenty-one officers.

Here had no communication from Kelat, or Chaman, since 28th. Wali in city with relations and families. All the Afghan's, except a few merchants, turned out.

Enclosure 6 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 9th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

A TRUSTWORTHY agent sent to Kandahar returned, and reports impossibility of obtaining access to city, entrances to which are strictly guarded by our troops, who prevent ingress. Three of my letters to St. John have been intercepted by enemy, who have also seized other messengers, men, and women, trying to enter and leave Kandahar with letters. Every village and road is watched to prevent letter passing.

On the 5th, Ayub's regular troops are said to have reached Chunni, about seven miles from Kandahar. The villagers are suffering much oppression from Ayub's regular and irregular forces.

It is stated that twelve British soldiers who lost their way in the retreat after Burrow's action, were captured by ghazis the following day, between Maiwand and Kandahar and taken to Ayub. Some Syuds, who sheltered the fugitives at Maiwand, have been killed and made prisoners by Ayub. Hadji Sirbuland Khan, Aitchakzai, and his son, Ghulam Nabi, are also said to be in confinement. Ayub's whole force, including ghazis and tribesmen, is now estimated at 20,000. Great want of discipline prevails.

Enclosure 7 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM dated 9th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

EVACUATION of railway line by troops completed. Would have been altogether successfully carried out, but for apparent disregard by Major Peters, R.E., of my own, and General Phayre's instructions. This morning Mr. Duke telegraphs from Sibi that Major Peters, at Sharig, although repeatedly warned, delayed despatching his carts until almost the last day. When carts arrived at Spin-Tangi, they were found to be accompanied by 1,000 coolies, and to contain, among other things, one and half lakhs treasure. According to instructions, all stores it was intended to remove and not leave for safe custody with Maliks should have been made over to the troops under Colonel Roome proceeding to Pishin. For some reason not yet known, this treasure was instead allowed to come down with much other heavy baggage and coolies, through the worst portion of the Pathan and Marri hills with the last convoy for Sibi. Escort consisted of about 180 sepahis, of whom a large proportion were sick, under Lieutenant Tobin, who had previously been badly wounded. With the report of our defeat at Kandahar was circulated a report that 10 lakhs of treasure were being carried down. All the Pathan and Marri robbers united for the sake of plunder and attacked the carts in the pass between Kuchali and Gundakin Duff. The progress of the carts was delayed by a heavy fall of rain and the flooding of the Nari River. In spite of the utmost efforts, 180 carts and all the treasure and baggage had to be abandoned. Four European subordinates, 12 sepahis, and 20 coolies were killed, and four sepahis wounded.

Mr. Duke accompanied the convoy and with him were three Marri Chiefs, who, he says, exerted themselves to the utmost to help, but had no control over the robbers, a number of whom are said to have been killed. I greatly regret what has occurred, and have telegraphed to Mr. Duke to submit a written report without delay.

Enclosure 8 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, No. 2719 E. P., dated 9th August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

IMPORTANT to inform Kelat-i-Ghilzai garrison, through St. John, or direct of Roberts' march. He left Kabul yesterday, and will push on as rapidly as possible.

Enclosure 9 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, No. 2741 E. P., dated 10th August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

YOUR telegram, 9th. Evacuation of railway. Please report by letter fully circumstances of attack and loss of treasure and lives, showing orders issued and on whom responsibility lay for miscarriage of arrangements.

Enclosure 10 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th August 1880. 14h. 41m.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL Phayre received to-day a letter from Major Adam, Quartermaster-General, Kandahar, dated 5th August. The garrison have water, food, and ammunition in abundance. Their defences have been strengthened; buildings outside city walls destroyed; guns mounted, and every preparation made to resist attack. Spirit of troops good, and one or two successful skirmishes with villages have taken place. Communication with outside world most difficult. Herati and Kabuli troops are said to have quarrelled over booty captured after Burrows' defeat, and Ayub is reported to have been wounded in quelling disturbance.

From Khojak all reported quiet. Heliographic communication established between crest of Khojak and Killa Abdulla. The last detachment of troops and convoy leaving Marri hills was attacked by Marri and Pathan robbers in a difficult pass and a large quantity of treasure and baggage was lost.

A gathering of Kakars near Barshor in the direction of Ghazni has broken up, attributed to the arrival of the Madras Cavalry at Khushdil Khan Killa in Pishin.

Enclosure 11 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram, 9th. Letter despatched to Kelat-i-Ghilzai.

Enclosure 12 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LIEUTENANT JENNINGS, Political Officer with Thull-Chotiali troops, telegraphed last night their safe arrival at Durgai. All well; expected to reach Kach Amadan tomorrow, and march for Kojak on 13th.

Enclosure 13 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE gatherings in Toba and Shorawak have dispersed. All quiet in the Khojak Pass.

A report that Sartip Nur Muhammad was on his way to attack Chaman with two guns proves to be untrue.

Colonel Roome, 5th Bombay Native Infantry, with the Thal-Chotiali and Hurnai forces under his command, has arrived at North Chappar without encountering any opposition. Three nine-pounder guns drawn by bullocks, escorted by a detachment of the 2-11th Regiment, leave this evening for the Khojak.

Enclosure 14 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTER from Colonel Commanding at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, dated 8th August, received at Chaman, reports all well there, and supplies plentiful. Colonel Tanner says he has received no authentic news from Kandahar since 25th July, but rumours of garrison being shut up in city had reached him.

Henry Wylie reports all quiet in the neighbourhood of the Khojak pass and Khushdil Khan Killa in Pishin. Native information states that much perturbation exists among the Kabuli soldiery in Ayub's army, who have heard of Amir Abdul Rahman having ascended the throne. No attack on Kandahar has yet been reported.

Enclosure 15 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 13th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

TELEGRAPHIC communication between Killa Abdulla and Chaman restored.

Enclosure 16 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 13th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NEWS of the 9th from Kandahar states that Ayub Khan is intriguing with the Aitchakzais in the neighbourhood of Toda and Chaman, through the sons of one of their chief sirdars, named Fateh Khan. Ayub has promised to assist the Aitchakzais with guns and regular troops, for the purpose of attacking our line of communications.

In Ayub's camp it is said to be debated whether they should endeavour to undermine the city walls, or to attack by escalade. Ayub is reported to have decided in favour of an escalade and to be making the necessary preparations. It is also reported that Ayub has endeavoured, without success, to mediate with the Kandahar garrison and to obtain the release of his brother, Yakub Khan.

From Pishin information has been received of an attack on a village by some Kakozaïs, resulting in the death of four policemen. A large party of Zhobites are reported to have passed through the Kowas Valley last night. Their intended destination and object have not yet been ascertained.

The first detachment of the 15th Regiment arrives to-morrow.

Enclosure 17 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 15th August 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 11th. All well. Defences and demolitions complete. Enemy throwing up siege works at present insignificant. He has about 37 guns, of which six 12-pounder Armstrongs, 4,000 or 5,000 infantry, 2,000 cavalry, and varying number of Ghazis, perhaps averaging 5,000. Provisions, except fresh meat and forage, abundant. News from Kelat to 4th. All well there and quiet.

Rumours have reached tribes of advance from Kabul, no general rising appears to have taken place yet, except immediately round Kandahar. Wounded officers doing well; one or more officers said to be captives in Ayub's hands. Have written to ask him.

Enclosure 18 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 15th August 1880.

From SIR R. SANDEMAN, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE following from Wylie giving Kandahar news to 11th: Begins—My kossid, sent on 7th, just returned with news from St. John to 11th, giving details of action of 27th, and state of Kandahar. Our losses on 27th were in officers same as before stated, only add Captain Harris, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General wounded, and that Colonel Iredell's wound is dangerous. Men killed: Artillery, 18; sappers, 23; 66th, 282; Grenadiers, 365; Jacob's Rifles, 250; Sind Horse, 10; 3rd Cavalry, about 20.

On the 11th Ayub was still three miles from Kandahar, and had made no attack on it, though his guns threw occasional shells into city. His Herat troops had deserted, and his strength was believed to be 4,000 infantry, 2,000 cavalry, and a miscellaneous heap of Ghazis. Has no guns better than home-made 12-pounder Armstrongs.

My kossid says country people are making trenches and approaches towards Shikarpur Gate, and he warned St. John of this. Says the city defences have been placed in as good a state for defence as possible, and everything cleared round the town for some distance, and the position ought to be impregnable. Garrison has plenty of provisions, except fresh meat and forage.

Enclosure 19 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE military post at Kach Amadan was attacked at 4 a.m. this morning by Kakar Pathans, who were beaten off with the loss of 80 killed. Our troops pursued the Kakars for two miles. Particulars not received, as the wire was cut. When message given them was being transmitted, we had been warned of probable attack on post, and General Phayre last night had sent a detachment of troops from Quetta to bring away the sick. Telegram from Chaman last night stated that letters had arrived there from Colonel Tanner from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, dated 12th August, in reply to letters from me. My letter was the first intimation Colonel Tanner had received of the march of Roberts' force. Country was quiet, quiet in fort, supplies abundant. Tanner says he will be able to help Roberts' force with supplies. More particulars on receipt of letter which is coming from Chaman by special messenger. Tanner mentions that communications with Kandahar very difficult.

Enclosure 20 in No. 21.

TELEGRAM, 2809 E.P., dated 6th August 1880.

From, FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor-General, Quetta.

St. JOHN's telegram, 11th, says one or more officers reported captives with Ayub. If this is true, will money promised or paid assist their protection or release? Whatever you or St. John may think fit may be spent. Tell St. John secretly.

No. 22.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 21ST AUGUST 1880. (Extract.)

15th August.—Consequent on Major-General Phayre having made a demand for extra troops for service on the Pishin line of communication, the 3rd Hyderabad Cavalry and the 38th Bengal Native Infantry, two of the corps held in reserve, have been ordered to proceed at one to Sibi.

16th August.—The following telegram, dated the 14th, has been received from the Officer commanding at Jacobabad:—

"One squadron, 15th Hussars, passed through for Sibi this morning."

The Deputy Quartermaster-General at Sukkur reports, on the 14th, that the second squadron of the 15th Hussars left that place for Sibi that day.

General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta:—

I. On the 15th.—The following received from Colonel St. John, through Chaman and Kila Abdulla:—Begins: "Kandahar, 11th. All well. Defence and demolitions complete. Enemy throwing up siege works; at present insignificant. He has about 37 guns, of which six are 12-pounder Armstrongs, four or five thousand infantry, two thousand cavalry, and varying number of ghazis, perhaps averaging five thousand. Provisions, except fresh meat and forage, abundant. News from Kelat to 4th; all well there and Quetta. No general rising appears to have taken place yet, except immediately around Kandahar. Wounded Officers doing well."—Ends. Following from Brigadier-General James, commanding in Kojak:—Begins: "Westmacott says country people report that heavy firing was heard from Kandahar on night of 12th; also report of a force coming this way; nothing definite."—Ends. Captain H. Wylie adds:—Begins: "My kossid sent on 7th has just returned with news from St. John to 11th, giving details of action of 27th and state of Kandahar. Our losses on 27th, were in Officers same as before stated, only add Captain Harris, 66th Foot, wounded, and Major Iredell's wound dangerous. Men killed,—Artillery, 18; Sappers, 23; 66th, 282; Grenadiers, 365; Jacob's Rifles, 250; Sind Horse, 10; 3rd Cavalry, about 20. On the 11th, Ayub still three miles from Kan-

"dahar, and had made no attack, though his guns threw an occasional shell into city. His Herat troops had deserted; his strength was believed to be two thousand cavalry and four thousand infantry, and a miscellaneous heap of ghazis. Has no guns better than home-made 12-pdr. Armstrong. Kossid says country people are making trenches and approaches towards Shikarpore gate, and he warned St. John of this. St. John says city defects have been placed in good state of defence as possible, and everything cleared round town for some distance, and position ought to be impregnable. Garrison has plenty provisions, except fresh meat and forage. St. John's letter is being copied, and will be forwarded by express. Kossid says no troops have advanced from Kandahar towards Pishin. Sarbaland is still with St. John, but not trusted with important work, as spy says our Officers do everything themselves. Country people around city suffering much from want of attack. St. John now knows of Robert's advance."—Ends.

II. On the 16th.—Head-quarters, wing, 16th Native Infantry, attacked in Kach post at 4 a.m. to-day, by combined tribes of Kakars. Enemy driven off with loss of 80 killed. Loss on our side slight. Just as Colonel Pierce* was about to telegraph particulars wire was cut. Am sending out a few cavalry, with Biluch guides from Sir Robert Sandeman, through Sarakula Pass, to warn a detachment of 100 Native Infantry which left this for Kach last night to bring in sick.

17th August.—The 3rd Bengal Native Infantry left Dinapore on the evening of the 15th, en route to Sibi.

The last squadron of the 15th Hussars and a wing of the 4th Bengal Native Infantry left Sukkur on the 16th, en route for Sibi.

Brigadier-General Wood reports as follows from Jacobabad on the 16th:—

"Half battery, 15/9th, passed through for Sibi last night; also one squadron, 8th Bengal Cavalry, strength 81 sabres, left for Nari bank by order of General Phayre."

General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 16th:—

I. Reply received at Chaman from Colonel Tanner. Two letters despatched a short time ago. His letter is dated 12th instant. All well there. He is delighted at receiving intelligence of the Kabul column. Says the tribes around there are all quiet, although Ayub has sent to call upon them to rise. He finds communication with Kandahar as difficult as we do. Referring to my telegram this morning, Colonel Pierce appears to have pursued the enemy for two miles from Kach. We shall restore telegraphic communication with Kach as soon as possible.

II. In consequence of attitude of Marris, I have already alienated more troops for Sibi and Bolan than has ever been the case; consequently, I am crippling my advance force. Notwithstanding this, Sir Robert Sandeman is asking me for more troops. These I cannot possibly give without stopping advance on Kandahar. I have advised Sir Robert Sandeman to represent the case to Government, and to make a requisition for what he considers necessary in consequence of hostility of Marris. All that is now going on in that part could be managed by tribal levies better than by troops under present circumstances. I have reminded Sir Robert Sandeman that there is a stream of troops passing up the Bolan, and will be for the next month. Intelligence just received here that the Shorawak tribes are collecting to attack Quetta and Kelat.

18th August.—Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs from Jacobabad on the 18th:—

"Two hundred men, 63rd Foot, and remaining wing, 4th Bengal Native Infantry, passed through for Sibi last night."

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 13th:—

"I shall require the 78th Highlanders in reserve at Pishin. I am arranging with Major Colvin, Sukkur, regarding train arrangements, so as not to interfere with movements of Bengal troops."

* Colonel T. W. W. Pierce, 16th Bombay Native Infantry.

19th August.—The following corps will take part in the advance on Kandahar, under Major-General Phayre, C.B., early next month.

Artillery.	Infantry.
D/B, Royal Horse Artillery.	11th Foot.
F/2nd, Royal Artillery.	15th „
No. 2 Bombay Mountain Battery.	63rd „
Cavalry.	5th Bombay Native Infantry.
15th Hussars.	8th „ „ „
1st Madras Light Cavalry.	9th „ „ „
2nd Bombay Light Cavalry.	10th „ „ „
Detachment of Poona Horse.	16th „ „ „
2nd Sind Horse.	19th „ „ „
	23rd „ „ „
	24th „ „ „
	27th „ „ „
Sappers and Miners.
3rd, 4th, and 5th Companies, Bombay Sappers and Miners,

The whole of the above troops will be concentrated at Chaman by the 29th instant, with the exception of the following, which will not reach that place until the dates expressed opposite to them :—

D/B, Royal Horse Artillery	-	30th August.
15th Hussars	-	5th September.
63rd Foot	-	3rd „
9th Bombay Native Infantry	-	3rd „
23rd „ „ „	-	5th „

The following telegram has been received from Major-General Phayre, dated Quetta the 17th :—

“In consequence of reliable information regarding investment of Kandahar by Ayub and commencement of siege works, received last evening, have resolved taking with advance force two 25-pounder guns in Quetta Arsenal, which I can man and provide draught for. Enemy has four 12-pounder Armstrongs; therefore, knowing ground as I do, and strong position he has taken up on east and south sides in villages of Deh Kwaja and Deh Khati, I feel necessity of having with me guns of superior calibre to his.”

Brigadier-General Wood telegraphs as follows from Jacobabad on the 19th :—

- I. Two hundred men, 63rd, passed through Sibi last night.
- II. The 15th Bombay Native Infantry passed through Sibi last night.

The 38th Bengal Native Infantry having been declared unfit to proceed immediately on service, owing to its consisting largely of recruits, who are unfit to take their places in the ranks, the 17th Bengal Native Infantry has been nominated to take its place, and will proceed from Morar to the Pishin line of communications.

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 14th :—

“Distribution of forces ordered for relief of Kandahar and details of staff published in this day's Division Orders :—General Phayre, Commanding; Major Cunningham, Assistant Adjutant-General, sick, Captain Cooke-Collis officiating; Major Jopp, Assistant Quartermaster-General; Major Heyland, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General; Captain Phayre, Aide-de-Camp; Lieutenant Fitzroy Somerset, Extra Aide-de-Camp; Major Swinhoe, Assistant Commissary-General; Major Wooldridge, Director of Transport; Deputy Surgeon-General Bruce, Principal Medical Officer. Artillery Brigade,—Colonel Smith, Commanding; Captain Blaksley, Adjutant: Troops,—D/B, Royal Horse Artillery; F/2nd, Royal Artillery; No. 2 Mountain Battery. Cavalry Brigade,—General Wilkinson, Commanding; Major Morris, Brigade Major; Captain Muir, Orderly Officer: Troops,—15th Hussars, 1st Madras Cavalry, 2nd Bombay Light Cavalry, 2nd Sind Horse, and 198 sabres, Poona Horse. Engineer Force,—Lieutenant-Colonel Lindsay, Commanding Royal Engineer; Lieutenant Whiteford, Adjutant: Troops,—Three companies Sappers and Miners. Engineer Officers for duty,—Lieutenant Selby, in charge of signalling; Lieutenants Fuller, Davidson, Hickson, Assistant Field Engineers; Lieutenants O'Sullivan, Robinson Neville, Coles, Slater, Assistant Field Engineers. Attached to Sappers,—Captain Joseph, Bombay Staff Corps, Assistant Field Engineer. 1st Infantry Brigade,—General James, Commanding; Captain Cooke-Collis, Brigade-Major; Major Sanders, Commissariat Officer; Lieutenant-Colonel Barras, Transport Officer: Troops,—2/11th Foot, and 8th and 10th, and 400 rifles of 16th and 19th Bombay Native Infantry. 2nd Infantry Brigade,—General Brown, Commanding; Major Stock, Brigade-Major; Major Fagan, Commissariat Officer; Lieutenant Mackenzie, Transport Officer: Troops,—2/15th Foot, and 5th, 24th, and 27th Bombay Native Infantry. 3rd Infantry Brigade,—General Wood, Commanding, sick, General Walker officiating; Captain Andrews, Brigade-Major; Lieutenant Wood, Orderly Officer: Troops,—63rd Foot, and 9th and 23rd Bombay Native Infantry. Line of communication from Sibi to Chaman,—General Henderson; Captain Watling, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General; Brigade-Major, vacant. Sibi and outposts,—One regiment Native Infantry; three troops Cavalry. Bolan post,—Half regiment Native Infantry. From Quetta to Chaman, including Kach and Kushdil Khan,—Two regiments Native Infantry; two squadrons Cavalry. Quetta garrison and reserve troops, staff vacant: Troops,—A/4th, H/1st, 5/8th, 14/9th Royal Artillery, one squadron Cavalry, and one and half regiments Native Infantry.

20th August.—Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 19th:—

I. Intelligence by Shahan kossid, through Sir Robert Sandeman, states that at Modga, a place inhabited by Panazais, Badzais, and Mehtarzais, there was a tribal gathering whose intention was to attack Kach. Shah Jehan, of Zhob; and Faizu are, he states, at Abadeon with 8,000 men, consisting of Panazais, Dammahs, Zumatans, Sharans, Sharanzais, Mehtarzais, and Adinzais. The leaders give out that they intend to attack Kach first, then the Bolan, and finally Quetta. Informant came from Kach through the Sarakula pass, and on this side the Machbauzi; saw bodies of armed men who had taken up different positions.

II. By reports received last night from Colonel Pierce, the combined tribes from Zhob, Chappar, Toba, &c., instead of retiring to their homes after their defeat, have collected in greater force on the heights around Kach, and fire on parties attempting to leave it. In addition to the sick and wounded of Colonel Pierce's force, there are the sick from Chappar, Thal-Chotiali, &c., amounting in all to 150 men, who must be brought to Quetta. Colonel Pierce also reports that his supply of forage has ceased, and that his grain for transport cattle is finished. Under these circumstances, I have been obliged to order two mountain guns, three troops of Cavalry, and a regiment of Native Infantry of my advance force from Pishin to Kach, via Ghurki defile. I proposed to Sir Robert Sandeman to evacuate the post altogether, as Chappar, Sharigh, Harnai, &c., have been; but he so strongly deprecated the measure on political grounds until some effort has been made to pacify the tribes, that I consented to await the report of Captain H. Wyllie, who will accompany the above field column and endeavour to arrange for a month's supply of bhūsa and barley being stored in the fortified storeyard.

“If Captain Wyllie succeeds, the garrison of 300 men would remain, and the sick and wounded only be brought into Quetta. These isolated posts, so far from the line of communication, are most objectionable in a military point of view, as they alienate men and animals that cannot well be spared. The importance of Kach as an influential centre cannot be doubted. Sir Robert Sandeman thinks that a garrison of 300 Native Infantry would be sufficient under present circumstances. However, I think that Kach itself should be held by two mountain guns and 400 rifles, and that a fortified post of 50 rifles should be established in the Sarakula Pass, half way between Quetta and Kach. The distance to Kach by this pass is 28 miles; round by Kuchlak and Ghurki defile it is 44 miles. I have ordered the field column to do its work as quickly as possible, in order that, if possible, my advance may not be delayed beyond the date named.

III. The following intelligence just received from Gulistan that a large body of Barakzais are collected at Argantai, beyond the Spintaga. This rumour was brought by an Achakzai, who disappeared immediately after. From another quarter the following intelligence received by Sir Robert Sandeman,—that Ayub Khan had detailed 60 horsemen and two guns to go with inhabitants of Argistan-Kadani and the Achakzais to Murgha, to the aid of Gholam Hyder Khan; that the guns and sowars had crossed the Zakird Kotal on their way to Murgha; also that two infantry regiments, 600 strong each, three cavalry regiments of 200 sabres each, with a few guns had been detailed for Shorawak, but had not yet started from Kandahar ; also reported that Ayub Khan was erecting fortified enclosures at five different places.

The Officer commanding at Jacobabad telegraphs that 200 men of the 63rd Foot passed through for Sibi on the 18th, and 200 more on the 19th. The third party of the same regiment left Sukkur on the 19th.

21st August.—The Deputy Quartermaster-General, Sukkur, reports, that the fourth party of the 63rd left that place on the 20th for Sibi.

Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Quetta on the 21st :—

“ Tribal gathering around Kach has dispersed. Convoy of sick, &c. arrived here this morning ; no enemy seen. Field column from Pishin arrives there to-morrow, and having settled local questions, returns to Kojak. Hope there will be no more trouble on that flank from Sibi-Chaman. I leave for front this afternoon. From to-morrow please address Killa Abdula.”

No. 23.

No. 363 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

WE have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's

* G. G. O. No. 480, dated the 20th August 1880, and documents published therewith.

Government, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to an action fought on the right bank of the Helmand river, near Girishk, on the 14th ultimo, between the force under the command of Brigadier-General G. R. S. Burrows and the mutinous infantry of His Highness the Wali of Kandahar.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" J. STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSON.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Simla, the 24th August 1880.

Enclosure 1 in No. 23.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, the 20th August 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 480.—Under the orders of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, the following correspondence and Despatch are published for general information.

Enclosure 2 in No. 23.

From Colonel ALLEN JOHNSON, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 7893 K., Kabul Field Operations, dated Simla, 20th August 1880.)

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 4342 A., dated the 13th August 1880, forwarding a despatch relating to an engagement between the troops under the command of Brigadier-General Burrows and the mutinous infantry of His Highness the Wali of Kandahar.

2. In reply, I am directed to state that the Governor General in Council awaits the promised report from Brigadier-General Burrows, and meanwhile the despatch forwarded with your letter under reply will be published in the "Gazette of India" for general information.

Enclosure 3 in No. 23.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 4342 A., "Kabul," dated Simla, 13th August 1880.)

I AM directed by the Commander-in-Chief to submit to Government Lieutenant-General J. M. Primrose's Despatch, No. 1, dated the 23rd July 1880, reporting an engagement on the 14th idem, six miles from Girishk, on the Herat road, between the troops under the command of Brigadier-General G. R. S. Burrows and the mutinous infantry of His Highness the Wali of Kandahar's forces.

2. Brigadier-General Burrows' report of the action has been called for, and when received will be forwarded.

3. As far as can be judged from the despatch now submitted, it appears to His Excellency that the operations, which resulted in the capture of the guns in the hands of the mutineers, were well carried out.

Enclosure 4 in No. 23.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., Commanding the Kandahar Field Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 1, dated Kandahar, the 23rd July 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report that early on the morning of the 14th instant the infantry regiments of His Highness the Wali of Kandahar (numbering two thousand), who were stationed at Girishk, on the right bank of the Helmand, with the object of opposing the advance of Ayub Khan on Kandahar, mutinied, and, taking with them a battery of artillery, moved off on the Herat road, apparently with the intention of joining Ayub Khan, whose troops were reported to be within two marches of Girishk on that date.

2. The Wali's cavalry, two thousand five hundred strong, accompanied him across the river; but Brigadier-General Burrows reports that the majority were completely out of hand, and went off at once in the direction of Kandahar.

Corps.	Officers.	Sabres.	Rank and File.
E/B, Royal Horse Artillery -	—	—	—
No. 2 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners -	1	—	45
3rd Sind Horse -	4	207	—
3rd Light Cavalry -	6	300	—
Six companies, 66th Foot -	20	—	518
1st Bombay N.I. (Grenadiers) -	8	—	603
30th Bombay, N.I. (Jacob's Rifles) -	8	—	592

3. The force as per margin, under the command of Brigadier-General Burrows, which had been sent out from Kandahar to support the Wali, was then encamped on the left bank of the river.

4. On its being reported that the infantry had mutinied, and were marching off with the guns, Brigadier-General Burrows ordered troops, as per margin,* to cross the Helmand and pursue, leaving two companies of the 66th Regiment, the 1st Grenadiers, and five companies of the 30th Regiment, Native Infantry, to guard the camp.

* E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.
 No. 2 Company, Sappers and Miners.
 3rd Sind Horse } 410 sabres.
 3rd Light Cavalry }
 Four Companies, 66th Regiment.
 Three companies, Jacob's Rifles.

5. The cavalry and horse artillery under Brigadier-General T. Nuttall pushed on at once to feel for the enemy, and hold him in check until the infantry could be brought up.

6. The ground being much cut up by numerous wide and deep canals, difficulty was experienced in getting the artillery along; and Brigadier-General Nuttall, fearing that the enemy might make good his retreat, sent the 3rd Sind Horse, under Colonel J. H. P. Malcomson, rapidly to the front, leaving the 3rd Light Cavalry with the guns.

7. They came upon the mutinous troops about six miles from camp, formed up in a strong position on a rocky ridge, their left rising on the left bank of the Helmand, which was here steep and precipitous. Here they held them for three-quarters of an hour, being unable to charge in consequence of the cramped and enclosed nature of the ground.

8. Before the guns and infantry could get up, the enemy moved off in a direction parallel to the river, but, being followed and threatened by the cavalry, came into position again, and opened fire on them with his artillery.

9. In the meantime four guns of E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, were brought into action, and in the course of half an hour the enemy's guns were silenced and abandoned by their gunners.

10. The cavalry at once charged to seize them, but, on reaching the guns, were received by a heavy musketry fire from a body of infantry who had taken up a position on the reverse slope of the hill from which the guns were firing.

11. They were in consequence slightly withdrawn behind the crest of the hill, and some dismounted men, being formed under cover of the wagons, returned the fire of the enemy until the infantry and guns arrived.

12. On this the enemy immediately retreated, under our artillery and infantry fire, into the valley below, dispersing in all directions, and leaving sixty dead on the field.

13. Brigadier-General Burrows reports that the country was dotted over with villages and intersected by water-courses and walls, rendering pursuit almost hopeless. Moreover, he had a long and difficult march back with the captured guns, the horses of which had been carried off by the enemy, and he was anxious to recross the river by daylight.

14. He therefore recalled his infantry, and sent the cavalry on to secure the baggage, &c., which the enemy were taking off.

15. Brigadier-General Nuttall states that he followed the retreating troops closely, hoping to engage them in some favourable spot; but they at once quitted the bank of the river, leaving the whole of their baggage, ammunition, &c., and retreated through country over which it was impossible for cavalry to act.

16. He therefore abandoned the pursuit, and secured the baggage which the enemy had left behind, consisting of 53 camels, a quantity of small arms, ammunition, accoutrements, and supplies.

17. The battery captured consists of four 6-pounder smooth-bore guns, two 12-pounder howitzers, and three ammunition wagons; but, being unable to move the wagons, they were destroyed, the guns and howitzers being brought safely into camp.

Brigadier-General Burrows reports that the behaviour of all ranks left nothing to be desired, and particularly brings to notice the fact that the men of the 66th Regiment dragged the captured guns over three miles of difficult country until teams could be obtained for them.

18. Our casualties were as follows :—

Corps.	British Troops.									Native Troops.
	Killed.			Wounded.			Missing.			Killed.				Wounded.				Missing.
	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers.	Men.	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers.	Men.	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Savars and Sepoys.	Horses.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Savars and Sepoys.	Horses.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Savars and Sepoys.	Horses.
66th Foot	—	—	—	—	—	4*	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
3rd Sind Horse	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	—	—	3	—	—	—	1
3rd Light Cavalry	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	2

* One since dead.

19. Brigadier-General Burrows informs me that he received every assistance from his Brigade-Major, Captain W. H. M'Math, 66th Regiment; from his Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, Captain T. Harris, 66th Regiment; and from Captain J. R. Slade, Royal Horse Artillery, his Orderly Officer, to whose untiring energy he is indebted for the guns being brought on intact with their carriages into camp.

The cavalry under Brigadier-General Nuttall was well handled; and the determined energy with which the artillery was brought up to the front reflects the highest credit on Major G. F. Blackwood, commanding E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.

20. Brigadier-General Nuttall states his thanks are particularly due to Colonel J. H. P. Malcolmson, C.B., commanding the 3rd Sind Horse; Major A. P. Currie, commanding the 3rd Light Cavalry; Major G. C. Hogg, Poona Horse, Cavalry Brigade Major; Lieutenant J. Monteith, 2nd Sind Horse, Orderly Officer; and Lieutenant G. S. Jones, Royal Artillery (on transport duty), who accompanied Brigadier-General Nuttall as galloper.

21. A sketch by Brevet-Major E. P. Leach, Royal Engineers, illustrating the day's operations is attached.

No. 24.

No. 194 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 24th August 1880.

IN continuation of our Secret Despatch, No. 186, dated 17th August 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

F. P. HAINES.

JOHN STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

WHITLEY STOKES.

JAMES GIBBS.

C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 16th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

REPLIES to letters received last night from Kelat-i-Ghilzai through Chaman, dated 12th August. All well there, and Political Officer will be able to assist Roberts' force with supplies. Some of local Chiefs friendly, and helping to bring in provisions. Letters intercepted from Sartip Nur Muhammad's son, inciting tribes to rise, but no attack on garrison made or anticipated. Communication from Kelat-i-Ghilzai with Kandahar extremely difficult, but road to Chaman comparatively open.

At 4 this morning, outpost at Kach Amadan was attacked by large number of Panizais and Zhobites. Enemy were beaten off and pursued two miles, leaving 80 dead bodies on ground. On our side, no one killed, few sepoy wounded. Telegraphic communications with Kach Amadan interrupted after the fight.

Enclosure 2 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 18th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NEWS from Kandahar of the 12th shows that Ayub Khan has taken up strong position in the immediate vicinity of Kandahar. His army is divided into three divisions, composed respectively of Herati, Kabuli, and Kandahari troops. The last is commanded by Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan. Occasionally a few shots are thrown into the city, but up to the present little harm has been caused by enemy's fire. Several messengers, attempting to convey written messages into and out of the city, have been captured by Ayub's people.

Ayub Khan is reported to have sent one infantry regiment and four guns to Shorawak. An attempt to raise the Aitchakzais against us has been partially unsuccessful.

Further news from Kach Amadan shows that only 48 dead bodies were found outside entrenchments; other dead bodies and wounded men were seen in numbers carried away. The principal leaders in the attack were Shah Jehan, and Syfulla Khan of Zhob, and Faiz Muhammad Khan, Panizai Kakar, the principal instigator in the murder of late Major Showers.

Enclosure 3 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 18th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FOLLOWING from His Highness the Khan, repeated for information :—

Begins: Thanks for your telegram about Kach Amadan and Kandahar. I often told you that these Pathans and Brahuists are first to be punished, and afterwards kindness must be shown. If done otherwise, the result will be what Panizais have done now.

My Havaladar, Shirdad, of my artillery, went to Sherod and returned yesterday, states that Kandahar city is safe. Ayub Khan is outside empty handed. All animals in the city have been removed outside by British officials. Up to date Ayub has done nothing. Am certain he can do nothing. I shall, in future, inform you what news I get from Kandahar. I hope you will do the same, should you hear of any. Ends.

Enclosure 4 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 18th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

INFORMATION received to-day that Ayub's guns and troops from Shorawak have not yet started, but that a son of Sartip Nur Muhammad, and a brother of the Aitchakzai

Sirdar, Fateh Khan, have sent messengers to announce their approach and for the Baretchis to join them.

Mehrulla Khan, Chief of the Marri clan, has sent letters, expressing his regret at the plundering of the railway convoys on the Hurnai line, and saying that it was the work of a noted robber, named Piara, and that, with the aid of the British Government, he will punish him and his gang.

The Khan telegraphs that Azad Khan, of Kharan, has sent his son with 100 sowars to join Ayub at Kandahar. The correctness of this intelligence is, however, somewhat doubtful.

Enclosure 5 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 19th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LATEST news from Kandahar states that ten Tokhi sowars had arrived from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and informed Muhammad Ayub Khan that it was impossible for the tribesmen to attack Kelat-i-Ghilzai without guns, and they begged he would aid them with a few. Muhammad Ayub Khan had not given any definite reply when the messenger left Kandahar.

It is stated that Muhammad Ayub Khan has detailed two guns and 60 sowars to assist Sirdar Ghulam Hassan Khan, Aitchakzai. The guns and sowars are said to have crossed the Jakir Kotal last Friday, on their way to Murghi Chaman. 600 cavalry and 1,200 infantry, under Sirdar Ahmed Khan, are reported to have been directed to proceed to Sherawak, but have not yet started. Muhammad Ayub Khan is fortifying his position near Kandahar.

A reconnoitring party from Kach Amadan reports that there is still a very large gathering of Zhobites and Pathan tribesmen under Shah Jehan in the surrounding hills. Colonel Roome has been ordered to proceed with two mountain guns from Assad Khan in Pishin to disperse them. Captain H. Wylie, political officer, accompanies the force. This may delay General Phayre's advance on Kandahar; but unless the gathering is dispersed, there will be no safety for our line of communication in Pishin, and supplies for Roberts' and Phayre's united forces cannot be forwarded from Gulistan.

Captain Lucas, of the Sind Horse, telegraphed that a large body of Baretchi Pathans are reported to have collected on the Kandahar side of the Gwaja Pass beyond Spin-Tangi.

Enclosure 6 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 20th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

No further news from the garrison in Kandahar, but it is reported that some differences have arisen between Ayub Khan and the tribesmen round Kandahar. The latter are impatient that Ayub should assault the city before the British armies advance to its relief, but Ayub is unwilling to risk the lives of his regular troops.

Emissaries from Abdul Rahman are stated to have arrived in Ayub's camp, with the object of alienating from him his Kabuli troops.

It is further stated that some of Ayub's Herati troops have deserted, but this requires confirmation.

The Baretchi Pathans in Shorawak are said to meditate an attack on Mushki, and the inhabitants are removing their property into the fort.

General Phayre and staff start to-morrow for the Kojak. General Phayre hopes to advance from Chaman on the 31st. A squadron of the 15th Hussars arrived this morning. There is much difficulty in getting letters conveyed to Kandahar on account of the sharp look-out kept by the Ghazis round the city.

Enclosure 7 in No. 24.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FROM Kandahar it is reported that a sortie was lately made by the garrison, in which 40 of Ayub's Herati troops were killed. Our loss not known. Tribal gatherings in the neighbourhood of Toba and Murghi Chaman, to the north of the Kojak Pass, are reported with the object of attacking our line of communication in Pishin, after the advance of General Phayre's army.

A large convoy of sick and wounded arrived this morning from our post at Kach Amadan. To enable it to start, the tribal gathering surrounding the outpost had to be dispersed. In the village of Amadan, a quantity of telegraph wire and a complete soldier's kit were found. The village was burned.

No. 25.

No. 196 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, the 24th August 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of the papers noted in the margin,* on the subject of the difficulty experienced in communicating with the British garrison at Kandahar, and containing some particulars reported by one Syad Paind Shah regarding the engagement of the 27th July at Maiwand and the subsequent movements of Sirdar Ayub Khan

* From Agent, Governor General, Biluchistan, Nos. 1050 and 1051 A.G.G., dated 10th August 1880.

We have, &c.

(Signed)

RIPON.

" F. P. HAINES.

" J. STRACHEY.

" E. B. JOHNSON.

" W. STOKES.

" J. GIBBS.

" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 25.

Substance of a Statement made by Sirdar FAIZ MUHAMMAD, Durani, to Captain CURZON WYLLIE, Assistant Agent, Governor General, on the 9th August 1880.

ABOUT eight days ago I sent a sowar with Sir Robert Sandeman's letter to Colonel St. John at Kandahar. The sowar has returned, and states that on his arrival at Chaman he found the road between Kandahar and Chaman quite unsafe, and in consequence he was unable himself to go beyond Chaman. He, however, succeeded in finding an Aitchakzai Syad at Chaman, whom he sent on with the letter to Kandahar, having promised the man a reward of Rs. 30 for its safe delivery. The Aitchakzai Syad concealed the letter by sewing it inside one of his shoes, but on arrival at Zakir, near Kandahar, he was seized by Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, and, after careful search, the letter was discovered. Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan sent the man to Ayub Khan, who ordered him to be put to death. Fortunately, a Syad of Herat prevailed on Ayub Khan to spare his life and allow him to return to his home. The Aitchakzai messenger was thus enabled to escape back to Chaman, but without delivering the letter to Colonel St. John. The same messenger also carried a letter for Colonel St. John from the Officer commanding at Chaman; this was likewise seized. Ayub Khan arrived at Kandahar five days ago, but no fight has yet taken place between his force and the British. Ayub Khan is preparing ladders to escalate the city wall.

Enclosure 2 in No. 25.

No. 1051, A.G.G., dated Quetta, 10th August 1880.

From Major Sir Robert SANDEMAN, K.C.S.I., Agent, Governor General, Biluchistan, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

THE accompanying translation of a letter from Sirdar Syad Paind Shah, late Governor of Pishin, is forwarded for the information of the Government of India in the Foreign Department.

Translation of a letter from Syad Paind Shah, late Governor of Pishin, to Major Sir Robert Sandeman, dated 7th August 1880.

The three letters for Colonel St. John I sent by three different messengers; my son, Muhammad Akbar, also accompanied the messengers. My son arrived near Kandahar on Monday, and himself took the letters towards the city for delivery. When he reached the Shikarpuri gate he found that some British infantry had come out to destroy the walls in front of the gate, and that the horses of the garrison had been sent to graze on the Chaman. The tribesmen attacked and compelled the British infantry and horses to retire into the city, and again closed the gate. My son three or four times wandered round the city wall, but could find no way of getting into the city. He tried to get over the wall, but failed, as the British soldiers prepared to fire at him. My son was therefore obliged to return to the village of Zarrak on this side of the Zakar hills, and here he succeeded in finding a native of the place to send with the three letters to the city. Until Tuesday my son heard no tidings of his messenger, so on Wednesday he went himself to find out where he was. On arrival at Zakir he heard that the man had been taken prisoner by Ayub Khan's people, and that the letters had been seized; he also heard that two women and ten or fifteen other men had been captured with letters they were carrying to or from Kandahar. The tribesmen had collected in force, and had surrounded the town, and in every village and on every road tribesmen were stationed to seize messengers and prevent letters reaching the British Officers in Kandahar.

At 10 o'clock on Thursday Ayub Khan and his regular army arrived at Chumni. His troops occupied the ground between Chumni and Goshkhana. The tribesmen of Herat, Jaldak, Maruf, and Registan have entered the outskirts of the city. The inhabitants of the neighbouring villages are suffering great oppression at the hands of the regular and tribal forces, as it is the nature of the Pathans to be cruel. No justice is done to the people by Ayub Khan. In fact, he dare not ask any explanation from his followers.

The particulars of the Khushk-i-Nakhud fight are as follows:—

The Herati troops first attacked the British force, but were repulsed. Then the Kabuli and Kandahari regiments attacked, and two whole Kandahari regiments, which were under the command of Muhammad Kabir and Muhammad Anwar, were destroyed, including their two commanders. Ayub Khan has made Khushdil, son of Shahgasi Sherdil Khan, a prisoner, because of the defeat of the Herati force, of which he was the commandant. After the British defeat at Khushk-i-Nakhud, 12 British soldiers missed their way, and arrived at Maiwand, where the sons of Syad Salaam carefully sheltered them, and sent them on the next day towards Kandahar. On the road these 12 men were seized and taken to Ayub Khan, who made them prisoners. Ayub Khan has put one son of Syad Salaam to death, and made prisoners of two of his other sons, who were in the village of Kotwal. He has also destroyed their homes, because they gave refuge to the 12 British fugitives. Ayub Khan has made Sirbiland Khan, Atchakzai, and his son, Ghulam Nabi, prisoners.

Sirdar Sher Ali (the Wali), his son, and nephew are with the British officers in the Kandahar citadel. All the Afghans have been turned out of the city, but their property is permitted to remain there. Only Parsiwans and Hindus are allowed to live in the town. The inhabitants of Mel, Kabat, and Kadni, as well as the Ashaizais, Kakozais, and Alazais are collected near Chaman intending to attack it.

My son left Kandahar at 2 o'clock on Thursday, i.e., four hours after Ayub Khan had reached Chunni, and he arrived here yesterday.

No. 26.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 28TH AUGUST 1880. (Extract.)

23rd August.—The Deputy Quartermaster-General, Sukkur, reports that 5/8th, Royal Artillery, with two guns for E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, and the last party of the 63rd Foot, left that place on the 21st for Sibi, followed on the 22nd by H/1st, Royal Artillery, and a detachment of signallers.

The following reports have been received from the Officer commanding at Jacobabad:—

I. Dated the 22nd.—“5/8th, Royal Artillery, division for E/B, and details of 63rd and 4th Bengal Native Infantry, passed through for Sibi last night.”

II. Dated the 23rd.—“H/1st, Royal Artillery, 40 military signallers and the 13th Bombay Native Infantry passed through for Sibi last night.”

24th August.—The Deputy Quartermaster-General at Sukkur telegraphs as follows on the 24th:—

“Last half A/4th, Royal Artillery, left to-day. Programme here finished, except 17th Native Infantry a week hence. The 78th commence move to-day from Karachi.”

25th August.—The Officer commanding at Jacobabad reports that the remaining half of A/4th, Royal Artillery, passed through that place for Sibi on the 24th.

The following messages have been received from Major-General Phayre, from Kila Abdulla:—

I. Dated the 24th.—“I have just received the following from General Henderson, Quetta:—Message begins: ‘Officer commanding Jacobabad telegraphs as follows,—‘Officer commanding Pulaji outpost reports gathering of 1,500 Marris at Much, about sixteen miles east of Mittri. Officer commanding Lehri outpost reports number of marauders collecting daily in the village, and also a large gathering of Marris at Kahan. Have reported this to political authorities. More troops urgently required here. I have telegraphed this message to Deputy Quartermaster-General, Sukkur, and Quartermaster-General, Poona. Major Colvin telegraphed me a very strong regiment, Bengal Native Infantry, reaches Sibi to-morrow. Please instruct me.’ Message ends. I have communicated this to Sir Robert Sandeman. I have replied to General Henderson that he is on no account to interfere with destination of troops for Kandahar force here, and that troops for Jacobabad should be settled under your orders.

II. On the 24th.—“Obliged to open out to the front and right flank from Chaman to get water-supply for Gatai, forage and grain for cavalry, and to re-establish the telegraph line and fortify posts, which I learn from spies have not been so much damaged as at first reported. Two field columns leave Chaman, 26th instant, to effect this. Right column (two mountain guns, one company Sappers, two regiments Native cavalry, 300 rifles Beluch Battalion) proceeds to Murgha, Chaman, Akbar Khan, and that vicinity. Left column (two mountain guns, one company Sappers, 230 rifles, 16th Native Infantry) to Gatai. Colonel Lindsay, with his Engineer Officers, and Major Westmacott accompany right column, and, after arranging for Gatai, will reconnoitre onwards. I hope to be able to draw supplies from the Mirzai villages, Kalani Valley, on to our old fortified posts, which will be restored as quickly as I can get Native infantry to the front to garrison them. The transport cattle from Sighi to Kojak get no grain and only 30 lbs. forage."

III. Dated the 24th.—"Following cipher letter just received from General Primrose. Begins: 'Kandahar, 21st August. No news received from you since your cipher of 30th July. On 16th we attacked village Deh Khwaja, and got through it, but, finding it strongly occupied and reinforced by contingent from villages, had to retire to fortress. Our losses were General Brooke, who commanded assault; Cruickshank, Royal Engineers; Trench and Stayner, 19th Native Infantry; Wood and Marsh, 7th Fusiliers; Newport, 28th; and Rev. Gordon, killed. Vandeleur and Conolly, 7th; Wood, Transport; Nimmo, 28th; Shewell, Commissariat; and Malcolmson, Sind Horse, wounded; all latter doing well. Enemy's loss heavy. Our cavalry made two charges, and cut up good many. Supply bhusa running short; everything else ample. Ayub's main position faces east, and is between high hills on west and Arghandab, covered by canals in front. Some regular infantry in villages east and south of city, supported by large contingents of ghazis; Durani cavalry picquets on Mandi Hissar and Kushab roads; on picquet hill, two Armstrong 12-pounders; head-quarters garden, one of our captured guns; in front Shikarpur gate, one 12-pounder howitzer; Deh-Khwaja, one 6-pounder. Ayub making indefinite overtures Walida Bibi Howa.' I learn from another source that General Brooke was killed while trying to carry off Cruickshank when wounded."

The officers referred to in the preceding message are:—

Killed.

Brigadier-General Henry Francis Brooke, h.p. 109th Foot.
 Captain George Macdonald Cruickshank, Royal Engineers.
 Second Lieutenant Frederick Phillip Forster Wood, 7th Fusiliers.
 Second Lieutenant Everard Swaine Marsh, 7th Fusiliers.
 Major Richard John Le Poer Trench, General List, Bombay Infantry; Wing Commander, 19th Bombay Native Infantry.
 Lieutenant Francis Charles Stayner, Bombay Staff Corps; Wing Officer and Officiating Adjutant, 19th Bombay Native Infantry.
 Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel William Henry Newport, Bombay Staff Corps; Second in Command, 28th Bombay Native Infantry.
 The Reverend Mr. G. M. Gordon was not in the service; he belonged to the Church Missionary Society.

Wounded.

Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Mark Shewell, Bombay Staff Corps; Principal Commissariat Officer in Southern Afghanistan.
 Colonel John Henry Porter Malcolmson, C.B., Bombay Staff Corps; Commandant, Sind Horse.
 Lieutenant Hastings St. Leger Wood, 15th Foot, Transport Officer.
 Major Thomas Burton Vandeleur, 7th Fusiliers.
 Captain William Conolly, 7th Fusiliers.
 Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Rose Nimmo, Bombay Staff Corps; Commandant, 28th Bombay Native Infantry.

26th August.—The following message has been received in the Foreign Department from Captain Martelli, Assistant Agent, Governor General, Jacobabad:—

"No truth in reports of Marri raids in Sibi and Kachi plain. Marris are collecting in large numbers at Kahan; reason not known; but it is generally believed that Chiefs are endeavouring to make amends for raids on convoy. Native officer in command of outpost at Lehri reports rumours of small gatherings of Marris and Mach; but this has not been corroborated."

With reference to the above and to the previous reports of raids, the Bombay Government have been informed that if they think it desirable they may add another regiment of Native Infantry to the garrison of Sind.

27th August.—The Officer commanding Jacobabad telegraphs on the 27th:—

"205 men, 78th Highlanders, passed through for Sibi last night."

Major-General Phayre reports from Chaman on the 26th:—

"Received to-day, under date 23rd instant, from General Primrose, duplicate of letter of 21st, and several telegrams of officers of garrison to their friends, all of which have been despatched. The want of grain and forage throughout Pishin is most serious; the usual water springs have partly dried up in consequence of continued drought. Column for Aktar Khan leave Chaman this evening. I hope thereby to feed Cavalry Brigade and stock Gatal with grain and forage, and after that Dabrai also."

28th August.—Sir Robert Sandeman telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 26th:—

"No further news from Kandahar, but, as far as is known, no more fighting has taken place since the sortie on the 16th.

"A partial rising of the Khan's troops occurred last night at Khelat. The mutineers did little damage, and went off, numbering about 144, it is believed, taking the Chappar Ziarat road to Shorawak, to join the army of Ayub Khan at Kandahar. Have arranged with General Phayre to detach 400 of Her Majesty's 78th Highlanders, now en route from Sibi, to remain at Khelat for a time and restore confidence through the country. Mr. Duke accompanies as Political Officer.

"General Phayre now leaving for Chaman. Captain Curzon Wyllie left Quetta this morning for Kandahar."

General Phayre reports as follows from Chaman on the 27th:—

"In consequence of the reported mutiny of the troops of His Highness the Khan of Khelat, I have, at Agent Governor General's urgent request, directed half battalion, 78th Highlanders, to proceed to Khelat from Darwaza, under arrangements made by Sir Robert Sandeman, in communication with General Henderson, it being highly probable that these troops (about one thousand strong) will excite Shorawak Pathans to attack Gulistan and that part of our communication. I have ordered a company of 2/15th Foot to garrison Gulistan Fort, and another company Kila Abdulla Fort, both of these places being threatened by tribal attacks for some time past."

The Officer commanding Jacobabad reports on the 28th:—

"200 men, 78th, passed through for Sibi last night."

The following telegram, dated the 24th, has been addressed by the Punjab Government to Sir Robert Sandeman:—

"Commissioner, Derajat, telegraphs 20th, that Marris, after plundering Katchi and Sibi, assembled at Vitakri and decided to plunder Katchi again in force, for which purpose they left on 17th. Commissioner fears they may corrupt Bugtis and other tribes. Telegram of 24th reports Marris moving about restlessly in direction of Sind, Katchi, and Bolan. One report mentioned their retirement to hilly country. Precautions have been taken along Dera Ghazi border."

No. 27.

No. 201 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 31st August 1880.

In continuation of our Despatch, No. 194, dated 24th August 1880, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Afghanistan.

We have the honour to be,

My Lord Marquis,

Your Lordship's most obedient and humble servants,

(Signed)

RIPON.

" F. P. HAINES.

" JOHN STRACHEY.

" E. B. JOHNSON.

" WHITLEY STOKES.

" JAMES GIBBS.

" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 23rd August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE news of the desertion of Ayub's Herati troops is not confirmed. The Khan has received a second letter from Ayub, which he is sending to the Agent, Governor General.

From Gulistan report received that some of Ayub's sowars are in Shorawak trying to stir up the people. Sirdar Hyder Khan, Aitchakzai, is said to be at Dangar Kach near the Bogra Pass, on the north side of the Amran range, with four of Ayub's guns.

All quiet at Kach Amadan and in the Marri country.

The 15th Hussars have arrived, and march towards the Kojak Pass to-morrow.

The Agent, Governor General, leaves Quetta for Chaman on the 25th. General Phayre hopes to advance from Chaman on the 30th.

Enclosure 2 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th August 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 21st. Sortie took place, 16th, against village on east face of city; has secured us from further molestation on that side, but loss very heavy. Brigadier-General Brooke, Captain Cruickshank, R.E., Colonel Newport, 28th, Major Trench and Lieutenant Stayner, 19th, Lieutenants Marsh and Wood, Fusiliers, and Rev. Mr. Gordon, killed. Wounded,—Colonel Nimmo, 28th, Major Vandeleur, 7th, and Lieutenant Wood, Transport, all severely; Colonels Malcolmson and Shewell. Casualties among men about 180. Lieutenant Maclaine, R.H.A., reported missing after Maiwand, prisoner in Ayub's hands, but well treated. Enemy throws a few shells into city occasionally, and keeps up fire on ramparts from sharpshooters with captured rifles, but does little harm. Investment entirely trusted to Kandahari troops and ghazis, Kabulis being encamped round Ayub, three miles off on Herat road. Ayub has about 5,000 regular infantry, 3,000 cavalry, 37 guns; number of ghazis uncertain and fluctuating, may amount to 10,000, of whom one third have fire arms. Meat and firewood scarce in city; other things plentiful; weather cooler; general health good.

Enclosure 2 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th August 1880.

From Sir ROBERT SANDEMAN, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

A letter from Colonel Tanner to my address was received this morning by Officer, Chaman. Telegraphed to him to open it and wire its contents, which was done. They are as follows:—

Contents begin:—Dated Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 20th August. My dear Sandeman. Just one line to say I have heard from General Roberts to-day, he is four marches off, and will be here on the 24th. I received your letter dated 10th, and replied to it the same day. We are all well, and collecting supplies for Roberts, and on the road towards Kandahar. We are well off for supplies here. Roberts expects to be near Kandahar on the 29th. Ends.

Enclosure 3 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 24th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

ALL quiet in Pishin, Quetta, and Bolan Pass.

Letter from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, dated 20th, reports that Roberts was expected there on 24th. All well with him and at Kelat-i-Ghilzai. Supplies being collected abundantly. From Chaman it is stated that 100 of Ayub's sowars have been foraging in the direction of Abdul Rahman. A force with six guns sent by Ayub across Zakurd Kotal to Abdulla Karez, with the object of attacking Chaman, had been recalled by Ayub, owing to a sortie having been made by the Kandahar garrison.

Enclosure 4 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YESTERDAY, at noon, I received a telegram from His Highness the Khan, asking eagerly for news from Kandahar, and saying that some of his Pathan sepoy had returned from leave that day and spread a report that the English had again been defeated before Kandahar, and Muhammad Ayub Khan had either taken, or was about to take, the city. I sent a reassuring reply to the Khan, who again telegraphed that there was much excitement in Kelat.

About 11 last night Mr. Dempster reported to me that the Khan's guard at the Telegraph Office had advised the signaller to fly, as the Khan's troops had broken into open mutiny, and firing was going on in Kelat. A munshi of the Khan with 14 sowars shortly afterwards arrived at the Telegraph Office, and the signaller was able to remain.

I sent a message to the Khan to say that if he required help in troops to let me know at once, and I would apply to the British Government for them.

This morning the Khan has sent me the following message:—

Begins: Your telegram offering me assistance of British troops. As soon as I require them, I shall certainly ask you. As soon as mutineers heard news of Kandahar they came and asked me to rise and fight against English; if not, that they would rise against me. I, being a sincere ally of the British Government, gave them a decided reply that I would not. Some of these sepoy were from the Nurwai and some from the Shanawazi regiments, and amount in all to about two hundred men. They mutinied last night about 10 o'clock, broke open the jail, and carried away 30 prisoners, taking the Chapar Zairat road. No other damage done. If they do any mischief on the road to-day, I will inform you. I have my other troops ready and have sent my Brahui sowas after the mutineers. Am expecting return of these sowars. The mutinous sepoy are residents of the British district of Pishin and of Kandahar. If you can send a force to intercept them, I shall be glad. Message ends.

I have warned the Brahui tribes of what has occurred, and any stragglers will be seized, but the mutineers will certainly make for Shorawak, via Mungrocher, and thence to Kandahar.

I have informed General Phayre, and recommended a wing of the 78th Highlanders being sent to Kelat for a time to restore confidence to the country. Major Reynolds would accompany the troops. There is good barrack accommodation at a considerable distance from the town. I am certain the Khan would be glad were this arrangement carried out. The troops could be easily fed at Kelat.

Enclosure 5 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FOLLOWING from Extra Assistant Commissioner, Rai Hittu Ram, dated Sibi, 25th:—

Message begins: Dooroo Langhani's nephew, arrived with Sirdar Mihrulla Khan Marri's share of spoil, taken from railway convoy on 8th, informs that about 300 Marri are assembling opposite Thalli with intention of attacking that place and Mall to-morrow. If permitted, I can collect double their number of Khajaks and Pannis, and proceed to Mall and Thalli for three days to prevent this, and cause them to disperse. And messenger also informs that Sirdar Mihrulla Khan is going to Katmundai. Can I go and meet him at Thalli? If proposed arrangements for collecting Khajaks and Pannis are sanctioned, I shall have to feed them as long as they are out with me. Message ends.

I have replied as follows:—

Message begins: Clear the line. Your telegram, dated this evening, informing me of intended raid by Marris on Thalli and Mall. I entirely approve of your proposals and sanction them. Collect Khajaks and Pammis and go at once to Thalli and Mall. I sanction your feeding the tribes. Report early the result of your proceedings. I am glad the Sirdar of the Marris is to meet you. Help him in every way, and give him my salaams. Message ends.

Enclosure 6 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th August 1880.

From Lieutenant-Colonel ST. JOHN, Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR. No communication from Government has reached us since 28th, and only one from Wylie, Pishin, dated 6th. Kelat all well; and surrounding country clear on 12th. Ghazis reported diminishing in numbers. No Ghilzais have joined, and few Chiefs of rank from outlying districts. Ayub has sent to Herat for ammunition, which may arrive 12 to 15 days hence. Meat and firewood scarce in city. Other necessities plentiful.

Enclosure 7 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

INFORMATION received late last night from the chief Sirdar of the Marris that the sections of the clan, who plundered the railway convoy, are again meditating mischief, and intended making a raid in the direction of Thalli or Mall. The Chief at same time sent to Sibi the portion of the plunder set aside for him as Chief of the clan, taken from the railway convoy. Rai Hittu Ram started with a tribal gathering of the Sibi clans to meet the Marris, and, if possible, disperse them. Sirdar Mihrulla and Rai Hittu Ram hoped to meet at Thalli. A troop of cavalry has also gone to Mall from Sibi.

No further news from Kandahar, but, as far as is known, no more fighting has taken place since the sortie on the 16th.

A partial rising of the Khan's troops occurred last night at Kelat. The mutineers did little damage and went off, numbering about 144, it is believed, taking the Chappar Ziarat road to Shorawak to join the army of Ayub Khan at Kandahar. Have arranged with General Phayre to detach 400 of Her Majesty's 78th Highlanders now en route from Sibi to remain at Kelat for a time and restore confidence through the country. Mr. Duke accompanies as political officer.

General Phayre now leaving for Chaman. Captain Curzon Wyllie left Quetta this morning for Kandahar.

Enclosure 8 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 26th August 1880.

From ASSISTANT AGENT, Governor General, Jacobabad, to FOREIGN, Simla.

MARRIS are gathering at Sherinal near Thalli, with the object, it is believed, of making a raid. It is not yet ascertained what direction they intend taking.

Enclosure 9 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received information that Ayub Khan has withdrawn his army from the positions taken up in front of Kandahar, and has retired to Singiri, eight miles east of Kandahar. Roberts arrived at Kelat-i-Ghilzai on the 24th. I have received letters from Colonel Tanner and Captain Yate, dated Kelat-i-Ghilzai, the 19th. They go to you to-day in original. The troops sent to Kach Amadan with Captain Henry Wylie have returned to the Kojak after settling that part of the country. All quiet there again. Shah Jahan has returned with his people to Khob.

Enclosure 10 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram asking my opinion of nature of Marri gathering at Kahan. I believe council of Chiefs assembled at Kahan at Sirdar Mihrulla's request, who asked their assistance to aid him to force raiders to return plundered railway property. What reply the Chiefs gave Sirdar Mihrulla I do not know for certain, but will ascertain shortly. The Sirdar has sent into Sibi 37 railway transport bullocks, and is believed now to be on his way to meet Rai Hittu Ram at Thalli. I will telegraph further news shortly. I think it would save Government much possible anxiety were the news telegraphed direct as hitherto about Marri movements from Quetta, as I am nearer to the Marris than any other officer, and directly in communication with the Sirdar. I do not think the clan as a body contemplate going against the Government. It is only the sections to which the robbers belong who plundered the railway convoy who are giving trouble.

Enclosure 11 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

INFORMATION received of arrival of General Roberts at Kelat-i-Ghilzai on morning, 24th. Ayub has consequently raised siege of Kandahar, and retired eight miles from city, occupying position at Sangiri on Herat and Zamindawar roads. He is said to be short of ammunition, and to have sent for more to Herat, but it cannot arrive for 15 or 16 days. His troops have abandoned Mandi Hissar, and all the country south and east and north-east of Kandahar, as well as Kojak line.

General Phayre reached Chaman this morning, and General Wilkinson with cavalry brigade arrived Killa Abdulla.

All quiet at Kelat. Khan is arranging carriage for wing, 78th, from Dasht.

Captain Henry Wylie reports tribal gathering on Pishin frontier and at Kach Amadan reduced to 300 robbers.

Enclosure 12 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, No. 2942 E.P., dated 28th August 1880.

From FOREIGN, Simla, to AGENT, Governor General, Quetta.

YOURS 26th. Please telegraph to Khan of Kelat that Viceroy is gratified to learn that the mutiny of a portion of Khan's troops had no serious consequences, and that Khan may be assured of the readiness of the Government to afford him assistance and support. Have British troops been actually detached to Kelat?

Enclosure 13 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 28th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

COLLECTION of Aitchakzais and other bad characters still reported at Toba, acting under orders of Sultan Khan and Muhammad Hassan, brother and son of Sirdar Fattah Khan. Their intention is to attack line of communication between Chaman and Quetta; and Shorawak people, who have been joined by Khan's mutinous sepoys, are reported to be similarly inclined. Taking into consideration that General Roberts is now close on Kandahar, I have asked General Phayre before marching from Chaman to place a moveable column at my disposal for employment in Pishin, and to secure the country between this and Chaman against local disturbances. Information has been received from Mungocher that the Kelat mutineers have looted the villages of Chappar Ziarat and Goruk, and Naib Abdul Latif, with two guns and 500 men, was in pursuit of the rebels.

Enclosure 19 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

YOUR telegram regarding despatch of British troops to Kelat. No troops available as yet; 500 are under orders to go to Kelat, and march from Siriah.

Enclosure 20 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th August 1880.

From General ROBERTS to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla.

KELAT-I-GHILZAI, 23rd August. Clear the line. The force under my command arrived here this morning. Authorities at Kandahar having stated, on the 17th instant, that they have abundant supplies, and can make forage last until 1st September, I halt to-morrow to rest troops, and more especially the transport animals and camp-followers. The force left Ghazni on the 16th, and has marched 126 miles during the last eight days. The troops are in good health and spirits. From this purpose moving by regular stages so that the men may arrive fresh at Kandahar. I hope to be in heliographic communication with Kandahar from Robat, distant 20 miles, on the 29th. If General Phayre reaches Taktipul I should also hope to communicate with him, and arrange a combined movement on Kandahar. I am taking the Kelat-i-Ghilzai garrison with me, making the fort over to Muhammad Sadik Khan, a Tokhi chief, who had charge of the place when we arrived in 1879. The present Governor, Sirdar Shirindil Khan, refuses to remain. We have met with no opposition during the march, and have been able to make satisfactory arrangements for supplies, especially forage which at this season is plentiful. The cavalry horses and artillery mules are in excellent order. Our casualties to date are, 1 soldier, 72nd Highlanders; 1 sepoy, 23rd Pioneers; 1, 2nd Sikhs; 2 sepoys, 3rd Sikhs; dead—1 sepoy, 4th Goorkhas; 2 sepoys, 24th Punjab Native Infantry; duffadar, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, missing; 6 camp followers dead, 5 missing. The missing men have, I fear, been murdered. I telegraphed from Ghazni on 13th, and from Oba Karez on the 18th August.

Enclosure 21 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th August 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kelat-i-Ghilzai, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KELAT-I-GHILZAI, 24th August. The force under my command halts here to-day, and continues march to-morrow, reaching Robat, 20 miles from Kandahar on the 29th.

Latest date from General Phayre is 12th August. I am sending messengers to him daily now, and keeping him fully informed of our movements.

From Kandahar a letter has been received from Officer commanding here, written by Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster-General, on the 17th instant. It states, yesterday morning, hoping to pull down the loop-holed walls facing the Kabul and Bar Duranee gates, we made a sortie with 300 cavalry and 800 infantry, furnished by 7th Fusiliers, 19th and 28th Native Infantry. The result was not satisfactory. The village was found to be strongly held and honeycombed with loopholes. Our infantry managed to push through, but could not effect a hold, though the supports of the enemy got a good slating from our cavalry and our infantry and artillery fire. We had to get back to the walls under a heavy fire from their loopholes, and our losses, in Officers more especially, were pretty heavy. Wood, Marsh, 7th Fusiliers; Trench and Stainer, 19th; Newport, 28th, with Padre Gordon, General Brooke, and Cruickshank of the Engineers, were killed; Vandeleur, 7th Fusiliers, severely, Nimmo, 28th, severely, Shewell, Commissariat, slightly, Conolly, 7th Fusiliers, slightly, Malcolmson, slightly wounded. The enemy must, however, have seen that we still have some fighting power in us, and we hear that the regular regiments under Ayub would not turn out to reinforce, so that an effect has been produced, and the morale of the troops here is still good. A letter from Colonel St. John, of same date, states that 200 soldiers were killed and wounded during the sortie.

I have sent General Phayre an estimate of our daily requirements in food, and have urged him to have sufficient quantity of tea, sugar, and rum, &c., pushed on to Kandahar, unless he is satisfied that there is enough there already. Grain must be procured locally, but I fear there will be considerable difficulty in doing this within any reasonable distance of Kandahar, as I understand that Ayub Khan's army has requisitioned that part of the country freely.

Boots will shortly be required by most of the British and by Native soldiers of this force. I hope that several thousand pairs will be sent to Kandahar without delay; also shoes for the 92nd Highlanders, and great coats for that regiment. They have only 100 left fit to be worn; these used for night duties.

Enclosure 22 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th August 1880.

From Major HASTINGS, Jaldak, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

DATED Jaldak, 25th August. Reached Kelat-i-Ghilzai on 23rd August; halted there for one day, and marched towards Kandahar to-day, taking the Kelat-i-Ghilzai garrison with us. Muhammad Sadik Khan, one of the Tokhi Chiefs has been left in charge of the fort. Have heard that Muhammad Aslam intends attacking Muhammad Sadik. No opposition up to present. Country quiet.

Many people openly recognize Abdul Rahman as Amir, but they are anxiously watching events at Kandahar. Opinions are divided as to what Ayub will do. I believe he will be compelled to fight.

You will have heard about the late sortie from Kandahar, in which so many were killed and wounded. Object of sortie not yet known.

Jawar plentiful, but I do not know what we shall do for supplies and forage on our arrival at Kandahar, as everything is said to have been taken by Ayub's army.

Letter sent to-day to Kandahar by hand of messenger who has managed to get in twice before. Letters sent every day since our arrival at Kelat-i-Ghilzai to Chaman.

Enclosure 23 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th August 1880.

From Captain H. WYLIE, Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FOLLOWING just received from St. John,—Message begins:—

Kandahar, 25th. Ayub Khan has completely abandoned investment and withdrawn his whole force to a position on the Argandab, due north of city. News of the approach of Kabul force known to have reached his camp, where it is reported that it was yesterday at Tirandaz.

Nothing heard of Quetta force since Wylie's letter of 6th, but enemy's cavalry on Quetta road appear to have returned.

Lieutenant MacLaine still a prisoner in Ayub's camp. Continued efforts being made to obtain his release.

This morning I visited village, scene of action of 16th with Taj Muhammad Sistani horse, and found 40 bodies of our men. Colonel Newport and Captain Cruickshank recognized. All will be buried this afternoon. Wounded doing very well. Message ends.

Enclosure 24 in No. 27.

TELEGRAM, dated 30th August 1880.

From Captain H. WYLIE, Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FOLLOWING from St. John,—Message begins :—

Kandahar, 26th. Yesterday afternoon a working party buried bodies of officers and men killed on 16th. General Brooke, Colonel Newport, and Captain Cruickshank among them. Major Vandeleur, 7th Fusiliers, died of wounds received on 16th.

A report is current outside city that Musa Khan is in Ayub's camp, but I do not believe it. Reports of an action, near Chaman, are reaching us, but no news of advance of reinforcements from that direction.

Kabul force said to have been yesterday at Khel-i-Akhoond, but this is improbable. I do not expect them before 31st. Latest news from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 12th; from Chaman, 6th.

From Ayub's camp it is reported that he wished to retreat to Girisk, but was prevented by Kabuli troops.

A foraging party brought in large quantity of fodder yesterday. Message ends.

No. 28.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 4TH SEPTEMBER 1880. (Extract.)

29th August.—Brigadier-General Henderson telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 29th :—

“ Report from Sibi this morning that Marris, about 600 strong, came out of hills in direction of Mal. Cavalry at Mal drove them back, and the troops from Thalli met them and killed four men, capturing four mares and recovering part of the cattle they had looted from Mal.”

30th August.—Brigadier-General Henderson reports as follows from Quetta :—

I. On the 29th.—“ The Officer commanding at Kach reports another gathering of Zhob people within forty miles. I propose to send two mountain guns to Kach when I have infantry available to escort them. Telegraph communication with General Phayre interrupted to-day between Gulistan and Kila Abdulla.”

II. On the 30th.—“ Siege of Kandahar reported raised; Ayub fifteen miles off in Argandab valley; Roberts reported close. Above news dated 26th instant.”

Major-General Phayre reports as follows from Chaman on the 30th :—

“ Letter of 26th just received from Kandahar. Ayub had withdrawn from investment of city to bank of Argandab at Baba-Wali. All well, and looking for General Roberts and my forces. Most urgently advocates re-establishing of posts and establishment of a transport train. Both of these very important measures am carrying out as far as the great difficulties I have to encounter from want of forage and grain and from desertion of transport followers will admit of. Gatai post already re-established, and Dabrai will be so to-morrow; and then I shall be able to clear Takht-i-Pul Kotal. A number of private letters received and forwarded.”

31st August.—Colonel St. John telegraphs as follows from Kandahar (through Chaman) on the 26th :—

“ Siege being practically raised, country quieting down, and Ayub Khan's force reduced to regulars and a small number of ghazis, is it worth while, in face of certain difficulties of supplies, that Phayre should bring more than a brigade of all arms with him?”

The following telegram, dated Quetta, the 28th, has been received from Sir Robert Sandeman:—

“The following telegram I have to-day sent to General Phayre to Chaman:— Begins,—‘I desire to continue my telegram of yesterday, recommending that a moveable column for Pishin should be formed as soon as it can be managed. To-day I have received fresh news confirming information already received that there is a considerable collection of Achakzais and bad characters on Toba, acting together under the orders of Sultan Khan. Their plan is to take the field directly your troops have advanced from Chaman towards Kandahar. They intend to attack our lines of communication between Kojak and Quetta, and the villages in Pishin which have aided us with supplies. It is also reported that the Shorawak people have similar intentions, and that 150 of the Khan’s mutinous sepoys have gone there. I earnestly bring the matter to your notice, and trust you will secure the safety of Pishin by placing a moveable column at my disposal to protect the country before you march for Kandahar. It will be a very serious matter if any of the Brahui convoys are attacked when conveying food to Kila Abdulla. Further, Wylie informs me that the state of the transport animals is bad, owing to the paucity of grain and forage, which are being supplied from Pishin to date wholly by political officers. He is very anxious that no opportunity for raiding in Pishin should be given; and has brought this matter urgently to my notice.’—Ends.

“I repeat the foregoing to Government of India for information, because I understand Phayre is moving his entire force on Kandahar; and surely, owing to the rapid advance of Roberts, the necessity for this no longer exists. It will increase the supply difficulty greatly, that is to say, if the supply of food to the entire Kandahar army, as I understand is the case, is dependent on the safety of the lines of communication from Sibi to Quetta, and thence to Chaman through the Kojak Pass.”

The Officer commanding at Jacobabad telegraphs on the 29th:—

“200 men 78th, one European Officer and 33 Native gunners of No. 1 Mountain Battery, with two 9-pounder guns and eight drivers of 5/8th Royal Artillery, passed through Sibi last night.”

The following telegrams, dated the 30th, have been received from Major-General Phayre, from Chaman:—

I. “Just received letter from Roberts, dated Khelat-i-Ghilzai, 24th, having crossed my letter to him of 29th. Khelat-i-Ghilzai garrison had joined him. He left for Kandahar by ordinary marches on 25th; to-day he is at Robat, and will try and communicate with me by heliograph to top of Kojak; to-morrow he will be at Momand and attack any force opposing his entry into Kandahar on 31st. By this time he has, I hope, learnt my position, and famine-stricken state of country through which I have to march. His march most successful in every way; has supplies to 8th September. My advanced troops at Aktar Khan and Gatai doing best to collect forage and grain. Had to blow down towers of Abas Saïad’s, for he was preventing that group of villages helping us; this should cause grain and forage to flow into Dabrai and Gatai. Have ordered field column to Shah Passang and Dari river route, so as to secure as plentiful a supply of wood, water, and forage as possible. My advanced force forms at Gatai on 30th; we shall then push on as fast as weakly state of transport animals will admit. Estimate of daily requirements Roberts’ force and Khelat-i-Ghilzai garrison (Europeans 3,200, Natives 9,000, horses 2,300, transport—1,590 mules, ponies 5,926, camels 400, donkeys 400),—meat 5,000 lbs., bread stuff 49 maunds, vegetables 4,000 lbs., rice 900 lbs., salt 33 lbs., sugar 600 lbs., tea 150 lbs., rum 80 gallons, atta 320 maunds, dhall 51½ maunds, ghee 19¼ maunds, salt 8½ maunds, grain 800 maunds.”

II. “Your telegram of yesterday about moveable column for Pishin. Before receipt of Sir Robert Sandeman’s telegram I had issued orders for column for Pishin under General Walker, who is also appointed to command posts between Sighi and Chaman. Gulistan and Kila Abdulla being strongly held by detachments of mountain guns, European detachment and Native Infantry with Cavalry. But I submit for His Excellency’s consideration that the intelligence received from General Roberts yesterday and that given by Primrose to-day, that Ayub Khan had withdrawn his force to the Argandab, four or five miles north-west of Kandahar, and that the whole country from this to Kandahar and around that city for a radius of fifteen or twenty miles has been denuded of all supplies, renders it matter for immediate and serious consideration whether, under the circumstances, I should advance more of my troops from Chaman towards Kandahar than will be sufficient to re-establish and stock with provisions the posts en route, re-establish the telegraph and clear Takt-i-Púl Kotal of the tribal gatherings which still appear to be hovering about it. One brigade of Infantry, with some Native Cavalry, mountain guns and the field batteries will, I think, be sufficient for this, setting free the 15th Hussars and wing of 2/15th Foot for Shorawak, agreeably to Sir Robert Sandeman's earnest request that a force should be sent there to allay existing excitement, not only in Shorawak itself, but also in Khan of Khelat's adjacent territory. I am informed by Captain H. Wylie, Chief Political Officer with my force, that plentiful supplies of grain and forage can be had for these troops in Shorawak, and should His Excellency approve the measure, our scanty resources on the line of communication will be at once relieved and a political object of the highest importance gained. Moreover, the Hussars will be in a good climate, ready to advance or return to India at the proper time, as the course of events may appear to dictate. I have most of ten days' supplies for force already at Gatai; the rest follow to-night. To-morrow I shall occupy Dabrai, after that clear Takt-i-Púl Kotal and re-establish Abdul Rahman post, and thence open communication by the shortest line with Kandahar. In this way I can stock the road with supplies, economise men and food, and do the utmost possible to assist the large force at Kandahar. The German horse-biscuit, on which I mainly depended for use from this to Kandahar, I have just learned was left at Sibi for some days, in spite of special instructions personally given to have it forwarded by dak on arrival."

III. "In continuation of my first telegram this morning, the following passage in the Kandahar letter was omitted by mistake,—Colonel Shewell can supply both 'forces, yours and General Roberts', for a month or six weeks, but forage must be 'sent up the line, and also the reserve reports (?) which are at Quetta.' With reference to this, my reports from Gatai outposts are that very little forage or grain is procurable there; the whole route has already been foraged by Ayub's troops. Regarding supplying General Roberts' force for a month, the opinion of the Deputy Commissary-General may alter when he sees the list of daily consumption, that (?) forage. Perhaps he includes Quetta reserve, which I am trying to take up."

Sir Robert Sandeman telegraphs as follows from Quetta, on the 30th August:—

"The following clear the line message received from St. John this morning, dated Kandahar, 26th August 1880:—

"'Siege being practically raised, country quieting down, and Ayub Khan's force reduced to regulars and a small number of Ghazis, is it worth while, in face of certain difficulties of supplies, that Phayre should bring more than a brigade of all arms with him.' Ends.

"I entirely concur with St. John. Troops are required to garrison Pishin as formerly during Stewart's occupation at Kandahar, when country would quickly settle down."

1st September.—The following reports have been received from Sir Frederick Roberts:—

I. Dated Shahr-i-Safa, 27th August.—"Reached Shahr-i-Safa to-day, 27th August. Received letter from Colonel St. John. He writes:—Begins: 'The rumours of the approach of your force have been sufficient to relieve the city from investment. On Monday night the villages on the east and south were abandoned by their mixed garrisons of ghazis and regulars. Yesterday morning Ayub struck his camp and marched to a position on the Argandab, between Baba-Wahi and Shikh Chila, due north of the city, and separated from it by a range of rocky hills. He has about 4,000 infantry, regulars; six 12-pounders, and two 9-pounders, rifled; four 6-pounder smooth bore batteries, and one 4-pounder battery; 2,000 sowars, and, perhaps, twice that number of ghazis, of whom a third have firearms. The Kizilbashis and Kohistanis in his camp (about 1,200 infantry and 300 cavalry) offered to meet and join us directly we make a show of attack; they are at last aware of Abdul Rahman's succession, but I think Ayub will remain unmolested until arrival of Kabul force. He will, I expect, strike away north into Khakrez, on which line a vigorous pursuit should give us his guns. Maclaine, Royal Horse Artillery, is still a prisoner; I am making every effort to obtain his release, but I am not very hopeful of success. This morning, the 25th, I went to the field of the sortie of the 16th, and found the bodies of the poor fellows who fell there, some 40 in number; they will be buried this afternoon. All the wounded are doing well. No signs or tidings of Phayre.—Ends. General H. Gough with two regiments of cavalry is at Robat; they are in heliographic communication with Kandahar. General Primrose heliographs that Ayub Khan has entrenched his camp at Baba-Wali. The force marches for Robat to-morrow, 17 miles distant from Kandahar.

II. Dated Robat, the 29th August.—“Force marched here yesterday, and halts to-day, proceeding to-morrow towards Kandahar by two easy stages. This is desirable on account of the increased heat, to give the sick some rest and enable the men and transport animals to reach Kandahar in good form. Sick rate still continues to be moderate; detailed report will be made from Kandahar. Colonel St. John and Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster-General, joined me here yesterday, bringing useful information. They return this evening to Kandahar, accompanied by Major Badcock, Deputy Commissary-General, and Colonel Low, Chief Director of Transport, who will arrange for the supply of the force. Yesterday I received a letter from General Phayre, dated Kila Abdulla, the 24th; he expected to leave that place on the 30th, and provided he encounters no greater difficulties than he has hitherto met with, should not delay until matters are definitely settled with Ayub Khan. We are still fortunate about supplies, and will be able to assist the Kandahar garrison with sheep.”

The following messages have been received from Sir Robert Sandeman from Quetta :—

I. Dated the 29th August.—“General Robert reached Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 23rd. Message now in transmission from General Roberts to Viceroy, which gives the news. All well. Tribes very unsettled still. Marris made raid on Mal, but were driven back into their hills with loss of four killed. No particulars received yet.”

II. Dated the 30th August.—“Following from Commissioner in Sind :—Begins : ‘Good deal of excitement prevailing here, from rumours of gathering beyond frontier in Las Beyla direction. As far as I am aware these are entirely without foundation, but I shall be glad to know whether you have any information on the subject.’—Ends. Have replied as follows :—Begins : ‘The rumours have not reached this. Were any thing wrong his Highness the Jam would be certain to report it. His Highness is quite strong enough to keep his country quiet. I believe the people to be well disposed to the English.’—Ends.”

III. Dated the 31st.—“Rai Hittu Ram reports that the Marris killed three of the Mal villagers when they made the raid on the 28th; but that the troops came up with raiders, and they were severely punished, and almost all the plundered cattle recovered. Captain Martelli is at Sibi. I have telegraphed to him for particulars, as it is said 30 raiders were killed. Rai Hittu Ram further reports that Sirdar Mihrulla Khan is again sick, and quite unequal to controlling his tribe at the present time, as they have quite broken loose from all restraints.”

Major-General Phayre telegraphs as follows from Chaman :—

I. On the 30th August.—“Messenger who brought General Primrose’s telegrams of 26th from Kandahar this morning states situation was as follows :—Ayub, with 13,000 troops, was in position on right bank of Argandab, opposite Baba-Wali; this number is irrespective of ghazis, &c., but he will only fight if attacked by considerably inferior number. Ahmad Khan, son of Sartip, with 400 Kandahar horse and 150 foot, was at Tukt-i-Pul three days ago, and prevented messenger’s passage, who then came through Barganah Pass, which he found occupied by bands of ghazis, who detained him two days and robbed him of cash. Messenger reports that enemy’s loss was very heavy in sortie when General Brooke was killed.”

II. On the 31st August.—“I leave to-night for Gatai.”

4th September.—The Officer commanding at Jacobabad reports that the remainder of the 78th Highlanders passed through that place on the night of the 3rd, en route to Sibi.

Brigadier-General Henderson telegraphs as follows from Quetta on the 4th :—
 “News received of the defeat of Ayub Khan and capture of 27 guns.”

No. 29.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From SECRETARY OF STATE to Lieutenant-General Sir F. ROBERTS.

I CONGRATULATE you and your brave force on the great success of the 1st.
 I have announced all known details in House of Commons, who have received news with great satisfaction.

No. 30.

No. 205 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, the 7th September 1880.

WE have the honour to enclose, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copies of telegrams received during the past week reporting the arrival at Kandahar from Kabul of Sir Frederick Roberts' division, and the total defeat, by the troops under his command, of the Afghan forces under Sirdar Ayub Khan.

2. In forwarding these papers to your Lordship, we desire to record our high appreciation of the admirable manner in which Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Roberts has performed the important duty entrusted to him. The march of his force from Kabul to Kandahar, a distance of 327 miles by the route which he followed, was accomplished in 23 days, and the division under his command arrived at its destination in excellent health and unimpaired vigour. On the following day [1st September] the enemy was attacked and Sir F. Roberts' skilful dispositions, carried out in the most gallant style by his troops, secured, with comparatively little loss on our side, the complete overthrow and dispersion of Ayub Khan's army and the capture of his guns. We trust that your Lordship will agree with us in thinking that the services thus rendered to the country by Sir F. Roberts and his army have been of the most distinguished kind.

3. We must also express our sense of the obligations which we owe to Lieutenant-General Sir D. M. Stewart for the great energy and zeal with which he organized Sir F. Roberts' force and despatched it fully equipped in every way for the arduous task which lay before it.

We have, &c.,
 (Signed) RIPON.
 „ F. P. HAINES.
 „ JOHN STRACHEY.
 „ E. B. JOHNSON.
 „ WHITLEY STOKES.
 „ JAMES GIBBS.
 „ C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 31st August 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

LETTER received from General Roberts, dated Kelat-i-Ghilzai, 24th, states he was leaving for Kandahar on 25th by ordinary marches, taking on Kelat-i-Ghilzai garrison with him, and would try and communicate by heliograph from Robat on 29th, enters Kandahar to-day, has supplies to 8th September.

General Phayre's advanced force collecting forage and grain at Aktarkhan and Gatai.

Messenger from Kandahar states that Ayub, with 15,000 troops, is on right bank of Arghandab, opposite Baba Wali. He has besides them ghazis, &c., but will only fight if attacked by greatly inferior numbers. Ahmed Khan, son of Sartip, with 400 Kandahar horse and 150 foot, was at Takht-i-Pul four days ago and prevented messenger passing, who then came by Roghani Pass, which was occupied by ghazis. They detained him two days and robbed him of cash. He reports enemy's loss in sortie very heavy; and that Colonel St. John had invited inhabitants of Kandahar to return to city. The son of Sirdar Azad Khan of Kharan is with Ayub.

Enclosure 2 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 31st August 1880.

From Major HASTINGS, Robat, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

August 29th. Reached Robat yesterday, halt here to-day, go to Mohmund, eight miles ahead, to-morrow, and Kandahar following day. General intends attacking Ayub the next day, who, according to information from Kandahar, intends fighting.

Musa Jan and party will have reached Ayub's camp, and he may be compelled to fight.

A letter to General from Ayub received yesterday. He excuses himself for fighting, says it was forced on him, asks for friendly advice. The reply sent is to effect that he must give up his prisoners, and submit unconditionally to British Government. The original letter and the reply will be submitted.

General has had a sharp attack of fever, but hopes he will be well day after to-morrow.

The sight of our force will have a good effect on the Kandahar garrison. General Phayre, in a letter received yesterday, holds out no hopes of being here for the next eleven days.

Some supplies procurable, but the villages have to be visited to get them.

St. John has been out here. He returns to Kandahar to-day.

Enclosure 3 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 31st August 1880.

From Lieutenant-Colonel ST. JOHN, Robat, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

ROBAT, 28th. Came out here yesterday afternoon at General Roberts' request to meet him. Two regiments Cavalry, under General Gough, arrived here yesterday, after 22 miles march, and main body with General Roberts this morning. This early arrival of the Kabul army quite unexpected, as we considered it impossible for them to cover distance before 1st September. Sick are one day's march in rear.

Sirdar Hashim Khan and Ahmed Ali Khan have arrived in Ayub's camp with Abdulla Jan's mother, and Musa Jan expected to-day.

Herati troops signified their intention of retreating to Khakrez, but have been dissuaded, and sworn on Koran to fight. Ayub has written long apologetic letter to Roberts, asking for advice and friendly settlement. I return to Kandahar to-morrow.

Enclosure 4 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

COLONEL St. John and Major Adam from Kandahar met General Roberts at Robat on 28th. They returned to Kandahar on 29th. General Roberts' army was expected to arrive Kandahar yesterday, the 29th.

Ayub Khan's army still in position on right bank Arghandab. He has been joined by Sirdars Hashim Khan and Ahmad Ali Khan, with Abdulla Jan's mother. Musa Jan was expected in Ayub's camp on 31st. Kazzilbashs and Kohistanis in Ayub's army are inclined to desert, as they have heard of Abdul Rahman's recognition by British Government as Amir of Kabul.

General Phayre marched last night for Kandahar, taking with him the whole force collected at Chaman, as he expects opposition at Takht-i-Pul.

Ayub Khan has been endeavouring to negotiate terms.

Enclosure 5 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 1st September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received news from Ayub's camp as follows:—Sartip Nur Muhammad advised Ayub Khan to retreat to Girishk, but Sirdar Abdulla Khan strongly urged Ayub not to desert his friends, which advice he decided to follow.

Musa Jan, Hashim Khan, and other Sirdars have, it is said, 15,000 followers with them, chiefly Ghilzai tribesmen, and they also had begged Ayub not to leave Kandahar, saying, if he did so, their cause was lost.

Ayub is said to have sent back his family from Farah to Herat.

Sirdar Sultan Khan, brother (?) of Fattah Khan, Aitchakzai, with a tribal following, is at Takht-i-Pul.

There seems no doubt but that Sirdar Azad Khan of Kharan's son is with Ayub Khan.

Enclosure 6 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Mohmund, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

30th August. Force arrived here to-day; marches to Kandahar to-morrow.

General Primrose heliographs a letter from Ayub's camp, brings information that mother of late heir-apparent, Abdulla Jan, with other ladies, have been sent to Zamin-dawar. Arrival of the young Musa Jan in Ayub's camp is confirmed. Hashim Khan is also there. The position is being strengthened specially on the Pir Paimal side, where two guns have been placed with two regiments. From former information I learn that the Baba Wali Kotal is occupied by three regiments and two guns. The Kotal-i-Murcha is held by the Kabul regiments, and Ayub's own camp is at Mazra, where it is said the majority of his guns are parked.

I propose to encamp the infantry to west of Kandahar, immediately under the walls, cavalry under the walls to south. Should I hear that Ayub contemplates flight, I shall attack without delay. If, on the contrary, he intends to resist, I shall take my own time. The country he is occupying is from description and map extremely difficult and easily defensible, and each separate advance will require careful study and reconnaissance to prevent unnecessary loss of life.

Enclosure 7 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd September 1880.

From Major HASTINGS, Mohmund, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

30th August. Reached Mohmund, seven miles from Kandahar, which is in sight. Ayub still holds the position he took up, and there is every probability of an engagement. Generalis better.

Enclosure 8 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd September, 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 31st August. The force under my command arrived here this morning without opposition.

Enemy are said to be in considerable strength at Mazra; but the ridge of hills which divides Kandahar from the Arghandab completely covers their position; and at present I have only been able to ascertain that the Baba Wali Kotal and one or two other points on this ridge are held in great strength; and that the enemy are busily engaged in defensive works. Reconnaissances are now being conducted, and I shall soon I hope be sufficiently acquainted with affairs generally to enable me to arrange for an attack.

The Kandahar garrison are in good health. The horses and transport animals appear to be in good condition. Major Vandeleur has died of his wounds. The remainder of the wounded, both officers and men, are generally doing well.

Troops from Kabul are in famous health and spirits. The assurance of the safety of this garrison enabled comparatively short marches to be made from Kelat-i-Ghilzai, which much benefited both men and animals. The cavalry horses and artillery mules are in excellent condition, and the transport animals are, as a rule, in very fair order. General Primrose has arranged for the sick of force from Kabul being accommodated inside the city. Many of the cases are sore feet. None are serious.

To-morrow the telegraph line towards India will commence to be reconstructed; and as General Phayre is probably on this side of the Khojak to-day, through communication should soon be restored.

Enclosure 9 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

Dated 30th. I returned last night from General Roberts' camp at Robot, where it halted yesterday. It is encamped to-day at Mohmund, ten miles from Kandahar, and will march here to-morrow.

Report of Musa Jan's arrival in Ayub's camp confirmed. Mother of Abdulla Jan and all other women have been sent to Zamindawar. Ayub's troops continue entrenching themselves in new position behind Baba Wali Pass. Weather still very hot.

Enclosure 10 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 2nd September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

31st August. General Roberts arrived to-day. Ayub still in force, and apparently intends fighting. Abdulla Jan's mother and other ladies sent to Zamindawar.

Enclosure 11 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 3rd September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

TELEGRAPH communication with Chaman restored. Roberts arrived Kandahar, 31st, is reconnoitring Ayub's position, which is a strong one, and which he is entrenching. Phayre arrived 1st September at Muhammad Ameen, 26 miles from Chaman, 4 miles south of Dubrai; halted on 2nd to allow transport to rest. Cavalry brigade under Wilkinson was to have advanced to Takht-i-Púl on 2nd. Phayre expected to arrive Kandahar with whole force on 5th. Telegraph wire and poles left Quetta for Chaman some days ago for repair of wire from Chaman towards Kandahar. Curzon Wyllie with Wilkinson's force hoped to push on to Kandahar for Takht-i-Púl with despatches. Aitchakzais of Arambi giving much trouble, carried off caravan of 28 camels laden with flour on night of 1st.

Enclosure 12 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 3rd September 1880.

From Sir R. SANDEMAN, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL Phayre telegraphs through Chaman. Message begins. Roberts attacked, dispersed Ayub's force, captured 27 guns. Kabulis retreated up Arghandab. Message ends.

Enclosure 13 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 1st September, 6 p.m. Ayub Khan's army was to-day defeated and completely dispersed with, I hope comparatively slight loss on our side. His camp was captured, the two lost guns of E/B, R.H.A., were recovered, and several wheeled guns of various calibre fell to the splendid infantry of this force. The cavalry are still in pursuit. Our casualties are—Captain Straton, 22nd Regiment, killed; 72nd Highlanders, Lieutenant-Colonel Brownlow, Captain Frome, killed, Captain Murray and Lieutenant Monro wounded, 7 men killed, 18 wounded; 92nd Highlanders, Lieutenant Menzies and Donald Stewart wounded, 11 men killed and 39 wounded; Lieutenant-Colonel Battye, 2nd Goorkhas, and Major Slater, 2nd Sikhs, wounded.

It is at present impossible to ascertain casualties amongst Native troops, but I have no reason to believe they are excessive. Full details will be telegraphed to-morrow.

The quite recently murdered remains of Lieutenant MacLaine, R.A., were found on the arrival of the British troops in Ayub Khan's camp.

Ayub Khan is supposed to have fled towards Herat.

Enclosure 14 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 1st September, 6 p.m. General Roberts attacked and carried Ayub Khan's position this morning about noon. Ayub fled, abandoning tents, standards, baggage, and at least 17 guns, including breech-loaders and Horse Artillery guns lost at Maiwand. General Gough with cavalry still pursuing. Our losses comparatively slight, but include Colonel Brownlow and Captain Frome, 72nd, and Captain Straton, Army Signalling Department, killed. Lieutenant MacLaine's body discovered close to Ayub's camp with throat cut, still warm. By account of other prisoners he was murdered by guard after Ayub's departure on approach of our troops. Column marches to-morrow to occupy two first halting places on Chaman road.

Enclosure 15-in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 2nd. Cavalry under General Gough killed about three hundred fugitives of Ayub's army, and Bombay Cavalry, under General Nuthall, one hundred more. Twenty-seven guns captured. A large number of Ayub's cavalry, Kazilbashes and Tajiks, who took no part in action, sent in this morning placing themselves at our disposal; have been recommended to make the best of their way to Kabul, and place their services at disposal of Amir.

Ayub is believed to have fled to Khakrez. Hashim and his brother have gone to a village they own in Zamindawar. Musa Jan's whereabouts unknown, but he probably went off with the women some days ago. Kabuli infantry, which seem to have fled without fighting, has retired up Arghandab valley. Heratis made straight for Helmund.

Sir F. Roberts has withdrawn city from military jurisdiction, and placed Major Protheroe at my disposal for its management. The Afghan inhabitants will be invited to return from to-morrow. Great scarcity of flour and ghee, but other supplies will be forthcoming without difficulty. The cavalry go to Kokaran to-morrow to facilitate collection and distribution. Major Euan Smith accompanies force going to meet General Phayre to-morrow, and will be deputed to make all arrangements with tribes on line of communication.

Colonel Shewell died last night of wounds received in sortie of 16th.

Enclosure 16 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 2nd September. The report of the reconnaissance carried out by General Hugh Gough and Colonel Chapman on the 31st August afforded me all necessary information regarding enemy's position. I found it was quite practicable to turn his right, and thus place myself to the rear of the Baba Wali range, where Ayub Khan's main camp was. I decided on doing so, and commenced to attack shortly after nine yesterday morning. To cover my design I made preparations for a direct attack upon the Baba Wali Kotal. This feint was entrusted to the troops of the Kandahar garrison under Lieutenant-General Primrose, who also arranged to occupy my advanced positions of the previous day. At the same time the Cavalry brigade under Brigadier-General Hugh Gough advanced upon our left, and, without difficulty, reached the Arghandab, when it was well placed for pursuit, should the enemy break either towards Girishk or Khakrez. The attack was made by the 1st and 2nd Brigades, under Brigadier-Generals Macpherson and Baker respectively, with the 3rd Brigade, under Brigadier-General Macgregor, in support, the whole of the Infantry being under the command of Major-General J. Ross. An elevated village within 1,200 yards of our position was strongly held by the enemy, and had first to be taken. This was done, in the most gallant manner, by the 92nd Highlanders and the 2nd Goorkhas covered by the fire of C/2 R.A. and the new screw gun battery. The two brigades then advanced through orchards and enclosures fighting steadily, the left of the 2nd Brigade being brought gradually round until the village of Pir Paimal was reached. At this point, the enemy were in great force, and fought most resolutely, but nothing could resist the determined advance of the British troops. Shortly after this, the reverse slope of the Baba Wali Kotal was reached, and the standing camp of Ayub then at Mazra, became visible. All the enemy's attempts to stem the torrent were fruitless. By 12 noon, the camp was in our possession with 27 pieces of ordnance, which include our own guns lost on the 27th July.

The casualties in addition to those yesterday reported include three Officers of Cavalry, slightly wounded, viz., Major Willock, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, Lieutenant Baker, 3rd P. C., Lieutenant Neville Chamberlain, Central India Horse. The 92nd Highlanders had 51 wounded, 3 of whom have since died. The 72nd had 17 wounded, 1 of whom has since died. Amongst the Natives 11 killed, 72 wounded. Total wounded of casualties, about 210. The Cavalry brigade marches to-morrow to Kokaran, where it will be well placed, and this will facilitate supplies being brought into the city. The 19th Bombay N. I., with 3rd Bombay Cavalry, march to-morrow to open up communication with General Phayre, to whom I am writing, requesting him not to push on too many troops, but to utilize his transport as much as possible in the conveyance of stores and supplies.

Enclosure 17 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 4th September 1880.

From Agent, GOVERNOR GENERAL, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

NEWS received last night of complete defeat by General Roberts of Ayub Khan's army, capture of his camp, and recovery of our two lost guns, also capture of 27 guns of various sizes. Ayub's loss severe. British loss believed not to be excessive. The quite recently murdered remains of Lieutenant Maclaine were found on the arrival of the British troops in Ayub's camp. British cavalry in the pursuit that followed are said to have killed 500 fugitives.

Gathering in Marri hills reported to have dispersed. Their loss in late raid on Mall nine killed and several wounded. Aitchakzais still giving trouble.

Enclosure 18 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 5th September 1880.

FROM AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

FROM information furnished by General Gough and Colonel Chapman, General Roberts decided to turn Ayub's right and get in rear of his camp. General Primrose feigned direct attack with Kandahar garrison, Cavalry under Gough being placed so as to pursue in event of enemy's flight towards Khakrez. 1st and 2nd Brigades under Macpherson and Baker, supported by Macgregor and 3rd Brigade, then attacked a village strongly held by the enemy. 92nd and 2nd Goorkhas, covered by C/2nd, Royal Artillery, and screw guns, carried this most gallantly, and reaching Pir Paimal, which was resolutely defended by a large force, continued their irresistible advance till they occupied Ayub's camp. Total casualties about 210, including 72nd, Colonel Brownlow, Captain Frome, and seven men killed; Captain Murray, Lieutenant Munro, and 17 men wounded, one since dead; 92nd, Lieutenant Menzies, Donald Stewart, and five men wounded, three since dead, 11 men killed; Colonel Battye, 2nd Goorkhas, Major Slater, 2nd Sikhs, Willock, 3rd Bengal Cavalry, Baker, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, and Neville Chamberlain, Central India Horse, wounded; Captain Straton, 22nd Foot, killed. Natives, 11 killed and 72 wounded. 19th Native Infantry, and 3rd Bombay moved to open communication with General Phayre.

Political Officer, Sibi, reports Marri gatherings dispersed. Alarm of attack on Sibi gorge unfounded. The Marri Vakeel Shaban Khan arrived at Sibi with message from Sirdar Mihrulla Khan.

Enclosure 19 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 3rd September. Cavalry brigade marched this morning for Kokaran with a large number of sick transport animals.

The sick and wounded of this force are all comfortably housed in buildings; and the British portion of the force have sufficient barrack accommodation to save them from the sun during the day. The wounded, with a few exceptions, are doing well. Two of the 72nd, and three of the 92nd, have died. The casualties on the 31st August and 1st September amounted to 248. The wounded includes two Officers, not hitherto mentioned, viz., Lieutenant-Colonel Rowcroft, 4th Goorkhas, and Lieutenant Chesney, 23rd Pioneers, both slightly wounded.

The total number of artillery pieces captured was 32. This includes our own two guns, but not the six given to the Wali. These latter, I am told by some Afghan artillerymen, who have given themselves up as prisoners to-day, we shall find lying on the Girishk road. These same prisoners state that Ayub Khan had only 31 guns with him, and that his flight was so precipitate, he could get none away.

Enclosure 20 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

GENERAL Phayre reached Abdul Rahman last evening. Officers belonging to his staff rode in here this morning. His troops will remain in convenient locality near their present whereabouts to avoid too great pressure on the Kandahar supplies.

A telegraph office was opened last night at Mundi Hissar.

The wounded are doing well.

Enclosure 21 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 3rd September. The whole of Ayub's guns found and brought into citadel. Ayub fled to Khakrez without stopping, and left yesterday morning for Gurak. He is probably in Zamindawar to-day. Hashim Khan and the other Sirdars and Chiefs, with the exception of the two Ghilzai Generals, Hafizullah and Taz Muhammad, went with him to Khakrez. He had no baggage and no troops, but the Herati horse; is said to have announced his intention of going straight to Herat.

City gates have been opened, and peaceable Afghan inhabitants invited to return.

General Gough, with cavalry, has gone to Kokaran. A regiment of infantry and one of cavalry have marched to open communication with General Phayre. Major Euan Smith telegraphs from Mundi Hissar, first stage, that all is quiet there.

Enclosure 22 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 4th. Nothing more heard of fugitives, except that Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan fled with Ayub to Khakrez. I estimate the enemy's loss on the 1st at about one thousand.

People are gradually returning to city, of administration of which Major Protheroe has taken charge, as a temporary measure.

Enclosure 23 in No. 30.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

THE following particulars of General Roberts' victory over Ayub Khan have been received from several sources. A successful reconnaissance of enemy's position was made on 31st August by General Gough, accompanied by Colonel Chapman, Chief of Staff. They were able to ascertain clearly the enemy's position, which was found to be as follows:—Their camp was pitched behind the Baba Wali range on the Arghandab, and extended to the village of Pir Paimal. They also held the two passes, called Baba Wali and Murcha, leading from Kandahar to the Arghandab. This position was strongly held with guns, and, before our troops could gain it, they had to pass through dry canals, gardens, orchards, and some detached villages. Roberts determined to make a feigned attack in front on Baba Wali with the heavy guns and Bombay troops under Primrose, his real attack being entrusted to Kabul Army, and directed against the village of Pir Paimal, which, once in his possession, would enable him to take the whole of Ayub's position in flank, roll up his line, and give him possession of his guns. The cavalry under Gough with horse artillery was on the left, acting independently. The attack was commenced at 9.30 a.m. The heavy guns shelled Baba Wali and silenced the batteries. C/2 R.A.

and screw guns shelled the nearest village, which was then carried by a rush of the 92nd Highlanders, 2nd Goorkhas, and the rest of the 1st Brigade. Baker's Brigade then joined the 1st Brigade, and the advance was made towards Pir Paimal. Severe fighting took place on this advance in the gardens, canals, and orchards, but Pir Paimal was, after a short time, without check as gallantly taken as the first village. Two small camps of the enemy then came in sight, but they were easily captured. The result of the capture, together with that of the two villages, and the arrival of the British force on the flank of Ayub's position, was a panic, which quickly spread to the main camp, and the enemy commenced flying in all directions, abandoning their guns. Our cavalry under Gough and Nuttall at once went in pursuit, and followed the flying enemy for fifteen miles, killing, it is said, 500 of the fugitives. Some of the victorious British troops bivouacked in Ayub Khan's standing camp, which was taken, together with large supplies of our ammunition. The rest of the troops returned to Kandahar over the Baba Wali Kotal, Ayub's standards and stores of all kinds were taken, and he himself fled with a small party of Herat horse to Khakrez, and did not draw rein till it was reached. He is supposed next day to have continued his flight without baggage or troops towards Zamindawar and Herat, his army being completely dispersed. The whole of his guns have been captured and taken into Kandahar.

General Phayre and his troops ordered from Killa Abdul Rahman to garrison, Kandahar.

No. 31.

TELEGRAM, dated 7th September 1880.

FROM SECRETARY OF STATE TO VICEROY.

THE Government desire to express to Commander-in-Chief great satisfaction of the Queen at success of measures taken for relief at Kandahar.

No. 32.

DIARY OF EVENTS CONNECTED WITH THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN, AS REPORTED TO THE MILITARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA DURING THE WEEK ENDING THE 11TH SEPTEMBER 1880. (Extract.)

6th September.—The following is a complete list of the Officers killed and wounded at the battle of Mazra, on the 1st instant:—

Killed.

Captain Edward Straton	-	22nd Foot, Superintendent of Army Signalling.
Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Brownlow, C.B.	-	72nd Highlanders.
Captain St. John Thomas Frome	-	72nd Highlanders.

Wounded.

Major George Woodward Willock	-	3rd Bengal Cavalry.
Lieutenant Louis Samuel Hyde Baker	-	3rd Punjab Cavalry.
Lieutenant Neville Francis FitzGerald Chamberlain	-	2nd Central India Horse.
Captain Robert Hunter Murray	-	72nd Highlanders.
Lieutenant Seymour Charles Hale Monro	-	72nd Highlanders.
Lieutenant Stewart Alexander Menzies	-	92nd Highlanders.
2nd Lieutenant Donald William Stewart	-	92nd Highlanders.
Lieutenant Duncan Chesney	-	23rd Pioneers.
Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Arthur Battye	-	2nd Goorkhas.
Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Frederick Rowcroft	-	4th Goorkhas.
Major James Barry Slater	-	2nd Sikh Infantry.

*“ Quetta, 5th September.—Kindly reply to my telegrams dated 31st August and 3rd September, recommending that two small columns be sent to Kawas and Shorawak to open up sources of local supply formerly available. Kindly inform me at as early a date as possible the garrison that is to be maintained at Pishin and Quetta during winter. We have had little or no rain for two summers, and if early winter sets in, which is probable, arrangements ought now to be made by commissariat to store forage and firewood for winter consumption. The Principal Commissariat Officer, Kandahar, has died of his wounds, and the Commissariat Officer in Pishin has died from pneumonia. No time should be lost in bringing up supplies, and deciding amount required for winter. Bráhúis will not carry supplies at any price after snow falls, as the intense cold on Dasht plain kills men and animals.”

Brigadier-General Henderson telegraphs the following information regarding the action at Mazra :—

*“ Quetta, 5th September.—*The following information regarding attack on Ayub has been received :—A reconnaissance having been carried out, General Roberts decided to attack, and, finding it practicable to turn Ayub's right, arrangements were made to do so. General Primrose, with the Kandahar garrison, was detailed to make a direct attack on the Baba-Wali Kotal, at the same time the Cavalry Brigade, under General Hugh Gough, advanced on the left, and took up a good position to pursue. Two brigades, under Generals Macpherson and Baker, made the flank attack, supported by 3rd Brigade under General MacGregor, the whole infantry under General Ross. A village on a hill, within 1,200 yards of our position, had to be taken; the 92nd and 2nd Goorkhas, covered by the fire of C/2nd Royal Artillery and screw-guns, gallantly stormed and took it. The advance brigades fought their way steadily through orchards and enclosures. The enemy was in great force and fought desperately, but could not stand the steady advance of the British troops. The enemy strove in vain. By 12 noon his camp was in our hands, with 28 guns, including the two lost on 27th July; six guns more had previously fallen into our hands. Standards, standing camp, and all their équipage were taken. The body of MacLaine was found in a tent, still warm, with his throat cut, murdered by his guards before they retreated. Casualties in cavalry among Officers—two killed,† one wounded; wounded officer—Lieutenant Chamberlain, slightly; 92nd Highlanders—51 wounded, three of which died since; 72nd Foot—17 wounded, one since dead.”

THE Deputy Quartermaster-General, Sakkar, telegraphs that the 17th Bengal Native Infantry left for Sibi on the 5th.

THE Officer Commanding at Jacobabad telegraphs as follows :—

*“ Jacobabad, 5th September.—*Eighty-three men, drafts for 7th, 2/11th, and 2/15th Foot passed through for Sibi last night.”

*8th September.—*The following message has been received from Sir Frederick Roberts :—

*“ Kandahar, 5th September.—*The following are the names of British soldiers killed in action on the 1st September, or who have since died of their wounds :—

“ 92nd Highlanders.

“ Killed.—Colour-Sergeant Richard Fraser, Corporal Lewin Friendship, Privates Alexander Easton, Thomas Kerr, John McKenzie, Robert McKenzie, William Reid, Neil Ross, James Scott, John Strachan, William Wilson.

“ Died of wounds.—Privates William Henderson, Peter Hoey, James Wilson.

“ 72nd Highlanders.

“ Killed.—Lance Sergeant William Cameron, Lance Corporals Josiah McIlvenna and William Gannon, Privates Mill Erskine, Alexander Hodge, James McQueen, James McGowan.

“ Died of wounds.—Privates James Baggin, George Haseltine.”

* Lieutenant-Colonel A. M. Shewell, Bombay Staff Corps.

† This was a mistake; no Officers of cavalry were killed.

The following reports have been received from Sir Frederick Roberts:—

“ Kandahar, 5th September.—Mail bags received this morning, bringing letters from England of 21st July and Indian newspapers to 20th August. A royal salute will be fired here at sunrise to-morrow, in honour of the victory over the Afghan army; orders issued for similar salutes to be fired at all stations and camps in the command where artillery may be present. After careful inquiry I have ascertained that the enemy suffered very severely on the 1st September; it was to be expected they would, as they made one or two most determined stands after our troops got quite close up to them. A small column will start in a few days for Singiri, and thence on to Khushk-i-Nakhud, for the purpose of burying our dead, and also to open out that part of the district for supplies. I am also desirous of clearing troops out of the city, which will be overcrowded now that inhabitants are allowed to return. Telegraph here is open to Abdul Rahman, 25 miles.”

“ Kandahar, 6th September.—General Phayre arrived this morning, having found at Karez-i-Zarak, about twelve miles south of Kandahar, a convenient site for the encampment of his horse artillery and cavalry, with ample forage and supplies. The infantry brigade of his force will be advanced to the same neighbourhood during the next few days. The weather is unusually hot. The wounded are, however, doing well, and the troops are, generally, fairly healthy.”

Brigadier-General Walker reports as follows:—

“ Kila Abdulla, 7th September.—Composition of General Phayre’s force that he took on from Chaman:—Brigadiers-General Brown, Wilkinson, and James, with staff; D/B Horse Artillery, F/2nd Royal Artillery, 15th Hussars, two squadrons Madras Cavalry, two squadrons 2nd Bombay Cavalry, 2/11th Regiment, two companies 63rd Regiment, 1st Biluchis, 5th, 8th, 9th, and 10th Bombay Native Infantry, three companies Sappers, and No. 2 Field Hospital.”

Brigadier-General Henderson telegraphs as follows:—

“ Quetta, 7th September.—Latest news from Kandahar, no further news of fugitives. Sartip reported to have fled to Khakrez with Ayub. Estimated loss of enemy on 1st, 1,000 men. People gradually returning to city, the civil administration of which has been placed under Protheroe. General Phayre at Kandahar with his troops.”

No. 33.

No. 209 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To The RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty’s
Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 14th September 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty’s Government, a copy of further telegrams relating to affairs in Southern Afghanistan.

We have the honour to be,

My Lord Marquis,

Your Lordship’s most obedient and humble Servants,

(Signed)

RIPON.

” F. P. HAINES.

” JOHN STRACHEY.

” D. M. STEWART.

” WHITLEY STOKES.

” JAMES GIBBS.

” C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 8th September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

I HAVE received hearty congratulations from the Khan of Kelat on Roberts' victory.

Enclosure 2 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 9th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 7th September. The third brigade Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, under command of Brigadier-General Macgregor, together with the Central India Horse, will march to-morrow for Killa Abdulla, and there await the orders of Government regarding withdrawal to India. The movement is made to ease off the pressure regarding supplies experienced in consequence of the assembling of so large a force in the neighbourhood of Kandahar. I accompany the brigade party to obtain change of air, and to be as soon as possible in direct telegraphic communication with India, as some days must elapse before through communication is restored.

On the 9th instant, Brigadier-General Daubeney's brigade, consisting of C/2, R.A., 7th Fusiliers, 4th N.I., 2nd Biluchis, Sind Horse, and Poona Horse, will march for Kushk-i-Nakhud, for the purpose of burying the remaining of our dead, opening up communications, and endeavouring to get supplies from the outlying district. Latest telegram from India dated Simla, 3rd.

Enclosure 3 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th September 1880.

From AGENT, Governor General, Quetta, to FOREIGN, Simla.

MOKADDAM Nehal Khan, Chief of the Loharani Marris, whose tribe occupy the country adjacent to the Shum and Peelawa plains, situated on the Punjab frontier, has sent a messenger with a letter addressed to me to say that he and his section of the tribe were in no way concerned in the robbery of the convoy and raid on Mall; that they are servants of the British Government, and will obey any orders sent them. The letter was written and despatched prior to General Roberts' victory.

Enclosure 4 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 10th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Abdul Rahman, through Killa Abdulla, to FOREIGN, Simla.

ABDUL Rahman, 9th. Proceeded yesterday with the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Division, to Mundi Hissar, and this morning visited the cavalry brigade under Brigadier-General Wilkinson, at Karez-i-Zarak. On the line of march I met Brigadier-General Brown's brigade, and a portion of Brigadier-General James's brigade, proceeding to join General Phayre's cavalry brigade.

Supplies and forage are coming in slowly along the line of communication.

I propose to remain at Killa Abdulla a few days for rest and change of air, and have asked Sir Robert Sandeman to meet me there to discuss the all-important questions of transport and supplies between Sibi and Kandahar.

A convoy of carts reached Kandahar yesterday, and another convoy is here to-day, but the road requires improvement to make it easy for carts' traffic. No telegram was despatched yesterday.

Enclosure 5 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 9th. Ayub Khan and the other fugitive Sirdars have passed Zamin-dawar some days ago. It is believed that Hashim Khan and his mother, the Wali's sister, will remain there; that Ayub will attempt to enter Herat; and that the mother of Abdulla Jan will go on to her father, Nur Afzul, at Meshed.

A column, consisting of two regiments of cavalry, three infantry, and one battery, leaves for Kushk-i-Nakhud to-morrow, to recover the five guns abandoned on the road, and bury the dead. Lieutenant Muir accompanies it as Political Officer.

General Macgregor, with 60th Rifles, 4th Goorkhas, and 25th, marched to-day for Pishin. The 15th N. I. and 23rd Pioneers follow to-morrow.

General Roberts, with Colonel Chapman, Major Hastings, and Captain Ridgeway, leave this afternoon for Pishin.

Major White and Captain Carew left this morning for Sibi.

Enclosure 6 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th September 1880.

From Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

KANDAHAR, 9th September. The Wali's sister, who was in Ayub's camp with the mother of the Waliahad, writes to him from Zamindawar that the latter lady with Hashim Khan's mother and Musa Jan have gone to Herat. Ayub himself had preceded them, accompanied by only 200 or 300 Herati Sowars. The Herat infantry was scattered over the country.

All the prominent Chiefs of Ayub's army, except General Taj Muhammad Khan and the Sartip, were with him. Of the Sartip nothing is known, but Taj Muhammad has gone towards Kabul. Of Ayub's 39 guns 29 are now in the citadel; the remaining one, a mountain gun, is believed to have been taken by the Kabuli troops.

Reports of a serious insurrection at Herat are current, and it is said that Abdul Wahab Khan, son of Mir Afzal, left by Ayub as Governor, has been murdered.

Enclosure 7 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Mel Karez, through Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

MEL KAREZ, 12th. 3rd Brigade, 3rd Division, marched to Mel Karez this morning, meeting No. 3 Companies, Sappers and Miners, en route to Kandahar. The difficulties regarding supplies and forage along the line are great, but local Officers are hopeful that they may obtain a sufficiency for ordinary demands. Everything is being done to re-assure the people, who are bringing in supplies in small quantities. Telegraphic communication between Kandahar and Gatai was established yesterday evening. Only 18 miles to complete through communication with India.

Enclosure 8 in No. 33.

TELEGRAM, dated 12th September 1880.

From General ROBERTS, Chaman, to FOREIGN, Simla.

DUBRAI, 12th September. The 3rd Brigade marched to Dubrai this morning. Storms have been prevalent; heavy in the Bolan; telegraphic communication being interrupted for two days; weather everywhere cooler; wounded at Kandahar doing well.

I will report fully upon transport and supply arrangements on reaching Killa Abdulla, where Sir Robert Sandeman is to meet me.

No. 33 A.

TELEGRAM from GOVERNOR, BOMBAY, 19th September 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

General Primrose telegraphs that the word "annihilate" was telegraphed without his knowledge by Assistant Quartermaster-General, and while responsible he declares that he was not aware of the term used till Roberts' arrival.

No. 34.

No. 213 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 28th September 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter from Major E. G. Hastings, Chief Political Officer with Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts, dated the 3rd September 1880, enclosing a letter from Sardar Muhammad Ayub Khan, in which he asks the advice of Sir F. Roberts, and also the reply of the latter, recommending the Sardar to submit unconditionally to the British Government.

We have, &c.,
 (Signed) RIPON.
 " F. P. HAINES.
 " J. STRACHEY.
 " W. STOKES.
 " J. GIBBS.
 " D. M. STEWART.
 " C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 34.

From Major E. G. HASTINGS, Chief Political Officer with General Sir F. Roberts' Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department. (Dated Kandahar, 3rd September 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General in Council,—

- (1.) Letter in original from Sardar Muhammad Ayub Khan to General Sir F. Roberts, with translation;
- (2.) Copy of a letter from Sir F. Roberts to Sardar Muhammad Ayub Khan, with translation.

Enclosure 2 in No. 34.

TRANSLATION of a Letter from SARDAR MUHAMMAD AYUB KHAN to General Sir F. ROBERTS, dated Friday, 19th Ramazan 1297.

AFTER compliments.—May this letter find you in perfect health and strength. After which be it known to you I have at all times regarded the English Government with friendship, and still continue so to regard it. I have not altered in this. Before this time you despatched to me from Kabul several letters by the hand of Sardar Abdur Salam Khan, but these were seized in Kandahar, and were not allowed to be forwarded to me. They kept your letters and sent on others of their own. I too on several occasions made known my friendship (i.e., wrote letters), but received no fitting reply until such time as the news reached me that Sardar Sher Ali Khan was marching on Herat and had arrived at Girishk. I marched and came to Farah. I there received news that troops had been sent to Washir. I left Farah, and when I reached Washir, the army of Sardar Sher Ali Khan retired, and at Girishk they all dispersed. After that I was informed that the English had halted at Kushk-i-Nakhud. On the receipt of this news I thought it well that my troops should not take the road by Kushk-i-Nakhud, but should proceed by that of Maiwand, and I hoped that the English might show me friendship. Early in the morning, when my troops were marching by Maiwand, in pursuance of my orders, in the neighbourhood of Maiwand, the English army came and began to fight. What was pre-ordained came to pass. I have given you the particulars, and this is the real truth. On no account will I relinquish the friendship of the English Government. If the Government have been informed in any other sense, the real truth is what I have written. I now write to you in this friendly manner that you may write and tell me in a friendly way what you think is the best course for me to pursue, and these affairs may be settled in an amicable manner.

Enclosure 3 in No. 34.

TRANSLATION of a Letter from General Sir FREDERICK ROBERTS K.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., to SARDAR MUHAMMAD AYUB KHAN, dated 29th August 1880.

AFTER compliments.—In answer to your letter asking my advice, I can only recommend you to send in the prisoners in your power to Kandahar, and submit yourself unconditionally to the British Government.

No. 35.

No. 434 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 5th October 1880.

WE have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the defeat at Maiwand, on the 27th July last, of the brigade under the command of Brigadier-General G. R. S. Burrows.

* G. G. O., No. 551, dated the 27th September 1880, and documents published therewith.

2. We propose to address your Lordship in Council a letter in full detail regarding the whole of the proceedings at Ghiriskh, Maiwand, and Kandahar, up to the date of the arrival of Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts.

We have, &c.
(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" J. STRACHEY.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.
" D. M. STEWART.

Enclosure 1 in No. 35.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, 27th September 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 551.—The Governor General in Council directs that the following correspondence and Despatches, concerning the action of Maiwand on the 27th July 1880, shall be published for general information in the "Gazette of India Extraordinary."

Enclosure 2 in No. 35.

From Colonel ALLEN JOHNSON, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 8453 K., Field Operations, Kabul, dated Simla, 27th September 1880.)

I AM directed to acknowledge your letter, No. 5351 K., "Kabul," dated the 25th September 1880, forwarding a Despatch from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., giving cover to Brigadier-General Burrows' and Brigadier-General Nuttall's accounts of the operations which took place under the direction of the former Officer on the 27th July last.

2. The Governor General in Council concurs with His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief as to the meagre and unsatisfactory character of the accounts furnished, which, notwithstanding the time that has elapsed since the date of the occurrence to which they refer, still leave the Government of India in ignorance as to the true facts of the case and the exact circumstances to which the reverse sustained by Her Majesty's arms is to be attributed.

3. The Governor General in Council, however, understands that a full report of the situation, drawn out by Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts, after his arrival at Kandahar, is now on its way to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and as doubtless this will throw much light on what these Despatches leave in obscurity, the Government of India will await the arrival of the report before deciding on any further course of action in connection with the operations of the 27th July 1880.

4. It is not, however, necessary to wait for further information to enable the Governor General in Council to express his hearty concurrence in the high tribute paid by the Commander-in-Chief to the admirable behaviour of the Officers and men of the E/B Battery of Royal Horse Artillery.

Notwithstanding its loss of guns, and that the result of the day was disastrous, the E/B Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, may look back on the action of Maiwand as one in which they nobly maintained the credit of their distinguished regiment.

5. The Government of India entertained no doubt of the good conduct of Her Majesty's 66th Foot, but it is still a satisfaction to have obtained the voluntary testimony of the enemy to the devoted courage with which the colours of the regiment were defended to the last against overwhelming odds.

6. The Governor General in Council has much satisfaction in receiving the names of those Officers whose services are specially brought to notice by His Excellency.

7. The names of those of the British troops who were killed and who have since died of their wounds have been telegraphed to the Secretary of State. The complete lists of casualties, both British and Native, will be published, together with the Despatches and this correspondence, in the "Gazette of India."

8. It is, I am to add, needless to give expression to the deep grief the Government of India feel in reading this sad roll of the losses sustained by the force employed under Brigadier-General Burrows.

Enclosure 3 in No. 35.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, O.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5351 K., "Kabul," dated the 25th September 1880.)

I HAVE the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to transmit, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, the accompanying Despatch from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., giving cover to Brigadier-General Burrows' and Brigadier-General Nuttall's accounts of the operations which took place under the direction of the former Officer on the 27th July last.

2. Circumstances have delayed the receipt of these Despatches, and even now they contain but isolated and bare statements of the sad events of the day, almost entirely failing to convey to us information as to how they were brought about.

3. Before proceeding to a general review of the operations, and in order to make the reports now submitted clear, it is necessary to annex the following copies of telegrams :—

I. From the Quartermaster-General in India to General Primrose, Kandahar, dated 9th July 1880 :—

"Yours, 8th. Under the circumstances, you can order up any troops from the line of communication you and General Phayre consider can be safely spared to reinforce Kandahar."

II. From the Commander-in-Chief in India [Quartermaster-General] to General Primrose, Kandahar, dated 15th July 1880 :—

“Wali’s troops having deserted, the situation has completely changed. General Burrows must act according to his own judgment, reporting fully. He must act with caution, on account of distance of support.”

These telegrams refer to paragraphs 3 and 10 of General Primrose’s Despatch.

4. In paragraph 2 of Brigadier-General Burrows’ report, a reference is made to certain instructions received, and copies of correspondence from the Assistant Quartermaster-General, Kandahar Force, thereon, are attached.

The two telegrams there given only form a small portion of the correspondence between the Army Head Quarters and General Primrose, and it becomes, therefore, requisite to give copies of the telegrams which passed on the subject of Brigadier-General Burrows’ movements, from the date of his return to Khushk-i-Nakhud from the Helmand, up to the day of the action at Maiwand. These telegrams are annexed.

5. It should be stated that up to this time the intelligence regarding Ayub’s strength is contained in the following copy of a telegram from General Primrose to the Quartermaster-General in India, dated Kandahar, 14th July 1880 :—

“Letter received this day from Colonel St. John. No date to it, but presumed 12th July. Ayub reached Farrah on 1st July, and his advanced cavalry left on 8th. He has 2,500 effective and 1,000 disaffected infantry, 800 regular cavalry, and 1,000 tribal cavalry, with 30 guns. Wali’s troops shaky. One regiment all but openly mutinous; rest tainted. They have no ammunition, and St. John told Wali to take measures to put it out of reach. One other Sirdar deserted with his immediate followers, but failed to persuade others to follow him.”

6. Brigadier-General Burrows has not informed us what military measures he took for ascertaining the strength and disposition of Ayub’s army after it had crossed the Helmand, whilst it is evident that the information on which he broke up from Khushk-i-Nakhud, and marched with the intention of anticipating Ayub at Maiwand, was either incorrect or reached him too late.

It appears to Sir Frederick Haines that had he been aware that Ayub could possibly have presented himself at Maiwand in such force as that ascribed to him, General Burrows would have considered himself hardly strong enough to attack him, but would rather have contented himself with retiring towards his base at Kandahar, keeping a close touch on the enemy with his cavalry, and would certainly have taken steps to rid himself of the enormous amount of stores and baggage with which he was encumbered on the day of the action.

It appears that the only reinforcement sent to him from Kandahar consisted of 50 sabres, 3rd Sind Horse, but it will be observed in paragraph 8 of his Despatch that General Primrose had troops at Kandahar on the 23rd July from which to support him, and that he had arranged to do so, to the extent of 230 men of the 4th Native Infantry, but for some reason or other, not explained, this reinforcement was not sent.

7. Defective information was but a prelude to what followed. The apparently wholly unauthorized commencement of the action on the left by two guns of E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, under Lieutenant H. Maclaine, escorted by a troop of Sind Horse under Lieutenant A. M. Monteith, committed General Burrows to an action on ground not deliberately chosen by him, and with an enemy entirely unrecognised. This was highly prejudicial to his chance of success, for the position thus hurriedly taken up was in perfectly open ground, with both flanks en l’air in the face of vastly superior numbers.

Notwithstanding these difficulties, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief firmly believes that had the Native Infantry stood their ground and stemmed the rush of the ghazis, a victory might have been achieved, but when the line gave way from the left and the 66th Regiment was thus thrown into confusion, there was but one chance, and that was a cavalry charge, but the cavalry failed to charge, and a rout was inevitable.

8. There can be no doubt that General Burrows was vastly overmatched as to numbers, and that he had to fight a desperate battle under most unfavourable circumstances.

The unsteadiness of the two companies of the 30th Bombay Native Infantry (Jacob's Rifles) early in the day, must at once have destroyed all confidence in that corps, but it is evident that up to the moment of yielding on the left of the line, the conduct of the troops, with the above exception, had been excellent.

It is His Excellency's pleasing duty to bring to the notice of the Governor General in Council the admirable behaviour of the Officers and men of E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, who fought most gallantly and suffered severely.

The guns which commenced the action were those apparently which were lost eventually. The gallant young Officer who commanded them is not here to justify or explain his movement, for he met a tragic end at Mazra, after a month's imprisonment in Ayub's camp, and this must be a lasting disgrace attaching to Ayub's name.

The detachment of the 66th under Lieutenant G. de la M. Faunce, which manned the smooth-bore battery, is also reported to have behaved extremely well; and an incident, not known to General Burrows when he wrote his despatch, is worthy of record here, as a lasting tribute to the undaunted gallantry of the Officers and men of the 66th Regiment from the mouth of the enemy.

General Roberts, under date 16th September, telegraphs as follows:—

“Colonel St. John reports from Kandahar as follows:—From the accounts of one of Ayub's officers present at the action of Maiwand, it appears that a stand was made by remnant of the 66th Regiment round the colours, in an enclosure; informant estimated their number at 100, and states that they were surrounded by the whole army, and that when all but 11 were killed, these made a desperate charge, and perished fighting bravely to the last man.”

This stubborn defence may have delayed the pursuit, as well as checked the desire to pursue.

9. The Artillery maintained their military formation and morale during the retreat

But, though the Cavalry appear to have kept together, the General had lost all confidence in them, apparently with reason, and from this cause was unable to halt at Hauz-i-Madat.

Had this been done, no doubt many valuable lives, and some stores and transport animals, might have been saved, while some appearance of military formation might have been restored.

The retreat was thus continued without a break to Kandahar, notwithstanding that the pursuit, never vigorous, was not pressed beyond the third or fourth mile from the field. This restless flight must have increased the tale of loss and suffering at every step.

It is to be noted that amongst the casualties in the Cavalry, no Native Officer is mentioned as either killed or wounded.

On the morning of the 28th July the leading fugitives reached Kandahar. Their report of the complete annihilation of General Burrows' brigade was accepted as fact, and so reported to the world.

It is satisfactory to know that, unfortunate as were the events of the day, together with their results, they fell far short of the description first given of them. His Excellency the Governor General in Council is aware that on this report the cantonments were precipitately abandoned, and refuge taken in the citadel.

Ayub did not, however, fully invest Kandahar until the 6th August.

10. To return to the events of the 27th. It is worthy of remark that General Burrows makes no mention of efforts on the part of Officers to steady their men, nor are the Commanding Officers or other of the corps engaged mentioned with approval; but the casualty rolls, taken in connection with the undoubted heavy losses of the enemy, are a sufficient proof of the gallantry and devotion of those who fell.

11. Of the survivors, the Commander-in-Chief desires to bring to the notice of Government the Officers named by Brigadier-Generals Burrows and Nuttall, viz.:—

Captain J. R. Slade, R.H.A.
Major E. P. Leach, V.C., R.E.
Major G. C. Hogg, Brigade Major.
Lieutenant J. Monteith, 2nd Sind Horse.

12. The casualty rolls have already been submitted to Government with my No. 5327 A., of the 24th instant.

Returns of ordnance and of arms and accoutrements lost or enclosed, also a return of ammunition expended.

TELEGRAMS referred to in the Adjutant-General's Letter forwarding the Maiwand Despatches, paragraph 4.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 17th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 17th July. General Burrows reports that he has moved his force back from Helmand to Khushk-i-Nakhud, there to await events or orders. This move was necessitated by there being no supplies for the troops nor grain for horses. The little there was on the right bank was carried off or destroyed by mutineers. This point is of most strategic importance, having several roads converging on it. As the river Helmand is fordable, Ayub could cross anywhere. I am of opinion that General Burrows has acted judiciously in the matter.

TELEGRAM from QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, No. 4978, dated 17th July 1880.

SIMLA, 17th July. Chief wishes to know what General Burrows' views and intentions now are. Please tell him to report daily everything that goes on, for the information of Viceroy. Yours of 16th, giving information from General Burrows about pursuit and dispersion of Wali's mutinous troops and recovery of guns, very satisfactory.

TELEGRAM from QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, No. 4995, dated 17th July 1880.

SIMLA, 17th July. Yours 17th. Chief considers General Burrows acted judiciously in retiring on Khushk-i-Nakhud under the circumstances.

TELEGRAM from QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, No. 4997, dated 18th July 1880.

SIMLA, 18th July. Do you consider Khushk-i-Nakhud the most favourable position for covering Kandahar, and striking a blow at Ayub, should he cross the Helmand? Favour the Commander-in-Chief with a full expression of your views, both as regards the city and Ayub's probable movements. Reply in cipher. Also give dates on which you calculate that the different units of the reinforcements can reach Kandahar.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 19th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 19th July. Advanced guard of Ayub appears to have reached Girishk. Nothing certain known about Ayub himself to-day.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, No. 384 K., dated 19th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 19th July. Your telegram, 18th. Taking into consideration that the Helmand is now fordable everywhere, it presents no obstacle to the advance of Ayub at any point he chooses to cross it. Khushk-i-Nakhud is an important position covering roads leading from the Helmand to Kandahar. Whilst remaining on the Helmand, forage and grain could hardly be obtained, whereas they are plentiful at Khushk-i-Nakhud. Between the latter place and Girishk there is a desert 25 miles broad. General Burrows at Khushk-i-Nakhud is within fair supportable distance from Kandahar. The presence of a force there has the effect of keeping the people quiet. At present, I am unable to obtain any definite intelligence of Ayub's movements; an impression is abroad that he will not meet our troops in the open, but that if he crosses the river at all, he will do so to the north of Girishk, and perhaps make for Ghazni, for political reasons. As regards Kandahar great uneasiness prevails in the city; large numbers of the families are leaving daily, fearing the approach of Ayub. There are of course a number of disaffected men in and about Kandahar ready for a disturbance if they get a chance. I keep the city constantly patrolled, and have placed three 40-pounders of 5/11th in the citadel, which has had the effect of quieting the minds of those peaceably disposed.

Units of reinforcements will probably arrive here—

Detachment, 4th Native Infantry, on 24th.

Detachments, 28th Native Infantry, on 25th, 26th, and 27th.

Last detachment, 4th Native Infantry, on 28th.

9th and 24th Native Infantry are now in Bolan, and will be in position probably 24th and 30th July; 11th Foot come up Bolan in cart carriage, beginning by companies on 20th, and doing double stages to Dozan. One wing will be concentrated at Quetta on 1st August, leave Quetta 3rd, and reach Kandahar about 15th; two more companies will leave three days later, and last two form escorts to F/2nd, Royal Artillery. Information about Madras Cavalry not yet received from General Phayre. Will wire this to-morrow.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 21st July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 21st July. Precedence. Information from General Burrows, dated 19th. He has shifted his camp to a very eligible spot, three miles nearer Girishk. He reports 2,100 Ayub's cavalry have arrived at Girishk, he himself being at Mahmúdabad, 17 miles in rear, with his infantry and guns. It is reported that he intends to move either to the north of Girishk or the south by the Argasan Valley, but this is merely surmise. He has utilized the guns taken from the Wali by manning them from men of E/B and 66th Regiment. I am sending out to-night by forced marches 12 of the Wali's artillery horses, and harness, &c., to complete this battery as far as practicable, under an escort of 50 sabres, 3rd Sind Horse, whom I have directed to remain, as a temporary arrangement, with General Burrows, as he wished his cavalry increased.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 21st July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 21st July. General Burrows, under date 20th, writes:—Situation remains unchanged; travellers who have passed Ayub's camp say things are not going on smoothly there, and that in all probability there will be a split before they reach the Helmand. General Burrows ready for them. Troops healthy and in excellent spirits.

TELEGRAM from COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF (Quartermaster-General), Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, No. 5109, dated 21st July 1880.

SIMLA, 21st July. You have not answered Chief's question relative to suitability of Burrows' position for striking a blow at Ayub. It is of the utmost importance that Ayub should not be allowed to slip past Kandahar towards Ghazni without being attacked. As your reinforcements arrive, to what extent can you strengthen General Burrows? What are that Officer's views and intentions, and what steps are taken by Intelligence Department to obtain information of Ayub's movements? The Argandab road should also be observed.

You must keep Chief more fully and early informed of situation, as reports of Ayub's and Burrows' moves are received by Foreign long before yours.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 21st July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 21st July. News just received from Colonel St. John and General Burrows, that Ayub, with his regulars, reached the Helmand 20th. He has sent back his carriage for baggage, left a day's march in rear. Tribal sowars and some ghazis have joined him. His intention stated to be to move via Sungboor and Mir Karez and attack General Burrows. At Sungboor there are 200 ghazis with two standards. Spy states Luinab, with cavalry, had moved down river, intending to skirt desert and attack.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 22nd July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 22nd July. Letter from General Burrows, dated evening of 21st; no further news.

TELEGRAM from COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF (Quartermaster-General), Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, No. 5181, dated 22nd July 1880.

SIMLA, 22nd July. My telegram of yesterday, and yours of last night. You will understand that you have full liberty to attack Ayub, if you consider you are strong enough to do so. Government consider it of the greatest political importance that his force should be dispersed, and prevented by all possible means from passing on to Ghazni.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, No. 413 K., dated 23rd July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 23rd July. Your telegram. I am almost entirely dependent for intelligence on the Political Department. I have spies out, and obtained some information from sources in the town.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 23rd July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 23rd July. Report received from General Burrows, dated 22nd. No further news regarding Ayub. Our force at Khushk-i-Nakhud well entrenched and defended against any night attack. Supplies plentiful, except wood which is very scarce. A detachment, 4th Native Infantry, escorting ammunition, arrives here to-morrow, and 200 rifles, 28th Native Infantry, the day after.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 23rd July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 23rd July. Report just received from Colonel St. John. Spies state Ayub has crossed Helmand at Haidarabad. Party of his cavalry came yesterday to Sungboor and returned again. Small party of Ghazis collected there; stated they expected 5,000 horsemen to arrive to-day, and main body to-morrow. Few supplies at Sungboor, so Ayub cannot halt there more than one day. Report raises number of men who have joined Ayub to 4,000.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India, dated 24th July 1880, and received on the same date.

ON morning of 23rd our cavalry patrol, proceeding in the direction of Sungboor, came upon the enemy's advanced parties. Lieutenant Monteith, 3rd Sind Horse, who was in command, sent in word to camp, and, dismounting some of his men, checked the enemy, who retired out of range. Brigadier-General Nuttall, with 180 sabres, 3rd Light Cavalry, and two guns, E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, now came up, and a reconnaissance reported 600 sowars, marching parallel with a body of infantry, three miles beyond our advanced post. General Nuttall advanced 160 sabres and two guns for about three miles, the enemy retiring. When he got within 1,800 yards of the cavalry our men opened on them, and they bolted faster than ever, making for cover. General Nuttall pursued until he was six miles from camp, when he gave up the chase. Some horses of the enemy were killed, and men carried off wounded. No infantry were seen.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, No. 422 K., dated 25th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 25th July. General Burrows reports, that in the event of enemy moving up north, he purposes sending back superfluous baggage and sick to Kandahar, and moving up Kakrez Valley, opening up fresh line of communication.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 25th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 25th July. Information received this evening that Ayub's cavalry fell back last night to Helmand. Report received to the effect that 150 cavalry crossed into the Argandab three days ago; believed to have been sent to take back Surteep's family hidden in village there. Efforts appear to be made by Habeeboolla Khan, Barakzai, to raise people in Kakrez, without much success. There is much excitement throughout the country.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, No. 430 K., dated 26th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 26th July. Your telegram, 21st July. General Burrows states that should the enemy advance direct on Maiwand or on Khushk-i-Nakhud, he is prepared to attack him; should he attempt to reach Maiwand via Melmand, he would intercept him by Garmao Valley; should Ayub's force try to avoid him by taking road to Nish via Melmand and Ghorak, he proposes to move by Maiwand into Kakrez. To do this he will reduce his baggage and send back some sick reported unfit, and I will assist him in every way to lighten his column and make it more moveable.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 27th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 27th July. General Burrows, under date evening 25th, reports situation unchanged. Two Sind horsemen shot when patrolling near Sungboor. At Kandahar I hear, on best authority, that Habeeboolla has been to Kakrez and has tried to raise the people without success. He was at Soznee on Sunday, and then proposed crossing into the Argandab. The second detachment, 11th Foot, left Sibi last night. Five men of first detachment, struck down by sunstroke at Nari, are all doing well. Headquarters 9th and two mountain guns left Quetta for Gulistan this morning.

TELEGRAM from General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, dated 28th July 1880.

KANDAHAR, 27th July. General Burrows' force completely defeated; we take refuge in citadel; thirty sowars have escaped.

Enclosure 4 in No. 35.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., commanding the Kandahar Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL IN INDIA. (Dated Kandahar, 6th September 1880.)

IN forwarding the accompanying despatches from Generals Burrows and Nuttall, relative to the action of Maiwand, I have the honour to submit the following observations for the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

2. On the 27th June the Political Resident reported to me that Ayub Khan had left Herat with infantry, cavalry, and 30 guns. He at the same time strongly urged that active support should be given to the Wali of Kandahar, then at Girishk. After considering the matter, I decided on recommending that a brigade of infantry, a cavalry regiment, and a battery of horse artillery should be sent to the Helmand.

To strengthen the garrison to be left here, the 4th Native Infantry were ordered to be concentrated at Quetta, and a wing of the 2nd Beluchis to march from Kelat-i-Ghilzai to Kandahar, with the concurrence of the Political Resident.

3. On the 1st July the orders of Government were received through the Quartermaster-General, sanctioning an advance on Girishk, but that the Helmand was on no account to be crossed. The Kelat-i-Ghilzai garrison and line of communications were not to be weakened, and troops from the reserve were to be pushed forward at once, as the Commander-in-Chief considered the force proposed to be left at Kandahar weak in all arms.

4. On the 2nd July I received intelligence that Government intended Kandahar being reinforced by the 15th Foot, a battery of artillery, one Native cavalry and two Native infantry regiments.

5. I was fully aware that immense difficulties would present themselves in pushing forward these corps, and that it would take some time before they could reach me; but as Ayub's advance would, I considered, have a disturbing effect on Kandahar and the country, I thought it advisable that the force approved of by Government should move to Girishk in accordance with their orders.

6. Accordingly it marched on the 3rd July, and I was then left at Kandahar with the following garrison:—Squadron of Poona Horse, details of 3rd Light Cavalry, 3rd Sind Horse, four guns of C/2nd Royal Artillery, 5/11th Royal Artillery (Heavy Battery), 7th Fusileers, and a wing of the 19th Regiment Native Infantry,—vide return attached. This of course was a very weak garrison; but the 4th Native Infantry, followed by the 28th Native Infantry, were moving up along the line, and I trusted to this becoming known, as also that other troops were coming, to prevent anything disturbing the ordinary state of affairs here.

7. On the 13th July the head-quarters of the 4th Native Infantry arrived here, and between that date and the 28th July, the remainder of the regiment and the 28th Regiment Native Infantry joined at Kandahar.

8. It will thus be seen that I had no means of strengthening General Burrows except by sending him some details of the 1st Regiment, N.I., and 30th N.I., left behind or joined at Kandahar from escort or other duties, and by 50 sabres of the 3rd Sind Horse under Lieutenant Monteith, who took out horses, &c., to equip the smooth-bore battery which had been rescued from the Wali's troops. On the 23rd July, however, by which time the 4th N.I. were nearly complete, and some of the 28th had arrived, I arranged to send some 230 rank and file of the former regiment, with a convoy of commissariat stores, and that some 130 of these should remain with General Burrows, the others returning as escort to a convoy of his sick.

9. Before this could be carried out, General Burrows had moved from Khushk-i-Nakhud, and the battle of Maiwand was fought.

10. I had, however, in the meantime, kept General Burrows fully informed of the instructions received from the Commander-in-Chief, notably the Quartermaster-General's telegram dated 15th July, to the effect that he must act according to his own judgment, and also the one dated 21st July, saying that Ayub should not be allowed to slip past Kandahar towards Ghazni without being attacked.

11. Acting on this judgment, and on information which turned out to be inaccurate, he advanced from Khushk-i-Nakhud on Maiwand, and there found himself in contact with overwhelming numbers.

12. General Burrows' report attached enters into the details of the action.

13. The further details regarding the movements of General Burrows' force and intelligence will be submitted in a separate report to the Quartermaster-General.

RETURN referred to in para. 6 of the foregoing Despatch.

	Effective.			Sick.			Total.	Followers.	Horses.	Mules.	Bullocks.	Elephants.
	Europeans.		Natives.	Europeans.		Natives.
	Officers.	Warrant, N.C. Officers and Men.	Warrant, N.C. Officers.	Officers.	Warrant, N.C. Officers and Men.	Warrant, N.C. Officers and Men.
Head-quarters Staff	5	—	—	—	—	—	5	22	12	—	—	—
1st Brigade Staff	—	—	—	1	—	—	1	2	1	—	—	—
2nd Brigade Staff	2	—	—	—	—	—	2	7	5	—	—	—
R.E. Staff	2	—	—	—	—	—	2	6	4	—	—	—
R.A. Staff	1	—	—	1	—	—	2	8	—	—	—	—
Medical Staff	6	10	—	2	1	—	19	90	6	1	5	—
Political Department	1	—	—	—	—	—	1	2	2	—	—	—
Ecclesiastical Department	1	—	—	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	—	—
Commissariat Department	8	11	—	—	—	—	19	1,887	19	2	84	—
Ordnance Department	1	6	31	—	1	3	42	22	—	—	—	—
Transport Department	5	3	38	—	—	—	46	450	21	—	105	—
E/B, R.H.A.	—	10	1	—	9	1	21	38	12	—	3	—
C/2nd, R.A.	5	109	10	—	25	2	151	224	90	—	20	—
5/11th, R.A.	3	87	—	—	3	—	93	283	11	—	374	—
Poona Horse	5	—	190	—	—	17	212	231	209	—	—	—
3rd Sind Horse	1	—	178	—	—	—	179	212	232	—	—	—
3rd Light Cavalry	1	—	83	—	—	26	110	111	113	—	—	—
No. 2 Company, Sappers and Miners.	—	3	30	—	1	5	39	12	—	—	—	—
2/7th Foot*	18	588	—	6	73	—	685	264	10	—	16	—
66th Foot†	—	—	—	1	90	—	91	3	—	—	—	—
1st Regiment N.I.	—	—	91	—	—	16	107	1	—	—	—	—
4th " " "	—	—	6	—	—	—	6	—	—	—	—	—
19th‡	6	—	524	—	—	51	581	138	6	—	6	—
29th " " "	—	—	2	—	—	6	8	—	—	—	—	—
30th " " "	—	—	28	—	—	12	40	3	—	—	—	—
Total	71	827	1,272	11	203	139	2,463	4,016	753	3	613	—

* Includes men attached from the Bengal Army.

† 66th Regiment. Includes clerks and a few men employed departmentally.

‡ 19th Regiment N.I. Includes men attached from the Bengal Army.

(Signed) F. J. S. ADAM, Major,
Assistant Quartermaster-General, Kandahar Force.

Enclosure 5 in No. 35.

From Brigadier-General G. R. S. BURROWS to the ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Kandahar Force. (Dated Kandahar, 30th August 1880.)

I have the honour to report that, on the 26th ultimo, whilst encamped at Khushk-i-Nakhud, I received information that 2,000 of the enemy's cavalry and a large number of ghazis had arrived at Garmao and Maiwand, and that it was Ayub Khan's intention to follow with the main body of his army immediately.

2. A sketch is attached to this report, showing the positions of Maiwand and Khushk-i-Nakhud, from which it will be

* Vide correspondence from the Assistant Quartermaster-General, Kandahar Force, attached.

Ayub Khan from passing on to Ghazni, it was incumbent on me to intercept him either at Maiwand or Khushk-i-Nakhud.

3. Hitherto I had found it impossible to obtain any reliable information regarding Ayub Khan's intended movements, for although, when the expedition set out, it was understood that we were to operate in a friendly country, and in concert with a loyal army, the actual circumstances were the reverse of this. The Wali's army had gone over to the enemy; the Wali himself was a refugee in my camp. Whatever little political influence there may previously have been in the country was at an end, and every man's hand was against us.

4. In the absence of intelligence beyond such as my cavalry patrols brought in, and from which I knew that the enemy's advanced post was at Sungboor, twelve miles in my front, on the Khushk-i-Nakhud road, I considered it advisable to await events in the position I had taken up at the latter place.

5. On learning, however, that the enemy was making for Maiwand, I determined to move on that place at once.

6. The force, strength as per margin, marched at 6.30 a.m. on the 27th July, encumbered by an enormous quantity of ordnance and commissariat stores and baggage. This was unavoidable, as the hostile state of the country rendered it impossible to leave anything behind in safety, and I could not divide my already too weak force.

E/B, Royal Horse Artillery,—
Officers	5
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	141
Horses	191
Six 9-pdr. M.L.R. guns.
Smooth-bore Battery of,—
6-pdrs. taken from the Wali's mutinous army, and manned by 1 Officer and 42 men, 66th Foot.
66th Foot,—
Officers	19
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	497
3rd Light Cavalry,—
Officers	6
Native Officers	13
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	297
Horses	306
3rd Sind Horse,—
Officers	5
Native Officers	8
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	247
Horses	252
Sappers and Miners,—
Officer	1
European Non-commissioned Officers	2
Native Officer	1
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	41
1st Native Infantry (Grenadiers),—
Officers	7
Native Officers	15
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	626
30th N. I. (Jacob's rifles),—
Officers	8
Native Officers	14
Non-commissioned Officers, rank and file	603
Of these numbers, 34 Europeans and 50 Natives were in hospital.

7. After proceeding about eight miles, large masses of troops were discovered, about four miles distant, moving in a diagonal direction across our right front, and it was evident that a collision with Ayub Khan's army must take place before we reached our destination.

8. Advancing on a village which lay about a mile in my front, I placed my baggage there, and on the higher ground beyond I deployed my infantry into line with guns in the centre, and the cavalry on the left, covering the movement with two horse artillery guns and a troop of cavalry.

9. It was difficult, on account of the haze and dust, to estimate the number of the enemy, but, judging by the extent of country covered, I believe I am within the mark when I set down his strength at 25,000 men.

10. At 11.45 a.m., the fight commenced by the advanced guns under Lieutenant H. Maclaine coming into action on our left, followed by two horse artillery guns and the smooth-bore battery in our centre. The remaining two 9-pounders were also brought up from the rear guard.

11. In about half an hour, the enemy began to reply from their right, gradually extending along their front, and concentrating the fire of thirty guns on our position.

12. The infantry were ordered to lie down, and the wing of Jacob's Rifles, which had been in reserve, was brought up on the flanks, which were threatened on the right by ghazis, and on the left by the enemy's regular cavalry.

13. In this position we remained for nearly three hours, our artillery making excellent practice, the cavalry holding the enemy's cavalry in check, and the infantry keeping up a steady fire on the ghazis on our right.

14. A large body of the enemy's regular infantry were on our left front, and about the middle of the day they advanced in line, but well delivered volleys checked them, and they did not come on again.

15. Between 2 and 3 o'clock, the fire of the enemy's guns slackened, and swarms of ghazis advanced rapidly towards our centre.

16. Up to this time, the casualties amongst the infantry had not been heavy, and as the men were firing steadily and the guns were sweeping the ground with case shot, I felt confident as to the result.

17. But our fire failed to check the ghazis; they came on in overwhelming numbers and making good their rush, they seized the two most advanced horse artillery guns.

18. With the exception of two companies of Jacob's Rifles, which had caused me great anxiety by their unsteadiness early in the day, the conduct of the troops had been splendid up to this point; but now, at the critical moment, when a firm resistance might have achieved a victory, the infantry gave way, and commencing from the left, rolled up, like a wave, to the right. After vainly endeavouring to rally them, I went for the cavalry. (I was obliged to go myself, having no Staff Officer left).

19. The 3rd Light Cavalry and the 3rd Sind Horse were retiring slowly on our left, and I called upon them to charge across the front and so give the infantry an opportunity of reforming; but the terrible artillery fire to which they had been exposed, and from which they had suffered so severely, had so shaken them that General Nuttall was unable to give effect to my order.

20. All was now over, and I returned to the infantry to do what might be done to save them from complete annihilation.

21. After retreating across the nullah, and through the gardens near the village, a small walled enclosure was reached, and in this about 150 men of different corps, with several Officers, made a stand and checked the enemy for a time; but, seeing that we were rapidly being outflanked, and that our line of retreat would presently be cut off, I gave the order to retire.

22. A wide open plain lay before us, and, with discipline utterly gone and the men all scattered, the prospect was discouraging; but we succeeded in making our way without much loss for a distance of three miles, when we joined the guns and cavalry in rear of the baggage, which was by this time stretching for miles over the country towards Kandahar.

23. Small parties of the enemy continued to hover in our rear, but no vigorous pursuit was made.

24. After daylight, we were fired on from every village we passed, until we reached Kokeran, when we met a small force under General Brooke, which cleared the way for us into Kandahar.

25. Of the four horse artillery 9-pounder guns and six smooth-bore guns with which we left the field, the whole of the former and one of the latter were brought safely into Kandahar; the five other smooth-bore guns had, one by one, to be abandoned during the retreat, the horses being unable to bring them on.

26. Of the conduct of the troops, generally, I have already spoken, but I wish to bring the artillery to special notice; their behaviour was admirable; exposed to a heavy fire, they served their guns coolly and steadily as on parade, and when the guns were rushed, they fought the ghazis with hand-spikes, sponge-rods, &c.

27. In explanation of the unfortunate loss of the two horse artillery guns, the Officer commanding the battery has reported that Lieutenant Maclaine, who was in charge of them, waited to fire another round of case after the order to limber up and retire had been given, and the delay was fatal.

28. The detachment of the 66th Regiment, under Lieutenant G. De la M. Faunce, which manned the smooth-bore battery, also behaved extremely well.

29. On Major Blackwood being wounded during the action, Captain J. R. Slade, R.H.A., took command of E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.

30. I beg to bring the conduct of this Officer to very special notice. Captain Slade was not only conspicuous for his gallantry during the day, but throughout the long and trying retreat of forty miles, he worked with unflagging energy, encouraging his men and tending the wounded Officers and men who crowded his guns.

31. I was indebted to Major E. P. Leach, V.C., R.E., for valuable assistance during the retreat.

32. The casualty returns have already been forwarded to you.

Documents referred to in paragraph 2 of the foregoing Despatch.

Memo. from Major F. J. S. ADAM, Assistant Quartermaster-General, Kandahar Force, to Brigadier-General G. R. S. BURROWS, commanding the Girishk Column. (No. 473 K., dated 22nd July 1880.)

The following telegram, received from the Quartermaster-General in India, is forwarded to Brigadier-General Burrows, commanding the Girishk Column, for information and guidance. It is requested that a copy may be furnished to the Political Resident, Southern Afghanistan.

From QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar. (Dated Simla, 22nd July 1880.)

Simla, 22nd. My telegram of yesterday and yours of last night. You will understand that you have full liberty to attack Ayub if you consider you are strong enough to do so. Government considers it of the greatest political importance that his force should be dispersed, and prevented, by all possible means, from passing on to Ghazni.

From Major F. J. S. ADAM, Assistant Quartermaster-General, Kandahar Force, to Brigadier-General G. S. R. BURROWS, commanding the Girishk Column, (No. 470 K., dated 22nd July 1880.)

I HAVE the honour, by direction of the Lieutenant-General commanding, to forward you a copy of a telegram received last night from the Commander-in-Chief in India:—

TELEGRAM from the COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar. Dated Simla, 21st July 1880.

“Simla, 21st July. You have not answered Chief’s question relative to suitability of Burrows’ position for striking a blow at Ayub. It is of the utmost importance that Ayub should not be allowed to slip past Kandahar towards Ghazni without being attacked. As your reinforcements arrive, to what extent can you strengthen General Burrows? What are that Officer’s views and intentions, and what steps are taken by Intelligence Department to obtain information of Ayub’s movements? The Argandab road should also be observed. You must keep Chief more fully and early informed of situation, as reports of Ayub’s and Burrows’ moves are received by Foreign long before yours.”

2. General Primrose desires you will at once report what plans you have resolved on in the event of Ayub’s main body crossing the Helmand at Girishk, and what you would propose in the event of his moving north and covering himself in your direction with cavalry. He would also much like to know if you are solely dependant for information on what is supplied you by the Political Resident, and if any steps have been taken by you to send out spies in the direction of Girishk, Maiwand, and south towards Killa-i-Biet and the desert.

3. General Primrose desires me also to thank you for the letter received last night relative to an attack which it was reported would be made on the camp by Ayub’s cavalry, but as this may not have taken place, he would be obliged by your furnishing, as soon as possible, the information called for by the Commander-in-Chief.

Enclosure 6 in No. 35.

From Brigadier-General T. NUTTALL, commanding the Cavalry Brigade, to the Brigade-Major, 1st Brigade, Kandahar Field Force. (Dated Kandahar, 3rd August 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report the operations of the Cavalry brigade under my command in the action fought in the vicinity of Maiwand on the 27th July 1880.

2. On the morning of that day, agreeably to orders, by 5.30 the camp was struck, baggage packed, and the brigade, strength as per margin, mounted at 6 o’clock and marched from Khushk-i-Nakhud on Maiwand about 6.30. My dispositions were as follows. The advanced guard was composed of a troop under the command of Lieutenant T. P. Geoghegan, 3rd Light Cavalry; in rear of the advanced guard, at about half a mile interval, followed the remainder of the 3rd Light Cavalry, with four guns of E/B, R.H.A.; the rear guard was brought up by Colonel Malcolmson, C.B., which consisted of 96 sabres, 3rd Sind Horse, which regiment also provided parties of a troop to the left flank under Lieutenant A. M. Monteith, with another party of 50 sabres, under Lieutenant E. D. N. Smith, to the right, to protect the baggage, which marched on this flank.

E/B., R.H.A., 6 guns.
3rd Light Cavalry, 260 sabres.
3rd Sind Horse, 200 sabres.

3. About 10 a.m., the enemy's cavalry were seen on our left front at some distance, crossing our front, and moving in the Maiwand direction, and on the nearer approach of our columns, the greater portion of them inclined in a northerly direction towards the Gurmao Valley, their advanced parties standing fast to watch our movements.

A village stood on our left front, and Lieutenant Geoghegan, with two guns, E/B, under Major Blackwood, were directed to clear it if occupied.

It being found unoccupied, Lieutenant Geoghegan was directed to stand fast in front of the village, and there await the arrival of the baggage, which was ordered to be collected there. In the meantime the two guns of E/B, R. H. A., under Major Blackwood, moved on to the edge of a rather difficult broad nullah, that ran in front of the village. It was at this place that both Major Blackwood and myself halted to reconnoitre the enemy's position, when we noticed that Lieutenant MacLaine, who had been left with the other two guns, had crossed the nullah some little way to our left, and, having been joined by Lieutenant Monteith with a troop of the 3rd Sind Horse, was advancing rapidly towards the enemy.

Mounted orderlies were despatched to recall him, but before they reached he had halted and had come into action. On noting Lieutenant MacLaine's unauthorized movement, I at once, with Major Blackwood's two guns, crossed the nullah, and with the remainder of the 3rd Cavalry moved rapidly to the front. In the meantime, orders were sent to bring up the two guns of E/B, R. H. A., then detached with the rear guard. After advancing some little distance the enemy's position and forces were distinctly seen drawn up towards Gurmao, covering some miles. Their cavalry, infantry, and the ghazis appeared in countless numbers, and Major Blackwood at once brought his guns into action. As I considered Lieutenant MacLaine's guns were still rather isolated, I sent orders for him to move down and take up another position nearer the main body.

The guns now advanced two or three times, when they halted and awaited the advance of the Infantry brigade and the battery of smooth-bore guns. It was observed that large bodies of foot-men and mounted men were making towards us from the Maiwand direction, and on the guns opening on them, large numbers of foot-men streamed away along our right flank. The position now of the Cavalry brigade was as follows:—two guns, R.H.A., on the right, supported by 130 sabres of the 3rd Light Cavalry, under Major A. P. Currie, who, with Captain M. Mayne, also watched the right flank, and two guns E/B, R.H.A., under Lieutenant MacLaine, on the extreme left, supported by a troop, 3rd Sind Horse; and in rear, echelloned outside the guns, but with left thrown back, was a troop of the 3rd Light Cavalry under Lieutenant J. H. E. Reid, formed thus to watch a large body of the enemy's cavalry, who had formed with the evident intention of turning our left flank.

A number of cavalry, regular and irregular, were now seen moving along on our left flank towards the baggage and the rear, with which were Colonel Malcolmson, C.B., and Lieutenant Geoghegan, the former with 96 sabres, 3rd Sind Horse, and the latter with 50 sabres, 3rd Light Cavalry. Their cavalry had now completely enveloped our flank, and were threatening the rear. Fifty sabres of the Sind Horse, under Lieutenant Smith, who had originally been detached as right flanking party, joined and were now placed to watch the left flank.

Our guns opened fire about 10.50, and for half an hour no reply was made by the artillery of the enemy. However, about 11.15, the enemy replied and opened from their batteries with a well directed fire. It will be observed that the necessities of the situation precluded my forming any reserve cavalry which could be kept out of range of the artillery, the whole available force amounting to 460 sabres, and these were fully occupied as above detailed. The configuration of the ground about was a level plain, which rendered it quite impossible to get any cover either for the guns and cavalry, which were exposed thus for three hours to a raking, well directed and concentrated fire from five batteries.

4. Firing in the direction of the rear now told that our rear was engaged. The action had proceeded some little time, when more masses of cavalry appeared on our left flank, and to meet this movement, I placed all the cavalry that could be spared on the left flank. As the enemy, however, did not appear anxious to close with us, at my request General Burrows sent two smooth-bore guns, under Captain Slade, to this flank, who opened a well-directed fire on the masses assembled. After this the two guns under Captain Slade were moved to their former position in the front. Several demonstrations were now made from this flank by my cavalry against the enemy's cavalry, who kept firing at long ranges at us, but they only retired firing. Our men were, however, ordered every now and then to fire dismounted.

It was about this time (12.30) that the enemy succeeded in establishing a battery towards our right flank. During all this time, and till about 2 o'clock, our cavalry were losing heavily in horses and men, although I did all I could, by changing position and moving them, opening out, &c., to lessen the effect of the artillery fire.

5. Nothing could have been steadier or finer than the conduct of all ranks of the cavalry during the very severe and trying artillery cannonade to which they were exposed for about three hours, playing a passive part as escorts to the guns, and protecting the flanks from the enemy's cavalry, which literally swarmed round our left flank.

The guns of the E/B, R.H.A., under their officers, and those of the smooth-bore battery under Captain Slade, were most admirably and steadily served, and nothing could equal, and certainly never excel, the gallant, cool and collected bearing of Officers and men during the action.

6. At about 2.20 o'clock, it was evident that the immense superiority of the enemy in numbers had began to tell with effect, for not only had the enemy swarmed round us on the left flank, and the artillery were plying us with a well-directed and destructive fire, not only from the front but from a flank, but the ghazis, who had led the van of the enemy's attack from the first, were advancing in overwhelming numbers in spite of our artillery and infantry fire, and were supported by a long line of infantry a short distance behind, and threatened to outflank the infantry. Captain Slade had

* To bring up more ammunition. withdrawn some of the guns and had moved to G.B. the rear.* About 2.30, I now perceived the infantry were in a confused state, falling back, and as their fire was slackening, I ordered the cavalry to form line, and by a charge stem the rush of ghazis on the infantry; but I bitterly regret to have to record that, although I was most ably seconded by the Officers, only portions of the 3rd Light Cavalry and 3rd Sind Horse formed up, and we charged, but the men bearing away to the right and rear, the charge was not delivered home, and was of but little effect.

All subsequent attempts made at this time by myself and the Officers to induce the men to rally and face the enemy failed.

The men seemed totally demoralized by the combined effects of the very heavy artillery fire which had, during the action, killed and wounded 149 of the horses, and about 14 per cent. of the men engaged in the front, the retreating infantry and the swarms of ghazis that*

There was now nothing left but to fall back on the rear guard, which had advanced a short way towards us, but it was not till we reached the four guns, Royal Horse Artillery, brought out of action by Captain Slade, that the men, through the exertions of the Officers, Staff, and myself, were formed up facing the enemy. Here I halted, but could see no sign of any formed body of infantry retiring; but a long stream of scattered infantry could be seen stretching away for about two miles on our right as

No cavalry came near me. I was in the rear of the retreating infantry with three or four other Officers. we stood facing the enemy. I, however, sent my Orderly Officer, Lieutenant Monteith, to see if he could rally any stragglers, or see any Officers, but

G. B. after some little time, he returned with the report that the men he had met were quite disorganized and out of hand, and were making to the rear.

In the meantime, it was reported that General Burrows was amongst the slain.

I was determined, if possible, to save the guns, &c.

7. The enemy's guns had now got the range again, and commenced playing on us.

I saw no cavalry between myself and the column of baggage. There may have been a few irregular horsemen. Captain Slade, with his guns, now retired, and I covered the retreat with the cavalry, Captain Slade two or three times coming into action, and firing one or a couple of rounds. A large number of cavalry were to be seen on our left flank, about a mile off, making evidently for our rear.

G. B.

* Sic in original.

8. After proceeding some distance the enemy's guns ceased playing on us, and I then threw out a troop of the Sind Horse to cover the retreat, which was well and ably conducted by Lieutenant Monteith.

9. After proceeding some little way, information was brought that the rearguard was hard pressed; and leaving a troop with the guns, I returned with the 3rd Light Cavalry and 3rd Sind Horse to reinforce Lieutenant Monteith, but found all was going on well. After we had placed some tired-out and wounded men on camels and horses, we retired, agreeably to instructions, on Ata Karez, which was the nearest place where water was obtainable on the road.

10. I joined General Burrows with the rearguard about 2 o'clock in the morning at Hauz-i-Madat. After a halt of half an hour there, General Burrows gave the order to advance. I threw out a troop of the 3rd Light Cavalry as a rear guard, which was well commanded by Lieutenant Geoghegan. After daylight we had to fight our way to Kokeran, where a small brigade under General Brooke, which had been sent to our aid, met us.

11. It is now my painful duty to record the death of the Officers of the Cavalry Brigade who lost their lives during the action. Major Blackwood, commanding E/B., R. H. A., was wounded early in the action, returned to his duty after his wound had been dressed, and resumed command of the battery till he was again wounded, and subsequently killed. Lieutenant Osborne remained with his guns to the last moment, and was then cut down.

Lieutenant MacLaine was slightly wounded during the action, and lost his life subsequently during the retreat. In the 3rd Cavalry I regret to record the death of Lieutenant W. C. Owen, who was killed when charging the enemy.

12. I have now the great satisfaction of bringing to the notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the names of the following Officers who did special good service on this day:—

Captain J. R. Slade, who commanded the E/B Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, whilst Major Blackwood was having his wounds dressed.

Major G. C. Hogg, my Brigade Major, and Lieutenant J. Monteith, 2nd Sind Horse, my Orderly Officer, rendered me most effective and efficient service.

The list of killed and wounded in my brigade has been submitted direct to the Assistant Adjutant-General, Kandahar Field Force.

P.S.—I had one Orderly, 3rd Cavalry, shot dead, and another Orderly, Sind Horse, had his horse shot down during the action.

LIST OF CASUALTIES:

3rd Light Cavalry :—

	Killed.	Wounded.	Total.
European Officers	1	2	3
Rank and file	26	18	44
Horses	58	42	100

3rd Sind Horse :—

European Officers	0
Rank and file	14	5	19
Horses	40	9	49

(Signed) T. NUTTALL, Brigadier-General,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade.

Enclosure 7 in No. 35.

RETURN showing the Number of Officers, Non-commissioned Officers, and Men, Killed, Wounded, and Missing in the action at Mainwand, on the 27th July 1880.

Corps.	Europeans.									Horses.									Followers.		Horses.
	Killed.			Wounded.			Missing.			Killed.			Wounded.			Missing.			Killed.	Wounded.	Killed.	Wounded.
	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Native Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Native Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Native Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.
Staff	1	—	1	1	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Ordnance Department . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	4	—	—	—
Commissariat Department .	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	19	—	—	—
No. 2 Field Hospital . .	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	14	—	—	—
E/B, Royal Horse Artillery	2	12	14	1	12	13	1*	6	7	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	107	—	100	9
No 2 Company Sappers and Miners.	1	2	3	—	—	—	—	—	—	15	15	1	6	7	—	—	—	—	6	—	—	—
3rd Sind Horse.	—	—	—	1	—	1	—	—	—	14	14	—	5	5	—	—	—	—	24	3	39	17
3rd Light Cavalry . . .	1	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	—	26	26	—	18	18	—	—	—	—	46	1	58	42
66th Foot	10	276†	286	2	30	32	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	43	—	—	—
1st Grenadiers Native Infantry.	2	—	2	2	—	2	—	—	—	8	356	364	4	55	59	—	—	—	48	3	4	—
30th Regiment Native Infantry.	3	—	3	1	—	1	—	—	—	3	232	235	4	25	29	—	—	—	20	—	—	—
	20	290	310	8	42	50	1	6	7	11	643	654	9	109	118	—	—	—	331	7	201	63

* Prisoner in Ayub's Camp.

† Includes one Corporal, 59th Regiment.

(Signed) C. J. BURNETT, Major,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Kandahar Force.
J. M. PRIMROSE, Lieutenant-General,
Commanding Kandahar Force.

Kandahar, 3rd August 1880.

No. 36.

No. 219 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 12th October 1880.

OUR Despatches of the 3rd and 17th August, and of the 7th September, will have made known to your Lordship the general outline of the events connected with Sirdar Ayub Khan's invasion of the province of Kandahar; but we propose now to enter into somewhat fuller detail with regard to these transactions, from the time when authentic news of Ayub Khan's actual advance towards Kandahar first reached us down to the defeat and dispersion of his army by the forces under Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts. It will be in your Lordship's recollection that, on the 18th June, we were informed that no attempt at an advance from Herat, beyond the pitching of the standards outside the gate, an event which had occurred often before, had been made by Ayub Khan, and that it seemed probable that nothing would be done by him. But on the 22nd we received intelligence that the Wali of Kandahar had heard from Herat that an attack was really contemplated, and that 2,000 horsemen were about to be despatched under the command of the Luinab to Zamindawar; and in sending this report Lieutenant-Colonel St. John, our Resident at Kandahar, stated that, under these circumstances, he recommended the advance of a brigade to Maiwand. Immediately upon the receipt of this information, a telegram was despatched to Mr. Thompson, Her Majesty's Minister at Teheran, to ask what news he could furnish of the military movements and state of affairs at Herat, it having been found that the most accurate intelligence of what was going on in that quarter was generally obtained from the Agent at Meshed. On the 26th a reply was received from Mr. Thomson, confirming the rumour of Ayub Khan's advance against Kandahar, and giving an account of the strength and composition of his army, which was communicated on the same day to Colonel St. John. On the 27th, General Primrose telegraphed to the Quartermaster-General, to say that he had arranged, pending orders from the Commander-in-Chief, that a brigade, with a battery of Horse Artillery, and a regiment of Native Cavalry, should move on Girishk, and that he was of opinion that active support to the Wali, who was then at Girishk, would be more efficacious than if the whole force remained at Kandahar. No time was lost after Mr. Thomson's telegram reached us in considering what measures it would be advisable to take. The advance of a hostile army upon Kandahar threatened our military position in Southern Afghanistan, and it would have been impossible, in our judgment, to have remained quietly in our cantonments while Ayub Khan advanced across the Helmund, occupying the territory of our ally, and gathering strength at every step, in consequence of our apparent supineness. As he approached Kandahar the disaffected portion of the population would have joined him from every side, and if the authority of the Wali had been then overthrown, he might fairly have attributed it to our refusal to give him the support for which he asked. As we have already informed your Lordship in our letter of the 17th August, those best qualified to advise upon the situation recommended that Ayub Khan's advance should be met by a demonstration towards the Helmund, and, under these circumstances, we came unanimously to the conclusion, that, if the intelligence of the march of the Herat army should be confirmed, a British force ought to advance to the Helmund, and that reinforcements should be sent forward to Kandahar as soon as possible. But though we were ourselves convinced of the advisability of the measures above described, we felt it our duty to obtain your Lordship's sanction to them before any orders upon the subject were issued by us; and, in order to be prepared to act at once, if the necessity should arise, a telegram, informing your of our proposed action, was despatched by the Viceroy on the evening of the 27th June, and your approval was received by us on the 1st July.

2. On the 30th June we were informed by Colonel St. John that the Luinab was supposed to have reached Farah, and, therefore, as soon as your Lordship's message of the 1st July reached us, the proposals contained in General Primrose's telegram of the 27th were at once sanctioned by us, and orders were simultaneously issued to move up reinforcements from the rear to the extent of a brigade, consisting of a British Infantry and two Native Infantry regiments, with a battery of Artillery and a regiment of Native Cavalry. General Primrose had suggested that the garrison at Kandahar should be strengthened by moving up one regiment of Native Infantry from Quetta, to be replaced on the line of communication by another from the reserve division in Sind, and by bringing a wing of the 2nd Biluchis from Kelat-i-Ghilzai; but Sir F. Haines considered that these proposals would not sufficiently meet the occasion, and his views being fully approved, the larger force detailed above was at once ordered to commence its march to Kandahar. It is due to the Commander-in-Chief to place on record that, in the latter end of May, His Excellency considering that Kandahar was weakly held, recommended that the Bombay Reserve Division should be mobilized as soon as possible after it should be known for a certainty that Ayub Khan contemplated a move on Kandahar; and although, as your Lordship will have learnt from the 5th and 6th paragraphs of our letter of the 17th of August, it was not until the receipt of Mr. Thomson's telegram of the 25th of June that we were in possession of certain intelligence of the Sirdar's movements, the Military Department had already, in consequence of the Commander-in-Chief's suggestion, been in communication with the Bombay Government, by whom the arrangements for the transport of the Reserve Division were made, with a view to be prepared for immediate action, if the necessity should arise.

3. In issuing instructions to General Primrose with reference to the advance of a brigade to the Helmund, we deemed it advisable to direct that the troops should not cross that river. Both military and political reasons led us to desire to confine our operations to the Kandahar side of the Helmund. General Burrows, when he arrived at the destination thus assigned to him, was already at a considerable distance from his supports, and, if he had been allowed at the outset to enlarge the sphere of his operations, any indiscretion on the part of the Wali, who was commanding his own forces, might have drawn him on still further from his base, and diverted him from the principal object of his movement, which was to secure our position at Kandahar. We were also anxious on political grounds not to interfere directly in Zamindawar, where the Wali's authority was not fully recognized, and where the presence of our troops might have involved us in very undesirable complications.

4. General Burrows reached the Helmund on the 11th July. On the 15th we received intimation that the Wali's infantry were not to be trusted, and that the General had consequently decided to cross the river and disarm them without waiting for orders. The Commander-in-Chief, therefore, immediately telegraphed to General Primrose that, in the altered situation of affairs, General Burrows must act according to his own discretion, reporting fully and observing caution, on account of his distance from his supports. Full discretion was thus given upon all points to the General Officer upon the spot, who had already very properly understood the restriction of his operations to the left bank of the Helmund contained in our original instructions as not precluding him from crossing the river when the Wali's troops had broken out into mutiny; and that restriction, having been removed altogether on the 15th July, exercised no influence whatever upon subsequent events. In the meanwhile General Burrows, having crossed the Helmund, had defeated the mutineers, and recovered the Wali's guns, and on the evening of the 15th he determined to fall back to Khushk-i-Nakhud with a view to greater facility of supply and easier communication with Kandahar. He reached that position on the 17th, and two days afterwards he shifted his camp three miles nearer to Girishk for the purpose of occupying what he considered to be a better military position. General Primrose, in answer to direct questions from the Commander-in-Chief, described the position of Khushk-i-Nakhud as an important one covering the roads leading from the Helmund to Kandahar, and as within fair supportable distance of that city.

5. Whilst these movements were going on, the reinforcements were being pushed up to Kandahar as rapidly as possible, in spite of the delays occasioned by the railway between Jacobabad and Sibi having been broken by floods on several occasions. The first detachment, consisting of the Head Quarters and 270 of the 4th Bombay Native Infantry, reached General Primrose on the 13th July, and others followed in as quick succession as was practicable up to the time when communications with Kandahar were interrupted in consequence of General Burrows' defeat. We consider that much praise is due to General Phayre and Sir R. Sandeman for their exertions in despatching these reinforcements under circumstances of considerable difficulty, owing to the frequent interruption of the railway communications, and to other causes.

6. After General Burrows' retirement from the Helmund, the advance of Ayub Khan's army was slow, and rumours were rife of dissensions in his camp. On the 19th, General Primrose reported that the impression abroad was that Ayub would not meet our troops in the open, but that if he crossed the Helmund at all he would do so to the north of Girishk, and perhaps make for Ghazni for political reasons; and on 21st, he informed the Quartermaster-General that General Burrows was ready for them (the enemy), and that his troops were healthy and in excellent spirits. As we have already pointed out to your Lordship, in our letter of the 17th August, the effect upon our military reputation, and upon the political situation generally in Afghanistan, if Ayub Khan had moved without interruption straight upon Ghazni, would have been very damaging, and the political reasons for desiring to prevent him from doing so are so obvious that we need not enter upon them in detail. But, at the same time, it was clear that political considerations of a general kind must be subordinated under the circumstances to the requirements of the military situation on the spot, and the Commander-in-Chief, therefore, while drawing General Primrose's attention, in his telegram of the 22nd July, to the importance of preventing Ayub Khan from slipping past our forces and passing on to Ghazni, was careful to avoid giving any positive orders to that Officer, and in intimating to him that he was at full liberty to attack the enemy, His Excellency made his doing so strictly dependent upon his being satisfied that he was strong enough for the purpose. In thus subordinating political to military considerations, His Excellency acted in entire accordance with the views of the Government of India.

7. On the 25th, the Quartermaster-General was informed by General Primrose that, in the event of the enemy moving up to the north, General Burrows proposed to send back his superfluous baggage and sick to Kandahar, and to move up the Kakrez Valley, opening up a fresh line of communication. It is much to be regretted that this intention to send the baggage and sick to the rear was not carried into effect. On the 27th July, General Burrows left Khushk-i-Nakhud, and having unexpectedly, as it appears, encountered Ayub Khan's whole army in the neighbourhood of Maiwand, he sustained the defeat with respect to which we have addressed your Lordship in the Military Department.

8. Immediately upon the receipt of the news of the loss of the battle of Maiwand, General Primrose abandoned the cantonments at Kandahar and retired into the city, having first despatched a telegram to the Quartermaster-General, which was received on the 28th July. After that date communication with Kandahar became very difficult, and up to the 23rd August neither the Commander-in-Chief nor the Government of India received any intelligence from General Primrose, except that which was conveyed in two letters addressed by him to General Phayre on the 11th and 21st August respectively, and forwarded to the military authorities here; and it was not until the 6th September that any reports were sent in giving an account of the battle of Maiwand, or of the events which followed it. We were aware that your Lordship was most naturally anxious for information with respect to these occurrences, and that you especially desired to be furnished with the names of the Non-commissioned Officers and privates who had fallen at Maiwand and during the investment of Kandahar, but it was out of our power to relieve your anxiety or that of the public upon these points until the middle of September, when the reports above mentioned reached the Commander-in-Chief. The garrison of Kandahar during the investment consisted of a total force of 5,068 men of all ranks. We have addressed your Lordship in the Military Department on the subject of the sortie of the 16th August, and we need not now allude to it further.

9. As soon as the news of the loss of the battle of Maiwand reached us, we lost no time in making every preparation in our power to relieve Kandahar. Orders were issued immediately for the despatch of large additional reinforcements from India by the Sibi Railway and the Bolan and Khojak Passes; but, as we were aware that a considerable time must elapse before a sufficient force could be collected under General Phayre's command to enable him to advance with safety through a hostile country, we also determined to order the despatch of a powerful division from Kabul to Kandahar, under the command of Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Roberts. This division was able to move out of Kabul on the 8th August, and to commence its march on the following day. The circumstances of the country through which it had to pass were at the time peculiarly favourable for such an expedition; the harvest had only recently been got in, so that supplies were likely to be plentiful, and the Indian corn, which would afford both grain and forage for the animals, was still upon the ground; while the information received from our Political Officers at Kabul before Sir F. Roberts commenced his march gave us good reason to hope that, at all events as far as Ghazni, he would meet with no opposition. This hope was more than realized, and on the 23rd August General Roberts reached Kelat-i-Ghilzai totally unopposed, and found there fresh supplies, which had already been laid in, in anticipation of his arrival, by the foresight and energy of Colonel Tanner, who was in command of the garrison of that place. On the following day Ayub Khan broke up the investment of Kandahar, and retired to the Arghandab valley. General Roberts arrived at Kandahar on the 31st, and on the 1st September he attacked and completely defeated the enemy, capturing his guns and dispersing his army. We have already, in our letter of the 7th September, conveyed to your Lordship our high appreciation of the great services which have been rendered on this occasion to their Sovereign and to their country by Sir F. Roberts and the troops under his command.

We have, &c.,
 (Signed) RIPON.
 „ F. P. HAINES.
 „ JOHN STRACHEY.
 „ WHITLEY STOKES.
 „ JAMES GIBBS.
 „ D. M. STEWART.
 „ C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, dated 17th June 1880.

From RESIDENT, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

From Herat there is no news of importance. The son of Khan Agha, Jamshidi, is said to have come to Herat with 500 horsemen, but all other attempts at raising the tribes have failed. No attempt at an advance had been made 15 days ago beyond the pitching of standards outside the gate reported last week. It seems probable that nothing will be done. In the meantime the excitement occasioned here by the menaced attack seems dying away.

The Wali is still at Girishk, where he has summoned the Chiefs of the Alizais to meet him. He continues to receive promises of support from most of the influential Chiefs on the Herat side, and his policy of moving out to meet the threatened attack seems to have had good effect.

At Kelat-i-Ghilzai all is quiet.

Enclosure 2 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, dated 21st June 1880.

From Lieutenant-Colonel ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Simla.

WALI writes from Girishk that authentic news, 12 days Herat, informs that regular infantry had encamped outside city. Intention is that 2,000 horsemen, under command of Luinab, should advance to Zamindawar in expectation of Alizais joining them in attacking Wali's forces. Should Alizais keep promise and attack succeed, Ayub will follow with regular troops; but, if rising failed, Herat horsemen will return. Wali has ordered Alizai Chiefs to come to Girishk, and they promise to do so, but put it off from day to day. He has sent 1,000 horsemen to Washir, but does not consider himself strong enough to take more decided measures, unless supported by us to extent of advancing brigade towards Girishk, which he earnestly requests.

I am writing to him that we do not wish to move troops in this very hot weather except positively necessary, and that he ought, with assistance given him in money and arms, to be able to be put down threatened rising in Zamindawar, but supported from Herat in no more formidable manner than he describes.

At the same time I am inclined to think that should it be desired to keep affairs in Southern and Western Afghanistan in statu quo for the present, advance of brigade to Maiwand, together with prohibition to Wali of crossing his present frontier, would be advisable. An outbreak in Herat border, however slight, and however it turned out, may lead to complications.

Enclosure 3 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, dated 25th June 1880.

From MR. RONALD THOMPSON, Teheran, to VICEROY, Simla.

I HAVE received the following telegram from the Meshed Agent, dated yesterday:— Begins. Special messenger from Herat correspondent, with letter, dated 18th June, arrived last night, and brought intelligence that Ayub Khan has marched for Kandahar with 10 regiments of infantry, 3,000 cavalry, 30 guns, and blank mule-loads of ammunition; the tribes were to join him on the road; he left Herat on the 9th of June; his force consists of 5 Kabul, 1 Kandahar, and 4 Herat regiments of infantry, 1,400 horsemen from the Herat tribes, 1,600 regular cavalry, Ends.

Enclosure 4 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, dated 27th June 1880.

From General PRIMROSE, Kandahar, to QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla.

WITH reference to telegram from Foreign to Political Resident, regarding Ayub Khan's move towards Kandahar, I have arranged, pending reference and orders, that a brigade, with Battery Horse Artillery and a regiment of Native Cavalry, shall move on Girishk. I am of opinion that active support to the Wali, who is now at Girishk, will be more efficacious than if the whole force remained at Kandahar. To strengthen garrison here on departure of the brigade, I propose moving up 4th Native Infantry from Quetta, to be replaced on line of communication by a regiment from reserve division, and have ordered a wing Biluchis from Kelat-i-Ghilzai to Kandahar; the latter move is with concurrence of Political Resident.

Enclosure 6 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, No. 4503½, dated 1st July 1880.

From QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, Simla, to General PRIMROSE, Kandahar.

1st JULY. Government have decided that an advance is to be made on Girishk, but the Helmund is on no account to be crossed. Report as to fordability. The force you proposed in your telegram of 27th is to be employed, you should therefore take promptest measures to reinforce Kandahar without weakening Kelat-i-Ghilzai. The necessary troops from the reserve should be pushed forward at once, and garrisons on line when relieved moved up. Commander-in-Chief considers the force you propose to leave at Kandahar weak in all arms. What information have you regarding state of road from Jacobabad upwards? Will it delay troops?

Repeated to General Phayre.

Enclosure 7 in No. 36.

TELEGRAM, dated 17th August 1880.

From General PHAYRE, Quetta, to ADJUTANT-GENERAL, Simla.

I HAVE just received the following letter from General Primrose, dated Kandahar, 11th August. Letter begins. Yours of 30th received to-day. Position of enemy,—small body three miles west of city near picket hill; there are one or two Armstrong guns, 2,000 yards off in hill west of city, and one or two yesterday opposite Shikarpur Gate; they have our range, but have done little damage. Rumour of an attack on south side at Shikarpur Gate. Firing kept up morning and evening from villages three sides of city; only a few shots. Our defences nearly completed, and much clearance made outside walls. Our casualties up to date trifling. Dr. Trafford, Fusiliers, slightly wounded; Private Orton, Fusiliers, killed; two men, Fusiliers, slightly wounded; Jemadar Matula Sing, 30th N. I., killed; and several Natives wounded, and several followers wounded. All wounded and sick previously reported doing well. Good supply water as yet from wells in city. About 45 days' supplies, except bhoosa, of which 10 days' in hand, but daily collections made in town sufficient for current wants. Up to date, strength of garrison is,—Effective: Europeans, 1,243; Native soldiers, 3,386. Sick: Europeans, 157; sick Natives, 225.

No. 37.

No. 439 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary, of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 12th October 1880.

WE have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's

* G. G. O., No. 566, dated the 8th October 1880, and documents published therewith.

Sketch illustrating the attack on the village of Deh Khojah.

Government, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the siege of Kandahar by Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan, of Herat, and the sortie from that place on the 16th August last.

We have, &c.

(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" J. STRACHEY.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.
" D. M. STEWART.

Enclosure 1 in No. 37.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, the 8th October 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 566.—His Excellency the Governor General in Council directs the publication, for general information, of the following correspondence and Despatches relating to the siege of Kandahar, and the sortie from that place on the 16th August last.

Enclosure 2 in No. 37.

From Colonel ALLEN JOHNSON, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 8535 K., Kabul Field Operations, dated Simla, 2nd October 1880.)

I AM directed to acknowledge your letter, No. 5418 A., dated the 29th September 1880, forwarding Despatches from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., reporting the arrangements made for the protection of the citadel and city of Kandahar during their investment by Ayub Khan, and the sortie made by the garrison on the 16th August 1880.

2. These Despatches will be published for general information. Meanwhile, I am to state, for the Commander-in-Chief's information, that His Excellency's remarks on the several points they contain are concurred in by the Government of India.

3. The Government of India, I am to state, deplore the great loss of life on the occasion of the sortie; but the Government of India desire to place on record their deep sense of the loss sustained by the army in Brigadier-General Brooke, whose death was marked by so conspicuous an instance of self-devoted courage.

Enclosure 3 in No. 37.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5418 A., Kabul, dated Simla, 29th September 1880.)

I have the honour, by direction of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, the accompanying Despatches from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., commanding at Kandahar, reporting the arrangements made for the protection of the citadel and city of Kandahar during the investment by Ayub Khan, and the sortie made by the garrison on the 16th August last.

2. The siege arrangements appear to have been good, but do not call for any remarks from His Excellency.

3. Sir Frederick Haines, however, thinks that the abandonment of the cantonment was too precipitate, considering the force which General Primrose had under his command on the 28th July, and must have tended to confirm the demoralization of the troops caused by the imperfect information then received of the events at Maiwand.

4. In regard to the sortie, the Commander-in-Chief regrets to be under the necessity for saying that the reasons assigned for it are not satisfactory to him. The details of the operation appear to have been well and successfully carried out up to the time of the withdrawal of the troops and cavalry from the south side of the village of Deh Khoja into the city by the Kabul gate. From this point, however, General Primrose's narrative is confusing, though it is clear that, from the fact of the dead, among whom was a Brigadier-General, having been left on the field, the troops in returning to the city must have been closely followed up by the enemy.

5. In regard to the effect produced on the enemy by this sortie, His Excellency considers that, even were the results such as Lieutenant-General Primrose reports them to have been, they were too dearly bought with the loss of so many valuable Officers and men.

Brigadier-General Brooke, who fell on this occasion while endeavouring to save the life of a wounded comrade, was an Officer of the highest promise, and one whose death is greatly to be deplored.

6. I am to add that General Primrose has been called upon for a copy of any instructions which he may have issued to Brigadier-General Brooke for his advance towards Sinjuri on the 28th July, and of any report which that Officer may have rendered on his return to Kandahar.

7. The casualty returns were forwarded with my letter, No. 5327 A., dated 24th September, and the sketches will be sent hereafter.

Enclosure 4 in No. 37.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., commanding the Kandahar Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 3, dated Kandahar, 30th August 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report that, on the morning of the 28th July, at about 1 a.m., I received intelligence of the action near Maiwand.

2. In consultation with Brigadier-General Brooke, I decided on moving into the citadel during the day, and at once ordered the heavy battery, sick, and baggage to be taken there, directing Brigadier-General Brooke to proceed along the Kokeran road with a small force of all arms, in the direction of Sinjuri, with a view of helping in the men and followers of Brigadier-General Burrows' column and protecting them from the villagers, who were then firing on them, and holding the cantonments in the meantime with the 4th Native Infantry and a portion of the 28th Native Infantry, with two guns of C/2nd Royal Artillery.

3. I myself proceeded to the city, and ordered all the gates to be seized and strongly held.

4. It was utterly impossible for me to remain in the cantonments, which are quite indefensible (except with a very large force), and from which the water supply could be diverted at any moment, and in fact had already been cut off for some days.

5. My ordnance and commissariat stores were in the citadel, and I therefore decided on taking possession of the whole town.

6. It thus became of paramount importance to occupy the city with the least possible delay, as it had become evident that the whole of the Pathan population in and around Kandahar were inimical to us, and were only waiting for any success of Ayub Khan's to rise.

7. This conviction had forced itself upon me as events developed themselves at Girishk, and clearly seeing that the Wali had neither influence nor power in the country, I made up my mind to seize and occupy Kandahar.

8. Could I have expected the slightest assistance from the representative of the Wali, I would have held on to the cantonments, at all events for some time; but there was no disguising the fact that a settled Government had ceased to exist, and that unless the most stringent measures were at once taken, the city would be in a state of anarchy.

9. Having seen to the immediate security of the place, I returned to cantonments, as heavy firing was reported in the direction of Sinjuri. This turned out to be Brigadier-General Brooke's force engaging the villagers, who fired upon him directly he quitted the lines.

10. On my re-entering the city, I met the Wali, who requested a confidential interview with me.

11. I at once accorded it (Colonel St. John had not then arrived), and he strongly advised my retiring from Kandahar, unless my force was very strong, as the country was in a blaze, Ayub Khan's army was very large, and his guns overpowering.

12. I informed him that my force was not large, but that I had not the slightest intention of leaving Kandahar, as, in the first place, it was my duty to remain, and secondly, the true interests of my country were now centered in the city.

13. He then most strongly urged upon me the necessity of turning the Pathans and other disaffected people out of the city, and, as I fully agreed with him on this point, I told him I would see that it was done.

14. Shortly before dusk on the evening of the 28th, Brigadier-General Brooke having returned and reported he could see no signs of any more men coming in, I withdrew all my force from the cantonments, and told them off to the city walls, as below :—

15. To the Shikarpore Gate front,—400 men, under the command of Brigadier-General Brooke, with Major R. J. Le P. Trench, 19th Native Infantry, commanding the gate.

Length of this front, 1,300 yards.

16. To the Herat Gate front,—500 men under the command of Brigadier-General Burrows, with Colonel S. De B. Edwardes, 2nd Native Infantry, commanding the Herat Gate, and Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Griffith, 1st Native Infantry, the Tôp-khana Gate.

Length of this front, 1,987 yards.

17. To the Eedgah Gate front,—400 men, at first under my own personal command, with Lieutenant-Colonel T. R. Nimmo, 28th Native Infantry, to command the gate; but later on Brigadier-General Burrows was transferred to the charge of this front, and Colonel Edwardes, 2nd Native Infantry, posted to the Herat front.

Length of this front, 1,178 yards.

18. To the Kabul Gate front,—500 men, under Brigadier-General Nuttall, with Colonel W. Bannerman, 4th Native Infantry, in command of the Kabul Gate, and Colonel W. G. Mainwaring, 30th Native Infantry, in command of the Bah Durani Gate.

Length of this front, 1,700 yards.

19. Colonel C. T. Heathcote, 19th Native Infantry, had the command and supervision of the Tôp-khana square.

20. A reserve of 200 men were located in the Char-sû, for distribution to posts as required, under the command of the Field Officer of the day, and a second reserve of 100 men in the Tôp-khana square, to replace men drawn from the first service.

21. A body of marksmen were told off to the bastions and other good positions for long range shooting, and, under the command of Major F. G. F. Moore,* 7th Fusiliers, did excellent service during the siege.

22. The remainder of the men available for duty were held in reserve in the citadel.

23. The total strength of my garrison was as under, including the head-quarters of the 28th Native Infantry, which marched in on the morning of the 28th, and those troops who came in from Maiwand, as to the numbers of which I could obtain no reliable information until late in the afternoon of the 28th :—

Regiments and Batteries.	Officers.	Effective.	Sick.	Horses.	Guns.	8-inch Mortars.	Bullocks.
		Non-Commissioned Officers and Men.	Non-Commissioned Officers and Men.
E/B, Royal Horse Artillery -	4	115	19	123	4	—	—
C/2nd Royal Artillery -	5	101	14	81	4	—	—
5/11th ditto -	4	90	1	12	4	2	373
Poona Horse -	5	213	11	226	—	—	—
3rd Sind Horse -	5	358	9	396	—	—	—
3rd Light Cavalry -	6	354	29	355	—	—	—
No. 2 Company, Sappers and Miners.	1	59	7	7	—	—	—
7th Fusiliers -	24	620	45	10	—	—	—
66th Regiment -	12	241	70	7	—	—	—
1st Native Infantry -	6	273	72	7	—	—	—
4th ditto -	7	533	21	8	—	—	—
19th ditto -	6	586	27	6	—	—	—
28th ditto -	7	671	36	7	—	—	—
30th ditto -	5	319	77	6	—	—	—
Total	97	4,533	438	1,244	12	2	373

* Paymaster.

The baggage animals consisted of 1,021 camels, 135 bullocks, 602 ponies, and 68 mules.

24. The length of walls to be manned was 6,165 yards, not including the interior defences of the citadel.

25. The final distribution of artillery on the walls was as follows :—

Ordnance.	Position.	Officer in Charge.	Officer Com. manding Force.
9-pdr. M.L.R. gun, C/2nd -	N.-E. Bastion -	-	} Major P. H. Greig.
9-pdr. M.L.R. gun C/2nd, R. A. -	Durani Gate -	Lieut. H. L. Gardiner, R. A. -
9-pdr. ditto, ditto -	Kabul Gate -	-
40-pdr. B.L.R. gun, 5/11th -	S.-E. Bastion -	Lieut. W. A. Plant, R. A. -	} Captain G. M. B. Hornsby.
6-pdr. S.B. gun -	Shikarpore Gate -	-
40-pdr. B.L.R. gun, 5/11th -	S.-W. Bastion -	Lieut. A. Bell-Irving, R. A. -
9-pdr. M.L.R. gun, E/B, R. H. A. -	S.-W. Bastion -	-	} Capt. J. R. Slade.
9-pdr. ditto, E/B, R.H.A. -	Herat Gate -	Lieut. G. S. Jones, R. A. -
9-pdr. ditto, C/2nd, R.A. -	Tóp-khana Gate -	Lieut. G. B. Smith, R. A. -
40-pdr. B.L.R. gun, 5/11th -	N.-W. Bastion -	Lieut. T. F. T. Fowle, R. A. -
9-pdr. M.L.R. gun, E/B, R.H.A. -	N.-W. Bastion -	-
9-pdr. ditto, ditto -	Eedgah Gate.	-
40-pdr. B.L.R. gun, 5/11th, R.A. -	S.-W. Bastion of Citadel.	-

26. The skeleton map of Kandahar attached shows disposition and distribution of troops, &c.

27. The question of posts along the line had also received my careful consideration and I had resolved, in any case of emergency, to bring the Mandi Hissar detachment into Kandahar, and to order those of Abdul Rahman, Mel-Karez, Dabrai, and Gatai to fall back on Chaman, where, with the men already in garrison at that place, they would form a strong post (strength as per margin*) capable of holding their own against any force likely to be brought against them before help could arrive from Quetta.

* No 2 Mountain Battery.
Poona Horse, 106 sabres.
19th Native Infantry, 195 men.
Head quarters and 4 Companies, 27th
Native Infantry.
Sappers and Miners, 26 men.

28. Chaman (a strategic point of the greatest value) would thus form an important connecting link between Quetta and Kandahar, and become an intermediate base for the concentration of troops marching in relief.

29. Under ordinary circumstances, the above posts, which had been strengthened, could easily have withstood any sudden attack made by the villagers around, but it was hopeless to suppose they could hold out against artillery fire and a regularly organized system of attack.

30. Communication would have been cut off between them, and they must have fallen one after another.

31. I therefore telegraphed to Abdul Rahman, ordering the garrison to retire at once on Chaman, picking up the other garrisons as they fell back, and I am firmly of opinion that it was solely in consequence of the promptness of their withdrawal that they were enabled to reach Chaman without serious loss. The Mandi Hissar post arrived here on the afternoon of the 28th.

32. On the movement of troops to co-operate with the army of Sher Ali on the Helmund, I had directed the Commissariat Department to lay in at once a full month's supply of bhusa and grain for all the animals of the force, but such was the scarcity of carriage that, on the 28th of July, only a thirteen days' supply was in hand.

33. Daily search, however, was made in the city, and, by reducing the bhusa ration, I found I had enough to last for more than a month.

34. All other food supplies were plentiful, both for men and animals.

35. The wells in the city had been previously inspected and reported upon, and, though all reports agreed that there was a well in nearly every house, they mostly stated that they would run dry if heavily drawn upon.

This latter statement I am happy to say has proved unfounded, and there is still an abundant supply of water within the city walls.

36. An increased provost establishment was organized for the purpose of putting a stop to looting and keeping order in the town, and I am happy to say that, considering the number of followers and the great temptations to which they were exposed, the complaints that reached me under this head were almost nil, and in nearly every case the culprit was caught and severely punished.

37. Regiments, corps, and departments had various wells in the city allotted for their use, and a constant supply of water was always kept on the city walls.

38. Medical arrangements as under, in case of an attack, were made by Deputy Surgeon-General J. O'Nial:—

“ Surgeon-Major J. F. Keith, M.D., will have charge of the Eedgah Gate and the North Front.

“ Surgeon A. H. C. Dane will have charge of the Töp-khana Gate and North-west bastion. He will communicate by his right with “ Surgeon-Major Keith, and by his left with “ Surgeon-Major B. T. Giraud, M.D., who will have charge of the Herat Gate and south-west bastion, communicating by his left with “ Surgeon-Major J. Arnott, M.D., who will have charge of the Shikarpore Gate and south front, communicating by his left with “ Surgeon E. W. Kellsall, who will have charge of the Kabul Gate and south-east bastion. He will communicate by his left with “ Surgeon K. R. Kirtikar, who will have charge of the Durani Gate and north-east bastion, and will communicate by his left with Surgeon-Major Keith.

“ The above are to be quite independent of, and are not to be in any way interfered with, by regimental arrangements.

“ Each Medical Officer will put permanently at his gate two dandies or doolies. He will find some fixed place for them, in which they are always to remain, and he will take steps to ensure that this place is known by the Officer in command.

“ On the ‘ Assembly ’ being sounded, he will proceed at once with six additional dandies or doolies, and the necessary surgical material, to his post, and will report himself to the Officer commanding at the time.

“ Medical Officers will take care that their dooley-bearers are well acquainted with the route from their respective posts to the European and Native base hospitals, and will take precautions against their crowding or in any way obstructing the communications.

“ Each Medical Officer will render assistance to all wounded or sick men of whatever branch of the service within his area.

“ Surgical operations involving any delay are not to be performed at these posts.

“ Assistance is to be limited as to what is absolutely necessary to the men's transfer to the base hospital.

“ Surgeon-Major C. H. Harvey, M.D., will have charge of the Reserve in the Char-sú.

“ Surgeon J. McNamara will join No. 2 field hospital.

“ Surgeon T. E. Worgan will join the Native base hospital.

“ The Officers of the base and field hospitals will have everything necessary for the treatment of the wounded always in immediate readiness.”

39. Signal stations were established at the four angles of the city walls, and all the gates and the Char-sú placed in telegraphic communication with one another and with head-quarters.

40. My next care and consideration was to improve and strengthen the existing fortifications, both inside and out.

41. Numerous walls and houses which had been built up to the city gate had to be destroyed and cleared away, and trees cut down to allow of a good fire, and to prevent the enemy using them as cover.

Free and easy communication along the entire length of the city walls, both on the ramparts above and the roadway below, had to be arranged for.

Platforms for mounting guns in important positions on the walls were constructed and repaired, ramps made up to them, traverses erected, and other works undertaken, the details of which are all enumerated in the Diary of the Siege.

42. A wire entanglement made with telegraph wire was constructed all round the walls, abatis placed in front of all the entrances and weak portions of the wall, and the gates themselves secured from fire by a covering of iron fastened on outside.

43. The curtains, which were badly loop-holed, and were much too high for a man to fire over, had to be cut down in places between the towers to allow of a direct fire on the country around.

44. The ranges of all the noticeable objects around the city were taken, and range tables posted up in each bastion and gate.

45. Though every available man was employed on work all day, assisted by hired labour, it was not until the 13th August that the Commanding Royal Engineer reported he had no further need of military labour.

46. Our covering parties were daily engaged with the enemy, and on the 12th August inflicted severe loss upon them, killing amongst others the Governor of Farrah.

47. Early on the morning of the 8th August, the enemy opened artillery fire on the citadel from Picket Hill, and shortly afterwards on the city from guns in Deh Khojah and Deh Kuttee; and though this fire was sustained regularly for many days, it did little or no harm, as the men and animals were placed under cover of existing high and substantial walls in the citadel, at right angles to the artillery line of fire.

48. Appended is a complete detailed list of killed and wounded during the whole siege. The casualties at Deh Khojah were forwarded separately, but are included.

49. All details relating to the siege will be found embodied in a diary now under preparation.

50. The behaviour of the troops during the whole siege was excellent, as the almost entire absence of crime proves; and though Officers and men were often for days at a time on continued duty without relief, such was their vigilance that only on one occasion was the garrison turned out by a false alarm.

51. I wish here to record my high appreciation of the bearing of all ranks, who for days, under a burning sun, worked most willingly and cheerfully, mounting guard on completion of their day's work with as much alacrity as if they had been on ordinary garrison duty.

52. I would especially bring to the favourable notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the names of the following Officers who, during the siege, rendered me great assistance in the performance of their various duties :—

Brigadier-General G. R. S. Burrows, commanding the 1st Infantry Brigade.

Brigadier-General T. Nuttall, commanding the Cavalry Brigade.

Brigadier-General A. G. Daubeny, 7th Fusiliers, who assumed temporary command of the 2nd Infantry Brigade on the 16th August.

Colonel W. French, commanding the Royal Artillery.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. Hills, commanding Royal Engineer.

Major P. H. Greig, commanding C/2nd Royal Artillery.

Captain G. M. B. Hornsby, commanding 5/11th Royal Artillery.

Captain J. R. Slade, commanding E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.

Major F. Beauchamp, 7th Royal Fusiliers.

Captain J. Quarry, 66th Regiment.

Colonel W. Bannerman, commanding the 4th Rifles, Native Infantry.

Colonel W. G. Mainwaring, commanding the 30th Regiment, Native Infantry.

Colonel C. T. Heathcote, commanding the 19th Native Infantry.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. D'U. La Touche, commanding the Poona Horse.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. M. Griffith, 1st Native Infantry.

Lieutenant-Colonel T. R. Nimmo, commanding the 28th Native Infantry.

Major F. C. Singleton, 28th Native Infantry.

Captain and Brevet Major E. P. Leach, V.C., R.E., who did duty as Brigade Major, Royal Engineers, and as Field Engineer throughout the siege.

Lieutenant G. T. Jones and Lieutenant E. A. Waller, Royal Engineers.

Captain Mosely Mayne, 3rd Light Cavalry.

Captain F. C. Keyser, 7th Fusiliers, Superintendent of Army Signalling.

Colonel S. De B. Edwardes, Director of Transport.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. M. Shewell, Deputy Commissary-General, who, ably assisted by Major E. S. Walcott, kept the garrison well supplied with provisions during the whole siege.

Deputy Surgeon-General J. O'Nial.

Surgeon-Major B. T. Giraud, M.D., Army Medical Department.

Surgeon-Major J. Arnott, M.D., Indian Medical Department.

Veterinary Surgeon W. B. Spooner, who, in addition to his duties with the Transport Department, did duty on the walls.

Captain W. Law, Royal Artillery, Brigade Major, 1st Infantry Brigade.

Lieutenant-Colonel G. F. Beville, Deputy Judge Advocate, and who also performed the duties of Provost Marshal.

Major F. J. Caldecott, Royal Artillery, Commissary of Ordnance, who was always ready to do any work.

Lieutenant E. V. P. Monteith, 3rd Sind Horse.

Mr. C. L. Griesbach, Geological Survey of India, who did duty with the 66th Regiment.

To Father T. Jackson I am deeply indebted for his constant care and attention to the sick and wounded; as also to the Rev. A. G. Cane, M.A.

My thanks are specially due to Major C. J. Burnett, my Assistant Adjutant-General, for the manner in which he performed his arduous duties, and who at all times was prepared and volunteered to proceed to any post of danger.

To Major F. J. S. Adam, my Assistant Quartermaster-General, my special thanks are due for the zeal and ability with which he carried on the important duties appertaining to his position.

My Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant E. O. F. Hamilton, 2nd Queen's, deserves my thanks for the satisfactory way in which he always performed his duties.

My special thanks are due to Mr. R. Boteler, Telegraph Superintendent, who, in addition to performing duty with the 19th Native Infantry, acted as an Assistant Field Engineer, doing excellent work. I trust his name may be brought to the favourable notice of Government.

My thanks are also due to Mr. H. T. Pinhey, of the Government of India Telegraph Department.

Note.—From information received, I estimate the strength of the enemy around Kandahar during the siege at from 25,000 to 30,000 men, with 32 guns.

Enclosure 5 in No. 37.

NUMERICAL RETURN of Killed and Wounded of the Kandahar Force during the Siege of Kandahar, from the 28th July to the 31st August 1880.

Corps.	Killed.						Wounded.						Total.
	British Officers.	Native Officers.	Sergeants, Duffadars, and Havildars.	Drummers and Buglers.	Rank and File.	Followers.	British Officers.	Native Officers.	Sergeants, Duffadars, and Havildars.	Drummers and Buglers.	Rank and File.	Followers.
Staff	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
E/B, Royal Horse Artillery	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
C/2nd Royal Artillery	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	1
No. 5/11th Royal Artillery	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	1
No. 2 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
3rd Bombay Light Cavalry	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	1	—	1	2	5
Poona Horse	—	—	—	—	1	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	3
3rd Sind Horse	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2*	—	2
7th Fusiliers	—	—	—	—	1	—	1	—	—	1	3*	2	8
66th Foot	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1†	—	1
1st Bombay Native Infantry	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	2	1†	3
4th ditto, ditto	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1	1†	2
19th ditto, ditto	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	8†	1	9
28th ditto, ditto	—	—	—	—	2	—	—	—	—	—	2	—	4
30th ditto, ditto	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	3	1	4
Transport Department	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	1†	1
Total	—	—	—	—	4	—	1	1	1	1	25	11	44
Grand total	4						40						44

* One man since dead.

† Since dead.

‡ Two men since dead.

Enclosure 6 in No. 37.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., commanding the Kandahar Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 2, dated Kandahar, the 26th August 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report that the enemy, having clearly shown his intention of making a complete and careful investment of Kandahar, by occupying and fortifying the adjacent villages, which are all enclosed by high mud walls, under cover of which batteries could easily have been constructed and unmasked, when required, at the shortest notice, without any one being either aware of the number of guns or their distribution to villages, and in the absence of reliable information regarding the dispositions of the enemy, whose movements were all carried out at night, it became absolutely necessary to make a sortie to cause the enemy to show his hand.

2. Before resorting to this measure, I, on two occasions, carefully searched the villages to the south and east of the city by artillery and mortar fire, but without any apparent result, a few villagers only quitting the villages after the fire had ceased.

3. I, therefore, on the 15th August, determined to bombard one village heavily, and then to put some infantry through it.

4. The village I selected was that of Deh Khojah, situated to the east of the city, exactly opposite the Bar Durani and Kabul Gates, and running almost parallel to the city wall, distant from the former gate 600 yards, and from the latter 950 yards.

5. In making the selection the following points influenced me:—

I. The village was isolated from the main body of the enemy's regular troops, who were encamped beyond Abasabad, some four miles to the west of the city, with Kandahar between them and Deh Khojah, and therefore out of supporting distance.

II. The only supports available for the village would have to come from the south, and pass over ground on which my cavalry could act with effect.

III. The village lies on the regular road from Mandi Hissar to Kandahar, and I was most desirous to clear and keep this road open for the advance of General Phayre, as the Kushab road was studded with villages which, if held in succession by the enemy, could only have been forced at immense cost.

IV. Artillery had been fired from this village completely screened, and I was very anxious to ascertain what number of guns the enemy had in position there, where they were in battery, and what was the calibre of the guns. This information was most necessary, as all reports from Maiwand agreed that Ayub Khan had with him thirty guns, including two batteries of 12-pounder Armstrongs. Up to date he had only unmasked two Armstrong guns, and it was therefore a matter of vital importance to prevent his establishing an overpowering artillery fire within one thousand yards of the walls.

V. I wished to confine the enemy's artillery to positions perpendicular to the shorter faces of the city walls, as batteries placed opposite the east and west fronts would take these faces respectively in reverse.

VI. The disarrangement of the enemy's dispositions to the east would practically limit his attack to the west and south fronts, as the ground to the north is open and devoid of cover.

6. On the afternoon of the 15th August, I ordered the infantry force, as per

* 4 companies, 7th Fusiliers.

4 companies, 19th Native Infantry.

4 companies, 28th Native Infantry.

A party of Sappers, to be told off by the Commanding Royal Engineers.

† 3rd Light Cavalry, 100 sabres.

Poona Horse, 100 „

3rd Sind Horse, 100 „

‡ One 40-pounder.

Two 9-pounders.

Two 8-inch mortars.

margin,* under the command of Brigadier-General Brooke, to attack the village early on the morning of the 16th, to force their way through it, obtain all the information they could, and, if possible, to destroy any works the enemy might have constructed under cover of the walls.

The cavalry (strength as noted†) under the command of Brigadier-General Nuttall, to co-operate with the infantry, and to keep the ground clear to the south and east of Deh Khojah.

Artillery, as per margin,‡ to keep up a rapid fire from the walls on the village before the attack, and to cover the advance of the infantry.

7. The cavalry were ordered to leave by the Eedgah Gate at 4.30 a.m., and to trot round out of musketry fire to the east of the village, and there await the result of the attack.

The artillery were ordered to open fire at 4.45 a.m., and infantry to leave by the Kabul Gate at 5 a.m.

8. Brigadier-General Brooke made his own dispositions for carrying out the attack, which were as follows:—

“ 1. The force will be divided into three columns as follows,— “ 1st. Under Lieutenant-Colonel Daubeny, will consist of—

2 companies, 7th Fusiliers. 2 companies, 19th Native Infantry.

“ 2nd. Under Lieutenant-Colonel Nimmo—

1 company, 7th Fusiliers. 3 companies, 28th Native Infantry.

“ 3rd. Under Colonel Heathcote—

1 company, 7th Fusiliers. 2 companies, 19th Native Infantry.

1 company, 28th Native Infantry.

“ II. To each column will be attached an Engineer Officer, with a proportion of Sappers, with tools and powder bags.

“ III. A Medical Officer and sick carriage will accompany each column. The reserve ammunition will remain within the Kabul Gate.

“ Arrangements for carrying an ample supply of water are to be made by all Commanding Officers.

“ IV. The following will be the duties assigned to each column:—

“ The first column will, on leaving the Kabul Gate, take the road to the right, and, after proceeding 150 yards along it, advance towards the south of the village, the advance being covered by skirmishers, and the details carried out as may seem best to Colonel Daubeny, with reference to the features of the ground and the resistance offered. The object of this column is to seize a good position at the south of the village from which to advance to the north of the village, driving out all the enemy who may be met there.

“ The second column will conform to, and follow the movements of, the first, but, on reaching the village, will seize a position on the right of that taken up by the first column. Both columns will make their advance in as open order as possible.

“ The third column will remain within the Kabul Gate awaiting orders. The duty assigned to them will probably be to enter the village at the main entrance and seize the enclosure on the left of the entrance, where the gun embrasure is, and clear that part of the village. The other instructions will be issued to the commanders of the 1st and 2nd columns by the Brigadier-General on their reaching the south of the village. The cavalry brigade, under Brigadier-General Nuttall, is under orders to co-operate, and will be on the east and south of the village.”

9. As previously arranged, the cavalry quitted the Bedgah Gate at 4.30 a.m., and trotted round into the position assigned, a few shots being fired at them, but at very long ranges, and doing no damage.

10. The guns opened fire at 4.45 a.m., and at 5 a.m. the first two parties of infantry debouched from the Kabul Gate, making for the south of the village, which they entered under a heavy fire of musketry at 5.30 a.m.

11. At this moment numbers of ghazis were seen making their way to Deh Khojah, across the open ground to the south of the village.

12. They were at once charged by a troop of the 3rd Light Cavalry, under Lieutenant Geoghegan, and driven back with heavy loss into broken ground, where further pursuit was hopeless.

13. The cavalry now formed up to the south of Deh Khojah, waiting for another opportunity to charge, and the infantry were steadily making their way through the village, beating down all opposition.

14. Once more the ghazis in large numbers tried to cross from the south to the support of Deh Khojah, but Major Trench, 19th Regiment Native Infantry, met them with three well-directed volleys, which turned them, and Brigadier-General Nuttall, seizing the opportunity, charged again with the 3rd Light Cavalry and Poona Horse, dispersing and cutting up many of the enemy, who again took shelter in the nullahs and open ground.

15. The enemy's fire in the village had now nearly ceased.

16. On re-forming after this charge, Brigadier-General Nuttall received a note from Brigadier-General Brooke, asking him to cover the retirement of the infantry from the south of the village into the Kabul Gate.

17. In consequence of this request, the cavalry were withdrawn, and entered the city by the Kabul Gate, and it was in carrying out this movement that they suffered most of the loss sustained throughout the day, as they were exposed to infantry fire from the village (which recommenced as they were being withdrawn) in cramped ground, which prevented their being in open formation.

18. My intention had been that the cavalry should have remained out to the last in the open plain, well out of musketry fire, charging whenever opportunity should offer, and returning the same way they went out after the infantry had passed through the village.

19. The cavalry and infantry at the south end of the village being withdrawn allowed the enemy's reinforcements to move up from the south, and the fighting in the middle of the village became general and very heavy.

20. Notwithstanding the determined resistance of the enemy, who fought, under cover of their walls, with the greatest obstinacy, the infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Daubeney and Lieutenant-Colonel Nimmo, forced their way through the village, debouching at about 7 am. from the northern end, whilst the party under the command of Colonel Heathcote held their ground near the centre of the village until ordered to withdraw.

21. At 7.15 am., the firing had entirely ceased and the enemy were seen streaming away from Deh Khojah, carrying some of their dead with them. Their loss has been reported as very heavy, several chiefs of note having been killed, and one of the two guns in the village destroyed.

22. Whilst the fighting was going on in Deh Khojah, the enemy opened artillery fire on the city from Picket Hill, and from a gun in position about 1,200 yards from the west face of the city wall. He also attempted to form up his infantry in the old cantonments under cover of this fire; but such was the steadiness and accuracy with which our guns were served, that he was unable to do so, and within an hour his artillery fire was silenced, and one gun on Picket Hill dismounted.

23. No words of mine can express my appreciation of the cool and gallant behaviour of all ranks.

24. Brigadier-General Brooke was killed whilst attempting to save the life of Captain Cruickshank, R.E., and by his death the service and the country have suffered a heavy loss.

25. Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. Newport, 28th Native Infantry; Major R. J. Le P. Trench, 19th Native Infantry; Captain G. M. Cruickshank, R.E.; Lieutenant F. C. Stayner, 19th Native Infantry; and Second Lieutenant F. P. F. Wood, 7th Fusiliers, all died whilst leading their men in the most forward manner; and Second Lieutenant E. S. Marsh, 7th Fusiliers, was killed in helping to bring in Lieutenant Wood, who was then severely wounded.

26. The Reverend G. M. Gordon, Church Missionary Society, who was also mortally wounded whilst attending the men under a heavy fire; and I take this opportunity of paying my small tribute of admiration to a man who, by his kindness and gentleness, had endeared himself to the whole force, and in the end died administering to their wants.

27. The sketch appended will show the movements executed. Attached is a list of our killed and wounded.

28. Whilst deeply regretting the loss of so many gallant Officers and men, it would be difficult to over-estimate the effect produced on the men of the garrison and on the enemy by this affair.

29. The spirits and morale of the troops under my command, which had been considerably damped and shaken by the result of the action at Maiwand on the 27th July, and the continued confinement within the city walls, were raised, and confidence in their superiority over the enemy restored.

30. They were convinced that even when holding a strong position and in vastly superior numbers, the enemy could not withstand their attack, and the dread of the word "ghazi" was dispelled.

31. On the other hand, the overweening confidence of the enemy received a shock from which it never recovered.

32. The villagers and ghazis, who had been carefully instructed that there were only some eight hundred British troops in Kandahar, and the remainder were followers dressed up as soldiers, had it conclusively proved to them that this was a fallacy.

33. The feeling of security which had hitherto marked all their movements gave place to feelings of insecurity and doubt, and they refused to remain any longer distributed about in the surrounding villages, streaming back to their camp by thousands, numbers having been reported as having gone off to their homes.

34. Hardly a shot was fired by the enemy after the 16th; and, on the 24th, I received intelligence that Ayub Khan had shifted his camp into the Arghandab Valley, where he was entrenching himself, and that the majority of the local contingent had dispersed.

35. On the morning of the 25th, I reconnoitred the whole of the enemy's position about Picket Hill, the cantonments, and Deh Khojah, and found the guns gone and the villages perfectly empty and abandoned; and I am now supplying myself with bhusa and grain from them.

36. The same afternoon I caused all the dead, whose bodies had not been brought in on the 16th, to be collected and buried.

37. Brigadier-General Nuttall brings to favourable notice the following Officers:—

Lieutenant-Colonel C. D'U. La Touche, commanding the Poona Horse.

Captain Mosley Mayne, commanding the detachment of the 3rd Light Cavalry.

Lieutenant T. P. Geoghegan, 3rd Light Cavalry.

Major G. C. Hogg, Poona Horse, Brigade Major; and

Lieutenant John Monteith, 2nd Sind Horse, his Orderly Officer.

38. I would myself wish to bring forward the names of Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Daubeny, 7th Royal Fusiliers, who gallantly led the assaulting party right through the village;

Lieutenant-Colonel T. R. Nimmo, 28th Regiment, Native Infantry, who commanded the support, and was severely wounded; and Colonel C. T. Heathcote, 19th Native Infantry, whose coolness under a heavy fire inspired his men with the greatest confidence.

39. My thanks are also due to Brigadier-General T. Nuttall and Brigadier-General G. R. S. Burrows; to Colonel W. French, commanding the Royal Artillery; Major P. H. Greig, commanding C/2nd, Royal Artillery; Captain J. R. Slade, commanding E/B, Royal Horse Artillery; to Lieutenant-Colonel A. M. Shewell, Deputy Commissary General, who attached himself to my Staff; to Deputy Surgeon General J. O'Nial, whose arrangements for the sick and wounded were all that could be desired; to Surgeon-Major B. T. Giraud, M.D., Army Medical Department, doing duty with the 7th Fusiliers, whose great attention to the wounded on the field has frequently elicited my admiration; to Surgeon-Major J. Arnott, M.D., and Surgeon E. W. Kelsall.

I cannot overvalue the services rendered on the 16th, and on many other occasions, by Father T. Jackson, who was always in the foremost of the fight, attending upon and offering every assistance to the wounded, both European and Native.

40. I would wish also to bring to notice the gallant conduct of Lieutenant W. St. L. Chase, 28th Regiment, Native Infantry, who, under a heavy fire, carried a wounded man (Private Murray, 7th Fusiliers*) from the front into a place of safety; also of Private Ashford, 7th Fusiliers, who accompanied and remained with Lieutenant Chase. I purpose making a further recommendation on the part of this Officer and private.

41. My best thanks are due to Major C. J. Burnett, my Assistant Adjutant-General, and to Major F. J. S. Adam, my Assistant Quartermaster-General, who possess my entire confidence, and in their arduous duties have rendered me the greatest possible assistance.

Lieutenant E. O. F. Hamilton, 2nd Queen's, my Aide-de-Camp, has invariably performed his duties much to my satisfaction.

* No man of this name is included in the casualty rolls; probably Private W. Massey is meant.

Enclosure 7 in No. 37.

NUMERICAL RETURN of Officers, Non-commissioned Officers, Men, and Followers who were killed, wounded, and missing in the storming of the Deh Khojah Village on the 16th August 1880.

Corps.	Europeans.						Natives.						Followers.		Horses.		Remarks.
	Killed.			Wounded.			Missing.			Killed.			Wounded.			Killed.		Wounded.
	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Native Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Native Officers.	Non-commissioned Officers and Men.	Total.	Killed.	Wounded.
Staff - - -	3*	-	3	1	-	1	-	-	-	-	-	-			-	-	-	-
Poona Horse - -	-	-	-	1	1	1	-	-	1	4	4	-	-	-	1	9	16
3rd Sind Horse - -	-	-	-	1	1	1	-	-	6	2	2	-	-	-	-	15	7
3rd Light Cavalry - -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	4	3	12	-	-	-	-	13	12
No. 2 Company, Sappers and Miners.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	6†	1	6	7	-	-	-	1	3	-	† 1—Hospital Assistant.
2/7th Royal Fusiliers - -	2	22	24	2	28	30	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2	4	-	-
59th Regiment, attached to 2/7th Regiment.	-	2	2	-	2	2	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
1st Grenadiers, Native Infantry	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-
4th Native Infantry, Rifles -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-
19th Regiment Native Infantry	2	-	2	-	-	-	-	20	1	24	25	-	-	-	1	-	-
28th Regiment Native Infantry	1	-	1	1	-	1	-	30	-	22	22	-	-	-	1	-	-
Total - -	8	24	32	6	30	36	-	66	5	67	72	-	-	7	9	37	35

Reconciliation:—

Killed -	8 European Officers	1 Native Officer	90 Non-commissioned Officers and men	106
Wounded	7 followers	6 European Officers	5 Native Officers	223
	97 Non-commissioned Officers and men	9 followers		117

(Signed)

C. J. BURNETT, Major,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Kandahar Force.

J. M. PRIMROSE, Lieutenant-General,
Commanding Kandahar Force.

No. 38.

No. 442 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 12th October 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of your Lordship in Council, the accompanying copy of a Despatch from Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Roberts, G.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., together with the remarks thereon of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, reporting the march of the Kabul-Kandahar force to the relief of Lieutenant-General Primrose, and the victorious action fought on the 1st September 1880 against the force under Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan.

2. The clear and comprehensive account given by Sir Frederick Roberts, and the appreciative commentary on it by His Excellency Sir Frederick Haines, render any further detailed remarks on the operations unnecessary.

3. We have, it will be observed, already published a General Order expressing the deep appreciation by this Government of the valuable services rendered to the State by Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts and his army, and we now desire to request that your Lordship in Council will submit these Despatches to the Queen for Her Majesty's most gracious recognition.

	We have, &c.,
(Signed)	RIPON.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	J. STRACHEY.
"	W. STOKES.
"	J. GIBBS.
"	D. M. STEWART.
"	C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 38.

No. 582.

Simla, 12th October 1880.

The Viceroy and Governor General in Council, having received from the Commander-in-Chief in India the accompanying Despatch from Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Roberts, G.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., reporting the march of the force under his command from Kabul to Kandahar, and the successful engagement with the Afghans under Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan on the 1st September 1880, desires that it shall be published in the "Gazette of India" for general information.

2. Sir Frederick Roberts has achieved what the Commander-in-Chief in India justly describes as one of the most complete and successful operations of recent times.

3. The Government of India appreciate the foresight which governed the preparation of the force at Kabul, the energy which conducted it to Kandahar, and the skill through which its operations were fitly crowned by the total defeat of the enemy against whom its movements had from the first been directed.

4. These operations, in their inception and their execution, will remain an enduring record, no less of the courage and devotion of the troops than of the skill of the Officers, on whose services the Queen-Empress can rely for the security and honour of Her Indian Empire.

5. The high soldierly spirit which animated this force throughout its ranks had been conspicuous in every arm of the service during all the operations of the war in Northern Afghanistan and on Sir Donald Stewart's march from Kandahar, and formed the ample justification of the Government of India in sanctioning an enterprise that could not have been prudently entrusted to a leader less able, or to troops less efficient, than Sir Frederick Roberts and the soldiers so worthy of his leading.

6. Even had the march thus undertaken and carried out served merely to raise the investment of Kandahar, it would have been a military achievement of which any country might be proud. All the more, therefore, is Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick

Roberts to be congratulated on the opportunity afforded him of showing, in the defeat of Ayub Khan, that the enterprise and endurance of himself and his troops were perfected by a consummate skill and devoted gallantry, adequate not merely to the battle of Kandahar but to any eventuality of war which they might be called on to meet.

7. The Government of India deplore the loss of those Officers and men who fell in the gallant performance of their duty; at the same time it is incumbent on them to record their recognition of the strategical skill displayed in the dispositions, through which it arose that the loss was so light in comparison with the difficulties to be overcome and the important results which were attained.

8. The Government of India will not now make more than a general reference to the individual services rendered in all ranks in this, the fitting close of a war in which so much distinguished service has been rendered. They desire, however, to add to the high and deserved commendation these services have received from Sir Frederick Roberts and the Commander-in-Chief in India an expression of their own deep appreciation of their value; and it will be their most pleasing duty to submit to the Queen-Empress the names of those thus distinguished, for Her Majesty's most gracious consideration.

9. Meanwhile, the Governor General in Council tenders to Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts and the Kabul-Kandahar force the cordial congratulations and thanks of the Government of India.

ALLEN JOHNSON, Colonel,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Enclosure 2 in No. 38.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5585 A., dated Simla, 7th October 1880.)

I am directed to forward, for the information of His Excellency the Governor General in Council, the accompanying Despatch from Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., reporting the march of the force under his command from Kabul to Kandahar, and the successful engagement with the Afghans under Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan on the 1st September last.

2. The events reported are so ably and so clearly described by Sir Frederick Roberts, as to require no word in explanation. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief cannot, however, refrain from expressing the pride with which he presents this despatch to Government, recording as it does one of the most complete and successful military operations of recent times.

3. In the last days of July, when the enemy under Ayub Khan had, after the unfortunate events at Maiwand, acquired a prestige and strength which some thought to be irresistible, the Commander-in-Chief felt that unless his proposal to despatch a division from Kabul met with the fullest support from the Officer selected to command it, it would have been impossible to carry out the intention.

It is therefore most gratifying to His Excellency to find that Sir Frederick Roberts was so strong an advocate for the measure.

4. The promptitude with which this force was organized and prepared to advance reflects the greatest credit on all concerned, and the Commander-in-Chief would here desire to record his appreciation of the admirable spirit displayed by Lieutenant-General Sir Donald Stewart, then in supreme command in Kabul, in depriving himself of the flower of his force in order to make up a division for Sir Frederick Roberts. On the skilful and successful manner in which Sir Donald Stewart brought the remainder of his troops to India, it will be His Excellency's pleasing duty to address the Government hereafter.

5. Sir Frederick Roberts has referred to the fact that no wheeled artillery accompanied his force, and as regards this I am to say that, notwithstanding the reports which had been received of Ayub Khan's artillery and of the manner in which it had been served, Sir Frederick Haines, after some doubts on the matter, fully concurred in the wisdom of the view urged by Sir Donald Stewart and Sir Frederick Roberts that no wheeled carriage of any kind should accompany the force.

6. The march from Kabul to Kandahar has been criticised as a most rash military operation, with no base in case of ill fortune, scant supplies, and a hostile population along the whole route. It would be out of place to point to success in justification of undue rashness, but it is right to state here that, after a full consideration of all these circumstances, those who knew best felt satisfied that such troops, with such a commander, could cope successfully with any obstacles which might present themselves, and the results have fully borne out this feeling.

7. In alluding to the troops, Sir Frederick Haines would invite the attention of Government to Sir Frederick Roberts' report regarding their discipline and behaviour on the line of march; neither fatigue, privations, nor the murder of their straggling comrades shook their discipline or morale, nor induced reprisals.

8. The report touches lightly on this superb march from Kabul to Kandahar,—a feat which will take its place amongst the most brilliant records of military history. It stands out as a proof of the wonderful power of endurance possessed by our troops, both British and Native, and of the admirable spirit which animates the men of all ranks and races of which our army is composed; whilst the mutual confidence which has been engendered by sharing together so many dangers in the field and so many hardships on the march, must prove a bond of union between the British and Native soldiers, which cannot fail to be a source of strength to the Government.

9. The Commander-in-Chief must here express his regret that, after the admirable efforts made by the troops under Major-General Phayre to reach Kandahar in time to assist in the overthrow of Ayub Khan, they should not have succeeded in doing so, and Sir Frederick Haines shares with these troops and their able Commander the disappointment which all have felt in regard to this. The troops under General Phayre had to toil through Sind and the Bolan at the very hottest time of the year. Floods and the difficulty in procuring forage and supplies were serious obstacles to be overcome, causing great delay in the advance. The attitude of the Marris and other tribes created anxiety regarding the safety of the line of communications, by which alone supplies could be furnished for the garrison of Kandahar and the Kabul-Kandahar Force; further delay was caused by this. It is solely due to the ability and energy of the Commander, and the spirit and discipline of the troops, that they were so far forward on the 1st September.

10. In regard to the action at Kandahar and to the reconnaissance of the 31st August which preceded it, His Excellency is only desirous of bringing prominently to the notice of Government the quick military appreciation of the situation by Sir Frederick Roberts, and the excellent dispositions made by him. The admirable manner in which his orders were carried out, and the gallantry of the troops, are shown by his report.

11. It may be said that it was a misfortune that the enemy did not suffer more in the pursuit, but a pursuit of Afghans is notoriously a difficult operation; and this will be readily understood when it is considered how easily they, under such circumstances, merge into the population, and casting away for the moment their arms, assume the rôle of peaceful inhabitants.

12. The Kandahar force rendered good service in the engagement of the 1st September; but as no report has been received on the subject from Lieutenant-General Primrose, His Excellency is not in possession of the details beyond what are gathered from Sir Frederick Roberts' despatch.

13. Sir Frederick Haines laments the death of such gallant soldiers as Lieutenant-Colonel Brownlow, Captains Frome and Straton, and Sergeant Cameron. To Lieutenant MacLaine's murder His Excellency has already alluded in my letter of the 25th ultimo. In such men the army has experienced a serious loss.

14. The Officers who are mentioned by Sir Frederick Roberts are commended to the favourable notice of Government, but their names will be more specially brought forward hereafter in the general recommendations for rewards for service in Afghanistan.

Enclosure 3 in No. 38.

From Lieutenant-General Sir FREDERICK ROBERTS, G.C.B., V.C., C.I.E., Royal Artillery, commanding the Southern Afghanistan Field Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India, Army Head Quarters, Simla. (No. 88, dated Camp, Quetta, 26th September 1880.)

Before detailing the operations on the 31st August and the 1st September, which resulted in the defeat of the Afghan army assembled at Kandahar, under the command of Sirdar Mahomed Ayub Khan, it may be desirable to give a short account of the march from Kabul, a distance of 318 miles, which was accomplished in 23 days, including two halts.

The strength of the force, placed at my disposal at Kabul by Lieutenant-General Sir Donald Stewart, G.C.B., consisted of—

- 3 Brigades of Infantry.
- 1 Brigade of Cavalry.
- 3 Batteries of mountain guns.

Major-General J. Ross, C.B., commanded the Infantry Division, the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Brigades of which were commanded respectively by—

Brigadier-General H. T. Macpherson, C.B., V.C.

Brigadier-General T. D. Baker, C.B.

Brigadier-General C. M. MacGregor, C.B., C.B.I., C.I.E.

Brigadier-General Hugh H. Gough, C.B., V.C., commanded the Cavalry Brigade.

Colonel Alured C. Johnson commanded the artillery; Colonel Æ. Perkins, C.B., held the position of Commanding Royal Engineer, and Deputy Surgeon-General J. Hanbury that of Principal Medical Officer.

In the detail of the forces* it will be noted that the strength in artillery was not in proportion to the strength of the other branches. But there were strong reasons which made it desirable that the artillery with the column should consist only of mountain batteries. The whole question was one of grave importance, and it was not without due consideration decided that the force should proceed to Kandahar unaccompanied by wheeled artillery.

The object was to reach Kandahar in the shortest possible time; and it was not improbable that the main road would have to be left, should the Afghan army at Kandahar endeavour to make its way towards Ghazni and Kabul by the valleys of the Argandab or the Arghastan.

The nature of the ground throughout Afghanistan is such that artillery can never be safely employed with cavalry alone, unsupported by infantry. Nor is rapidity of movement so much required of artillery in countries like Afghanistan, as the power of being able to operate over the most difficult ground without causing delay to the rest of the troops.

It was not forgotten, moreover, that on arrival at Kandahar the column would be augmented by a battery of 40-pounders, a battery of field artillery, and four guns of horse artillery.

It is unquestionable that, had either horse or field artillery accompanied the force, the march could not have been performed with the same rapidity.

Before leaving Kabul, everything that was possible was done to lighten baggage. Ten British soldiers were told off to each mountain battery tent, usually intended to hold six, and 50 to a sepoy's tent of two pāls, 34 lbs. of kit only being allowed for each man.

To each Native soldier 20 lbs. of baggage was allowed, inclusive of camp equipage.

Each Officer was allowed one mule, and one mule was allowed to every eight Officers for mess.

* DETAIL OF FORCE.

1st Infantry Brigade.

	British.	Native.
92nd Highlanders - - - -	651	—
23rd Pioneers - - - -	—	701
24th Punjab Native Infantry - - -	—	575
2nd Goorkhas - - - -	—	501
Total - - - -	651	1,777

2nd Infantry Brigade.

	British.	Native.
72nd Highlanders - - - -	787	—
2nd Sikh Infantry - - - -	—	612
3rd Sikh Infantry - - - -	—	570
5th Goorkhas - - - -	—	561
Total - - - -	787	1,743

3rd Infantry Brigade.

	British.	Native.
2/60th Rifles - - - -	616	—
15th Sikhs - - - -	—	650
25th Punjab Native Infantry - - -	—	629
4th Goorkhas - - - -	—	637
Total - - - -	616	1,916

Cavalry Brigade.

	British.	Native.
9th Queen's Royal Lancers - - -	318	—
3rd Bengal Cavalry - - - -	—	304
3rd Punjab Cavalry - - - -	—	408
Central India Horse - - - -	—	495
Total - - - -	318	1,297

Artillery Division.

	British.	Native.	Guns.
6/8th Royal Artillery, screw guns -	95	139	6
11/9th Royal Artillery - - - -	95	139	6
No. 2 Mountain Battery - - - -	—	140	6
Total - - - -	190	418	18

TOTAL OF FORCE.

British Troops - - - -	2,562
Native - - - -	7,151
British Officers - - - -	273
Guns - - - -	18
Cavalry horses - - - -	1,779
Artillery mules - - - -	450

The amount of supplies which it was determined to take with the force was as follows:—

- 30 days' tea, sugar, rum, and salt for Europeans.
- 8 days' rum for Natives drinking spirits.
- 5 days' flour for Europeans.
- 5 days' rations for Native troops.
- 1 day's grain, carried by cavalry horses and transport animals in addition to the ordinary load.

For the above, and for the carriage of foot-sore* soldiers and followers, it was

- * European soldiers were allowed 2 per cent. of ponies.
- Native soldiers were allowed $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.
- Native followers were allowed $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

found that the numbers of transport animals required, inclusive of 10 per cent. spare, were:—

- 1,589 yaboos (large Kabul ponies).
- 1,244 Indian ponies.
- 4,510 mules.
- 912 donkeys.

In addition to these, there were purchased on the line of march:—

- 35 yaboos.
- 1 mule.
- 208 donkeys.
- 171 camels.

The casualties were:—

- 410 yaboos.
- 106 Indian ponies.
- 217 mules.

The numbers of Native followers were:—

Doolie bearers	-	2,192
Followers in the Transport and other Departments	-	4,698
Private followers and syces of Native Cavalry regiments	-	1,244
Total	-	8,134

The desertion of the whole of the Afghan drivers belonging to the Transport, shortly after leaving Kabul, and of the Hazara drivers directly their own country was reached, threw exceptionally heavy work upon the troops.

† Captain A. T. S. A. Rind, Bengal Staff Corps.

Lieut. C. M. FitzGerald, Bengal Staff Corps.

Lieut. H. M. P. Hawkes, Bengal Staff Corps.

Lieut. H. F. Lyons-Montgomery, Bengal Staff Corps.

‡ Captain W. A. Wynter, 33rd Foot.

Captain G. H. Elliot, Bengal Staff Corps.

Captain C. R. Macgregor, Bengal Staff Corps.

Lieut. L. E. B. Booth, 33rd Foot.

Lieut. H. J. Elverson, 2nd Foot.

Lieut. R. B. W. Fisher, 10th Hussars.

Lieut. R. H. F. W. Wilson, 10th Hussars.

C. G. Robertson, 8th Foot.

As regards supplies, the greatest difficulty would have been experienced but for the admirable arrangements made by Major A. R. Badcock and the Officers of the Commissariat Department,† and by Lieutenant-Colonel R. C. Low and the Officers of the Transport Department.‡

Sufficient praise cannot be bestowed upon all these Officers. They never spared themselves; and often, after the longest march, and with the prospect of having to start off again at a very early hour the following morning, had to work on until a late hour in the night.

In the collection of supplies the Commissariat and Transport Departments were materially aided by Major E. G. G. Hastings and his staff of Political Officers.

Fortunately for the welfare of the cavalry horses and transport animals, a fair amount of green Indian corn was almost everywhere procurable. Barley was very scarce; but the Indian corn proved to be so nutritious that the large majority of the horses, ponies, and mules reached Kandahar in excellent health and condition.

The reserve of flour had on several occasions to be indented upon; but, by replenishing whenever supplies were to be obtained, we arrived at Kandahar with still about three days' flour in hand.

The force appointed for the relief of Kandahar moved into camp by brigades on the 8th August in the vicinity of Kabul, the 2nd Infantry and the Cavalry Brigade proceeding respectively to Indiki and Charasia. The 1st and 3rd Infantry Brigades encamped at Beni Hissar.

The following morning the march commenced. The route lay through the fertile Logar Valley, that line being chosen instead of the usual road by Maidan on account of the facilities it offered for collecting supplies.

On the 15th August Ghazni was reached,—a distance of 98 miles having been marched in seven days.

At Ghazni, I was met by the Governor, and received from him the keys of the city gates.

I placed my own guards and sentries in and around Ghazni, deeming it best for the preservation of order, for the prevention of collisions between the troops and people, and for the execution of our demand for supplies.

The fort was visited by numbers of Officers and men, but no disturbance occurred, and before the break of the following day the force was many miles on its way towards Khelat-i-Ghilzai.

No news having reached me from either the latter place or Kandahar, I determined to push on with all possible speed.

I may here mention that I frequently despatched messengers while on the road, with telegrams reporting our progress. I am led to think that none of these messengers ever reached their destination, except those sent from Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and from between that place and Kandahar.

On the 20th August, shortly after reaching Panjak, I received a letter from Colonel Tanner, 29th Bombay Native Infantry, commanding at Khelat-i-Ghilzai, written on the 18th, to the effect that all was well with his garrison; that the neighbourhood of Khelat-i-Ghilzai was quiet, and that General Phayre, writing from Quetta on the 12th August, had stated that he hoped to be in Kandahar on the 2nd September at the latest.

The following day, at Shahjui, Captain Straton was able to open heliographic communication with Khelat-i-Ghilzai. By this means I heard of the sortie which had been made from Kandahar on the 16th August, and at the same time I received reassuring news as to the staying power of the garrison,—that they were in no straits for supplies for troops and followers, that they were all in good health and spirits, and that they had forage sufficient to hold out for a longer period than it would take the force under my command to reach Kandahar.

I decided, therefore, to push on to Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and there give the troops a well-earned rest of one day.

We arrived at Khelat-i-Ghilzai on the 23rd August, having marched from Ghazni, a distance of 134 miles, in eight days. This gives an average daily rate of $16\frac{1}{2}$ miles.

Colonel Tanner had everything in good order at Khelat-i-Ghilzai, and had been enabled to collect a fair amount of supplies.

Being of opinion that it would be inconvenient to keep open communication with Khelat-i-Ghilzai for some time to come, and seeing no immediate advantage in continuing its occupation, I determined to withdraw the garrison and take it with me to Kandahar.

All the necessary arrangements for this purpose were made during the day the force halted,—the 24th August; and the charge of the fort was handed over to Mahomed Sadik Khan, a Toki Ghilzai, who had had possession of it when the British troops under Lieutenant-General Sir Donald Stewart reached Khelat-i-Ghilzai in January 1879.

On the 26th August, at Tirandaz, I received news from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., commanding at Kandahar, that, on the 23rd, Sirdar Ayub Khan had abandoned the villages to the east and west of Kandahar; and that, on the 24th, he had struck his camp and had taken up a position in the Argandab Valley between Baba Wali and Mazra, due north of the city,—thus practically giving up the investment of Kandahar.

Being anxious to open up heliographic communication with General Primrose, and, if possible, with General Phayre, I ordered two regiments of cavalry, under Brigadier-General Hugh Gough, to march the following morning (27th August) to Robat, a distance of 34 miles, the remainder of the force moving about half way.

Shortly after arrival at Robat, Brigadier-General Gough was met by Lieutenant-Colonel St. John, the Resident, and Major Adam, Assistant Quartermaster-General at Kandahar. From the information brought by these Officers, and from what I heard from other sources, I was led to believe that Ayub Khan intended to make a stand, and was strengthening his position, which was said to extend from Gandizian to Kotal-i-Murcha.

Upon receipt of this news I determined to halt for one day at Robat, and to divide the remaining distance to Kandahar, 19 miles, into two short marches.

Soldiers, followers, and transport animals were much fagged by the long and continuous marching, and somewhat exhausted by the now daily increasing heat. I was, moreover, desirous of bringing the troops into Kandahar in as fresh a state as possible, and fit for any work that might be required of them.

During the halt at Robat, on the 29th, I received a letter from Major-General Phayre, C.B., dated Kila Abdulla, the 24th August, stating that he had hoped his division would be assembled there on the 28th, and be able to march for Kandahar on the 30th.

I felt at once that this precluded the possibility of General Phayre's arrival at Kandahar in time to co-operate with me. I much regretted this, as I was well aware of the strenuous exertions he had made to relieve the beleaguered garrison, and the privations and hardships which he and his troops had undergone to effect this object.

On the 31st August the force reached Kandahar, having marched from Khelat-i-Ghilzai (88 miles) in seven days, including the halt at Robat.

The position I determined to take up was to the west of the city, with my right on the cantonments, and my left touching Old Kandahar.

Such a position covered the city, gave me command of a good and ample supply of water, and placed me within striking distance of Ayub Khan's camp.

Not knowing what opposition might be expected once we advanced beyond the city, arrangements were made, in communication with Lieutenant-General Primrose, for giving the troops their breakfast outside the Shikarpore Gate, and for watering and feeding the transport animals.

At 10 a.m. the 1st and 3rd Brigades moved off from under the city walls, and took up the position as shown in the plan attached, viz., Picquet Hill, Karez Hill, and the north-eastern spur of the hill over Old Kandahar.

This movement was accomplished without opposition.

The Cavalry and the 2nd Brigade of Infantry were at this time on baggage and rear-guards.

From such a cursory examination of the ground as I was able to make on arrival in the morning, I was quite satisfied that any attempt to carry the Baba Wali Kotal by a direct attack would be attended with very severe loss. I determined, therefore, if possible, to turn it.

To enable me to decide how best this operation could be carried out, it was necessary to ascertain the strength and precise extent of the position occupied by the enemy. I was anxious to obtain this information without delay, and I therefore ordered

* 3rd Bengal Cavalry.

15th Sikhs.

Two guns of 11/9th Royal Artillery.

a small column* under the command of Brigadier-General Hugh Gough to start at once and make as complete a reconnaissance as possible.

Lieutenant-Colonel Chapman, Deputy-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, was directed to accompany the party and to assist Brigadier-General Gough with his great local knowledge and experience.

The reconnaissance started at 1 p.m. from our left near Old Kandahar, and proceeded towards the high ground immediately above the village of Gandizan. Here the infantry and guns halted, while the cavalry advanced some two or two and a half miles, avoiding the numerous orchards and enclosures, and coming out in front of Pir Paimal village, where it was found the enemy were strongly entrenched.

As soon as the enemy's fire along this line had been drawn, the 3rd Bengal Cavalry fell back, admirably handled by their Commandant, Lieutenant-Colonel A. R. D. Mackenzie.

In the meantime the guns were brought into action, partly to test the range, and also to check the enemy, who were now observed to be passing rapidly into the gardens near Gandizan.

A retirement of the infantry and artillery of the reconnaissance to within our piquets was then ordered.

The instant our troops commenced to fall back, the enemy advanced in great strength and pressed the infantry. They eventually assembled in such large numbers, and endeavoured so persistently to follow, that the whole of the troops of the 3rd Brigade, and part of those of the 1st, were ordered under arms.

The retirement was conducted with great steadiness by the 15th Sikhs, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel G. R. Hennessy. At the end of the day our casualties numbered only 10.

The reconnaissance of the 31st August having afforded me all the information I required, I decided on attacking the enemy the following morning.

Orders were accordingly issued for the troops to breakfast at 7 a.m., and for one day's cooked rations to be carried by all ranks.

Brigades were to be in position by 8 a.m., tents being previously struck, and, with the kits, stored in a walled enclosure.

The plan of operations was explained by me personally to the Officers commanding divisions and brigades at 6 a.m.

This plan, briefly, was to threaten the enemy's left (the Baba Wali Kotal) and to attack in force by the village of Pir Paimal.

The whole of the infantry of the Kabul-Kandahar Force, upon whom devolved the duty of carrying the enemy's position, were formed up in rear of the low hills which covered the front of our camp, the right being at Picquet Hill, and the left resting on Chilzina, while the cavalry, under the command of Brigadier-General Hugh Gough, was held in readiness, in rear of the left, to operate by Gandizan towards the bed of the Argandab river, so as to threaten the rear of Ayub Khan's camp, and endanger his line of retreat towards Girishk and Kakrez. E/B Royal Royal Horse Artillery (four guns), two companies of the 2/7th Fusiliers, and four companies of the 28th Bombay Native Infantry, were placed at the disposal of Brigadier-General Gough to take up a position near Gandizan, and, when opportunity offered, to support his advance.

Guards for the protection of the city having been detailed, as shown in the accompanying return, marked No. 9, the remaining troops under Lieutenant-General Primrose's command were ordered to be distributed as follows:—

Brigadier-General Daubeney's brigade to hold the ground from which the Kabul force would advance to the attack.

The remnant of Brigadier-General Burrows' brigade, with No. 5/11th Royal Artillery and the cavalry of the Bombay force under Brigadier-General Nuttall, to take up a position north of the cantonment, from which the 40-pounders might be brought to bear directly on the Baba Wali Pass; the cavalry being instructed to watch the pass called Kotal-i-Murcha, and to cover the city.

It was clear, from a very early hour in the morning, that an offensive movement was contemplated by the enemy. The villages of Gandizan and Gandhi Mullah Sahibdad were held in strength; and desultory fire was brought to bear upon our front from the orchards connecting these two villages, while an ill-directed shell fire was opened from the Baba Wali Kotal, which was held in force during the greater part of the day's operation.

At 9 30 a.m. fire was opened from the 40-pdrs. upon the Baba Wali pass.

Shortly afterwards the brigades of the Kabul-Kandahar force were ordered to the attack, the 1st Brigade being on the right, the 2nd on the left, and the 3rd in reserve. Two batteries of artillery, viz., C/2nd and 6/8th,—the latter being the new pattern jointed guns,—had meanwhile been placed in position to cover the advance of the infantry, and commenced shelling the village of Gandhi Mullah Sahibdad.

The instructions given by Major-General Ross to Brigadier-General Macpherson were to make his first attack on that village, after which he was to clear the enemy from the enclosures which lay between the village and the low spur of the hill short of Pir Paimal. He further ordered Brigadier-General Baker to advance in a westerly direction, keeping touch with the 1st Brigade on his right, and clearing the gardens and orchards in his immediate front.

The attack upon the village of Gandhi Mullah Sahibdad was made by the 2nd Goorkhas and the 92nd Highlanders, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel A. Battye and Lieutenant-Colonel G. H. Parker respectively, the remaining two regiments of the 1st Infantry Brigade being in support. The village was carried in the most dashing style, Goorkhas and Highlanders vieing with each other in the rapidity of their advance. The enemy withdrew sullenly and leisurely, a good number remaining to the last in the village to receive a bayonet charge.

On this occasion the following Officers and men were brought to notice as having behaved with distinguished gallantry:—

Major G. S. White,	92nd Highlanders.
Private John Dennis	"
Drummer James Roddick	"
Lieutenant H. S. Wheatley,	2nd Goorkhas.
Sepoy Mangal Jaisi	"
" Wazir Sing Nargarkoti	"
" Makkareah Rana	"
" Bisram Thápá	"
" Maniram Lohar	"

During the advance of the 1st Brigade on the village of Gandi Mullah Sahibdad, the 2nd Brigade had been threading its way through the lanes and walled enclosures which lay in the line of its attack. The resistance it encountered was most stubborn, the enemy being well protected by high walls, which they had carefully loopholed. The loss suffered in clearing these enclosures was necessarily severe. Lieutenant-Colonel Brownlow, C.B., Captain Frome, and Lance Sergeant Cameron (a grand specimen of a Highland soldier) being amongst those who fell.

Lieutenant-Colonel Brownlow met his death while gallantly leading his regiment, the 72nd Highlanders, and in him the army has experienced a great loss. He had on many occasions highly distinguished himself as a leader,—at the Peiwar Kotal, during the operations around Kabul at the latter end of 1879, and notably on the 14th December, when he won the admiration of the whole force by his brilliant conduct in the attack and capture of the Asmai Heights.

Of the regiments of this (the 2nd) Brigade, the 72nd Highlanders and the 2nd Sikhs had the chief share of the fighting. They were the two leading battalions, and frequently had to fix bayonets to carry positions or to check the determined rushes of enemy. Brigadier-General Baker speaks in high terms of the gallant behaviour of these two regiments, and notices especially the manner in which a charge of the enemy was repulsed by the 2nd Sikhs under the able and immediate command of Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Boswell, who was well supported by Majors H. M. Pratt, J. B. Slater, and F. E. Hastings.

The following Native Commissioned Officers, Non-commissioned Officers, and soldiers are brought forward as having been very conspicuous during this part of the action:—

Colour Sergeant G. Jacobs,	72nd Highlanders.
Colour Sergeant R. Lauder	„ „
Lance Corporal J. Gordon	„ „
Subadar-Major Gurbáj Sing,	2nd Sikhs.
Jemadar Alla Sing	„
Naick Dír Sing	„
Sepoy Hakim	„
„ Jai Sing	„
„ Partab Sing	„
„ Bír Sing	„

After severe fighting, both brigades emerged at the point of the hill near Pir Paimal; and bringing their left shoulders forward, they pressed on and swept the enemy through the closely wooded gardens and orchards which cover the western slopes of the hill.

The village of Pir Paimal was in our possession soon after noon.

When I heard from Major-General Ross of the success of the troops under his command, I determined to support his further advance by the 3rd Brigade, which had been drawn up in front of the village of Abasabad, with the double object of being a reserve to the 1st and 2nd Brigades, and of meeting a possible counter-attack by the enemy from the Baba Wali pass.

The capture of Pir Paimal, however, brought our troops in rear of that pass; and, feeling that nothing had now to be feared from the enemy's left, I pushed on with the 3rd Brigade to join Major-General Ross.

That Officer, seeing the advantage gained, and knowing that he could rely upon the courage and eagerness of his troops, had very wisely determined to press forward without waiting for reinforcements.

The position to which the enemy retired, after the capture of Pir Paimal, was an entrenched camp to the south-west of the Baba Wali Kotal, commanding an open piece of ground.

This entrenchment they were evidently prepared to hold with their usual determination; reinforcements were being rapidly pushed up from their reserves, while the guns on the Baba Wali Kotal were turned round, so as to increase the heavy fire of artillery which was brought to bear upon our troops.

It became necessary to take this position at once by storm.

Recognizing this with true soldierly instinct, Major G. S. White, who was leading the advance companies of Her Majesty's 92nd Highlanders, called upon his men for just one charge more "to close the business."

The battery of screw guns, under Brevet-Major J. C. Robinson, had been shelling the enemy with a well directed fire; under cover of which, and supported by a portion of the 2nd Goorkhas and the 23rd Pioneers, the Highlanders, responding with alacrity to their leader's call, dashed forward and drove the enemy from their entrenchments at the point of the bayonet.

The gallant and ever foremost Major White was the first to reach the enemy's guns; being closely followed by Sepoy Inderbir Lama, who, placing his rifle upon one of the guns, exclaimed that it was captured in the name of the 2nd (Prince of Wales' Own) Goorkhas.

While the 1st Brigade was advancing towards the enemy's last position, a portion of the 2nd Brigade, viz., a half battalion of the 3rd Sikhs, under Lieutenant-Colonel G. N. Money, charged a body of the enemy on the extreme left, and captured three guns.

The enemy were now completely routed; but, owing to the nature of the ground, it was impossible for Major-General Ross, who was commanding in the front line, to realize the extent of the victory he had won.

He, therefore, expecting the enemy to take up a fresh position further on, and to continue their resistance, ordered the 1st and 2nd Brigades to halt and replenish their ammunition.

When this had been done, and the troops had advanced about a mile, Major-General Ross found himself in sight of the whole of Ayub Khan's camp standing deserted, and apparently as it had been left in the morning, when the Afghans moved to the attack.

With his camp, Ayub Khan lost all his artillery, numbering 32 pieces, including the two guns of E/B., Royal Horse Artillery, which had been taken by his troops at Maiwand on the 27th July.

During this part of the engagement, the following Officers and men were especially remarked for their gallantry and forwardness:—

Major G. S. White,	92nd Highlanders.
Lieutenant C. W. H. Douglas	„
Corporal William McGillvray	„
Private Peter Grieve	„
„ John McIntosh	„
„ D. Grey	„
Major S. E. Beecher,	2nd Goorkhas.
Havildar Gopal Borah	„
Sepoy Inderbir Lama	„
„ Tikaram Kwas	„

Further pursuit with infantry being hopeless, the two brigades were halted on the far side of the village of Mazra, where they were shortly afterwards joined by the 3rd Brigade, under Brigadier-General McGregor.

I had, meanwhile, ordered the cavalry of the Bombay force, under Brigadier-General Nuttall, to advance over the Baba Wali Kotal, and pursue the enemy up the left bank of the Argandab.

The operations of the cavalry under Brigadier-General Hugh Gough were continued throughout the day, the brigade crossing the Argandab and pushing beyond the line of the enemy's retreat towards Kakrez.

During this movement none of the regular troops were encountered, but some 350 of the fugitive ghazis and irregulars were killed.

With the exception of the 1st Brigade, which halted at Mazra for the night, all the troops returned to Kandahar before dark.

Shortly before the final advance, Major-General Ross, wishing to inform me by heliograph that he had succeeded in turning the enemy's position, directed Captain Straton, 22nd Foot, Superintendent of Army Signalling, to proceed with a company of the 24th Punjab Native Infantry to the Baba Wali Kotal. This gallant Officer had only gone a short distance when a ghazi, springing out of a ravine close to him, shot him dead. In Captain Straton Her Majesty's service has lost a most accomplished, intelligent Officer, under whose management army signalling, as applied to field service, reached a pitch of perfection probably never before attained. His energy knew no difficulties, and his enthusiasm was beyond praise. He had won the highest opinions from all with whom his duties had brought him in contact, and his death was very deeply felt throughout the whole force.

On the capture of Ayub Khan's camp, the body of Lieutenant Maclaine, Royal Horse Artillery, was discovered, lying outside what had been his own, and close to Ayub Khan's, tent. It was evident that he was quite recently murdered, the act, I believe, of the guard placed over him by Ayub Khan. This incident I record with deep sorrow at the melancholy fate of a brave young Officer, whose short career had had been so full of promise.

I have requested Lieutenant-General Primrose to furnish a report regarding the part taken by the troops under his command in the engagement of the 1st September. I beg to acknowledge the assistance that the Lieutenant-General and the Officers under his command afforded me. The presence of these troops released the whole of the Kabul-Kandahar Force for the turning movement by Pir Paimal, and contributed materially to the success of the day.

I annex the following returns:—

- No. 1. Numerical Return of Casualties at Kandahar on the 31st August and the 1st September 1880, together with a Nominal Roll of British Officers killed and wounded.
- No. 2. Nominal Roll of Native Officers, British Non-commissioned Officers, and followers of the Infantry Division, Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, killed and wounded on the 31st August and the 1st September 1880.
- No. 3. Nominal Roll of killed and wounded, Cavalry Brigade, Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, on the 1st September 1880.
- No. 4. Return of actual number present of the Infantry Division, Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, at the action of the 1st September 1880.
- No. 5. Return of actual number present of the Cavalry Brigade, Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, at the action of the 1st September 1880.
- No. 6. Return of gun and rifle ammunition expended by the Kabul-Kandahar Field Force, on the 31st August and the 1st September 1880.
- No. 7. Numerical return of casualties in the Bombay-Kandahar Field Force, on the 1st September 1880.
- No. 8. Return of ammunition expended by the Bombay-Kandahar Field Force, on the 1st September 1880.
- No. 9. Number of Officers and men of the Bombay-Kandahar Field Force, who were on duty in the citadel and city on the 1st September 1880.
- No. 10. Number of the Bombay-Kandahar Field Force under arms on the 1st September 1880.
- No. 11. Return of ordnance captured on the 1st September 1880.

I also attach four plans illustrative of the country over which the battle was fought,—

- No. 1. Gives the dispositions of the Kabul-Kandahar brigades at several important stages.
- No. 2. Shows the position taken up by the Bombay-Kandahar Field Force, as the Kabul-Kandahar Field Force were breaking ground for the attack.
- No. 3. Has the position of the whole force engaged, together with that of the enemy, and of the ground covered by our cavalry.
- No. 4. Is a pen and ink sketch of the battle field taken from the hill over Gandizan.

It will be seen that our casualties amounted to—

Killed, of all ranks	-	-	-	40
Wounded, of all ranks	-	-	-	228
Total, killed and wounded				268

It is difficult to estimate the loss of the enemy, but it must have been considerable, for upwards of 600 bodies were buried by us between Kandahar and the village of Pir Paimal alone. Probably 1,200 killed would not be an over-estimate.

The number of the enemy against us has been calculated at :—

Regular infantry	-	-	-	-	4,000
Cavalry	-	-	-	-	800
Ghazis	-	-	-	-	5,000
Irregular cavalry	-	-	-	-	3,000

Having briefly described the march from Kabul to Kandahar, and having given the chief incidents of the operations around Kandahar on the 31st August and 1st September, I am desirous of bringing to the special notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India and the Government of India the conduct and bearing of the troops under my command.

The rapidity with which the march was accomplished,—taking into consideration the strength of the force, the variations of climate, and the difficult nature of the country traversed,—is the best testimony I can produce to the efficiency, discipline, and spirit of the troops.

Their conduct, under circumstances often of the most testing nature, cannot be expressed in terms too strong or too full. They all seemed to be animated with but one desire, that, cost what it might in personal risk, fatigue, or discomfort, they would effect the speedy release of their beleaguered fellow-soldiers in the city of Kandahar.

The unflagging energy and perseverance of the troops seemed to reach the full height when they knew they were about to put forth their irresistible strength against a hitherto successful enemy.

Notwithstanding the provocation caused by the cruel murder of any stragglers (soldiers as well as followers) who fell into the hands of the Afghans following in the wake of our column, not one act infringing the rules of civilized warfare was committed by our troops. The persons and property of the Natives were respected, and full compensation for supplies was everywhere given.

In short, the inhabitants of the districts we passed through could not have been treated with greater consideration, nor with a lighter hand; and the conduct of the troops will ever remain as memorable as the results which they achieved.

Where all did their duty so willingly and effectually, there may seem little room for the selection of individuals for prominent notice. I cannot, however, refrain from recording the names of some Officers whose exceptional services, I consider, entitle them to the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

Major-General J. Ross, C.B., commanding the Infantry Division and second in command, afforded me every assistance during the march from Kabul and the operations at Kandahar. By the able manner in which he conducted the attack on the Afghan position, on the 1st September, he has given a fresh proof of his many soldierly qualities, and of his fitness for command.

Major-General Ross speaks in high terms of the following Officers of his Staff:—

Major G. de C. Morton, Assistant Adjutant-General.
Major R. G. Kennedy, Assistant Quartermaster-General.
Officiating Deputy Surgeon-General J. Ekin, M.B.
Captain J. D. Mansel, Rifle Brigade, A.D.C.
Lieutenant A. Davidson, 2/60th Rifles,	} Orderly Officers.
Lieutenant the Hon. M. G. Talbot, R.E.,
Lieutenant F. B. Longe, R.E.,

I am greatly indebted to—

Brigadier-General H. T. Macpherson, C.B., V.C., commanding the 1st Infantry Brigade.

Brigadier-General T. D. Baker, C.B., commanding the 2nd Infantry Brigade.

Brigadier-General C. M. MacGregor, C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., commanding the 3rd Infantry Brigade.

Brigadier-General Hugh H. Gough, C.B., V.C., commanding the Cavalry Brigade.

With such able and experienced Officers in command of brigades, success was a certainty. Throughout the long and trying march from Kabul they maintained the strictest discipline, and brought their troops to Kandahar in the highest state of efficiency.

I desire to bring to the special notice of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the valuable services of these distinguished Officers.

Brigadier-General Macpherson reports favourably of the following Officers, who served under his command:—

Major J. C. Robinson, R.A., commanding No. 6/8th Royal Artillery.

Lieutenant-Colonel G. H. Parker, commanding the 92nd Highlanders.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. Battye, commanding the 2nd (P. W. O.) Goorkhas.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. Collett, commanding the 23rd Pioneers.

Colonel F. B. Norman, commanding the 24th Punjab Native Infantry.

Captain R. E. C. Jarvis, 67th Foot, Brigade Major, "for the intelligent manner in which he carried out the duties of his appointment."

Captain A. D. M'Gregor, 92nd Highlanders, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, "for his intelligence and untiring energy."

Captain R. P. Tickell, R.E., Field Engineer, "for his valuable services during the march from Kabul, and usefulness during the action of the 1st September."

Lieutenant E. S. E. Childers, R.E., Orderly Officer.

Brigadier-General Macpherson records that the devotion of the Medical Officers of the brigade in attending to the wounded in the field under fire was most admirable.

He mentions,—

Surgeon-Major S. B. Roe, M.B., 92nd Highlanders.
 Surgeon-Major W. Finden, 2nd (P. W. O.) Goorkhas.
 Surgeon E. H. Fenn, No. 6/8th Royal Artillery.
 Surgeon H. J. Linton, 24th Punjab Native Infantry.
 Surgeon H. Hamilton, M.D., 23rd Pioneers.

Brigadier-General T. D. Baker would wish to mention specially the names of the following Officers:—

Major G. Swinley, R.A., commanding No. 2 Mountain Battery.
 Major C. M. Stockwell, commanding the 72nd Highlanders.
 Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Boswell, commanding the 2nd Sikhs.
 Lieutenant-Colonel A. FitzHugh, commanding the 5th Goorkhas.
 Colonel O. V. Tanner, commanding the 29th Bombay Native Infantry.
 Captain W. C. Farwell, General List, Infantry, Brigade Major.
 Lieutenant F. T. N. Spratt, R.E., Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General.
 Captain W. G. Nicholson, R.E., Field Engineer.
 Captain M. N. G. Kane, 72nd Highlanders, Orderly Officer.
 Surgeon-Major G. W. M'Nalty, M.D.

Surgeon-Major C. A. Atkins, "for the manner in which he attended the wants of the wounded in the fighting line."

Brigadier-General MacGregor desires to record his appreciation of the support and assistance he received from—

Major J. M. Douglas, R.A., commanding No. 11/9th Royal Artillery.
 Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Collins, commanding the 2nd Battalion, 60th Royal Rifles.
 Lieutenant-Colonel G. R. Hennessy, commanding the 15th Sikhs.
 Colonel J. W. Hoggan, commanding the 25th Punjab Native Infantry.
 Lieutenant-Colonel F. F. Rowcroft, commanding the 4th Goorkhas.

Captain R. Chalmer, 2/60th Rifles, Brigade Major, who proved himself a most zealous Officer.

Captain A. Gaselee, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General, who aided much by his knowledge of the country.

Captain M. C. Brackenbury, R.E., Field Engineer, an excellent and energetic Officer.

Captain H. M'L. Hutchinson, 14th Foot, Orderly Officer, who rendered every assistance in his power.

He further brings forward the following regimental Officers:—

Captain A. E. Duthy, R.A., 11/9th Royal Artillery.
Major W. G. Byron,	} 2/60th Rifles.
Captain J. N. Blackwood-Price,
" H. S. Marsham,	} 15th Sikhs.
Major D. W. Inglis,
Captain H. A. Abbott,	} 25th Punjab Native Infantry.
Captain W. V. Ellis,
Lieutenant C. H. H. Beley,	} 4th Goorkhas.
Major E. P. Mainwaring,
Captain C. A. Mercer,
Surgeon-Major G. C. Chesnaye,
Surgeon-Major E. C. Markey.

Brigadier-General Hugh Gough states that his thanks are specially due to,—

Major J. A. Tillard, R.H.A., commanding E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.
 Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Bushman, commanding the 9th (Queen's Royal) Lancers.

Lieutenant-Colonel A. R. D. Mackenzie, commanding the 3rd Bengal Cavalry.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. Martin, commanding the Central India Horse.

Major A. Vivian, commanding the 3rd Punjab Cavalry.

Captain J. P. Brabazon, 10th Hussars, Brigade Major.

Major B. A. Combe, 10th Hussars, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-General.

Captain C. F. Call, R.E., Field Engineer.

Captain H. Burnley, 6th Dragoon Guards, } Orderly Officers.

Lieutenant M. O. Little, 9th Lancers,

Surgeon-Major R. Lewer.

I beg to acknowledge with thanks the aid I have received throughout from Colonel Alured C. Johnson, R.H.A., commanding the Royal Artillery, and Colonel Æ. Perkins, C.B., R.E., Commanding Royal Engineer. Officers commanding batteries, whose names are brought forward by the Officer commanding the Royal Artillery, have already been mentioned by the Brigadier-Generals commanding the brigades to which their batteries were attached, with the exception of Major P. H. Greig, R.A., commanding C/2nd Royal Artillery, whose services on the 1st September Colonel Johnson desires to acknowledge, and Major T. Graham, commanding No. 6/8th Royal Artillery, who shared the arduous march from Kabul, but was unfortunately prevented by sickness from commanding his battery during the operations at Kandahar.

He mentions also,—

Captain H. Pison, R.H.A., Adjutant, Royal Artillery, and Lieutenant R. A. Bannatine, R.A., Orderly Officer, both of whom afforded him every assistance.

Colonel Perkins speaks favourably of the assistance he received from Lieutenant T. P. Cather, R.E., Adjutant, Royal Engineers.

I trust I may be permitted here to record my opinion of the excellent services performed by the following regimental Officers who have been with me throughout all, or the greater part of, the campaign in Afghanistan, and are still serving under my command :—

Royal Artillery.

Lieutenant E. A. Smith.

9th (Queen's Royal) Lancers.

Captain H. W. Apperley.		Captain B. Gough.
Captain J. A. H. Stewart-Mackenzie.		Lieutenant E. B. M'Innis.

72nd Highlanders.

Major C. W. N. Guinness.		Captain R. H. Murray.
Captain Garnett.		Lieutenant R. L. Milne.
Captain M. N. G. Kane.		Lieutenant S. C. H. Monro.

92nd Highlanders.

Major G. S. White.		Captain the Hon. J. Scott Napier.
Captain L. C. Singleton.		Captain C. W. H. Douglas.
Captain R. F. Darvall.		Lieutenant W. H. Dick Cunyngham.

3rd Bengal Cavalry.

Lieutenant-Colonel B. Cracroft.		Major G. W. Willock.
---------------------------------	--	----------------------

3rd Punjab Cavalry.

Major W. C. Anderson.		Major J. D. Macpherson.
Captain C. C. Egerton.

Central India Horse.

Major H. M. Buller.		Major J. Colledge.
Major M. G. Gerard.

2nd Goorkhas.

Major S. E. Beecher.		Lieutenant H. S. Wheatley.
----------------------	--	----------------------------

23rd Pioneers.

Captain H. Paterson.		Captain S. V. Gordon.
----------------------	--	-----------------------

24th Punjab Native Infantry.

Captain E. Stedman.

2nd Sikh Infantry.

Major H. M. Pratt.		Major J. B. Slater.
Major F. E. Hastings.

3rd Sikh Infantry.

Major C. J. Griffiths.

Major W. B. Aislabie.

5th Goorkhas.

Major J. M. Sym.

Captain E. Molloy.

Lieutenant A. R. Martin.

Lieutenant C. C. Chenevix-Trench.

Lieutenant C. C. St. E. Lucas.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. F. Chapman, R.A., who has held the important post of Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, has afforded me throughout the most valuable and material assistance. His services in Afghanistan are well known to the Commander-in-Chief in India; I am glad, however, to have this opportunity of bringing the name of this excellent Staff Officer prominently before His Excellency.

Deputy Surgeon-General J. Hanbury, M.B., proved himself to be an efficient administrative Medical Officer, and carried on the duties of his responsible office to my entire satisfaction.

To Major A. R. Badcock, Deputy Commissary-General, the entire force is deeply indebted. The manner in which he, and the Officers under his orders, overcame difficulties of no ordinary nature, and the manner in which they exerted themselves to procure the daily supply, are deserving of particular mention. The administrative talent possessed by Major Badcock is of the highest order, and I cannot recommend his services too strongly for recognition by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India.

Major Badcock speaks in the highest terms of all the Officers of the Commissariat Department with the force, but he brings forward especially the name of Captain A. T. S. A. Rind, Bengal Staff Corps.

The valuable services performed by Lieutenant-Colonel R. C. Low, Bengal Cavalry, Chief Director of Transport, and the Officers of his Department, can scarcely be considered apart from those of the Commissariat Department.

I would wish here to record my high sense of the admirable work accomplished by Lieutenant-Colonel Low and his able staff of assistants. The mobility of the force depended upon the efficiency of the transport, and it is mainly due to the untiring energy of these Officers that the troops were able to perform such long and continuous marches, and to reach their destination with the transport animals in such excellent condition. Lieutenant-Colonel Low brings to special notice Captain W. A. Wynter, 33rd Foot, and Lieutenant L. E. P. Booth, 33rd Foot.

Major C. A. Gorham, R.A., Deputy Judge-Advocate General, has carried on his duties entirely to my satisfaction.

Major C. Cowie, R.A., Commissary of Ordnance, had a difficult and arduous task to perform, his successful accomplishment of which deserves my acknowledgment. My thanks are also due to Lieutenant W. G. Small, 59th Foot, in charge of the field treasure chest.

The Reverend J. W. Adams, B.A., Chaplain, Church of England, the Reverend G. W. Manson, B.D., and the Reverend Alexander Ferrier, M.A., the Presbyterian Chaplains, and the Very Reverend Father G. Browne, were throughout most attentive to their duties.

Major E. G. B. Hastings, Chief Political Officer, and the following Officers of the Political Staff:—

Captain J. W. Ridgeway,

Major C. B. Euan Smith, C.S.I.,

Major M. Protheroe, have rendered me every assistance, and have spared themselves no trouble nor exposure in their endeavours to gain information, and to procure supplies for the force.

It affords me much pleasure to bring forward the names of the Officers serving on my personal staff, who have at all times been unremitting in the performance of their duties.

Major G. T. Pretymann, R.A., has, in addition to his duties as Aide-de-Camp, held the position of Commandant of Field Force head-quarters.

Lieutenant J. Sherston, Rifle Brigade, Aide-de-Camp.

Captain R. Pole-Carew, Coldstream Guards, } Orderly Officers.

Captain the Hon. W. C. Rowley, R.A., }

Surgeon J. F. Williamson, M.B.

Enclosure 4 in No. 38.

NUMERICAL RETURN of CASUALTIES in the Kabul-Kandahar Field Force and the Kandahar Field Force in the operations of the 31st August and 1st September, 1880, near Kandahar.

Remarks.	Killed.						Wounded.						Total.	Remarks.
	British Officers.	Native Officers.	Sergeants, Duffadars and Havildars.	Drummers and Buglers.	Rank and File.	Followers.	British Officers.	Native Officers.	Sergeants, Duffadars, and Havildars.	Drummers and Buglers.	Rank and File.	Followers.
Staff -	1	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1
E/B, Royal Horse Artillery.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	1 horse wounded.
C/2nd Royal Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	-	2	1 horse killed.
No. 6/8th Royal Artillery.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	3	3	6	4 mules killed; 1 horse and 2 mules wounded.
No. 5/11th Royal Artillery.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
No. 2 Punjab Mountain Battery.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1 mule wounded.
9th Lancers -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
3rd Bengal Cavalry -	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	1*	-	2	* Since dead. Two horses killed, 1 wounded.
3rd Punjab Cavalry -	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	2	-	4	-	7	3 horses killed, 9 wounded.
Central India Horse	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	-	4	-	6
3rd Bombay Cavalry	-	1	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	2	1 horse killed, 3 wounded.
3rd Sind Horse -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	8 horses killed, 1 wounded.
7th Fusiliers -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
60th Rifles -	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2	-	2
72nd Highlanders -	2	-	-	-	7	-	2	-	1	-	19†	2	33	† 4 men since dead.
92nd Highlanders -	-	-	1	-	10	-	2	-	7	-	62‡	2	84	‡ 8 men since dead. One horse and 1 mule killed; 2 mules wounded.
15th Bengal Native Infantry.	-	-	-	-	2	-	-	-	1§	-	3	-	6	§ Since dead.
23rd ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	2	-	1	-	1	1	10	2	17	2 mules killed.
24th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	1	-	-	10	1	13
25th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	1	-	2
2nd Goorkha Regiment.	-	-	-	-	8	-	1	1	-	1	20	2	33	2 men since dead. One horse wounded.
4th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	1	-	-	4	-	7
5th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	-	-	2	2¶	5	¶ Both since dead.
2nd Sikh Infantry	-	-	-	-	3	-	1	-	1	-	2	2	29	 1 man since dead.
3rd ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	5	-	6
4th Bombay Native Infantry.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
28th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
29th ditto, ditto	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	1	2
Commissariat Department.	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1††	1	†† Since dead.
Total -	3	1	1	-	35	-	11	4	16	2	177	18
Grand total -	40						228						268	{ 16 horses and 7 mules killed; 17 horses and 5 mules wounded.

No. 39.

No. 43 of 1880.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE MOST HONOURABLE THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

India Office, London,
15th October 1880.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of Letter of Your Excellency's Government, No. 205, dated the 7th September, with accompanying papers, reporting the arrival at Kandahar of the force which marched from Kabul under the command of Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts, and the defeat of the army of Sirdar Ayub Khan.

2. Immediately upon receipt, by telegraph, of the news of these events, I had the satisfaction of communicating to Sir F. Roberts and to the Commander-in-Chief in India the congratulations of Her Majesty the Queen and the Government upon the complete success by which the operations of the Kabul-Kandahar Field Force had been crowned. Her Majesty's Government desire now to place upon record their entire concurrence in the sentiments upon this subject, which are expressed by Your Excellency in Council in your letter under notice. They have the highest appreciation of the very distinguished service which Sir F. Roberts and his troops, both European and Native, have rendered to the country; and they are extremely sensible of the obligations which they owe to Lieutenant-General Sir D. Stewart for the zeal and energy displayed by him in the organization and equipment of the force, to which was entrusted a task as arduous as it was honourable, and fraught with political and military issues of the first importance.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) HARTINGTON.

No. 40.

No. 223 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 19th October 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of the diary of the Political Resident, Southern Afghanistan, for the period from 1st to 28th July 1880.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" J. STRACHEY.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" D. M. STEWART.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure in No. 40.

DIARY OF THE KANDAHAR RESIDENCY FROM 1ST JULY TO 28TH JULY 1880.

(Extract).

1st July.—Wali writes from Girishk that messengers have arrived from Farah, stating that when they left Ayub Khan was said to be at Khushkeha, 16 miles to the north. They went to that place, and found him there with all his force, intending to go to Farah the next day. This was about the 24th. Those men of the Kabuli regiments who had married in Herat had brought their wives with them. A second messenger stated that the Luinab, Khushdil Khan, with a large number of sowars, had reached Khurmalik, and that his advanced guard was at Chah-i-Gaz. The Wali asked for orders about his troops in Washir. I wrote, recommending him to order Roshndil Khan to withdraw in presence of the regulars, but to hold his ground against cavalry alone.

The Wali's letter also contains a pressing request for money, and recommends, in case of the major part of the force moving out to Girishk, that the remainder of the troops should be concentrated in the citadel.

It having come to my knowledge that the severity with which Sirdar Nur Ali Khan is treating the families of the men who deserted last week from Girishk is exciting much bad feeling, I wrote telling him of it, bringing to his notice at the same time that the superintendents of canals are said to be making large sums by the sale of the water to people not entitled to it.

Wrote to the Wali, telling him that orders had come for the despatch of a force to Girishk.

2nd July.—Wali writes that Ayub had arrived at Farah, and is coming on to Kharmalik at once. The Luinab had reached Bakwa.

A letter from a Herat agent who is in Ayub's camp reached me. He says that they were to start on the 19th June. Sowars to the number of 3,500 had been paraded for inspection. Only nine percussion caps per man were available, a supply promised from Meshed having been stopped by the Persian Government. The Khutba had been read in the mosques, and coin had been struck in the name of Ayub Khan.

It is rumoured in the city that talibs are taking away arms packed in bales of merchandise for the Garmsir with the intention of joining Ayub, and the disaffected are plucking up their spirits at the news of Ayub's advance.

Sirdars Nur Ali Khan and Muhammad Husain Khan called on me to discuss arrangements for supplies for troops on the march to Girishk.

Note.—He did not actually desert for some days after this.

(Sd.) O. St. J.

3rd July 1880. A rumour is current that Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan has deserted the Wali, and gone with his sowars to Ayub's camp.

4th July.—The Wali writes that he cannot hope to oppose Ayub with his small number of comparatively raw troops, and that if a force is not sent to his assistance, he will have to fall back on Kandahar on which the whole country will fall into a state of disorder, which it will be difficult to repress.

The Wali's Mirza writes secretly to Mirza Hassan Ali Khan that, if the Wali does not receive support from us on the Helmund, both his own troops and the Zamindawar levies are likely to desert him. Wrote informing the Wali that the cavalry and artillery are to-day leaving Kandahar, to be followed by the infantry to-morrow.

E/B, R.H.A., the whole of the Q. O. Light Cavalry, and the greater part of the 3rd Sind Horse, marched to Kohkaran to-day, with two companies of infantry and half a company of sappers.

A further loan of a lac of rupees to the Wali having been sanctioned by the Government of India, it was paid over, at his request, to Sirdar Nur Ali Khan.

5th July.—Marched to Ashukan, 14 miles, and found the artillery and cavalry there. Mirza Hasan Ali Khan accompanies me, Lieutenant Muir remaining in Kandahar.

The infantry brigade, consisting of Her Majesty's 66th Foot, the 1st and 30th Bombay Native Infantry, under Brigadier-General Burrows, marched this morning to Kohkaran.

The Wali writes that he has recalled his infantry from from Washir to a place named Bacharabia, midway between Washir and Girishk. The cavalry remains at Washir.

Ayub's advanced guard is at Bakwa. He has written to the Washir and Zamin-dawar Chiefs, some of whom have sent his letters to the Wali, while others have not.

A messenger sent to Herat has returned through Taiwara. He accompanied Ayub's army as far as the Araskund. It consists, he says, of ten infantry regiments, thirty-six guns, and sixteen or seventeen hundred cavalry. A battery of artillery had preceded him to Farah. The ammunition was in the exclusive charge of the Kabul troops, who had their families to the number of seven or eight hundred with them. The officers in command were Hafizulla Khan, Taj Muhammad Khan, and Abdulla Khan, Nasiri. Sirdar Abdul Wahab Khan, son of Mir Afzal Khan, has been left in charge of Herat. General Muhammad Jan holds the city gates, and the Aimak Chiefs, Fathulla Beg, Firuzkahi, Yalantush Khan, son of Khan Agha, Jamshidi, and Muhammad Khan, Begler Begi, the citadel.

6th July.—Marched to Karez i-Ata, 19 miles. Before marching, a gunner of the artillery committed suicide with his carbine. There was some difficulty about obtaining supplies, principally wood.

7th July.—To Khushk-i-Nakhud, eight miles. Wali writes that the enemy's sowars have reached the Khash river, 18 miles from Washir. Supplies of all sorts plentiful.

8th July.—Khushk-i-Nakhud to Miskarez eight miles. To break the long march to Girishk, 24 miles, the Wali has arranged for supplies at Choghrak, six miles on this side. There is no village here, but water can be turned into an old canal from the Helmund by stopping the irrigation channels further up.

A correspondent from Washir writes on the 6th that a messenger from Farah states that when he left Ayub had been there for a week. That he has with him ten regiments of infantry, 5,000 sowars, and 30 guns. His daily consumption is 67 kharwars of grain. Muhammad Umar Khan, Nurzai, has undertaken the safe custody of the families of the Kabul regiments during their advance on Kandahar.

9th July.—Miskarez to Choghrak, 18 miles. Provisions plentifully supplied by the Wali, with fowls, eggs, and fruits for the officers.

10th July.—Choghrak to the bank of the Helmund opposite Girishk, five miles. Sirdars Muhammad Hassan Khan and Gul Muhammad Khan crossed the river to meet me. They brought information of the desertion of Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, his son, Shir Muhammad Khan, and his nephew, Habibulla Khan, with their sowars, some 70 in number. An attempt made by them to induce the regular infantry and others to join them was unsuccessful. They went to Naozad, and proclaimed "Ghaza," on which some talibs and others joined them.

Mirza Hasan Ali Khan went over to the Wali's camp, and returned in the afternoon with the following news:—

The Wali has written to Sirdar Nur Ali Khan in Kandahar to confiscate all the Sartip's property, and is sending Gul Muhammad Khan with one thousand sowars to seize him.

A. B. writes to the Wali not to believe the stories current about the quarrels between the Kabuli and Herati troops. The fact of their having reached Farah without fighting is sufficient to show that they can be unanimous on occasion. He advises him, therefore, to strengthen himself in every way. C. D. has sent a message to the Wali to the same effect. E. F. writes that it is hopeless for the Wali to expect to possess himself of Herat alone, there being traitors among his people, who are the real cause of Ayub's advance; and that if the English assist him with a force, there will be no difficulty in the matter. He adds that whatever is done should be done quickly.

Intelligence arrived that Ayub's sowars who were collecting supplies on the Khash, had returned to Bakwa on hearing that an English force had left Kandahar.

The Wali's sowars in Washir fell back on Sadat Kalah, 18 miles from Girishk, being unable to get provisions.

The Wali came over to see me in the evening, but the news he had to give had been already communicated through Mirza Hassan Ali Khan. He said that now a British force had arrived he looked to us for orders.

The letter from the Governor of Bombay to him, accompanying presents in return for those given to Sir Richard Temple, was presented to him.

11th July.—Information was received from Ayub's camp that he arrived at Dilaram (on the bank of the Khash) on the 9th, and would reach Washir to-day. Some of the Maliks of the latter district had gone to meet him.

A second messenger brought the news that his advanced guard of 100 sowars had reached Washir.

General Burrows arrived with the infantry brigade.

Rode out in the morning with a party of cavalry to the south of our camp, and found the river fordable nearly everywhere, except just below the numerous rapids.

In the evening met the Wali by appointment on the other side of the river, and communicated to him the orders we had received not to cross it. He said that in that case it was useless his remaining alone on the other side now that Ayub Khan had got so far, and that he would concentrate his men at Girishk as soon as possible. Had he perfect confidence in his troops, he would attempt to hold his own, or, indeed, would have held the frontier, but at present he trusted entirely to our support. He was evidently in very low spirits.

12th July.—My conversation with the Wali the previous evening having left an impression on my mind that the disaffection in his camp was more than reported, I sent a man in my service, formerly in the Kabul army, to the camp, to see what was going on. He returned with the news that the Wali's sepoy, particularly those of the Kabir regiment, were openly declaring their intention of joining Ayub Khan as soon as he came near enough. I therefore sent for Mirza Ali Akbar, the Wali's confidential Secretary, who confirmed the truth of the report. I therefore told him to return, and tell the Wali that I had discovered that his troops were ready to mutiny at a moment's notice, and that the only thing left to do was to disarm them before they had an opportunity of doing so. I also asked him to meet me the next morning early, to talk over the situation.

Intelligence was brought that Sirdar Ghulam Dastgir Khan (son of Sirdar Ghulam Muhaieddin Khan) had deserted the advanced cavalry with 20 sowars. Sirdar Gul Muhammad Khan pursued him, but made no real attempt to capture him. His baggage, however, was taken, and among it was found a letter from Luinab Khushdil Khan to Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, dated 10th July, to the effect that he (the Luinab) had arrived at Washir with a thousand sowars and a collection of Ghazis. He, therefore, urged the Sartip to lose no time in joining the troops of Islam.

Mirza Ali Khan, sent some weeks ago to Herat to bring news, reached the camp. He had fallen in with Ayub's army at Sabzwar, and accompanied it to Farah, which he left eight days ago. He states that Ayub's army consists of nine regiments of regular infantry and three of cavalry, the latter of 260 men each. The infantry regiments are 600 strong. This is nominal strength.

He has about 1,000 tribal cavalry and 36 guns, six of which were to be left at Farah. One battery has breech-loaders made at Kabul.

While at Farah the Herati irregular cavalry and the three Herat regiments conspired to take Ayub prisoner and return with him to Herat, but Naib Hafizulla Khan, the General, discovered it, and sent off the irregular cavalry to the front with the Luinab. With them he travelled as far as Saki, where he left them and came on to Girishk. The Herati infantry was not trusted with ammunition. Ayub's army was very short of carriage. Some of the ammunition had to be left at Sabzwar, and camels were sent back from Farah to bring it on. Information had been brought to the Luinab by some deserters from the Wali's army, that his troops had dispersed, and that English troops were coming from Kandahar.

A correspondent in Ayub's army sends a letter from * * * * * Herat to Naib Hafizullah Khan, informing them that Faizu, the leader of the mutiny of the Herat troops last year, had been attempting to raise disturbances. But his son and cousin had been caught and blown away from guns, some others hanged in the Char-su, and some infantry soldiers punished and imprisoned. These measures effectually quieted the city.

Rode out with General Burrows to inspect site for new camp in a better position further up the river.

13th July.—Rode across the river and met the Wali, who returned with me to our camp. I repeated what I had told him the day before, namely, that General Burrows had the strictest orders not to cross the river, but only to prevent Ayub Khan doing so. General Burrows came to my tent, and joined the conversation, and after some time it was agreed, on the Wali's proposition, that he should bring his troops to our side, where it would be easy to disarm them. He asked me to write to him, requesting him to bring his men to our side, that he might show the letter to his officers. This I did.

During this and the previous day I made unsuccessful efforts to get a strong party sent with a sufficiency of camels to bring the stores collected by the Wali across the river.

In the evening a sowar of the 3rd Sind Horse, who had lagged behind a foraging party, was murdered in a village across the river.

14th July.—At daylight our camp began to move to its new ground, a mile to the north, a very strong rearguard remaining on the old position. At the same time I went with a squadron of the 3rd Light Cavalry to watch the Wali's camp from the heights opposite it. Nothing stirred till sunrise, when the tents were struck and camels loaded. About half-past six Sirdar Dilawar Khan came across to select ground for the new camp, and reported all quiet. I had gone down with him to the river valley, when Mirza Hasan Ali Khan rode up with the report that the Wali's troops had mutinied, seized the guns, and driven him and his cavalry across the river. Riding back I met the Wali, who repeated the same story, and begged that we might fall back on Kandahar at once as all the country would rise. I told him that we must first take the guns and punish the mutineers. Near the old camp I met General Burrows, who had heard the news, and begged him to cross and attack the mutineers at once. After some time it was decided to do so, and four companies of infantry were sent across the ford to hold the farther bank thickly wooded. At the same time General Nuttall was ordered to take the cavalry and artillery across and attack the mutineers, who were now in full sight formed up in rear of the fort. A portion of the Wali's sowars with a quantity of baggage were by this time moving off along the Kandahar, and a Staff Officer seeing this declared that they were moving to attack our rear. This caused all previous orders to be countermanded, while the mutineers, after plundering the fort, moved leisurely along the opposite bank of the river, some three miles off. It was not till the head of this column of baggage had passed our camp that definite orders for pursuit were given, and the horse artillery, the greater part of the cavalry, and eight companies of infantry crossed the river opposite the new camp. Half an hour later the cavalry came in sight of the mutineers, when they formed up in a single line on the high bank. After waiting in this position for some time they fell back a mile, and took up a new one with the guns on their left next the river. From this they opened a harmless artillery fire on the cavalry. Half an hour later the horse artillery came into action, after experiencing much difficulty and delay in crossing the water cuts and jungle. Before long the mutineers' guns were abandoned, but the day was so hazy that the fact was not discovered for some ten minutes or more, when the cavalry rode up to them, and were received with musketry fire from the fields below which caused them to fall back for a time. Our guns and infantry coming up soon put the few mutineers that remained to flight, and the cavalry pursued them for some distance. Some 50 may have been killed, including three artillerymen found dead at the guns, which were brought back to our camp four miles distant.

On returning I found the Wali at my tents, his own having been lost. He had, like myself, indeed, considered it impossible that we should catch the mutineers, and it can only have been the badness of the road along the river bank for the guns that enabled us to do so. Had they gone by the direct route towards Farah we could not have caught them up.

The Wali suggested that he should send his sowars, under his nephew, Muhammad Hassan Khan, to Kushk-i-Nakhud to collect supplies, and keep open communications, and they accordingly started at once.

Seven deserters from Ayub's regular cavalry came in. They declared that the whole army was on the point of mutinying; but that, of course, the news of the mutiny of the Wali's men would keep them together.

15th July.—Received news that two hundred of Ayub's sowars had reached Mahmudabad. At 5 p.m. the force marched to Miskarez. The Wali accompanied us.

16th July.—Received a letter from the Walidah, Bibi Hawa, asking leave to write to Ayub Khan and Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, with the object of arranging a peace. I replied that, as she was well known to be our friend, any communication from her would be looked on as coming from us, and that as I had no power to promise anything either to Ayub Khan or the Sartip, it would be better if she refrained from writing.

17th July.—Marched at daybreak to Kushk-i-Nakhud, and after some discussion halted not far from our previous halting place, known as the Takia. Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan and the rest of the Wali's relations, with their sowars, are camped in the gardens close by. Taj Muhammad Khan, Sistani, with 70 horse of his own tribe is with them. A report sent from Kandahar stated that Sadu Khan and the son of Muhammad Afzal Khan, Hotakis, had passed through on their way to Kelat-i-Ghilzai. On sending to ascertain the truth of this, it was found that Muhammad Afzal's son had left this morning only, while Sadu Khan was still in camp with the rest of the Wali's sowars.

18th July.—Rode to Maiwand with Major Leach, R.E., and a squadron of cavalry. Found everything quiet, and arranged for supply of atta from the mills, of which there are eight.

A spy from Girishk states that two hundred sowars arrived there on 17th, and sent back to Ayub to inform him that we had left the Helmund. A writer in the Wali's service taken off by the mutineers on the 14th to Kalah-i-Gaz, about 10 miles above Girishk, states that the Luinab and the son of Sartip Nur Muhammad are there with a large body of sowars. The Wali sent the greater part of his sowars, some 400 in number, under Sirdar Abbas Khan, his brother-in-law, to Khalifeh-Robat to collect supplies and send them to us.

19th July.—Moved camp to an open position, some three miles nearer Girishk. A spy (formerly a sepoy in the 1st Biluch Regiment) returned from the Helmund with news that the Luinab, with about 1,500 sowars, arrived at Girishk on the 18th, and said that Ayub, with the main body which is now at Mahmudabad, would come in on the 19th or 20th. Considerable numbers of ghazis have passed us by bye-roads to join Ayub. Abubakr, a minor Alizai Chief (the same who attacked Colonel Malcolmson here last year), has brought a contingent from Zamindawar. Cavalry patrols are sent by General Burrows towards Maiwand, Sangbur, and the Arghandab.

A man of the Wali's came from Maiwand to report that Abubakr has come to Malmund, and is plundering the place.

A. B. writes from his village (Nahar-i-Sarkar), near the junction of the Arghandab and Helmund, that bodies of ghazis have passed from the Garmsir direction.

20th July.—Strong patrols of cavalry sent to Miskarez and Garmawak this morning, brought no intelligence except that some ghazis had passed the latter place.

The Wali received intelligence that the family of Sirdar Muhammad Hasan Khan, returning to Kandahar, had been attacked by Aitchakzais beyond Panjwai. Sirdar Abbas Khan, who was near at hand with 400 sowars, came up and drove off the Aitchakzais, killing four of them. The Wali sent the remainder of his sowars under Sirdar Muhammad Hasan Khan and Taj Muhammad Khan, Popalzai, to Panjwai to aid in keeping order.

From Gurek news arrived that Habibulla Khan, Barakzai, nephew of the Sartip, has plundered the village of Taj Muhammad, Popalzai.

21st July.—A spy returned from Kalah-i-Gaz (on the further bank of the Helmund opposite Haidarabad) with news that half of Ayub's force reached the Helmund yesterday and sent back camels to bring up baggage and stores left behind at the last stage for want of carriage. A considerable number of tribal sowars, mutineers, and ghazis had joined them.

It is reported in their camp that Ayub Khan will move by Sangbur and attack us here. Luinab, with 2,500 cavalry, is reported to have started down the Helmund with the intention of crossing to the Arghandab and attacking our camp at night. The people about the Helmund at first refused to supply Ayub with provisions, but on his assembling the chief men, and declaring that this was a holy war, and that it was incumbent on all Muhammadans to devote their lives and property to his service, moreover, that he would excuse them from payment of two years' revenue should the country become his, they brought in provisions freely. The same informant states that there are 200 ghazis at Sangbur on their way to join Ayub.

Another spy states that half the enemy's camp is at Shoraki, and the other half coming up (Shoraki and Kalah-i-Gaz are adjacent districts). Nazir Muhammad Sadik (a dependant of the Sartip's) has been appointed Governor of Girishk, with two hundred sowars.

The patrol returning from Sangbur captured a prisoner, unarmed, who states that Ayub's regulars have crossed the Helmund to Haidarabad, but that the ghazis are still on the further bank.

As a precaution against the night attack said to be projected by the Luinab, General Burrows this evening moved the entire force to a new position, a few hundred yards west of the camp. Here the whole of the heavy baggage was parked in two small walled enclosures, between which the camels were placed, with an entanglement of pack saddles and ropes beyond them. On the east the cavalry and artillery horse lines were established, with Officers' tents between them and the enclosures. Outside all, the infantry were disposed in a semicircle, with guns at intervals, behind a breastwork formed of their tents and packs.

22nd July.—Spies returned from Helmund report Ayub Khan's camp to be on this side of river about Haidarabad, and that his cavalry has made a reconnaissance to Sangbur. It was reported that his whole cavalry force, 4,000 in number, would return there to-morrow, Ayub Khan, with the rest of the army, following the next day. The force was currently stated at 4,000 infantry, 4,000 cavalry, 8,000 ghazis, and 36 guns. A small party of ghazis, about 40 in number, were at Sangbur.

Cavalry patrols sent to Maiwand captured five armed sowars, who proved to be followers of one of the Wali's people who had been sent to bring in supplies. They had run away the evening before on hearing a report that Ayub's cavalry was approaching, and were returning when captured.

One of my spies returning from the Helmund was captured by our cavalry patrol, and kept in the guard for six hours before being made over to me. He corroborated report of the first generally, but said that Ayub's irregulars had not yet crossed the river. He was told by some of the Kandahari sepoy that Ayub's intention is to incite the ghazis and cavalry to attack the English, and await the result with the regulars. He intends to advance to Maiwand. The Luinab, with four hundred sowars, was coming via Malmund to Maiwand, which he intended to reach to-morrow. The main body will march to Sangbur either to-morrow or the day after. He heard two Herati sepoy discussing the situation, and saying that it would be absurd for them to fight the English, as, if Ayub won, he would take them on to Kabul. The Kandahari regiment was also discontented at the non-receipt of a year's arrears of pay, and saying that they had come on because they could not help themselves. The soldiers received less than a pound of meal a day as a ration. This informant declared that in his belief they had not more than a thousand irregular sowars, and an equal number of ghazis. Eighty sowars were at Sangbur when he passed.

The Wali suggested that we should set fire to the corn ricks about Maiwand. General Burrows arranged that a party should go out the next morning to carry out this suggestion.

23rd July.—At daybreak this morning shots were heard from the westward. Shortly afterwards a sowar of the Sind Horse came in with a message from Captain Monteith, that on proceeding on patrol with a troop of his regiment he had come upon a strong body of the enemy's cavalry, with whose scouts he had exchanged shots. He had fallen back towards camp, and halted a mile distant. The force, which was at the time getting under arms as usual, moved out at once. After a short time I rode out, and found Captain Monteith's troop drawn up facing the enemy, who were moving leisurely along in a long straggling line towards Maiwand. They were about two miles off. With Major Leach, R.E., I rode out about half way towards them. There appeared to be about four hundred, and their advanced guard had already entered the northern villages of Khushk-i-Nakhud. About this time, probably seeing our force, they commenced to return along the road they had come. Seeing that no attempt at intercepting them was being made on our side, we returned and found that a staff officer had reported three battalions of infantry concealed behind a hill. This and another report that another body of cavalry had been seen to the south proving erroneous, General Nuttall, with two guns, Royal Horse Artillery, and a couple of squadrons of cavalry, galloped off on pursuit of the now disappearing enemy. After a couple of miles, their rearguard of thirty or forty men being within gunshot, the artillery fired four shells at them, causing them to ride off, but apparently doing little or no damage. The cavalry and artillery then returned to camp.

A special messenger from Kandahar, who returned this morning, reports that he met a hundred sowars* coming from the direction of the Maiwand pass towards Hauz-i-Madat.

* These proved to have been men sent by the Sartip to bring away his women who were concealed in the villages about Koh-karan.

In consequence of the affair of the morning, the expedition to burn the stacks at Maiwand did not start, but one of the Wali's sowars sent there reported none of the enemy to be seen.

A troop of cavalry sent later in the afternoon brought back similar intelligence, but a man of the Wali's told the Officer in command that he had heard that the enemy's cavalry intend attacking us to-night.

A certain Malik came into camp to the Wali, and states that Habibulla Khan, Barakzai, a nephew of Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan, came to him a few days ago with a letter from Ayub Khan, to the effect that he has arrived on the Helmund with twelve regiments, 42 guns, 7,000 sowars, and many mullas and seyyids, to commence a religious war and drive the infidel from the country. He therefore calls on him to collect his tribe and join Habibulla Khan on the Arghandab. The Malik affected compliance, but warned his people that they had better keep quiet, and came off to tell the Wali. On the way he came across some more of Sartip Nur Muhammad Khan's sowars, who pursued, but failed to capture him.

Sirdar Muhammad Hassan Khan writes from Khalifah-Robat that he has attacked the Aitchakzai robbers, killed one of them, and sent several prisoners to Kandahar.

Arrangements were made for sending off all baggage and stores that can be spared to Kandahar.

24th July.—A spy from Band-i-Taimur (on the Arghandab) returned with news that no one had passed that way, nor had any of the enemy's cavalry appeared in that direction.

Cavalry patrols to Sangbur and Garmawak report both places empty.

25th July.—The cavalry patrol sent to Sangbur found it apparently unoccupied, but was suddenly attacked by a body of mounted men, who issued from a ravine and cut off two of their number. A strong party was sent out under a European Officer, who found the place empty, and brought in the bodies of the two sowars stripped and decapitated.

A spy from Haiderabad reports the enemy's camp still there. He was told that they had eleven regiments and 35 guns, with a very large number of cavalry and ghazis. He himself counted 13 guns only. It was generally said in the camp that they were to march the next day or the day after, though some people expected to remain on the river for two or three days longer. It is also said that half the force would go by Malmund and half by Sangbur. They make a cavalry reconnaissance every day to Kalah-i-Surkh (about a mile east of Sangbur), some remaining there during the day. There are a great many ghazis with the force, but the majority have only sticks and pikes. All these are anxious to attack the British force, but the regulars wish to avoid fighting and pass on to Kandahar.

A spy from the Helmund reports that it is intended to send four thousand sowars, with an equal number of infantry riding behind them, to Shorawak, via the sandy desert, to attack our line of communications with India. Many Ghazis have come to Ayub's camp, but nothing is decided about a move. No one has arrived at Malmund or Maiwand. Provisions are reported very scarce in enemy's camp, and it is said that Ayub Khan has ordered all villages in his vicinity to furnish a quota of bullocks to drag his guns.

Considerable quantities of grain and atta were brought by the Wali's people from Maiwand and Khalifah-Robat.

26th July.—The cavalry patrol to Sangbur reports about 300 horsemen and Ghazis there. Men of the Wali's sent in the morning to Maiwand to bring atta returned in the afternoon with intelligence that Muhammad Zaman Khan, Barakzai, and Abubakr, Alizai, with a number of sowars and ghazis, have occupied Garmawak (four or five miles from Maiwand), and that a few ghazis have arrived at that place.

General Burrows held a meeting of Commanding and Staff Officers at the receipt of this intelligence, and decided to move towards Maiwand in the morning to prevent Ayub turning his flank and cutting him off from Kandahar, or passing into the Arghandab valley and making his way to Ghazni.

27th July.—Orders were issued for the march of the force at 6 a.m., but owing to the difficulty of unpacking and loading the stores in the confined enclosure where they have been for the last six days, it was not till seven that a start was made. The cavalry and horse artillery led, and the baggage was massed on the right flank of the infantry which marched in contiguous columns of companies at deploying distance. Owing to the necessity for allowing the camels to keep up, the pace was very slow. From 9 to 10 a halt was made near a large village, at which time a spy came up with the intelligence that Ayub had arrived yesterday with his whole force at Sangbur, and was now on his way to Maiwand.

At half past ten the advanced guard reached the first village of Maiwand, a small hamlet surrounded by walled gardens with few trees and a central building commanding the whole. At its west side a considerable karez issuing from high banks afforded an ample supply of water. About three-quarters of a mile further up the same karez and on the same side of it was a second village surrounded by thick orchards. From two to three miles beyond, the little fortified enclosure of Maiwand was barely visible through the haze to-day unusually dense. To the west a wide plain stretched away to the hills, some four miles distant, at the foot of which the trees of the villages of Garmawak were just discernible with field glasses.

Shortly afterwards a considerable body of cavalry was perceived about due west of the nearest village and from a mile and half to two miles distant. Two guns Royal Horse Artillery with an escort of cavalry crossed the karez between the villages, galloped about a mile beyond, and opened fire. Immediately afterwards large masses of men became visible apparently marching towards Maiwand, from which a number of horse and foot also issued. In a very few minutes a long line of regular infantry was formed, and there could be no doubt that we were in presence of Ayub's whole army.

The rest of the cavalry and horse artillery had now crossed the Karez, and advanced some thousand yards beyond it, taking up a position about the same distance from the two guns already in action, and to their right.

The infantry also crossed the karez, but remained halted not far from it. The baggage was mostly massed under the walls of the furthest of the two villages mentioned before, but part of it crossed the karez. The Wali and his people, with Nawab Mirza Hasan Khan, remained with it.

About half an hour after our artillery came into action, the enemy's guns replied. This was at half-past eleven. The distance was about two thousand yards, and their fire did little or no harm, though many of the projectiles, lead-coated Armstrong shells, passed over our heads.

After several rounds had been exchanged, Major Blackwood, commanding the Artillery, informed General Burrows that his guns could do no good at that range, and requested leave to advance 500 yards nearer. General Burrows assented, and a forward move was made.

The infantry and four guns of the smooth-bore battery were now brought up, and the latter came into action. The infantry was disposed as follows:—On the right and inclined at an angle to the front, five company's of Her Majesty's 66th; next to them and facing the enemy's line directly, Jacob's Rifles; beyond them the guns, and, lastly, the Grenadiers. All the infantry lay down, the 66th being in a hollow that afforded almost complete protection. This formation was retained till the close of the action, except that two companies of Jacob's Rifles were later on withdrawn from the centre to make room for Captain Slade's guns, and placed on the extreme left, facing slightly outwards. The force then formed three sides of an irregular hexagon.

The cavalry under General Nuttall was formed up on the extreme left.

The enemy's order of battle had before this become clearly developed. In his centre was a long line of infantry, estimated by the standards at seven battalions. On his right a cloud of irregular horse enveloped our left, and while keeping at a safe distance from our cavalry, menaced the baggage. On the enemy's left a swarm of irregular infantry with a few mounted men among them formed a broken line between the left of the regulars and the village of Maiwand, whence another considerable body came up to the village, behind which the baggage was posted. The enemy's guns, as was apparent from the flashes, (the haze made the guns themselves quite indistinguishable) were posted at five different points of the line of infantry.

The object appeared to be to attack the baggage with irregulars on both flanks while engaging our main body with the regulars and guns. Two attacks were accordingly made on the baggage, but were repulsed by the rearguard without difficulty.

A number of irregular infantry also came up in front of the 66th, but were kept at a distance by slow file firing. A good many, however, took advantage of inequalities of the ground, and kept up a steady fire which passed over the heads of the 66th, but caused some loss beyond them.

About one or half past the enemy advanced to about one thousand yards, and the fire became very much hotter, though still doing little harm.

Two mounted men now rode out of the enemy's line and reconnoitred our position, advancing to 300 or 400 yards. The sharp-shooters of the Grenadiers fired several shots at them, but without effect.

Shortly afterwards the enemy's line advanced to 600 yards. Their artillery fire was now crossing in several directions, and they began to use grape. The left of their infantry ceased to be visible, but their right opposite the Grenadiers was in full view, and a few volleys from that regiment drove it back in disorder. Two of the enemy's guns now appeared not more than three or four hundred yards distant on our right front, from which they enfiladed our line at an angle of 45° , while a heavy musketry fire from the same direction showed the position of the left of the line of infantry. At the same time the irregular infantry on our right and cavalry on our left advanced closer, and rifle fire on our side, which had previously been intermittent, became general, though not fully developed. This was about half-past two, and about this time the four smooth-bore guns were sent out of action, their ammunition being exhausted.

All efforts to keep down the fire of the two guns on our right were ineffectual, and the enemy gradually came on, except in front of the 66th, whose steady slow fire kept the irregulars opposed to them at a distance. It would appear, however, that a considerable number of ghazis were brought up by a hollow of the ground imperceptible to us, for they suddenly charged the front of our line, the irregular cavalry on our left at the same time closing right in, and the enemy's guns ceasing to fire. The two companies of Jacob's rifles on the left were the first to give way, the Grenadiers then formed square, but immediately began to fall back, while the rest of Jacob's Rifles fell back on the rear of the 66th, leaving the guns. Four of these were limbered up and galloped off, but two, whose limbers I believe had gone to the waggons for fresh ammunition, were left on the field.

Having been with the 66th at the time, I cannot describe from personal observation what followed on the other part of the field, but I believe that the Artillery, Grenadiers, and Sappers fell slowly back towards the karez, which may have been three quarters of a mile distant, pursued closely by a few ghazis only, the Afghan regulars continuing their slow advance in line.

The 66th, as I have mentioned, were lying down in a hollow. When the general attack began they rose and almost immediately a crowd of Jacob's Rifles came running into their rear. As they had been concealed by the ground till within a few yards, this sudden irruption took the British soldiers by surprise, and before long all formation was lost.

General Burrows now rode up alone, and attempted to turn the men towards the rest of the force, but it was in vain, though the left of the slowly retreating crowd came gradually round, and after 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour's retreat under a very heavy fire we reached the karez, here a nullah 30 yards wide with steep banks 10 feet high, just opposite the further end of the village, at the other extremity of which our baggage was massed. The village at this time was crowded with the enemy, who kept up a heavy fire. The ghazis in our front were still falling back, not daring to come to close quarters.

Seeing no further use in remaining with the infantry, I left them and galloped along the bank of the karez past the enemy's cavalry to the rest of the force, which I could see falling back, hoping to obtain assistance towards extricating the infantry and bringing them back to the proper line. Nothing, however, could be done.

The greater part of the baggage had by this time started off on the road to Kandahar.

Of these there are two. One to the left leading direct to Sinjiri, across the desert, and

Note.—During the night and the next morning certain heavy reports were attributed to the enemy's guns, and very circumstantial accounts were given me of the enemy's cavalry having been seen as far as Sinjiri, 10 miles from Kandahar, but I saw none myself, and there is every reason to believe that the pursuit ceased at four or five miles from the field.

utterly waterless at this season, and the other following the route we had come by Khushk-i-Nakhud and Karez-i-Ata; the first is unfortunately well marked by a broad trodden path, and along this the fugitives were moving in a scattered column. Small bodies of the enemy's cavalry moving in the right from village to village further tended to keep our people from the proper road. Until we left the Karez the Afghan infantry kept up a pretty hot fire. After that the pursuit was confined to cavalry and artillery, and was not, I believe, continued beyond four or five miles, and that very languidly.

The artillery and part of the cavalry still retained order and discipline and covered the retreat; but all or nearly all the infantry were dispersed in small parties.

The cavalry, with whom were General Burrows and Nuttall, left the great road two miles beyond Khushk-i-Nakhud and went to Karez-i-Ata, where they arrived shortly after dusk, and halted a couple of hours.

At Hauz-i-Madat, nine miles distant, the cavalry caught up the artillery, whose carriages were crowded with wounded Officers and men, and where a little drinking water was discovered in a well by the exertions of Major Leach, R.E., and Captain Slade, R.H.A.

As soon as day broke our infantry commenced firing at everything living within sight, but the fire was hardly returned from any of the villages along the road.

About seven water was reached in a canal near Sinjiri, and here some 50 infantry were assembled, and kept together during the rest of the march. About nine the river Arghandab was reached, and here the last of the smooth-bore guns, which had been left along the road as the horses became exhausted, had to be abandoned.

The infantry crossed first, and lined a bank facing Kohkaran, which was evidently occupied in force, it was feared, by a body of country people, determined to dispute the passage. But half an hour later an Officer, with an escort of cavalry, rode up with the information that Kohkaran was being held by Brigadier-General Brooke with a force of all arms detached to the assistance of General Burrows by General Primrose.

From him I learnt that the news of the defeat had been brought in by a Native Officer and 25 men of the Sind Horse at 2 a.m., that orders had been at once issued for the abandonment of the cantonment, and the removal of all troops to the citadel, which was at once carried out; and that the people of the villages had fired on General Brooke's force on its way out.

The Wali and Mirza Hasan Ali Khan had arrived at 5 a.m., preceded and followed by several Officers.

The work of bringing in the guns was so slow that it was not till 2 p.m. that we reached the cantonment.

I here learnt that at daybreak the wire between Kandahar and Abdur Rahman was found cut. A party was sent out and successfully repaired it. The fact of the defeat at Maiwand was communicated to Government, together with the names of Officers who had returned up to 11 a.m., when the wire was again cut. In the meantime orders had been sent to the garrisons of the posts at and beyond Abdur Rahman to retire to Chaman, and to that of Mund-i-Hisar to come to Kandahar.

A large number of Afghans, estimated at 2,500 to 4,000, at the invitation of Sirdar Nur Ali Khan, had left the city.

The Idgah gate was still open. All the others had been closed and blocked up with earth.

All troops, stores, and baggage animals were being collected in the citadel and adjoining enclosures. None were in the city; but the guards on the gates were doubled.

As much property and stores as possible were brought into the citadel before evening, but much was left behind, besides what had been plundered by the villagers in the early morning when the Native Infantry square and the Engineers' quarters were abandoned. Very little of the stores belonging to the sutlers in the cantonment bazaar were brought. At my quarters in Muhammad Amin's garden a new single-poled tent was left standing for want of labour and carriage to bring it in. A quantity of wine and stores, a large case of books, another of books, manuscripts, and maps, crockery, glass, &c., had also to be abandoned.

Finding no quarters in the citadel, I obtained a guard of a Duffadar and 12 sepoy, and went to Mir Afzal's house in the city, in which Mirza Hasan Ali Khan has been living for the last year.

The Wali hearing late at night that I had come to the house, and fearing that some attempt at a rising might be made by the Afghans in the city in the absence of troops, sent a number of his followers under his son Nur Ali Khan, to remain the Char-su during the night, while his brother Muhammad Husain Khan patrolled the streets. The night, however, passed perfectly quietly.

(Signed) O. B. ST. JOHN, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Resident, Southern Afghanistan.

No. 41.

No. 460 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS, Simla, 26th October 1880.

WE have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the operations of a detachment under the command of the late Brigadier-General H. F. Brooke, between Kandahar and Kokeran, on the 28th July last.

*G. G. O., No. 589, dated the 22nd October 1880, and papers published therewith.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" J. STRACHEY.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" D. M. STEWART.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 41.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, 22nd October 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 589.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication, for general information, in continuation of the previous accounts of the Maiwand and Kandahar operations, of the following correspondence and despatches, relating to the operations of a detachment under the command of the late Brigadier-General H. F. Brooke, between Kandahar and Kokeran, on the 28th July last.

2. The Governor General in Council entirely concurs in His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's appreciatory remarks on the excellent service rendered by Brigadier-General Brooke on this occasion.

Enclosure 2 in No. 41.

From Colonel T. E. GORDON, C.S.I., Deputy Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department, No. 5726A.,
Kabul, dated Simla, the 13th October 1880.

IN continuation of my letter, No. 5351A., dated the 25th September 1880, I am directed by the Commander-in-Chief to forward the accompanying letter from Lieutenant-General Primrose, transmitting Brigadier-General Brooke's report of the part taken by the troops under his command in protecting and bringing in the remnants of Brigadier-General Burrows' brigade returning from Maiwand.

2. His Excellency feels sure the Government will concur with him in considering the above report a record of excellent service performed by the late Brigadier-General Brooke and the small force placed at his disposal.

3. The delay which has taken place in rendering this Despatch is much to be regretted, it having been obtained only on being called for.

Enclosure 3 in No. 41.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., Commanding the 1st Division, Southern Afghanistan Field Force, to the Adjutant-General in India, dated Kandahar, the 28th September 1880.

With reference to your telegram to the address of Sir Frederick Roberts, K.C.B., received this day, intimating that copies of any instructions issued to Brigadier-General Brooke on his proceeding to meet the troops returning from Maiwand on the 28th July should be forwarded, I have the honour to inform you that my instructions were given verbally to that Officer, to the effect that he should proceed along the Kokeran road, with a small force of all arms, in the direction of Singiri, with a view of helping in the men and followers of Brigadier-General Burrows' column, and protecting them from the villagers, who were then firing on them. He was to use his own discretion in carrying out these instructions.

2. I beg herewith to forward a copy of Brigadier-General Brooke's report of his proceedings.

3. With regard to paragraph 8 of Brigadier-General Brooke's report, the information he received was probably conveyed to him in a note from Lieutenant-Colonel St. John, who was also returning to Kandahar, in the following terms:—

“The hills about Abásábad and neighbouring villages are full of men, and passage to cantonment impossible. Skirmishers going out, but guns wanted.

Enclosure 4 in No. 41.

From Brigadier-General H. F. BROOKE, Commanding the 2nd Infantry Brigade, 1st Division, Kandahar Field Force, to the Assistant Adjutant-General, Kandahar Field Force, (No. 300, “Field Operations,” dated Kandahar, the 8th August 1880).

I have the honour to report that, in compliance with the orders received from the Lieutenant-General, I left cantonments at 5.30

* Poona Horse, 40 sabres, under Captain J. W. Anderson.

C/2nd Royal Artillery, two guns, under Captain W. Law.

7th Royal Fusiliers, 3 Officers and 70 rank and file, under Lieutenant R. P. B. Rodick.

28th Native Infantry, 100 rank and file, under Major F. C. Singleton.

a.m. on the 28th July, with the force as per margin,* to proceed to Kokeran to cover the retirement of the force under Brigadier-General Burrows, whose movement on Kandahar was, as reported by an Officer who had arrived half an hour previously, being endangered by the opposition of the country people, who had collected in large numbers for that purpose.

2. On leaving cantonments, the only practicable road to Kokeran passes for about one mile (as the Lieutenant-General is aware) through walled gardens, and along the main street of the village of Abásábad, which is narrow and tortuous. The gardens were full of armed men, who, however, fell back without much resistance before my skirmishers, and thus allowed the guns and the remainder of the column to pass unopposed through the village of Abásábad into the more open country beyond.

3. From the time of leaving Kandahar, parties of the retiring force were met, who reported that they had been attacked by the country people all along the route, but especially at the villages of Singiri and Kokeran.

4. I therefore pushed on as quickly as the weakness of my force and the necessity of clearing my flanks of the large number of armed men who crowded the high hills on my left, and the walled enclosures and strongly-placed villages on my right, would allow. Although the resistance offered was not important, considerable time was necessarily occupied in clearing the numerous positions taken up by the enemy, and it was nearly 9 o'clock a.m. before I reached Kokeran.

5. Here I took up a position which enabled me to command the Herat road, the village, and the fortified residence of the Sártíp; and at once sent on some cavalry to communicate with the force under Brigadier-General Burrows, which had at that time completed the crossing of the Argandab river, and was halted about a mile from Kokeran.

6. On the appearance of the force under my command, the village and fortified post at Kokeran were hurriedly evacuated by a very considerable body of armed men, who, up to this time, had been harassing and killing all small parties of the retiring force who had passed within their range. This body of men then established themselves in a village on the bank of the Argandab, about 800 yards from my right flank, from which position, however, they were quickly dislodged, and all further firing from the enemy prevented until the rearguard of General Burrows' force had passed me on their way to Kandahar. I caused the Sártíp's house to be entered by a party of the Royal Fusiliers, under Lieutenant Rodick, but no one was found in it.

7. When the last man of the retiring force had passed me, I recalled that portion of my cavalry which, under Captain Anderson, had been watching the ford of the Argandab, and as soon as they had rejoined my column, I commenced to return to Kandahar, picking up all stragglers who had been unable to keep up with General Burrows' force. In returning from the ford Captain Anderson's small party of cavalry were attacked by very superior numbers, but they quickly overcame the resistance, and inflicted considerable loss on the enemy.

8. Our return was unmolested for about three miles and a half, when I received information from the front that the hills immediately over the village of Abásábad and the walled enclosures round it were strongly occupied by the enemy. I at once sent forward the two guns of C/2nd Royal Artillery, under Captain Law, with a cavalry escort, following myself with the remainder of the cavalry and infantry, and, passing through General Burrows' force, which was then halted, pushed rapidly to the front, throwing out skirmishers to clear the gardens and village. Some excellently directed shells from the guns caused the enemy to evacuate their fortified posts on the hills, while the skirmishers cleared the walled enclosures of all opposition, enabling both my force and that of Brigadier-General Burrows to pass through the extremely difficult village of Abásábad with trifling loss.

9. On reaching the open ground on the Kandahar side of Abásábad, I again halted and formed up my force, and so remained until the main portion of the force of Brigadier-General Burrows had passed me, sending back a company of the Royal Fusiliers,* under Captain E. W. Adderley, to keep the outskirts of the village of Abásábad clear of the enemy and bring in all stragglers. I then followed General Burrows' force into cantonments, where I arrived about 1.30 p.m.

* Obtained from the regiment.

10. The loss of the enemy in the operations above described must have been considerable, not only from our artillery and rifle fire, but also consequently on two well executed charges which were made by the Poona Horse, admirably led by Captain J. W. Anderson, whom I desire to commend to the favourable consideration of the Lieutenant-General.

11. The conduct of the troops under my command was, in all respects, excellent and full of spirit.

12. The well directed fire of the two guns of C/2nd Royal Artillery proved most useful. They were excellently commanded throughout the day by Captain W. Law, whom I desire to bring to special notice as an Officer of much professional knowledge, zeal and forwardness.

13. Major F. C. Singleton, 28th Bombay Native Infantry, and Lieutenant R. P. B. Rodick, Royal Fusiliers, commanded their respective detachments to the entire satisfaction, leading them in a very forward manner against positions of exceptional difficulty.

14. I would ask the Lieutenant-General's special consideration and approval of my Staff Officers,—Captain F. W. V. Leckie, 8th Bombay Native Infantry, Brig

Major, and Captain F. C. Keyser, Royal Fusiliers, Orderly Officer,—both of whom are Officers of superior attainments and qualifications. The zealous assistance they afforded me throughout the whole day was invaluable. Surgeon J. McNamara, the Medical Officer in charge of the column, was also most useful to me.

* Sowar Rugotoollah Khan, Poona Horse, killed. 15. I annex the usual casualty roll.*

ALLEN JOHNSON, Colonel,
Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 42.

No. 473 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 2nd November 1880.

IN continuation of our Military Letter, No. 434, dated the 5th October 1880, we have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, the papers noted in the margin,† relating to the gallant and devoted conduct of the 66th Foot in the action fought at Maiwand on the 27th July last.

† G. G. O., No. 598, dated the 27th October 1880, and documents published therewith.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) J. STRACHEY.
" F. P. HAINES.
" W. STOKES.
" J. GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 42.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, the 27th October 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 598.—The Viceroy and Governor General in Council has much satisfaction in directing the publication, for general information, in continuation of G.G.O. No. 551 of 1880, of the subjoined correspondence regarding the gallant and devoted conduct of the 66th (The Berkshire) Regiment of Foot at the affair of Maiwand, on the 27th July last.

Enclosure 2 in No. 42.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5994 A., "Kabul," dated Simla, the 25th October 1880.)

I AM directed by the Commander-in-Chief to forward, for the information of Government, the accompanying letter from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., reporting on the gallant and determined stand made by the 66th Regiment at Maiwand.

The events mentioned have already been referred to in my Letter, No. 5351 A., dated the 25th September 1880; but the details now given show the gallantry and devotion to duty of the Officers and men who fell on that occasion.

The "accompanying documents" mentioned in paragraph 1 of Lieutenant-General Primrose's letter are Brigadier-General Daubeney's report and accompaniments of the proceedings of the force under his command in connection with the burial of the dead on the field of Maiwand, which have been forwarded to Government with this Office, No. 5948 A., dated the 22nd instant.

Enclosure 3 in No. 42.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., Commanding the 1st Division Southern Afghanistan Field Force, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India, Simla. (No. 1050 K., dated Kandahar, the 1st October 1880.)

In forwarding the accompanying documents, I would most respectfully wish to bring to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's notice the gallant and determined stand made by the Officers and men of the 66th Regiment at Maiwand.

The disposition of the regiment was as per margin, and, of this number, 10 Officers and 275 Non-commissioned Officers and men were killed, and 2 Officers and 30 Non-commissioned Officers and men wounded.

Fighting Line.	With Smooth-bore Battery.
15 Officers.	1 Officer.
364 men, all ranks.	42 men, all ranks.
Baggage Guard in rear.	Sick.
4 Officers.	32 men.
63 men, all ranks.

These Officers and men nearly all fell fighting desperately for the honour of their Queen and country.

I have it on the authority of a Colonel of Artillery of Ayub Khan's army, who was present at the time, that a party of the 66th Regiment, which he estimated at one hundred Officers and men, made a most determined stand in the garden marked "A" in the accompanying plan.

They were surrounded by the whole Afghan army, and fought on until only eleven men were left, inflicting enormous loss upon the enemy.

These eleven charged out of the garden, and died with their faces to the foe, fighting to the death.

Such was the nature of their charge and the grandeur of their bearing that, although the whole of the ghazis were assembled around them, not one dared approach to cut them down.

Thus standing in the open, back to back, firing steadily and truly, every shot telling, surrounded by thousands, these eleven Officers and men died; and it was not until the last man had been shot down that the ghazis dared advance upon them.

He further adds that the conduct of these men was the admiration of all who witnessed it.

This is the testimony of a man who witnessed the scene, and who gave the information before Brigadier-General Daubeny proceeded to Maiwand.

From an examination of the ground, from corroborative evidence, and from the position in which the bodies were found, I have not the least hesitation in stating that this account is true; and I think His Excellency will agree with me when I say that history does not afford any grander or finer instance of gallantry and devotion to Queen and country than that displayed by the 66th Regiment on the 27th July 1880.

A nominal roll of the Officers and men who fought and died thus nobly has been already forwarded to you; and inquiries from survivors elicit the following facts:—

Lieutenant-Colonel James Galbraith was last seen on the nullah bank, kneeling on one knee, with a colour in his hand, Officers and men rallying round him; and on this spot his body was found.

Here too fell Captain William Hamilton M'Math, a gallant soldier, and one who would, had his life been spared, have risen to distinction in Her Majesty's service.

Close by, Second Lieutenant Harry James Outram Barr was shot dead over one of the colours.

Captains Ernest Stephen Garratt and Francis James Cullen were both killed on the field in front of the nullah, up to the last moment commanding their companies and giving their orders with as much coolness as if on an ordinary regimental parade.

Captain Walter Roberts was mortally wounded in the garden, where the last stand was made; and here also fell Lieutenant Maurice Edward Rayner, Lieutenant Richard Trevor Chute, Second Lieutenant Walter Rice Olivey, and Second Lieutenant Arthur Honywood.

The two latter Officers were seen holding up the colours, the pole of one of which was shattered to pieces, as rallying points; and Lieutenant Honywood was shot down whilst holding a colour high above his head, shouting, "Men, what shall we do to save this!"

Sergeant-Major Alexander Cuppage was shot dead outside the garden whilst carrying a colour; and many other Non-commissioned Officers and men laid down their lives in the attempt to save the colours of their regiment on that day.

With the gallant band who made this last grand effort, fought and died Major George Frederick Blackwood, Royal Horse Artillery; Lieutenant Thomas Rice Henn, Royal Engineers; and Lieutenant Charles William Hinde, 1st Bombay Grenadiers, Native Infantry, with some of his men.

The men of the 66th on baggage guard, under the command of Captain J. Quarry, did excellent service during the retreat.

The party told off to man the smooth-bore battery, under Lieutenant G. De la M. Faunce, worked their guns steadily and well during the fight.

ALLEN JOHNSON, Colonel,
Secretary to the Government of India.

No. 43.

No. 474 of 1880.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 2nd November 1880.

IN continuation of our Military Letter, No. 442, dated the 12th October 1880,

* G. G. O., No. 599, dated the 27th October 1880, and documents published therewith.

we have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, the papers noted in the margin,* relating to the proceedings of the troops under the command of Lieutenant-General J. M. Primrose, C.S.I., during the operations of the 1st September last, near Kandahar.

We have, &c.

(Signed)	J. STRACHEY.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	W. STOKES.
"	J. GIBBS.
"	C. U. FITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 43.

GENERAL ORDER.

Military Department.

Simla, the 27th October 1880.

Field Operations.

No. 599.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication, for general information, in continuation of G.G.O. No. 582 of 1880, of the following correspondence and despatch, relating to the part taken by the troops of the Kandahar garrison, under the command of Lieutenant-General J. M. Primrose, C.S.I., in the action of the 1st September last, near Kandahar.

Enclosure 2 in No. 43.

From Colonel ALLEN JOHNSON, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL in India. (No. 8853 K., "Kabul Field Operations," dated Simla, the 27th October 1880.)

I AM directed to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter, No. 5754 A., dated the 14th instant, forwarding a despatch from Lieutenant-General J. M. Primrose, C.S.I., detailing the part taken by the troops under his command in the operations of the 1st September 1880, near Kandahar.

2. With reference thereto, I am to state that the Governor General in Council concurs in the remark made by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in paragraph 12 of your Letter, No. 5585 A., dated the 7th instant, that these troops rendered good service on the occasion referred to.

3. Lieutenant-General Primrose's report will be published in the "Gazette of India," on an early date, for general information.

Enclosure 3 in No. 43.

From Major-General G. R. GREAVES, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5754 A., dated Simla, the 14th October 1880.)

IN continuation of my Letter, No. 5585 A., dated 17th instant, paragraph 12, I am instructed by the Commander-in-Chief to forward here with Despatch No. 999, of the 27th ultimo, from Lieutenant-General Primrose, C.S.I., reporting the part taken by the troops under his command on the 1st September.

2. His Excellency concurs in the remarks already made by Sir Frederick Roberts, that the Kandahar Force rendered good service in the engagement.

Enclosure 4 in No. 43.

From Lieutenant-General J. M. PRIMROSE, C.S.I., Commanding the 1st Division, Southern Afghanistan Field Force, to Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. ROBERTS, K.C.B., Commanding in Southern Afghanistan. (No. 999 K., "Field Operations," dated Kandahar, 27th September 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report that, in compliance with instructions received from you early on the morning of the 1st September 1880, I issued the following orders:—

"I. E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, escorted by two companies of the 7th Fusiliers and four companies of the 28th Native Infantry, will march from Kandahar via the Edgah gate, so as to reach the hill beyond the village of Gandizan by 9 a.m.

"II. The Officer in command of this party will report himself to Brigadier-General Gough, V.C., commanding the Kabul Field Force Cavalry Brigade, which is to be formed up behind the Gandizan Hill by 9 a.m.

"III. The infantry and guns will precede the cavalry, and clear the way for them.

"IV. The detachment of infantry with E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, at Gandizan, will remain stationary when the cavalry advances.

"V. The troops, as per margin,* under the command of Brigadier-General Burrows, will be formed up at Kalacha-i-Maidar (the old cavalry lines) at 8 a.m., for the purpose of threatening the Baba Wali Kotal and watching the Kotal-i-Murcha.

"VI. The Commanding Royal Engineer will detail a party of sappers to accompany the force.

"VII. This force will remain stationary during the day.

"VIII. The Officer commanding the Royal Artillery will see that a good position is taken up by No. 5/11th, Royal Artillery, for firing at the guns on the Baba Wali Kotal, and, in doing this, he will bear in mind that the object of the movement on the right is entirely to hold the enemy on and about the pass, whilst the real attack is delivered by the left in the direction of Pir Paimal.

"IX. The following troops, under the command of Brigadier-General Daubeny, will at once occupy a line of pickets (in relief of those of the Kabul Field Force) extending from Picket Hill on the right by Karez Hill to Chil-Zina on the left:—

4 companies,	66th Regiment.
2 "	1st Bombay Native Infantry.
2 "	28th " "

"X. The whole of the available cavalry of regiments, as per margin,† under the command of Brigadier-General Nuttall, will move out in advance of Brigadier-General Burrows, and take up a good position for watching the Baba Wali and Kotal-i-Murcha passes, with the ground intervening.

"XI. C/2nd Royal Artillery will proceed at once to Picket Hill, where Major Greig will report to Colonel Johnson for further orders.

"XII. A day's cooked rations to be taken by the troops.

"XIII. Only the first reserve of ammunition will accompany the troops.

"XIV. Signallers to accompany each party.

"XV. The Deputy Surgeon-General will make all arrangements for the reception and care of the wounded.

* No. 5/11th, Royal Artillery, four guns,
40 pounders.
4 companies, 7th Fusiliers.
4th Regiment, Bombay Native Infantry.
19th " " " "

† 3rd Light Cavalry.
Head-quarters, Poona Horse.
3rd Sind Horse.

"XVI. The head-quarters of the Lieutenant-General will be at first in the Sappers' garden.

"XVII. Colonel Mainwaring, 30th Native Infantry, will take command of the city during the day, and make all local arrangements."

2. In accordance with the above, the cavalry moved out at about 7.30 a.m., and Brigadier-General Daubeny followed at about 8 a.m., occupying the ground ordered as follows :—

- 2 companies, 1st Bombay Native Infantry, were posted on Picket Hill.
- 2 " 66th Regiment, on Karez Hill.
- 1 company, 66th Regiment, between Karez Hill and Picket Hill.
- 1 " 28th Bombay Native Infantry, between Chil-Zina and Karez Hill.
- 1 " 28th Bombay Native Infantry, watching the gardens in left rear of the Chil-Zina.

3. Brigadier-General Burrows marched shortly after, taking up a strong position in the old cavalry and Jacob's Rifles' lines.

4. An excellent position was found for No. 5/11th Royal Artillery, about one hundred yards to the right of Picket Hill.

5. During the whole of the march of the above troops into position they were constantly shelled by the enemy from guns in battery on Baba Wali Kotal, but no casualties occurred.

6. At 9.15 a.m. No. 5/11th came into action under a heavy fire from the enemy's artillery, and remained in action until 12.30 p.m., engaging the guns on the Kotal, which replied with much spirit until about noon, when they were apparently directed upon the troops who were making the turning movement by Pir Paimal.

7. During the early stage of the advance of the 1st and 2nd Brigades on the village of Gandhi Mulla Sahibdad, the enemy gathered in strong force on the low hills directly in front and east of the Baba Wali Pass, evidently contemplating a rush on the guns of No. 5/11th, but their leaders, who could be distinctly seen urging them on in the direction of Kalacha-i-Haidar, could not force the ghazis collected there to face the position taken up by Brigadier-General Burrows, and, though some few actually advanced down the hills, the main portion would not follow, and they remained under cover until the position was turned, when they retreated rapidly over the Kotal.

8. At 9 a.m. Major Tillard, commanding E/B, Royal Horse Artillery, with the escort of the 7th Fusiliers and the 28th Native Infantry, arrived at the village of Abásábad and reported to Brigadier-General Gough, who directed him to proceed along the Kokeran road and clear the low hills near the village of Gandizan.

9. Immediately on opening fire the enemy commenced a heavy musketry fire on the guns (which was, however, soon silenced), and also fire from the two guns at the foot of the south-west spur of the Pir Paimal.

10. The practice of these two guns was continuous and good, and, though the guns of E/B were engaging them some time, they were unable to silence them.

11. Shortly after 11 a.m. Brigadier-General Gough directed this party to advance and hold the hills by Gandizan, which had been abandoned by the enemy, and in this position they remained until ordered to return to quarters at 5 p.m.

12. On reporting to Colonel Johnson, Major Greig, commanding C/2nd Royal Artillery, was ordered to form up behind Karez Hill with the rest of the attacking troops.

13. At about 9 a.m. two guns of this battery moved to the right of Karez Hill, and opened fire against the village of Gandhi Mulla Sahibdad, and were shortly after joined by the rest of the battery, which kept up a fire on the village until masked by the advance of the 1st Brigade.

14. The battery then limbered up and followed the 1st Brigade during the remainder of the day, coming into action on the left of the village of Gandhi Mulla Sahibdad, but, the enemy dispersing, they did not fire.

15. At 2 o'clock the cavalry, which had been watching the passes, received orders to cross by the Baba Wali Kotal and pursue up the Arghandab valley in the direction of Kajah Mulk.

16. Brigadier-General Nuttall, taking with him the 3rd Sind Horse and the 3rd Light Cavalry, proceeded at once to carry out these orders, and, pushing on, came upon bodies of the enemy making for the hills and along the valley.

17. These he charged and dispersed, following up the retreating enemy to Mansurabad, a distance of some fifteen miles.

18. Night coming on compelled him to abandon the pursuit, and he, therefore, returned, reaching the lines at about 10 p.m.

19. Brigadier-General Nuttall estimates the loss of the enemy in this pursuit at one hundred men killed.

20. At 5 p.m. the whole of the pickets being relieved returned to quarters.

21. A complete casualty list, with amount of ammunition expended, has been already forwarded.

No. 214, "Field Operations," dated Quetta, 2nd October 1880.

Forwarded to the Adjutant-General in India, in continuation of Field Force, No. 88, dated 26th September 1880, to which I beg that it may be attached.

F. S. ROBERTS, Lieutenant-General,
Commanding in Southern Afghanistan.

No. 44.

No. 485 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 9th November 1880.

WE have the honour to forward herewith, for the information of Her Majesty's

* From the Adjutant-General in India, No. 5498 A., dated the 22nd October 1880, and enclosures.

Military Department Letter, No. 8876 K., dated the 29th October 1880.

Government, the correspondence noted in the margin,* relating to the proceedings of a column commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Daubeny, 7th Fusiliers, which was sent out from Kandahar to Maiwand in September last, for the purpose of burying the dead on the field of battle, and recovering prisoners, arms, &c. that may have fallen into the hands of the enemy.

We have, &c.

(Signed) J. STRACHEY.
" W. STOKES.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 44.

From Colonel T. E. GORDON, C.S.I., Deputy Adjutant-General in India, to the SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department. (No. 5948 A., Kabul, dated Simla, the 22nd October 1880.)

IN forwarding, for the information of Government, the accompanying papers, relating to the proceedings of the special column of troops sent to bury the dead on the field of Maiwand, and to recover prisoners, arms, &c. captured by the enemy, I am directed by the Commander-in-Chief to state that the duty which devolved upon Brigadier-General Daubeny appears to have been performed in a thoughtful and thoroughly satisfactory manner.

Enclosure 2 in No. 44.

From Brigadier-General A. G. DAUBENY, Commanding the Maiwand Field Column, to the ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL, 1st Division, Kandahar Force, Bombay Army. (No. 350, dated Kokeran, the 23rd September 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of the Lieutenant-General, that, in consequence of orders received, the Field Column destined for Maiwand moved into camp on the maidan opposite the Herat front on the night of the 8th September, and marched for Kokeran at 5.30 the following morning. On the road, one body, a sowar of the Poona Horse was found and buried. At Kokeran we found some difficulty in procuring supplies, and no atta could be got, all being required for the use of the cavalry brigade, under Brigadier-General Gough, encamped on the other side of the river. During the night we had a heavy fall of rain, which delayed our marching until the tents were dry. In the meantime I sent Colonel Tanner with a force to search Singiri and to procure atta. The result of the search was four old guns, quite useless; 30 maunds of atta were procured. After leaving Singiri the road opens out into a wide plain; here the cavalry were spread out, and a body of skirmishers passed through the enclosed ground to the left, searching for bodies; 18 in all were found and buried.

The Transport Officer reporting that the camels were much fatigued with the day's march, I decided to remain here (at Ashu Khan) to-morrow, and utilize the day in searching for arms and bodies.

11th September.—The search for arms was carried out under Colonel Bannerman, but was not satisfactory; 23 bodies were found on the line of route to Maiwand and buried, and a few were found on the outskirts of the village. A reconnoitring party was sent in the direction of Hauz-i-Madat, and reported all quiet; in fact most of the villagers seem to have deserted their homes. In the evening, Shirindil Khan sent in a man of Jacob's Rifles, a doolie-wallah, and a milkwoman, who had been made prisoners by the enemy; they appear to have been well treated, especially the woman. Three rifles have also been sent in (Snider).

12th September.—Marching on a wide front, with the cavalry well ahead, and provided with picks and shovels, we continued the search as far as Hauz-i-Madat, where, owing to the late rain, I was able to halt; just as we were coming into camp, one of the missing field guns was found, partly covered over with earth. Shirindil Khan, late Governor of Khelat-i-Ghilzai, came into camp in the evening, bringing prisoners and a rifle with him; he asked us to breakfast the following morning, an invitation which I accepted for a few of us, hoping that our visit might procure us information regarding the remainder of the lost guns.

13th September.—The column continued its march in the same order as yesterday, while I, attended by Lieutenant Muir, Colonel Tanner, and eight others, rode over to Shirindil Khan's house, where we were most civilly and hospitably received; but we procured but little information. Shirindil Khan said that the people of the villages which had opposed us had fled, taking the rifles with them, but he hoped on their return to be able to get some of them back for us, and also information as to the whereabouts of the guns. Supplies were sent in freely to camp.

The cavalry were sent along the line of retreat from Maiwand under the hills, and buried a good many bodies.

14th September.—The cavalry were sent to recommence their search at the point they left off yesterday, and the column marched straight to Khushk-i-Nakhud.

Patrols were sent out in the direction of Girishk, who, on return, reported all quiet, and that the people seemed to have deserted the country.

15th September.—On reaching Maiwand we encamped to the right (to east) of the line of villages below the battle-field, where there is good water in abundance from a karez. The position occupied by our troops is easily traced by the line of empty Henry-Martini and Snider cartridge cases, and the positions of the artillery and of the 1st Grenadier Native Infantry could be further traced,—in the former by the bodies of horses, and in the latter by the small caps which are worn by that regiment. The bodies on the field had all been buried, but the earth on the graves of our men was quite fresh; whereas the ghazis had evidently been buried shortly after the battle, the earth on their graves having set. I considered it best to form a committee to examine the graves on the field of battle and in the gardens in rear of the position, and also to institute a thorough search for unburied bodies, and erect a cairn to those who had fallen, on a conspicuous spot on the field of battle. Colonel Bannerman, 4th Rifles, Captain Beresford Peirse, 66th Regiment, and Lieutenant Waller, R.E., constituted the committee; they continued their labours for two days. Where the dead had been insufficiently buried fresh graves were dug, and the bodies carefully transferred to them, under the superintendence of an officer, and the names of all those who could be recognized recorded; in other instances it was considered sufficient to make the graves secure by the addition of fresh soil. In almost all cases stones were likewise placed over the graves, to render them still more secure. On the 16th and 17th instant, services were held over the freshly made graves by the Reverend Mr. Cane and Father Jackson, all Officers off duty attending, and on the concluding day the band of the Fusiliers played the "Dead March in Saul." The proceedings of the committee have been most complete, and a neat cairn has been erected on the battle field. A report of their proceedings is attached, and a sketch of the ground, by Lieutenant Waller, R.E., showing the positions of the graves.

During the days I remained halted at Maiwand, as also during the march, the country was well scoured by patrols, and neither in the direction of Girishk or elsewhere have there been indications of anything but perfect quiet. At first the villages near which we passed were deserted, the people evidently expecting retaliation for the part they had taken in cutting up our wounded and stragglers, but lately supplies have been freely sent to camp, and the inhabitants appear to be aware that they have nothing to fear as long as they maintain a peaceful attitude, and I think the passage of the column through the country to Maiwand will be found to have had a beneficial effect in re-opening our intercourse with the people, and therefore facilitating the transmission of supplies to Kandahar and other places.

As regards the main object of the expedition, viz., the burial of the bodies of our people on the line of march to and on the field of battle, I have to report that 144 bodies were found and buried on the line of march, and that about 522 bodies were buried on the field of battle and in the gardens in rear of the position. This number is based on measurement of the unopened graves, and on the number of bodies found in those that were opened.

As regards the recovery of small arms, I regret to say that little has been done, although many villages have been searched, and, for the few we have, we are indebted to the agency of Sirdar Shirindil Khan, as also for prisoners.

As already mentioned, the field gun was found by the troops at Hauz-i-Madat. I have reason to believe that the remaining four guns are buried at Kokeran; this I communicated to General Gough, but, as far as I am aware, all search has hitherto proved ineffectual.

I am much indebted to Mr. Muir for his arrangements and help on all occasions.

To the Brigade generally, and especially to Colonel Bannerman and the burial committee, for the patient and careful manner in which they performed a painful, and at times anything but an agreeable duty.

To Colonel La Touche, for the thorough search that was made of the line of retreat.

To Major Bryant, Provost Marshal, and to Captain Dobbs, Commissariat Officer, and Captains Leckie and Harris.

Attached—

- (1) Report of burial committee, with plan of graves on the field of battle and in the villages in rear of the position, by Lieutenant Waller, R.E.
- (2) Statement of guns and artillery, stores, &c. recovered.
- (3) List of small arms recovered.
- (4) List of prisoners recovered.

No. 594 K, dated Kandahar, 27th September 1880.

Forwarded for the information of the Lieutenant-General commanding the Southern Afghanistan Force.

(Signed) J. M. PRIMROSE, Lieut.-General,
Commanding 1st Division, S. A. F.

No. 192, dated Quetta, 2nd October 1880.

Submitted. Brigadier-General Daubeney seems to have performed the duty entrusted to him in a very creditable manner.

(Signed) FRED. ROBERTS, Lieut.-General,
Commanding in Southern Afghanistan.

Enclosure 3 in No. 44.

List of Prisoners, Arms, &c. recovered by the 2nd Brigade.

Prisoners.

Lance-Naique Narayen Lokhunday, 1st Grenadier Native Infantry.
 „ Ramzan Khan, 30th Regiment Native Infantry.
 Transport Surwan Oomer.
 Dooli-bearer Luximon.
 Bhisti Peerbux, 3rd Light Cavalry.
 „ Shaid Adam, 66th Regiment.
 Doodwalee Moonia, 66th „

Arms, &c.

2 Martini-Henry rifles.
 3 Snider rifles, 1st Grenadier Native Infantry.
 2 „ „ 30th Regiment, Native Infantry.
 2 Bayonets, 30th Regiment, Native Infantry.
 1 Cleaning rod, 30th Regiment, Native Infantry.
 1 6-pdr. smooth-bore field gun.
 1 Waist-belt with pouches, 66th Regiment Native Infantry.
 1 „ „ 1st Grenadier „ „

(Signed) A. G. DAUBENEY, Brigadier-General,
Kokeran, the 23rd September 1880. Commanding 2nd Brigade.

Enclosure 4 in No. 44.

From MAJOR P. H. GREIG, Commanding C Battery, 2nd Brigade, Royal Artillery, to the BRIGADE MAJOR, 2nd Brigade, 1st Division, Kandahar Force. (Dated Camp, Kokeran, the 22nd September 1880.)

I HAVE the honour to report, for the information of the Brigadier-General Commanding, that on the arrival of the brigade at Hauz-i-Madat, I found one of the 6-pdr. guns belonging to the Wali of Kandahar lying on the side of the road, together with the remains of the gun carriage. I mounted the gun on my spare gun carriage, and have brought it in with me, together with two wheels; three other wheels I handed over to the Assistant Political Agent, and the remainder of the gun-carriage I destroyed. On arrival at Maiwand, I found the debris of four wagons of E/Battery Royal Horse Artillery on the field of battle, consisting of the ironwork of two limbers and four wagon bodies and the tires of eleven wheels. I had them brought into camp, and mounted the ironwork of one wagon on my spare wheels, and placed the remaining ironwork on the top of it, and have brought the whole in. The tires of the wheels I placed in a deep karez. Colonel LaTouche, commanding the Poona Horse, also sent me in two naves of wheels, which I buried. I examined the field of battle and the surrounding villages and removed all traces I could find of the wagons, &c., of E Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.

On returning to Khushk-i-Nakhud, two camel loads of old harness, shafts, lifting jacks, &c., were sent to me. I found nearly the whole of the things worthless and buried them, with the exception of two shafts, two lifting jacks, and a few straps. At Ashar Khan, the debris of the store wagon of E/B., Royal Horse Artillery, was found in the nullah near the village. The axletrees, a few of the boxes, the pole chain, and one shaft I have brought in.

Enclosure 5 in No. 44.

Proceedings of a Committee ordered to assemble at Maiwand, Southern Afghanistan, by order of Brigadier-General Daubeny, commanding the Maiwand Field Column, for the purpose of counting the approximate number of graves containing our troops who fell in the battle of Maiwand, and to select a site for the erection of a memorial cairn. (Dated 15th September 1880.)

President :

Colonel W. Bannerman, 4th Rifles.

Members :

Captain W. J. De la P. Beresford-Peirse, 66th Regiment,
Lieutenant E. A. Waller, R.E.

The Committee having assembled pursuant to order, proceeded to inspect the battle field and line of retreat through the villages as indicated on sketch attached, and find that the number of graves on the battlefield are in number as per margin, and estimated to contain 400 bodies. Those in the gardens and enclosures consisted of, in the place marked "A" on the sketch, three large graves; that at place marked "B," one large grave; and at the place marked "C," one large grave. On examination, the Committee determined to have the bodies disinterred at the three last named places and marked "A," "B," and "C" on the annexed sketch, and reinterred in one grave at each place, on account of the bodies being only slightly covered over with earth.

The Committee, after having examined the field of battle, selected the spot marked "M," as a suitable place for the erection of a cairn in memory of the men who fell in the action at Maiwand. To Captain Beresford-Peirse, 66th Regiment, was entrusted the duty of preparing the new graves and re-interring the bodies of our men who were buried in the gardens and enclosures.

At "A" were found three large graves; the remains of the men, numbered as per margin, were interred in one grave in the corner of enclosure.

At "B" was found one large grave, which contained the remains of men, number as per margin, and were entered in one grave close by.

At "C" was found one grave, which contained the remains of men, number as per margin, which were interred in one grave close along side.

The graves of the remains of men on the field of battle were enlarged and improved by Lieutenant Waller, R.E., to whom was entrusted the erection of the memorial cairn.

The bodies of the following officers were identified :—

Lieutenant-Colonel Galbraith, late commanding the 66th Regiment.

Major Blackwood, late commanding E/B Battery, Royal Horse Artillery.

Captain M'Math, 66th Regiment.

Lieutenant Henn, Royal Engineers.

„ Rayner, Adjutant, 66th Regiment.

„ Chute, 66th Regiment.

2nd Lieutenant Olivey, 66th Regiment.

One officer's body not identified.

These bodies were interred with the bodies of the men at the places where they were found.

The body of Captain Smith, 30th Native Infantry (Jacob's Rifles), was discovered by Lieutenant Monteith of the Sind Horse, on the 17th September, and buried that same evening at the place marked "K" on the annexed sketch.

The following are the names of the bodies identified and buried in graves marked "A," "B," and "C":—

Corporal Eugene Mahoney.

Lance Corporal Lester Weston.

„ „ George Hinton.

Drummer John Groves.

Lance-Corporal Edward Beggs.

Lieutenant and Adjutant M. E. Rayner.

Private John Mannon.

„ John Evans.

„ Geo. Carter.

Surgeon William Guntrip.

Private Crispin Barrett.	Private Martin Diamond.
Lance Corporal George Tuttle.	" Alfred Castle.
No. 850, Private John Beard.	" George Anderson.
Private Benjamin Watts.	" John Ferney.
" Robert Donnon.	" William Wilson.
488 Private Wm. Brown.	831, Private Joseph Jones.
1449 " Joseph Jackson.	Drummer Michael Darby.
" Samuel Weleh.	Private Henry Murrell.
" George West.	Private Owen McCaffrey.
Colour-Sergeant Frederick Gover.
(Signed) W. BANNERMAN, Colonel,

4th Rifles, President.

W. J. DE LA P. BERESFORD-PEIRSE, Captain,
66th Regiment.E. A. WALLER, Lieutenant, R.E.,
Assistant Field Engineer, 2nd Brigade.

Enclosure 6 in No. 44.

From Colonel ALLEN JOHNSON, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the ADJUTANT-GENERAL IN INDIA. (No. 8876 K, Kabul (Field Operations), dated Simla, 29th October 1880).

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 5918A, dated the 22nd instant, forwarding papers regarding the proceedings of the special column sent out from Kandahar to Maiwand under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Daubeny, 7th Fusiliers, to bury the dead on the field of battle at the latter place, and to recover prisoners, arms, &c.; and, with reference thereto, to state, for the information of the Commander-in-Chief, that the Government of India fully concur in His Excellency's estimate of the very satisfactory manner in which the duty referred to was carried out.

LONDON:
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty,
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

C O R R E S P O N D E N C E

RELATING TO THE

E S T I M A T E S

FOR THE

W A R . I N A F G H A N I S T A N .

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

L O N D O N :

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

[C.—2560.] Price 1s. 1880.

Correspondence relating to the Estimates for the War in Afghanistan.

No. 1.

EXTRACT from DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, dated July 17, 1879,
No. 261 (Financial).

i.e., 1879. 52. The low state to which your balances had been reduced at the beginning of March* compelled your Excellency to request that the amount of bills offered for sale weekly might not exceed 25 lacs, and it was not until the 16th of May that you were able to intimate your ability to meet larger drawings. The result is that up to the 9th of July bills have only been sold to the extent of Rs. 4,20,00,000, and, assuming that an average of 30 lacs can be disposed of weekly to the end of November, the total amount allotted would then be Rs. 10,20,00,000, which at 1s. 7½d. the rupee would give 8,287,500l. The requirements of the year were estimated at 17,290,000l. but have since been reduced to 15,000,000l., of which, perhaps, 500,000l. may be obtained by the purchase of gold in India. This leaves about 6¼ millions sterling to be obtained in the last four months of the year, which, even taking the exchange as high as 1s. 9d. the rupee, would imply an average drawing of 42 lacs a week. Experience does not warrant the belief that the market will bear so heavy a drain, except in the height of the export season; and I am anxious, therefore, to impress on your Government the necessity of making such arrangements in future years as will admit of the largest drawings at the time when your treasuries are at the fullest, if the rate of exchange should then be favourable.

No. 2.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, September 9, 1879.

Although it is of course impossible now to estimate future military expenditure in Afghanistan, it is desirable that Her Majesty's Government should know that in all other respects our financial prospects seem to us very favourable.

As regards present year, the condition of our cash balance is such that there is no room for anxiety, all branches of revenue are satisfactory, the rainy season has been highly favourable through India, and we may reasonably anticipate for next year general internal prosperity.

Following estimate assumes exchange value of rupee at one shilling and sevenpence. By arrangements already settled, with complete approval of Local Governments, we can reckon on reducing provincial grants next year by more than 700,000l., but we shall be able to make equally large reductions after 1880-81. These measures, together with savings on Public Works and otherwise, would, if peace had been maintained, have secured for next year a probable surplus of at least two millions. This estimate supposes not only that no fresh taxation will be imposed, but that large exemptions will be made in favour of poorer classes now liable to license tax. It also takes credit for no reduction in military charges consequent on Commission now sitting, although we hope that this will ultimately be large, nor for any reduction in Home military charges, to which we again earnestly beg your attention. By extending license tax to official and other classes, as already sanctioned by you on 21st November last, and by other measures, which will be reported hereafter, we think it probable that we shall be able to raise our surplus next year, apart from fresh military charges, to three millions. We hope this will more than suffice to meet all probable additional expenditure in Afghanistan, although it may be necessary to suspend operations of famine surplus.

No. 3.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, October 3, 1879.

Yours 9th September. Taking rupee at $19\frac{3}{4}d.$, we ought to draw weekly in October 35 lacs, November and December 40, January and February 45, March 40. This is within estimate of rupee drawings, but will give us half million more sterling, which must be drawn, if possible, considering fresh heavy demands for railway stores.

Referring to Afghanistan, have you any doubt as to ability to meet such drafts? Having to deal with Five per cent. Stock, any material reduction of drawings may be very embarrassing.

No. 4.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, October 6, 1879.

Remittance proposals 3rd., accepted meanwhile. Despatch follows.

No. 5.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, October 16, 1879, No. 335 (Financial).

MY LORD,

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt from Your Lordship, dated 3rd instant, of the following telegram:—

“Yours dated 9th September. Taking (the) Rupee (at) $1s. 7\frac{3}{4}d.$, we ought to draw, weekly, in October 35 lakhs, (in) November and December 40, (in) January and February 45, (and in) March 40. This is within the estimate of rupee drawings, but will give us half a million more sterling, which must be drawn if possible, considering (your) fresh heavy demands for railway stores. Referring to Afghanistan, have you any doubt as to (your) ability of meeting such drafts? Having to deal with Five Per Cent. Stock, any material reduction of drawings may be very embarrassing.”

2. We replied on the 6th instant as follows:—

“(Your) remittance proposals (of the) third, accepted meanwhile. Despatch follows.”

3. Provision was made in our Estimates for the remittance of £15,000,000 at a cost of Rs. 18,95,20,000: but we did not expect to cover the whole net current expenditure proper from the Home Treasury, which was estimated at £15,738,900, exclusive of Debt and Railway Capital transactions, and is now, we apprehend, likely largely to exceed this sum. Including our shipments of gold, we have remitted to the Home Treasury during the first six months of the year, that is to say, to the end of September, £6,548,598, at a cost of Rs. 7,99,52,059. Your Lordship now proposes to sell bills on us, during the latter half of the year, for Rs. 10,95,00,000, by which you estimate that you will raise, at $1s. 7\frac{3}{4}d.$ the rupee, £9,010,937. If this programme is realised, we shall have remitted, during 1879–80, in all, £15,559,535, at a cost of Rs. 18,94,52,059.

4. We fully concur with Your Lordship as to the extreme importance of our remitting, yearly, a sum at least equal to the net expenditure proper from the Home Treasury. We explicitly and unreservedly recognize our obligation in this respect, and we should have been glad not only to meet the demands which Your Lordship now proposes to make upon us, but even to remit one or two crores of rupees more than you intimate your intention of drawing. The revenues of the current year are, so far, prosperous; and, but for the renewal of hostilities in Afghanistan, we should have had no difficulty in meeting Your Lordship's drafts to any extent to which you are likely to be able to dispose of them.

5. The war will, however, necessarily, be costly. We have been obliged to undertake the construction of railways towards our North-Western Frontier, which are estimated to cost between $1\frac{1}{2}$ and 2 crores of rupees before the close of the year, and our military operations must, inevitably, involve the free expenditure of money in other respects.

6. It will be our anxious desire to avoid placing any check on your drafts upon us: but your Lordship will understand that it is not, at the present time, possible for us to say confidently that we shall be able to meet your Lordship's bills to the full extent proposed in your message. We shall not fail to communicate to your Lordship without delay any further conclusions which we may be able later on to form.

We have, &c.

LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
A. CLARKE.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
W. STOKES.
A. R. THOMPSON.

No. 6.

EXTRACT of a LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, December 19, 1879,
No. 405 (Financial).

Para. 1. In continuation of our Despatch No. 87A, dated 13th March last, we have the honour to present abstract revised estimates of our revenue and expenditure in 1879-80, which show a net improvement of £359,000 as follows:—

	Original Estimates.	Present Estimates.	Better.	Worse.
Revenue - - -	64,562,000	67,056,000	2,494,000	—
Expenditure - - -	65,957,000	68,092,000	—	2,135,000
Deficit - - -	1,395,000	1,036,000	359,000	—

2. The revised estimates include a special additional expenditure of £3,500,000 to be incurred, during the year, in consequence of the renewal of hostilities in Afghanistan, namely:—

	£
Railways to Kandahar, Khushalgarh, and Peshawar - - -	2,500,000
Under the head of "The Army," in addition to the £2,000,000 originally provided - - -	1,000,000
Total - - -	£3,500,000

3. Notwithstanding the instructions contained in your Lordship's Despatches, Nos. 161 and 162, dated 23rd October, we have, for the present, entered the first of these items under No. 34, State Railways, and, unless we hear from you to the contrary, we shall persevere in this course. We submit that, in view of our hereafter working these lines, like the rest of our lines, as commercial undertakings, it is not convenient that their capital cost should now appear under the head of "The Army"; also, that, in any case, it seems scarcely justifiable to connect the cost of great permanent works of this kind exclusively with the recent and present operations in Afghanistan. Even if these lines be treated, exclusively, as military works, their value will be permanent. We shall therefore be glad to be informed by telegraph of your Lordship's assent to our recording the cost of these lines under State Railways, and, in that case, of any needful corrections in the forthcoming estimates of the transactions at the Home Treasury.

4. The extra 1,000,000% which we have entered under "Army" is, as yet, only a very rough forecast. Until the situation in Afghanistan is more settled than at present, and until we are in a position to determine our future policy in regard to that country, it is impossible to say, with any approach to accuracy, even what the whole cost of the military operations there will be, much less how much will be brought to account during the current year.

5. All that we can say at present is, that we estimate the whole cost of all the military operations in Afghanistan, original and renewed, to the end of the current year 1879-80, at 3,600,000%, of which about 600,000% is recorded in the Accounts of 1878-9. The whole cost of the Frontier Railways is now estimated at 3,500,000*l.*, of which we expect to spend 2,500,000*l.* this year, and 1,000,000*l.* next year.

6. It thus appears that, but for the renewal of hostilities in Afghanistan, we might now be hoping for an improvement of the finances of the year of no less than 3,859,000*l.*, that is to say, for a surplus of 2,464,000*l.* instead of the deficit of 1,395,000*l.* originally estimated; and that this large estimated surplus of two and a half millions sterling would have remained, notwithstanding a special provision of 2,000,000*l.* for the operations in Afghanistan, which in March last we hoped were drawing to a close.

No. 7.

EXTRACT of a TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, December 24, 1879.

* i.e., for 1879-80.

Revised estimate * of figures in even thousand pounds sterling. Revenue 67,056,000*l.*; expenditure 68,092,000*l.*; deficit 1,036,000*l.*; being 359,000*l.* better than Budget. 2,500,000*l.* provided for frontier railways, and under army 1,000,000*l.* more than Budget for Afghanistan.

No. 8.

EXTRACTS of a LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, dated the 7th January, 1880, No. 9, (Financial).

Para. 9. We earnestly trust that your Lordship may see fit to reduce your demands upon us next year to 16,000,000*l., contenting yourself with a closing balance of 1,058,500*l.* Should circumstances admit of your raising more than 16,000,000*l.* on reasonable terms, we shall, if the year proves financially prosperous, be prepared to meet your drafts for the purpose; but we are not sanguine that this contingency will occur.

* i.e., instead of 16,900,000*l.*

Para. 15. We are not yet able to say how much money it will be necessary for us to borrow in 1880-81. The exact amount will depend, amongst other things, upon your Lordship's decision upon the request made in the 9th paragraph of this despatch. Meanwhile, we may perhaps assume that, so long as we do not propose to raise more than 2½ crores of rupees in one year, and see our way to borrowing in India all that we want, we need not communicate specially with your Lordship before settling the loan arrangements of the year. We shall probably raise as part of the Four and a half per cent. Transfer Loan 1879, whatever money we resolve to borrow in 1880-81.

No. 9.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, January 30, 1880.

Your Financial 9, Remittances. Send directly roughly estimated surplus of 1880-81, and cash balance in India on 31st March 1881, assuming Home Estimates remain; and state what outlay on famine insurance during year is intended.

No. 10.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, February 3rd, 1880.

Gazette, January 3rd*, Trades and Professions Tax: Have you sent letter with explanation of reasons for complete change in Bill?

No. 11.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, February 6, 1880.

License Tax: I regret that we inadvertently omitted to send covering despatch with Finance Member of Council's explanation published in Gazette, 3rd January.

* Debate in the Legislative Council on the proposal to refer the Trades and Professions Tax Bill to a Select Committee, published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India of the 3rd of January 1880.

Separate report appeared unnecessary, because change proposed would restore measure to the identical form in which it was proposed by us, 22nd July 1878, and sanctioned by your Despatch 21st November, same year. Sole difference is the exemption from tax of all trades with income under 500 rupees, which we felt sure you would approve. The great and unexpected improvement in our financial position may, however, make it expedient to reconsider the question of extending tax to the official and professional classes. We shall telegraph our conclusion shortly.

No. 12.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, February 13, 1880.

Before settling loan, inform me of reason for preferring $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and await reply.

No. 13.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, February 14, 1880.

Your Lordship's telegrams, 30th January and yesterday. Surplus next year about 40 lacs of rupees. Balance in India, 31st March 1881, 1,225 lacs, after borrowing 150 lacs of rupees. If you can reduce your bills upon us to 16,000,000%, we shall estimate to borrow nothing unless Exchange collapses, or the war costs more than is now expected. We earnestly advocate this solution. Surplus would then exceed 60 lacs of rupees, notwithstanding our abandonment of the proposed extension of License Tax. Famine Tax will be thus about one crore, half License Tax, half cesses. No expenditure estimated on famine insurance and only 50,000 rupees on famine relief, 436 lacs of rupees provided for Afghanistan including frontier railways, all in the ordinary expenditure. If the year prosper, we could meet your bills for the extra 900,000% also. If we borrow, we should not willingly borrow at 4 per cent., because of the heavy discount, and because $4\frac{1}{2}$ loan is at present proportionately dearer. Please answer as quickly as possible.

No. 14.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, February 16, 1880.

Yours 14th. Arguments insufficient to justify borrowing here, even temporarily, which would be necessary if drawings reduced, since, through East Indian Railway arrangements and conversion of stock, payments in first days of April 1881 estimated at 1,900,000%. In your announcement, state that less than 16,900,000% could not be put into Estimate, but you may add that drawings may be reduced, if demand for bills prove insufficient. I think you should borrow in India as much, not exceeding $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores, as necessary for sufficient balances. Avoid stating in Budget rate of interest on new loan.

No. 15.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, February 16, 1880.

With present condition and prospect of finances, we cannot justify extension of taxation to official and professional classes, and have resolved to drop proposal. Sole change in existing law will be exemption of all incomes under 500 rupees.

No. 16.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, February 17, 1880.

Yours yesterday, License Tax. Policy of abandoning extension much questioned here, for reasons stated in my Despatch 402 of 1878.* How do you justify suspending operation of Famine Insurance another year?

* "I might have felt some doubt as to the expediency of a measure imposing fresh taxation of " which the receipts were likely to be so small, if I did not consider that there was some ground for " the feeling that the operation of the Licensing Acts was partial, and that, while the proposed " measures would be beneficial to the revenue, they would remove from the minds of the classes taxed " under those Acts a sense of having been subjected to somewhat unequal treatment." Despatch to India, Nov. 21, 1878, No. 402, paragraph 5.

No. 17.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, February 18, 1880.

YOUR telegram yesterday, License Tax Extension. Whatever view be taken of policy, it is impossible now to carry measure. Neither I nor any member of Executive Government can support it, and Legislative Council would probably not accept it. Your doubt regarding Famine Insurance not understood. In my telegram of 14th, for "famine" read "protective works." We suspend nothing, and have fulfilled all financial plans and conditions made in 1878. Our explanation regarding Famine Insurance will be complete and unanswerable.

No. 18.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, February 24, 1880.

Sir John Strachey will present the financial statement for 1880-81 in the Legislative Council; results are highly favourable. In 1878-79, surplus 2,044,000l.; in 1879-80, surplus 119,000l.; Budget estimate 1880-81, surplus 417,000l.; foregoing figures in each case are after paying from ordinary revenue all charges for famine, Afghan war, and frontier railways.

War charges, 1878-79, 676,000l.; 1879-80, 3,216,000l.; 1880-81, 2,090,000l.; setting off increase railways and telegraphs revenues, total net expenditure on war to end of 1880-81, $5\frac{3}{4}$ millions; frontier railways, present year 1,670,000l.; next year 2,270,000l.; total $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions.

Expenditure on productive works in 1878-79, 4,381,000l.; 1879-80, 3,700,000l.; 1880-81, 2,500,000l., besides outlay on East Indian Railway.

Secretary of State's bills, present year 15,750,000l.; next year 16,900,000l. No loan to be raised in coming year according to present intentions, unless events not now foreseen occur, but power to borrow in case of need reserved.

Closing balances in India, 1879-80, 14,193,000l.; 1880-81, 11,444,000l. Exchange estimate for next year 1s. 8d.

Extension of taxation to official and professional classes abandoned for the present, fresh taxation not being desirable under existing financial circumstances. License tax remains unaltered, except that all incomes below Rs. 500 are exempted, causing remission of 340,000l. taxation. Export duties on indigo and lac abolished, causing loss of 54,000l. No export duty now remains except on rice. No present change in cotton duties, but prolonged maintenance of remaining duties declared impossible. Loss of revenue next year from previous remissions of cotton duties estimated at 250,000l.

Notwithstanding reduction of salt duties in greater part of India, salt shows large increase of revenue and consumption.

Principal improvements in 1879-80, compared with estimates:—Opium, 1,900,000l.; exchange, 1,010,000l.; public works savings, 661,000l.; land revenue, 450,000l.; salt, 362,000l.; interest, 389,000l.

Army Commission recommends important measures for increasing efficiency of army, with estimated annual saving of $1\frac{1}{4}$ million. No credit taken for this in Budget.

Sir John Strachey stated that former plans regarding famine insurance had been completely successful, and declared objects thoroughly fulfilled. Restriction of Productive Public Works expenditure to $2\frac{1}{2}$ millions has, however, checked efforts of Government of India to protect country from famine by construction of cheap railways and canals. War estimates have hitherto proved very accurate, and are believed to be ample for all contingencies now contemplated. Comparison between present total net ordinary expenditure with that of 12 years back shows, apart from loss by exchange, only trifling increase either in civil or military charges. Including loss by exchange, total net expenditure shows no increase, owing to improvement in railways and canals.

No. 19.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT for 1880-81.

SPEECH in the LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL of His Excellency the GOVERNOR GENERAL of INDIA, by the Honble. Sir JOHN STRACHEY, G.C.S.I. February 24th, 1880.

1. My Lord, I have now to lay before the Council the Financial Statement for the coming year 1880-81. It takes what has become the somewhat unusual form of a speech by myself, instead of a Resolution published in the Gazette. I shall state to the best of my ability all facts necessary to enable the Council and the public fully to understand the present condition and apparent prospects of our finances.

Preliminary.

I propose in the first place to give a summary of the main facts and figures for the year 1878-79, for the year 1879-80, now about to close, and for the coming year 1880-81, and to reserve for a later part of my statement the observations which I may wish to make upon some of the more important questions of our financial policy.

Changes in the forms of the Accounts.

Registration.

Railways.

2. The Council will see, from the Abstract Statements which have been laid on the table, that a few changes have been made in the forms of the accounts.

New major heads have been opened to show separately the revenue from Registration and the expenditure on that department of the administration.

The Guaranteed and State Railways are now shown together under the single head Railways. The purchase of the East Indian Railway by the State, involving its transfer from the category of guaranteed to that of state railways, has made comparisons of the current estimates with the past accounts in each separate category impossible; and a like disturbance will ensue on the acquisition of other lines constructed by private capitalists under a guarantee of interest from the public revenues. Moreover, negotiations are already in progress for the working of the Indus Valley State Railway by the Sindh, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company. It would be difficult to distinguish between the transactions of the two railways under one management. Similar arrangements for the management of other state railways are likely in the future.

Irrigation and Navigation.

For like reasons, the transactions with the Madras Canal and Irrigation Company will henceforth be entered under the major head, Irrigation and Navigation, under which head the cost of agricultural works (drainage and embankments) will also, hereafter, be shown.

Thus the public works heads of account will now be Railways, Irrigation and Navigation, and Other Public Works.

Accounts, 1878-79.

3. In March last the Regular Estimate for 1878-79 showed a probable surplus, on the ordinary Account, of £1,300,000; the actual surplus was £2,044,391, or £744,391 better than the estimate. The differences between the Accounts and the Regular Estimates are for the most part unimportant, and there are not many of them which now call for remark.

War in Afghanistan.

The net cost of the war in Afghanistan in 1878-79 was £676,381, a close approximation to the estimate of £670,000 made last year. Against this must be set the gain, the amount of which cannot be exactly stated, under the heads of Railways and Telegraphs. We estimate at £575,000 the ultimate net total cost of the operations in Afghanistan recorded in the Accounts of 1878-79. The sum of £313,420 was spent on Famine Relief.

Famine Relief.
Comparison with 1877-78.

4. Compared with 1877-78, the Revenues of 1878-79 show an improvement of £6,238,393, of which, however, £2,400,331, under the head of Provincial Rates, for the first time incorporated in these accounts, is nominal. The largest increase was under Land Revenue, £2,460,919; the loss under this head in 1877-78, in consequence of famine, had been very large. There was a saving of £5,032,355 in Famine Relief; there was an increase of expenditure of £1,705,767 under Loss by Exchange, and £1,339,281 under Public Works. The apparent increase under Public Works is explained by the transfer of charges in the earlier year from this head to that of Famine Relief, and does not represent a real fluctuation of Public Works expenditure. Altogether the expenditure of the year exceeded that of the previous year by £650,915. The net result is £5,587,478 better than the result of 1877-78.

General result favourable.

5. Thus the financial out-turn of 1878-79 was very satisfactory; with the help of the additional taxation imposed in that and in the previous year, amounting to £1,227,891, of which £313,420 was spent on Famine Relief, the true surplus of the year exceeded the amount of £2,000,000, decided to be necessary to meet our obligations on account of famine, and to leave a margin for other contingencies; and this result was obtained, notwithstanding the expenditure on the war, and the remission of the Inland Sugar Duties and some of the Customs Duties on cotton goods and other articles. The standard at which, for ordinary times, the Government aims, namely, a surplus of £2,000,000, less any expenditure on Famine Relief and exclusive of extraordinary charges such as those for great military operations, would have been attained if the accounts had shown a surplus of only £1,010,199, or £1,034,192 less than the actual surplus. Accounts, 1878-79.

6. I see only one drawback to entire satisfaction with these results; some of the capital expenditure under productive public works, as, for example, that on the Indus Valley and Punjab Northern Railways, cannot at present be regarded as directly reproductive. The works themselves possess the highest value; and for the future, as the Council is aware, no expenditure which is not really and directly reproductive is to be excluded from the comparison upon which the Surplus or Deficit of the revenue is ascertained. It will be seen later on that we are acting strictly on this principle in the present and coming years. Doubtful Productive Public Works.

7. I come now to the Regular Estimates for the present year, 1879-80.

It is now expected that the Revenue will amount to £67,583,000, or £3,021,000 more than the original estimate, and that the ordinary expenditure will be £67,464,000, or £1,507,000 more than was estimated. Thus, instead of a deficit of £1,395,000, with which, when our budget estimates were framed, we expected that the present year would close, our estimates now show a surplus of £119,000. Regular Estimates, 1879-80.
Comparison with original estimate

8. The original estimates provided for an additional military expenditure of £2,000,000 for the war in Afghanistan. If the war had ended with the treaty of Gundamak, I believe that this estimate would not have been exceeded; but, in consequence of the renewal of hostilities, the estimated additional charge has risen to £3,216,000. In addition to this amount, we have had to undertake the construction of railways on our frontier. I shall have to speak of them further on; but in the present year they are estimated to cost £1,670,000. Thus the total provision on account of the war has now been increased to £4,886,000. With the exception of £230,000 on account of the Railway from Jhelum to Rawal Pindi, which is included under the head of Railways, the whole of this sum, under orders from the Secretary of State, is charged against Army. It was a question whether they ought not to have been included under the head of State Railways, and as they will undoubtedly, quite independently of their present military importance, possess great and permanent value to the country, much was to be said in favour of this view. But, as their construction was primarily due to the war, it was decided to include their cost in the war expenses. The result will be to exaggerate the apparent amount of our military expenditure. War in Afghanistan.

An expenditure of £10,000 upon Famine Relief was estimated; this, on account of distress in parts of the Bombay Presidency, has been raised to £99,000. On the other hand, the Railway and Telegraph receipts are better, by reason of the war, to the extent of about £300,000. Railways charged as War Expenditure.
Famine Relief.

9. Thus, but for war and famine, the Regular Estimates of the present year would have shown a surplus revenue of about $4\frac{3}{4}$ millions sterling. The taxes imposed in 1877 and 1878, to enable us to discharge our obligations in time of famine, will, it is estimated, yield £1,184,000; and, if we deduct the sum of £99,000, actually spent on famine relief, there will remain of this revenue £1,085,000. To this extent, the new taxes have had the effect of preventing debt. Making allowance for other abnormal items on both sides of the account, the true surplus of the year for comparison with the standard surplus of £2,000,000, at which we aim, will be about £4,160,000. This surplus, if it had been actually obtained, would have been much in excess of the whole expenditure on productive public works, which is estimated at £3,700,000. Surplus compared with standard.

If present prospects are fulfilled, the financial out-turn of the present year 1879-80 will leave nothing to be desired.

10. The most important variations from the original estimates are the following:— Detail of variations.

Land Revenue.—Improvement, £450,000; more than half of this has been collected on account of arrears of former years, and the increase is due to the increased prosperity of the country. Land Revenue.

Salt.—Net improvement, £362,000; this also is highly satisfactory, as showing a general increase of consumption. Salt.

Opium.—Net improvement, £1,900,000. In September last the duty on Malwa Opium was raised by Rs. 50 a chest; the revenue from Opium this year has been unprecedentedly large. Opium.

*Regular
Estimates,
1879-80.*

Assessed Taxes.

Stamps.

Interest on debt.

Post Office.

Telegraphs.

Stationery and Printing.

Superannuation.

Railways.

Public Works.

Provincial and Local Surpluses, and Balances.

Assessed Taxes.—Decrease, £93,000. This is the result of the orders given during the year for the exemption of the smaller incomes from taxation.

Stamps have improved by £114,000. The stamp revenue has been constantly increasing; during the last seven years it has risen from £2,516,400 in 1872-73 to £3,090,000 in 1879-80, or by £573,600.

Under no head of the revenue has there been any serious decrease.

11. On the expenditure side of the account, the following are the chief variations from the original estimates:—

Interest on Debt.—Decrease £389,000; the chief saving is in the discount on the loan of March 1879.

There has been a satisfactory increase in the Savings Bank Deposits, which now exceed £2,000,000; in December last new rules were issued increasing the rate of interest from $3\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{8}$ per cent., and for preventing trouble to depositors.

Post Office.—Increase £63,000. The new contract with the Peninsular and Oriental Company came into force in February 1880. The yearly subsidy has been reduced from £430,000 to £360,000; the efficiency of the service has been increased, and the rates of postage to Great Britain have been reduced. Post cards costing $\frac{1}{4}$ anna each were introduced in April 1879, and are already so popular that it is difficult to supply the demand.

In Telegraphs, the excess of expenditure over receipts will, this year, be only £6,000; there has been a satisfactory growth of revenue, amounting to £145,000, of which, however, £50,000 is attributed to the war.

Stationery and Printing.—Decrease of expenditure £99,000; this is to some extent nominal. Supplies will, in future, be largely bought in India, instead of in England.

Superannuations.—Increase of net expenditure, £168,000; this is owing to the reduction of Public Works establishments, to which I shall have again to refer.

Including an expenditure of £230,000 on the Jhelum and Rawal Pindi line, Railways are worse by £204,000, of which, however, £150,000 appears as a transfer under Gain by Exchange. If these adjustments are made, the Railways show an improvement of £176,000. But the Railways, and especially the Great Indian Peninsular and the Oudh and Rohilkund lines, have not been as prosperous as, at one time, we hoped they would be.

Public Works.—There has been a saving of £747,000, to which I shall refer again.

Provincial and Local Surpluses.—Net surplus, £265,000. Improvement, 456,000*l.*

There was a like improvement of £469,000 in the accounts of 1878-79, as compared with the regular estimates. The provincial and local balances at the end of 1879-80 are now expected to exceed the sums last estimated as follows:—

	Provincial. £	Local. £	Total. £
Now estimated - - - -	1,331,800	1,336,700	2,668,500
Estimated last year - - - -	837,000	716,900	1,553,900
Better - - - -	494,800	619,800	1,114,600

This result is the more remarkable and satisfactory in that, during the year, the Local Governments agreed to contribute from their balances in special aid of the imperial treasury the sum of £670,000, half of which, £335,000, is charged in the accounts of the current year. The other half will be charged in 1880-81. The reduction of their expenditure on public works and the general improvement of their provincial resources has enabled the Local Governments to afford this timely help to the general finances with little apparent difficulty.

Army.

The Army shows an increase of £2,768,000; which I have already noticed. Apart from the war, the regular estimate is for a net expenditure of £15,487,000; the excess of £112,000 over the original estimate being due to high prices.

Exchange.

Exchange shows an improvement of £1,010,000; the original estimate was for the remittance to the Home Treasury of £15,000,000 at an exchange of 1*s.* 7*d.*; it is now hoped that £15,750,000 will be remitted at an average rate of 1*s.* 8*d.*

Productive Public Works.
Railways.

Productive Public Works, on which £3,700,000 was spent, show a small increase; 511 miles of railways have been opened for traffic during the year. At the end of the year there will be 8,724 miles in use and 1,462 under construction. I shall speak again of the frontier railways. Great progress has been made during the year with the Rajputana Line. The Lines in Bengal have been completed, and fair progress has been made on the Line from Nágpúr to Ráipúr.

*Regular
Estimates,
1879-80.*

Irrigation Works show an expenditure of £797,000. In Madras, much progress was made with the Godaveri and Kistna Delta and other works. In Bengal, the Orissa project, so far as the works have been sanctioned, approaches completion. In the North-Western Provinces and Punjab, much useful work has been done on the Upper and Lower Ganges Canals, and on the Western Jumna and Sirhind Canals.

Irrigation.

Satisfactory progress has been made with the Madras Harbour Works.

Revenue and Working expenses of Productive Public Works show an improvement of £638,000, due mainly to the inclusion, so long desired, of the land revenue in the Madras Presidency attributable to these works.

12. The details of the Loan operations of the year are as follows:—

Debt incurred.—Net £5,131,000. More than estimate £804,500, of which £540,700 was in India, where less was paid off than was expected, and £263,800 in England, where 270,016 less than was estimated in March last was raised at the close of 1878-79.

Loan operations.

The loan of £5,000,000, which was notified on the 13th March 1879, was subscribed at an average of 95-0-6 per cent. The discount upon it charged in the accounts of 1879-80 was £247,239. Of the outstanding portion of the 5½ per cent. Loan of 1859-60, £1,123,900 will be paid off during the year, leaving £105,600 still due. Other outstanding notes, amounting to £2,400, have been discharged. The net sum borrowed is thus £3,850,000.

13. A Local Debenture Loan of £45,020 was raised for the Cawnpore-Farakhábad Light Railway at 4 per cent. interest with share of profits.

Local Debenture Loans.

A Local Debenture Loan of £50,000 was offered at Nágpúr in November at par at 4½ per cent. interest, with half the percentage of surplus profits on the Nagpur-Ráipúr Railway. The subscriptions amounted to £42,700, of which £17,300 is payable this year and £25,400 next year.

The Secretary of State received £2,000,000 without interest from Her Majesty's Imperial Government under the Indian Advance Act, 1879: but on the other hand he repaid sterling debt amounting to £736,200.

14. Thus the net debt incurred amounted to £5,131,000, or, excluding the loan from Her Majesty's Government, £3,131,000. Including railway capital transactions, savings bank deposits, service funds, loans to native states, &c., and the repayment of such loans, the net amount borrowed in 1879-80 was apart from the £2,000,000 advanced as aforesaid under the Indian Advance Act, £3,523,000.

Net debt incurred.

The equation of the year 1879-80 may accordingly be stated thus—

	£		£
Borrowed ...	5,523,000	Net expenditure ...	3,581,000
Net other receipts ..	148,000	Balances decreased ..	2,090,000
	5,671,000		5,671,000

15. The price of public securities has risen rapidly during the year. The price of 4½ per cent. paper has for some time been more than 101, and that of 4 per cents. now exceeds 94.

Public securities.

16. I come now to the Budget Estimates for the coming year 1880-81.

*Budg et estimates,
1880-81.*

The revenues are estimated at £66,746,000. The ordinary expenditure is estimated at £66,329,000; we expect therefore a surplus of £417,000.

General.

17. The estimated expenditure includes excess military charges, amounting to £4,360,000, of which £2,090,000 is for military operations proper, and £2,270,000 for the frontier railways; against this, there will be a set-off on account of improvement in the Railway and Telegraph revenues, estimated to £300,000, leaving the net charge for the war on the estimates of 1880-81 at £4,060,000.

Effect of war on estimates.

Budget
Estimates,
1880-81.

But for the war expenditure, the true surplus of the year, to compare, as before, with the standard surplus of £2,000,000, would not have been less than £4,000,000.

The estimated revenue includes £982,000 obtained from the taxes imposed in 1877 and 1878, to enable the Government to meet its famine obligations.

Satisfactory result.

18. The estimates for 1880-81 thus show an extraordinarily satisfactory result, far surpassing the standard at which two years ago the Government of India aimed. The result is the more satisfactory, because the total estimated expenditure on the productive public works of a doubtful character, to which I have before referred, is only £398,000.

Revenue.

19. I will notice a few only of the heads in which the Budget Estimate differs from the Regular Estimate of the present year.

Assessed Taxes
and Customs.

20. Assessed Taxes and Customs show a decrease of revenue, to which I shall refer later on. I may, however, notice here that, in February 1879, the Hon'ble Mr. Hope and Mr. J. D. Maclean were appointed Commissioners to report, inter alia, whether it was desirable to revise the tariff valuations yearly, and, if so, how such revision should be made. The Commissioners recommended a yearly revision of the tariff values, and advised that the materials for such revision should be systematically collected throughout the year at the ports of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Rangoon, and Kurrachee, and collated in Calcutta, in February of each year, by a Committee of three persons to be appointed by the Government of India, one of them being ex-officio the Collector of Customs at Calcutta. The first committee of revision was accordingly appointed in January last; the Hon'ble Mr. Hope, and, on the nomination of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Mr. J. W. O'Keefe, a member of the firm of Messrs. Kettlewell, Bullen, and Company, consented to serve upon it, with Mr. J. D. Maclean, Collector of Customs, Calcutta. The Committee has just completed its revision, which is estimated to produce an increase of £15,000 to the Customs revenue.

Salt.

21. Salt shows an increase, of which also I shall speak separately.

Opium.

22. The net revenue from Opium is estimated at £7,250,000; this estimate, although £1,150,000 less than the amount we expect to receive in 1879-80, is largely in excess of any estimate made in any previous year. Although the actual net revenue of the last two years has been more, it is not thought prudent to take the estimate for the coming year at a larger amount than that which I have stated.

The Bengal crop of 1878-79 yielded 29,876 chests 75% consistence and 20,175 chests 70% consistence. Thus the stock in hand on the 1st January 1880 was 38,179 chests 75% consistence, and 43,404 chests 70% consistence, total 81,583 chests. The provision for sale during 1880 is 28,200 chests of each consistence, so that the reserve on the 1st January 1881 will be 9,979 chests 75% consistence, and 15,204 chests 70% consistence, total 25,183 chests.

Telegraphs.

23. Under Telegraphs we estimate for the first time that the revenue will exceed the expenditure.

Railways.

24. Railways.—Net revenue £794,000, of which £250,000 is attributed to the military operations in Afghanistan. Improvement £1,080,000.

Of this large amount £268,337 is nominal, owing to only three-quarters of the East Indian Railway annuity falling due in the financial year 1880-81, against which, however, may be set a payment of £235,000 due to the Company under the old contract for the second half of 1879. The purchase of the East Indian Railway is expected, upon the estimates of 1880-81, to produce a net revenue of £300,000 in excess of what it would have yielded under the old system. The guaranteed Railways will, it is hoped, in the prosperous season which we anticipate, yield £405,000 more than this year.

From the State Railways an improvement of £231,000 is expected from increased mileage open and from development of traffic.

There is no doubt always an element of speculation in the estimates of Railway revenues; but an increasing return may fairly be expected from the constantly increasing capital expenditure on the construction of these works, which by the end of 1880-81 will amount to £130,000,000, or 144 crores of rupees.

The chief event of the year is the purchase of the East Indian Railway for the State with effect from the 1st January 1880. The price paid was £37,200,000. I need not repeat the details of the new arrangements under which the line has been purchased, and under which it is to be worked.

On the expenditure side of the account an improvement is expected of £242,000 under Interest; this partly arises from the proposed conversion of the 5 per cent. sterling loan, and is partly nominal.

25. Under Administration there is a decrease of £30,000, in consequence of various reductions in Imperial Establishments.

26. The grants for 1880-81 for Ordinary Public Works are less than those for 1879-80 by £597,000; the grants for Productive Public Works have been reduced by £1,000,000. There is thus a total gross reduction in Public Works expenditure of £1,597,000, of which the saving in establishments is estimated at £247,000. Against this, however, must be set the special grant of £230,000 under Railways on the Jhelum and Rawal Pindi line.

The reduction in the ordinary expenditure on Public Works, apart from establishments, is more apparent than real; for the actual expenditure in past years has never exceeded the amount granted for 1880-81. I shall again refer to the question of expenditure on Public Works.

27. I have already spoken of the Army expenditure. Apart from the war, the estimate stands at £15,330,000. According to our present accounts and estimates, the net cost of the war from 1878-79 to the end of 1880-81 will be about 9½ millions, of which about 3½ millions is for the railways, and 5½ millions for military operations. The estimates of the cost of the war must of course be to a great extent speculative; but they have been prepared with much care; and their accuracy up to the present time is highly creditable to Major Newmarch and the Military Department. There is no reason to suppose that they err on the side of being too low.

To what extent it will be found hereafter that stores, chiefly camp equipage, have been expended and wasted and lost, we cannot possibly know accurately until the war is over; but every thing bought for the war is included in the estimates, and the reserves in our arsenals are being maintained at their proper standard, the cost being charged, for the present, as current expenditure.

28. Our estimates show under Loss by Exchange a net loss of £3,174,000, being an increase on the regular estimate for the present year of £310,000; in 1880-81 it is proposed to remit £16,900,000; the expenditure of the Home Treasury will be largely increased by the payments for stores for the frontier railways. We assume that the average rate of exchange will be the same as that of the present year, or 1s. 8d.

29. The rate of exchange for the adjustment of the public accounts between the English Treasury and India has been fixed at 1s. 8½d.

30. Productive Public Works (Capital expenditure).—Grant £3,312,000. Decrease £388,000. The grant is thus distributed:—

Irrigation and Navigation	...	...	£ 630,000
Madras Harbour (besides £50,000 granted under 34, Other Public Works)	...	...	70,000
East Indian Railway	...	...	630,000
Other State Railways	...	...	1,982,000
TOTAL	...	...	3,312,000

This grant is made in strict accordance with the conditions prescribed by the Secretary of State as follows:—

Fixed grant...	...	...	£ 2,500,000
Saving in 1879-80 re-granted	...	...	182,000
Capital expenditure on the East Indian Railway	...	...	630,000
TOTAL	...	...	3,312,000

*Budget
Estimates,
1880-81.*

Purchase of East
Indian Railway.

Expenditure.

Interest.

Administration.

Public Works.

Army.

Loss by Exchange

Adjusting Rate,
1880-81.

Productive Public
Works.

Budget Estimates. 1880-81.	It is hoped that 988 miles of railway will be opened for traffic in 1880-81. This will complete the communication between Bombay and the North-Western Provinces through Rajputana. Good progress will be made towards the completion of railways and works of irrigation already begun, but the funds at our disposal for productive works are now so small that we cannot commence in the coming year any new works of magnitude. In Madras the chief outlay on irrigation works will be in the Godaveri Delta. In Bombay and Bengal the sanctioned works will be nearly all completed. In the North-Western Provinces the principal work will be on the Lower Ganges Canal. In the Punjab the weir at the head of the Shirhind Canal and the remaining large masonry work will be nearly finished; the new main line of the Western Jumna Canal will probably be opened, and the new Delhi branch will be well advanced.
Expenditure. Railways and irrigation.	Madras Harbour. It is hoped that the Madras Harbour works will be finished in 1880-81. It was not possible to grant on this account more than £70,000 under the head of Productive Public Works, but the completion of the work being very important, this amount has been supplemented by a grant of £50,000 under the ordinary head.
Net revenue from Productive Public Works.	31. Revenue and Working expenses, Public Works.—Net revenue £318,000. The improvement is under Railways.
Ways and Means. 1880-81.	32. I now come to the important subject of the provision of the Ways and Means for the service of the ensuing year.
Home Remittances	33. In this respect the responsibility of the Government of India is confined chiefly to the requirements of the public service in India. Its direct concern with the provision of Ways and Means to meet the demands of the Home Treasury is limited to the remittance of the amount for which the Secretary of State intimates his intention of drawing bills during the year. The Secretary of State has resolved to raise, in this way, during 1880-81, the sum of £16,900,000. Owing to the heavy estimated expenditure at home for the frontier railways (£360,000 in 1879-80, and £1,070,000 in 1880-81), this large sum will not much exceed the current requirements of the Home Treasury. The Secretary of State could not therefore frame his requisition upon us for less than £16,900,000; but he has authorised the Government of India to state that his drawings may be reduced if the demand for his bills upon India proves insufficient.
Assets and Liabilities.	34. According to present prospects, the balances in the treasuries in India on the 31st March 1880 are expected to amount to Rs. 14,19,00,000. The surplus of Imperial revenue in India during 1880-1 is estimated at Rs. 12,88,68,000, or, deducting from the expenditure the loss by exchange on the Secretary of State's bills, Rs. 16,26,68,000. We expect to receive in India the sum of Rs. 1,01,38,000 for remittance to England, and, in the shape of Savings Banks and Service Funds Deposits and recoveries of Railway Capital, Rs. 56,15,000. Besides the Secretary of State's bills, provision must be made for the estimated deficit in the Provincial and Local revenues of Rs. 11,60,000 and for the net disbursement of Rs. 19,50,000 on the Remittance and Deposit Accounts. Thus, including Rs. 20,28,00,000 for the Secretary of State's bills, we have to contemplate a liability of net Rs. 20,59,10,000, against which we have net assets amounting to Rs. 17,84,21,000, showing a deficiency of Rs. 2,74,89,000.
No Loan.	35. The Government of India has had to consider whether the whole or any part of this sum should be provided from the balances, or whether it shall raise the whole or any part of it by loan. After due deliberation we have resolved to adopt the former alternative, and to endeavour to meet all the expected demands in India, during the coming year, without recourse to the money market for a loan.
Reduction of balances.	36. In consequence of this resolution the balances in the treasuries in India on the 31st March 1881 are expected to fall somewhat below 11½ crores of rupees, a sum considerably less than the minimum sum which the Government of India usually estimates.
Free power to borrow reserved.	37. The estimates of the Home remittance and Loan Transactions are habitually presented with expressed reserve; and this reserve must be understood to be this year greater than usual. But while thus emphatically reserving to ourselves the freest discretion to raise, during the year, any loan which actual events may render necessary, we consider the prospects of our being able to dispense with a loan during the year sufficiently substantial to make it unnecessary for us to enter any loan upon the estimates. We shall not in any case hesitate to raise any small Local Debenture Loans which may seem expedient during the year. Ways and Means.

38. The year 1878-79 was one of restricted and depressed trade as compared with the trade of the year immediately preceding it, though the value of the merchandize imported and exported (excluding gold and silver) was hardly below the average of the four years ending with 1877-78. When it is considered that famine still afflicted extensive provinces, that the war with Afghanistan was in progress, interfering with ordinary traffic on railway lines, causing a scarcity of carriage, and increasing the effects of drought and floods on the prices of food, and that trade generally in Europe and America was passing through a prolonged period of depression, it is a matter for congratulation that the industry of the country was able to bear up so well against adverse influences. Trade, 1878-79.

The value of the exports of raw cotton, oilseeds, hides and skins, indigo, silk, wheat, salpetre, lac, teakwood, and sugar, exhibited a sensible decline, most strongly marked in cotton, seeds, indigo, wheat, and sugar. The fall in cotton followed on a continuous decline of some years; the crops of seeds failed extensively, and at the same time the European and American demand for them fell off; the wheat trade was for the time almost annihilated, the low range of prices and enormous supplies from America forbidding the competition of Indian wheat; and sugar, after a large trade in the two previous years, suffered from the increase of prices caused by exhaustion of stocks and a failure of the sugarcane crop in the North-Western Provinces. Large quantities in excess of the imports of the previous year were imported to supply the deficiency. Exports and imports.

But while the trade in these articles diminished, owing to what we may hope were in most cases temporary causes, the exports of cotton twist and piece goods, rice, jute and jute manufactures, tea, coffee, and wool, afforded indications of prosperity in some of our chief staples.

The value of the cotton manufactures imported was smaller than it had been for many years. Metals, railway materials, liquors, coal, and apparel all declined, and there was an increase in silk, sugar, provisions, woollen goods, machinery, and spices.

The net imports of silver were nearly £10½ millions less than those of 1877-78, and gold was sent out of the country to the value of nearly £900,000. Import of silver.

The trade of the ten months of the current year for which figures are available shows a marked recovery from the depression of 1878-79, a recovery which, with abundant harvests, a decline in the prices of food stuffs, and renewed vitality in European and American trade, may reasonably be expected to continue. Recovery of trade.

Even raw cotton has shared in the recovery, both quantities and values having, for the first time for years, increased instead of diminished. Twist, rice, jute, hides, and skins, tea, indigo, wheat, and saltpetre, have all increased, in some cases remarkably. The recovery of the rice trade, with the fall of prices and the reduced demand for consumption in India, is very satisfactory. So also is the increase in the trade in tea, although it is said that the planting interest has not been a gainer by the increased exports.

The imports of merchandise also, like the exports, are much larger than in 1878-79. A large and active trade is being done in cotton goods, in the development of which there is reason to believe that the remission of duty on the coarser kinds of grey goods has aided. On the whole, the prospects of trade are satisfactory.

39. I have now, my Lord, stated the general facts and figures for the past and present years, and for the year that is about to commence. The result must be considered highly satisfactory. The aggregate actual and estimated surpluses of the three years amount to £2,580,000. Let it be remembered that this will be arrived at after spending, out of our ordinary revenue, 5¼ millions on the war, 3½ millions on frontier railways, and £400,000 on General satisfactory result.

Afghan War.

famine relief; let it be remembered that the amount charged in these three years under the head Loss by Exchange has been nearly 10 millions; let it also be remembered that we have given up £340,000 from the License tax; £150,000 from Salt; £150,000 from the Inland sugar duties; £300,000 on cotton goods, and a multitude of other articles; and that the sum raised by taxation is thus less than the sum raised at the beginning of 1878, by more than £900,000.

War in Afghanistan.

40. I shall now, My Lord, proceed to notice some of the more important questions of policy which the Government has had to consider. And first I may refer to that question which, at the present time, chiefly occupies our thoughts, the war in Afghanistan.

Its policy does not affect financial aspect.

My Lord, I do not now propose to discuss the reasons which led the Government to undertake this war. The discussion by me of such questions on the present occasion would be irrelevant to the matter before me. Whether the war has been just and necessary, or iniquitous and foolish, it has now to be carried on and paid for, and my present duty is confined to showing how the Government proposes to meet the obligations which, whether rightly or wrongly incurred, cannot now be avoided.

Cost to be borne by India or England.

41. There is, however, one question to which I must refer. It has been maintained by many persons that England, and not India, ought to bear the cost of the war in Afghanistan. I must explain why I consider this opinion incorrect.

Circumstances may be imagined under which it would be just that England should bear the whole cost of military operations carried on by the Government of India, even though the finances of India might be so prosperous that they could without difficulty dispense with such assistance. It is conceivable that a war might be undertaken for the maintenance or defence of purely English interests, real or imaginary does not matter, and that India might be called upon by England to co-operate in such a war, although no Indian interests could be possibly served by it. In such a case the liability of England could not justly be denied.

It will be said by those who are opposed to the policy which the Government has followed, that the war in Afghanistan falls precisely within this category, and that this war has been entered upon in defence of no Indian interest whatever, but in furtherance of the so-called Imperial policy adopted by Her Majesty's Government. Persons who hold this opinion may reasonably object to throwing any part of the cost of this war upon India; but this is not the opinion of the Government.

Indian interests involved.

42. Her Majesty's Government, and the Government of India, and, I will make bold to say, the intelligent loyalty of the people of India itself, hold that the war in Afghanistan was undertaken for the protection of India from the menaces of foreign aggression, and for the maintenance within her borders of permanent domestic tranquillity. The Government believed that this war could not be avoided, unless we were prepared to acquiesce in the establishment on our North-West Frontier of new conditions, which would infallibly lead to a great increase of military expenditure, to intolerable financial burdens and difficulties, and to the disturbance throughout India of the very foundations of our power. Great as is the interest of England in preventing such consequences, the questions at issue were primarily and essentially Indian questions.

Believing that the true interests of India are indissolubly bound up with the peaceful maintenance of our own dominion, we say that this war was undertaken with the conviction that justice to India herself rendered it unavoidable. If it be right to expend the revenues of India in maintaining the armies by which British supremacy is ordinarily secured, in giving to her internal peace and good administration, in the development of her wealth and civilization, and on the thousand other beneficial objects which we desire to promote, it is right to spend those revenues in rendering it impossible that any hostile influence should grow up on her borders, to threaten the existence of everything which the duty of England to India makes us most desirous to develop.

Necessity of financial independence of India.

43. I can imagine few greater misfortunes to India than the loss of her financial independence, and the acceptance by England of financial responsibility for her Indian Empire. It would signify to India the loss of control over her own affairs in every department of her administration, the possible subordination of her interests to those of a foreign country, and the substitution of ignorance for knowledge in her Government. Although some rare instances may be quoted in which, when there seemed to be a conflict between English and Indian interests, it may perhaps be doubted whether India has been treated with perfect fairness, there can be no question that, on the whole, the government of India has been carried on with as honest and thorough a regard for Indian interests as could have happened if India had a separate national existence of her own. England may rightly be proud of the way in which she has treated her great dependency. These fortunate results have, however, been due not only to her justice, but also to the wisdom with which she has left to India a separate financial responsibility. England has felt that it would be no kindness to take upon herself burdens which India now bears, to guarantee Indian debts, pay for Indian wars, and relieve Indian famines. England has also felt that it was wise in her own true interest, to refuse to take into her own hands the control of the £67,000,000 which now constitute the revenue of India. England does not choose that there should be grounds for even a suspicion in regard to the purity of her motives. I say this in the belief that India has before her a future of increasing wealth and prosperity; but if this anticipation should not be verified, and her future should be one of financial embarrassment, the loss of her financial independence would bring with it other misfortunes. I trust that the people of England may never find cause for believing that the maintenance of their Indian Empire means the imposition of heavy burdens on themselves.

Afghan War.

44. If, my Lord, India is ever to have a separate national existence, she must have self-respect and self-reliance, and I am sure that Indian patriots, who, with perfect loyalty to British rule, may nevertheless have, as they may rightly have, visions and aspirations of a distant future of another kind, ought to be the first to declare that their magnificent country shall bear its own burdens. India expects justice from England, but does not ask for charity. She feels that, with her ample and splendid resources, her two hundred millions of people, her revenue, which is surpassed by that of two only of the greatest European nations, she is a source of strength, not of weakness, to the British Empire. Whether we look to the extent of her territory, or to the numbers and character of her population, her military strength and capabilities, her public revenue and credit, India is one of the great powers of the world, ready at all times to stand side by side with England, and to fulfil every obligation which she owes to the common interest. If England be wise, she will not suffer either her own people, or her friends, and still less will she suffer her enemies, to be ignorant of the fact that her Indian Empire possesses almost inexhaustible resources. I repudiate, as unworthy of India and of England, the notion that India requires help to protect herself against the hostility of an Afghan Chieftain, encouraged though he may have been by a great power beyond. Nor does the fact that English as well as Indian interests are at stake, afford any reason for asking England to help us with her money. Everything which conduces to the safety and prosperity and progress of India, is a matter of concern to England; but there is no more reason that England should help us to pay for a local war, necessary for the protection of the interests of India, than that she should help us in the relief of our famines, or in meeting the ordinary charges of our administration.

Resources of India

45. Holding, my Lord, these views, it was, I confess, with some regret that I saw India, a year ago, accepting from England even the small amount of assistance which was given to us in the shape of a loan of £2,000,000, to be repaid without interest in seven years. But the circumstances of the time were peculiar. India had been suffering from a succession of famines and other unavoidable misfortunes, which had thrown enormous burdens on her finances, and there was a strong feeling in England, shared by men of all classes and parties, that, when the new calamity of war was added to the calamities which had gone before, England should help India in her difficulties. Although the course prompted by this generous feeling may not have been Loan from England to India.

Afghan War.

Cost to be borne by India.

politically wise, its motives were so honourable to the people of England that I cannot cavil at it.

46. But, whatever may be thought of the action taken in the past, when we were in a position of temporary embarrassment, no reasons exist at the present time for asking England to help us to meet the charges of the war. The figures which I have stated to the Council show that we have in our possession ample means of defraying all expenditure which it is likely we shall have to incur. We have obtained these means not only without the imposition of fresh burdens on the people, but at a time when we are reducing their burdens by £900,000 a year, when we are relieving important industries, and freeing from taxation a vast number of persons, who, if not actually, are still relatively poor. To say that when we are reducing the pressure of taxation, when the general condition of the people of India is one of great prosperity, when every branch of our revenue is flourishing, and when we have actually got all the money that we want, we ought nevertheless to ask England to tax herself, and relieve us from a burden which we are perfectly able to bear, does not seem to me reasonable.

Cost of war to be met out of current income.

47. But it will be said that, even if India must bear the cost of the Afghan war, and must pay for the frontier railways, the construction of which the war has made inevitable, all these charges ought not to be thrown on the present generation of taxpayers; that this expenditure is undertaken for the future, rather than for the present protection of India; that posterity should pay its share of burdens imposed for its benefit; and that these charges should be met by loans, not out of the income of the year.

The question thus raised is an old one; but I think I may be allowed, without disrespect to those who think differently, to say that, in England at least, statesmen of all parties have agreed about the principles on which such questions are to be decided. Those principles are, that, especially in a country with a heavy public debt, and not able to reckon confidently on a large and consequently recurring surplus, by means of which new debt can certainly and speedily be cleared off, the wise course is undoubtedly to provide for war expenditure out of the revenue of the year, so far, but so far only, as this is possible without throwing excessive burdens on the taxpayers, and overloading (to use Sir Stafford Northcote's words) the springs of industry and commerce; and that, if the expenditure cannot thus be covered, the deficiency may properly be made good by loans or other temporary resources not included within the regular revenue of the year. This is the doctrine which I understand to be held by that great authority in matters of finance, Mr. Gladstone, and I have partly stated it in his own words, although at one time he went further in his advocacy of meeting such expenditure without recourse to loans. In India there may undoubtedly be special reasons for charging heavy war expenditure against loans, in preference to placing new burdens on the country. Not only is it difficult to make a very large and sudden addition to our existing taxation, but it may be politically unwise to do so. There would therefore be no cause for surprise if, in the case of having to meet a large expenditure on war, we were unable to contribute from current revenue as large a proportion of the cost as in England would be thought right. Nevertheless, the general principle is as true in India as in England,—that, to the utmost of our ability, we ought to provide for the expenses of every year out of the year's income, and to allow no borrowing that is not really unavoidable. As the late Prince Consort, contrasting these two plans of meeting war charges, observed:—"The former course is manly, statesmanlike, honest; the latter is convenient, cowardly, perhaps popular."

No need for increased taxation.

48. For the reasons which I have given, it is improbable that the Government would, if our finances had been less prosperous, have thought it right to propose the imposition of fresh taxation to meet the expenses of the present war; but it is fortunate that no such question now arises. We can carry out the wise principles which I have quoted, not only without any fresh demand upon the resources of the country, but while we are giving relief from present taxation. I can hardly conceive that it can seriously be maintained that, having in our possession all the money that we are likely to require for the prosecution of the war, we should not spend it on that object, that we should abandon existing income, and then borrow to supply the loss.

49. The reasons for which it is right to provide for the charges of the war out of current income apply equally, and indeed with greater force, to the charges for the frontier railways. Although they will permanently benefit the country, it is plain that we could not construct them with borrowed money on the grounds on which we borrow for productive public works, and that their cost must be included among our ordinary charges. If, however, we could not have paid for them out of our ordinary revenue, it would have been quite right to borrow for their construction. I should have said this because the works are absolutely necessary, and because the political and financial evils of borrowing would be less serious than those involved by fresh taxation. I should not have defended borrowing for these railways on the ground that they will benefit posterity as well as the present generation. That is a matter about which I know nothing; but I know that posterity will have quite enough to do in bearing its own burdens.

Frontier Railways.

Cost of frontier Railways similarly treated.

50. I may add, with reference to these railways, that the urgent necessity for pushing on their construction is not likely to be denied even by those who have opposed the policy under which the war in Afghanistan was undertaken. The estimates show a probable expenditure on this account of £1,440,000* in the present year, and of £2,270,000 next year. The council is aware of the great and unprecedented speed with which the Railway from the Indus to the foot of the Biluchistan hills, on the line towards Kandahar, has been pushed on. The extension of the Punjab Northern Railway from Jhelam to Rawalpindi and Peshawar, and to Khushalgarh, is making rapid progress. In less than four months from the commencement of operations, trains were running for 140 miles towards Kandahar; while on the Peshawar line, where the rails have to be carried over viaducts 100 feet high and through cuttings of rocks 60 feet deep, the engines are expected to reach the banks of the Indus before the end of 1880. Independently of military considerations, which, possess, of course, at the present time, extreme importance, the completion of these lines, within the shortest practicable time, has become very urgent. As the Government of India has written on this subject, "it is obvious that immediate outlay upon the early and effectual improvement of our means of transport would be amply repaid by reduction in the excessive, and, to a great extent, wasteful expenditure which must otherwise be prolonged throughout the course of our present military operations, with the certainty of its recurrence on the first occasion of their renewal. The financial and economical interests affected by the inadequacy of our present Frontier communications are far-reaching, and the injury they sustain can scarcely be exaggerated."

Urgent necessity for improved frontier communications.

51. I have now, my Lord, to state to the Council the course which the Government proposes to take in regard to the Bill for amending the Licence Acts. It will be remembered that, when this measure last came before us, I announced, on behalf of the Government, that it was not proposed to take any further steps in the matter, until after the publication of the Financial Statement.

License Acts Amendment Bill.

The changes proposed in the existing law, when the Bill was introduced in November last, would, if they had been adopted, have had no appreciable effect upon the revenues, the amount surrendered by the exemption from taxation of the lower classes of traders being just made good by the extension of taxation to the official and professional classes. The effect of the further modifications subsequently proposed, and of the additional exemptions in favour of the poorer traders, would have been a loss on the one hand of £340,000 a year, and a gain on the other hand of £240,000, thus leaving us, as the general result, with £100,000 less revenue than we get now. The measure was essentially one which had for its object the equitable re-adjustment of taxation, and it had no financial importance.

Proposed changes.

52. Before going further, I wish to ask the Council to recall the circumstances under which fresh taxation was imposed two years ago.

Original intention of increased taxation.

The object of the new taxes was described in the preamble of the License Act passed by this Council; and nearly the same words were used in the other similar Acts passed for the various provinces of the Empire. It was stated that—"in order to provide means for defraying the public expenditure from time to time incurred, and to be incurred, for the relief and prevention of famine in British India, it is necessary to effect a permanent increase of the revenue."

* NOTE.—The amount should apparently be £1,670,000, including £230,000 entered under Railways.

License Tax.

In making this quotation, I do not attach any exaggerated importance to the declaration that these taxes were intended to give a "permanent increase" to the revenues. It is, of course, competent to the Legislature to alter its policy in regard to this, as to any other matter. The declaration, nevertheless, has this value, that it shows the intention of the Legislature, when these measures were enacted two years ago; and since the object for which they were enacted—the protection of the country against famine—is undoubtedly as important now as it was then, and as earnestly desired by the Government, it is reasonable to say that very good cause ought to be shown, before we consent to give up taxes avowedly imposed to make a "permanent increase" to the revenues.

Total amount of Famine Insurance
Taxation.

53. I may remind the Council what this increase really was. Taking together the measures adopted in the two years 1877 and 1878, the first new taxation was the Public Works cess, imposed on the land in Bengal: this yielded in 1878–79 £355,590. In 1878, new cesses were also imposed on the land in the North-Western Provinces, Oudh, the Punjab, and the Central Provinces, yielding about £170,000. The total amount of new taxation on the land was therefore about £525,000: the actual receipts during the last two years have however not been so large, because it was thought right to postpone for a time the collection of the cess in parts of Northern India which had suffered from drought. Similar taxation was not imposed on the land in Madras and Bombay: the principal reason for this exemption was, that the salt duties had just been increased in those presidencies, and it was held to be inexpedient to impose cesses on the land at a time when the effects of the famine were still being felt, and when the salt duties were being increased. A license-tax on traders was first imposed in 1877 in the North-Western Provinces, and, in the following year, the present License Acts were applied throughout India. They yielded at their maximum, about £820,000 net.

The total amount of what has been called the Famine Insurance taxation was therefore about £1,345,000.

Local Rates and License Taxation stand on same basis.

54. Considering that precisely the same reasons were given by the Government, and accepted by the Legislature, for imposing fresh taxation on the trading and on the agricultural classes, with the object of protecting the country against the financial consequences of famine, and that special stress was laid upon our desire to make the burden fall with approximate equality on each of these classes, it would be difficult, for the present Government at least, to accept any proposition for treating them differently now. In fact, it would be hardly possible to maintain the cesses on the land, if the tax on trades were abolished. It might be more possible to defend the abolition of the cesses on the land and the maintenance of the tax on trades. But it is needless to discuss such questions. Practically, so far as we are now concerned, these taxes on the agricultural and trading classes stand on the same basis.

They cannot be abandoned.

I need hardly say, after what has been said on former occasions, that the Government can entertain no idea of giving these taxes up, and of sacrificing a million a year of revenue. Even if these taxes were as bad as some think them, a time like the present, when we have to meet the heavy obligations entailed by a serious war, would not be opportune for abandoning them; still less could such a course be approved by those who believe with me, that these taxes are far less objectionable than others that could be named, and that when the time comes for remitting taxes, it is not with these that we ought to begin.

Exemption of small traders from taxation.

55. At the same time, the Government desires to make all practicable improvements in the assessment and the administration of the License Acts. It was this desire which led the Government to the conclusion, explained by me to the Council, when the Bill for amending those Acts last came forward, that it was desirable to exempt from liability all persons whose annual earnings are less than Rs. 500 a year. As I formerly said, we expect by this change to exempt from taxation about a million and three quarters of the smaller traders, and to lose £340,000. The Government still adheres to these conclusions.

Extension of taxation to professional and official incomes reconsidered.

56. Although, when this Bill was last before the Council, I was able to state that there had been great improvement in the financial position of the Government, I did not then venture to anticipate that the improvement would, when we came to make our estimates for next year, be so considerable as it is now shown to be. It has necessarily obliged the Government to reconsider the question of the propriety of extending taxation to the official and professional classes, and thus making good the greater part of the loss incurred by the exemption of the smaller traders from the License Acts.

Famine Finance.

Although the main object of the Government in this part of its proposals was a more equitable adjustment of taxation, we felt that it was hardly prudent to give up £340,000 of income without any compensation, and this was one of the reasons assigned for the proposal to tax the officials and professional men. The Government has now had to consider this question:—admitting—as we must do, in the present state of the finances—that we do not absolutely require the £240,000 which the contemplated taxation of these classes would yield, is it now desirable to impose it merely for the purpose of making our system of taxation more theoretically equal, and removing to some extent the reproach, which undoubtedly is true, that certain classes do not at present bear their full share of the public burdens?

Original reasons therefor.

If it had now been possible to attempt the removal of the numerous inequalities and anomalies which are inseparable from any such partial system of taxation as that which now exists, this would have been an object of high importance; but the mere extension of taxation to the official and professional classes would clearly be no complete solution of such a problem, although it might be a step towards it. On the whole, the Government thinks it better, for the present at any rate, not to press this part of its proposals. We have given up £340,000 from our existing taxes, and we do not ask that any fresh taxation shall be imposed. The amendment of the present law is desirable to carry out the exemption of the lower classes of traders, and for the removal of one or two difficulties which I shall explain later on; but with these exceptions no change is proposed in the License Acts now in force.

Extension abandoned.

57. I do not intend, my Lord, on this occasion to discuss afresh the vexed question of the Famine Insurance Fund or Surplus. There has been much misunderstanding between the Government and some of its critics as to what was said and as to what, though unsaid, we are presumed to have meant when the taxes to which I have referred were first imposed in 1877 and 1878: for this misunderstanding, so far as it has been due to want of precision in the explanations of our policy, I am prepared to accept my full share of responsibility, but for my part, I do not intend to refer to it again. I shall only say further that there has been, in regard to this matter, no change in the financial policy of the Government, nor is any change proposed now. In the following remarks, I shall endeavour to avoid controversy, and to refer only to actions and to facts which, whatever their motives and origin, can hardly be misconstrued.

Famine Insurance Fund or Surplus.

58. When the serious character of the financial obligations of the State in times of famine had been recognised, it became the duty of the Government of India to make sure that the public resources were adequate to meet the fresh strain imposed upon them. Upon careful inquiry we came to the conclusion that we must contemplate a liability from famine amounting, in loss of revenue and actual expenditure, to, on an average, £15,000,000 in ten years. It was clear that this liability must be included among our ordinary obligations, and that it would have been a fatal error to go on increasing the public debt to meet charges which must periodically occur. To enable us to discharge the liability thus estimated, we determined to aim constantly at a surplus of £1,500,000, supplemented by a further surplus of £500,000 to provide for extraordinary and abnormal demands, other than famine, as, for example, to name the most serious of such demands, for war.

Standard Surplus how fixed.

This standard surplus of £2,000,000 was to be ascertained on a comparison of the revenues with the expenditure, exclusive of:—First, Productive Public Works, which, to whatever extent might be necessary, it was assumed might be provided for by loan; Secondly, Famine Relief, and loss of revenue due to famine; Thirdly, Protective works, i.e., works not strictly fulfilling the definition of Productive Public Works, but constructed specially for the pro-

Famine Finance. Standard Surplus. tection of the country against famine; and Fourthly, Abnormal expenditure, other than for famine, as, for example, on war.

I do not stay to inquire afresh how far the standard thus adopted was adequate to the object in view, namely, the solvency of the State, although I believe it to have been so; I only recite facts.

Measures for securing the same.

59. In order to secure this standard average surplus of £2,000,000 the Government next resolved that it was necessary to increase the revenues of the country. The occasion for such increase was the recognition of the increased obligations of the State in times of famine, and the measures of taxation adopted were framed in the belief that there were certain classes upon which this particular burden ought primarily to fall. As I have already explained that taxation amounted originally to £1,345,000. It has now been reduced to £1,000,000.

Prevention of Debt by increased Famine Taxation.

60. Whether the public accounts show surplus, equilibrium or deficit, it is indisputable that these taxes must prevent debt by the exact amount which they yield, and that, when famine occurs, our resources for meeting it will be increased by an amount exactly equal to the amount obtained from these taxes, with compound interest upon them. This part of the subject needs no further remarks.

I have shown to-day that the precise burden borne by the country during these three years for this purpose has been or is estimated to be—

	£
in 1878-79	1,227,891
in 1879-80	1,184,000
in 1880-81	982,000
	3,393,891

The actual expenditure on famine relief has been or is estimated to be :—

	£
in 1878-79	313,420
in 1879-80	99,000
in 1880-81	5,000
	417,420

Therefore, the taxation thus levied in these three years, has enabled us to defray the expenditure on famine relief, and, moreover, to prevent debt to the amount of £2,976,471, with interest upon this sum. That this result has been achieved is self-evident, and, being independent of the surplus or deficit of the revenue as a whole, requires no further demonstration.

Standard Surplus surpassed.

61. I have perhaps already said enough upon the other part of this subject. The standard which we accepted was £2,000,000 revenue in excess of the expenditure on the ordinary account, excluding the expenditure upon famine, and other abnormal obligations. In my opinion this standard has been, in each of the three years of which I am speaking to-day, greatly surpassed.

It will doubtless be always right to scrutinise rigidly and jealously the validity of the grounds upon which any part of the public expenditure is excluded from the account upon which the surplus for comparison with our standard surplus of £2,000,000, is ascertained; but I believe that, if the accounts and estimates of the three years before us are subjected to the most severe criticism, it will be found that the actual and estimated surplus of revenue during this period does truly far exceed the £6,000,000 which, according to the standard which we have prescribed for ourselves, should be attained in three years, if the solvency of the State is to be ensured.

Illustration from ten years' accounts.

62. I find an apt illustration of our policy in this matter, ready to my hand, which I quote the more willingly, because it is, in other respects, of much interest. According to present prospects, in the ten years ending with 1880-81 we shall have spent, all told, including productive public works, war, and famine, £36,848,000 more than our whole revenue. The items included in this expenditure, which should be excluded before applying our standard, are—

*Famine Finance.
Public Works.*

	£
Productive Public Works*	35,881,000
War in Afghanistan	9,250,000
Famine	14,607,000
Total	59,738,000

Our revenue will have exceeded the rest of our expenditure by £22,890,000; and, but for loss of revenue from famine, this surplus would have been £25,890,000, or, on an average, £2,589,000 a year.

Thus, during these ten years, with an average surplus of £2,589,000 to compare with our standard of £2,000,000, we expect to have defrayed the whole cost of our famines and our wars, from our revenues, excepting only the trifling deficiency of £967,000. Considering the magnitude of our expenditure on famine and war during this period and the immense increase of charge under Loss by Exchange, this retrospect appears to me highly satisfactory.

Retrospect satisfactory.

63. I wish I could say that our plans for the construction of works for the actual prevention and relief of famine had been as successful as our financial arrangements have been. And this brings me, My Lord, to another part of my subject.

Original programme of works for prevention and relief of famine.

Financial safety was by no means our sole object. We felt not only that we had financially to provide the means of relieving famine when it occurred, but that the equally important duty devolved upon us of doing everything which it was possible for a Government to do, towards preventing these most terrible of all natural calamities, and furnishing the country with the machinery by which, when they occurred, the largest practicable amount of relief could be, most speedily and effectually distributed. The new taxation and the other measures by which our finances were improved, would give us, we believed, the means of carrying out these objects with a certainty and rapidity which would otherwise have been difficult.

The investment of our surplus in Productive Public Works was, from a merely financial point of view, in no sense essential to our scheme, and it will be seen, from what has been said elsewhere, that this part of our plans was modified by the orders of the Secretary of State in a manner to which, on financial grounds, we could take no exception. But we certainly contemplated the extensive construction of works for the protection of the country against famine; and it was to these projects that public attention was mainly directed, and in them the public naturally and rightly felt a deeper interest than it could take in any merely financial arrangements.

Subsequently modified.

64. A nobler programme was, in my opinion, never put forth by any Government than that put forth by Your Excellency; a more beneficial scheme was, in my judgment, never formed for the material improvement of any country, than the scheme which Your Excellency explained to this Council on the 27th December 1877, in your Minute of March 1878, and on other occasions. I desire to remind the Council and the public of what the plans of the Government of India were, and to explain why they have not been carried into effect as completely as we desired.

Its benefits.

65. I wish, My Lord, it were possible for me to read to the Council, and incorporate in this Financial Statement, Your Excellency's speech of the 27th December 1877. As I cannot do this, but am anxious to place the whole case in the clearest light, I must ask Your Excellency's permission to string together some passages from that speech, for I could not describe the programme of the Government in any words so good as those which Your Excellency used—

Viceroy's programme of December 1877.

"The measures now before the Council have for their principal object, the provision of that increase of the public income which experience has proved to be the first condition of any practical insurance against famine; and, therefore, it is only proper that the Council should know how we intend to employ the resources which its adoption of these measures will place at our disposal for that purpose. * *

* Including £11,076,000 spent on what I have called doubtful works.

*Famine Finance.
Public Works.*

"Of the countless suggestions made from time to time, and more especially during the present year, for rendering less bitterly ironical than it still seems, that famous inscription on the huge granary built at Patna, for 'the perpetual prevention of famine in these provinces,' there are only three which merit serious consideration. These are firstly, Emigration; secondly, Railways; and, thirdly, Irrigation Works. Unfortunately for India, the first of these three material factors in the practical solution of problems similar to those we are now dealing with, is inapplicable, or only very imperfectly applicable, to the actual conditions of this country; * * * though emigration unquestionably claims our fostering encouragement, I fear that, for many years to come, we must practically exclude this expedient from the list of those on which we mainly rely as a means of insuring the population of India against the calamities of periodical famine. The conclusion thus arrived at forcibly confines our immediate efforts to the most rapid development, by the cheapest methods, combined with the most appropriate and efficient application, of the only two remaining instruments for increasing the produce of the soil, facilitating its circulation, and thereby improving the general social condition, and augmenting the collective wealth, of the whole community. Those instruments are railroads and irrigation works.

"Now the incalculable value to India of her present railways has been unmistakeably demonstrated during the past year; and the Government is unquestionably bound to stimulate the extension of this class of works to the greatest extent and with the greatest rapidity, consistent with the requirements of financial prudence.

"* * It is an unquestionable fact, that the railways, and the railways alone, were the salvation of the situation in Northern Behar during the famine of 1874; and that they have again been the salvation of the situation in Madras during the famine of the present year.

"* * Had there been no railway within reach of these districts, the people, where they have now died by hundreds, must have assuredly succumbed by thousands.

"I am satisfied that the development of a network of subsidiary lines of railway giving the means of transport through every district of British India, has become a matter of vital necessity for the attainment of the great object now before us. Our present object is to render available within the shortest possible time a maximum length of line, especially constructed for a slow goods traffic, rather than to provide those more ample conveniences for passengers and goods, which have commonly been deemed necessary for all Indian railways hitherto constructed. * * *

"The early conclusion of such an undertaking must necessarily depend upon its financial practicability; and, for this reason, all minor considerations must be subordinated to the most rigid economy in construction, and the most severe limitation of the works to what is indispensable for the efficient exercise of their special function. But, if these conditions be duly complied with, I have confidence that, at a comparatively early period, we shall, without any strain upon our financial resources, have extended to all parts and provinces of our empire the most efficacious protection, not indeed from dearth (for that is impossible), but from those terrible effects of dearth which now generally terminate in famine.

"These, then, are the principles on which we are prepared to apply at once to the extension of our railway system, as a means of insurance against famine, an adequate proportion of the resources at our command for that purpose. * * *

"We propose to apply to the extension of irrigation works precisely the same principle and policy. * *

"I am not now speaking of what we ought to do, or would do, to ensure this country against the worst effects of future famine, had we only the means of doing it; but of what we can do, and will do, with the means already provided for in the measures now before the Council. I do not mean to say that the construction of such an extensive system of local railroads and irrigation works as we propose to undertake, will not be the gradual task of many years. But I do mean to say that, in the manner and on the principles already explained, we are now providing for the prompt commencement, and uninterrupted continuation of this great and necessary task. We are systematising a policy, the principles of which have been repeatedly proclaimed and approved by our predecessors. We are associating with it the interests, the powers, and the duties of our local administrations. We are providing them with the means of permanently prosecuting and developing it, not without reference to our financial control, but exempt from the distressing uncertainty which has hitherto been inseparable from the practical execution of this policy, in consequence of the obligation, which has till now rested upon the Government of India, with the very limited funds at its disposal for the prosecution of public works, to choose, from year to year, between the conflicting claims upon its purse of the various and dissimilar localities of this spacious Empire."

Construction of Productive Public
Works defended.

66. My Lord, I am convinced that the policy, which Your Excellency thus proclaimed your resolution to carry out, was not only wise and humane, because it provided the only possible means by which the Government could protect the country against the future calamities of famine, but that, financially, it was sound and prudent. Notwithstanding many mistakes which, in transactions of such magnitude, were inevitable, the policy by which, for many years past, we have been constructing railways and canals in India was, in my belief, sound and statesmanlike in its conception, and its practical results have been triumphantly successful. The wealth of the country, and the prosperity and happiness of its people, have been increased by it to an incalculable extent; the consequent gain to the country and the public finances has been immense, and is not to be measured by figures showing only the direct returns from the works which have been constructed. For my part, I see no drawbacks, no dangers, and no disadvantages, which deserve to be weighed for one moment against the benefits which have been derived. The Government of Your Excellency desired to extend and develop this policy, and hoped, by the construction of a network of cheap railways and of carefully planned works of irrigation, to do all that it was in the power of a Government to do, to prevent the frightful calamities of famine to which the country is now periodically exposed. We believed, and I believe still, that we could do this not only without financial risk, but with certain financial advantage.

*Productive
Public Works.*

67. The Local Governments shared our convictions and our expectations. Sir Ashley Eden, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was prepared to undertake, from the resources already assigned to him, a system of railway communications which, without costing the imperial revenues a shilling, would, he believed, have added millions to the wealth of his great province. Sir George Couper sent us up a scheme, carefully prepared by my friend General Fraser, for constructing a complete system, some twelve or thirteen hundred miles in length, of light railways, which, in combination with works of irrigation, would have gone far, if not to make future famines in the North-Western Provinces improbable, at least to render the relief of such famines a comparatively easy and a certainly successful operation.

And supported by Local Governments.

68. My Lord, these visions have for the present, but I hope only for the present, faded. The plans which Your Excellency described to the Council two years ago, and which I have repeated to-day, have not yet been carried out; we have had to defer the hope of protecting the country against famine by the rapid development of railways and works of irrigation; and not only this, but we have even been compelled largely to reduce the expenditure which, for many years past, we have been incurring on works of this description.

But deferred
owing to recommendations of Committee as to reduction of expenditure on Productive
Works.

My Lord, I shall not call in question the sufficiency of the reasons which led Her Majesty's Government, and a Committee of the House of Commons, to think that a very large reduction should be made in the expenditure of the Government of India on Productive Public Works; nor is it necessary that I should now repeat those reasons, because they have been fully explained in the Report of the Committee, which was published during the last Session of Parliament. Nor do I wish it to be supposed that I am insensible to the advantages which we derive from this temporary restriction of expenditure. It has enabled us to carry out in a way which might otherwise have been hardly practicable, important reforms in the Public Works Department, and to get rid of hugely overgrown establishments.

69. The limit of £2,500,000 which has been placed on our annual expenditure on productive public works has avowedly no sort of finality. "The amount to be annually expended" (I am quoting from the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons) "should mainly depend upon the financial condition of India, and should, therefore, for the present be limited to an amount of £2,500,000, as recently fixed by the Secretary of State for India in Council." Considering what our financial condition already is, and what we hope it will be in the future, I predict with confidence that the check, which has been placed upon our expenditure on useful works essential to the progress of the country and to its protection against famine, will be only temporary, and that the execution of the plans described by Your Excellency two years ago has been only temporarily deferred. But at the same time I wish to make it clear that, if the Government of India has failed for the present fully to carry out its programme for the construction of material works for protecting the country against famine, no responsibility

Present limit of such expenditure.

*Productive
Public Works.*

for that failure rests upon us. While I say this, I must again ask the Council to remember that, however much we may regret this disappointment, it in no way affects the financial efficacy of the measures taken to enable us to discharge our obligations in times of famine without fear of insolvency. Nothing can prevent the success of those measures, which have been subjected to this modification only, that, owing to the improvement of our general financial position, we have ventured to dispense with about a quarter of the additional taxation (amounting at its maximum to £1,345,000 a year), which was their main feature.

Policy as to expenditure on Productive Public Works defined.

70. I may here notice, with regard to the policy of the construction of productive public works, that, although the correspondence on the subject between the Government of India and the Secretary of State is not concluded, it is understood that the following points have been settled for the present:—

- i. That any money which it may be necessary to borrow for the construction of such works shall be borrowed in India in rupees, and not in London in sterling money.
- ii. That not more than £2,500,000 a year, on an average, shall be thus borrowed, in addition, however, to any capital expended upon the East Indian Railway or any other undertaking which may be hereafter acquired by the State in like manner; in addition also to any money which may be lent to the Government of India by Native States for the construction of productive public works.
- iii. That the yearly grant for the construction of productive public works shall not exceed £2,500,000 in addition to the capital expended upon the East Indian Railway or any undertaking similarly acquired hereafter, and to the expenditure upon any works the funds for the construction of which are lent to the Government of India by Native States.
- iv. That the unexpended portion of the grant of the past year may be re-granted for expenditure in the following year. The object of this provision is to prevent the waste and inconvenience incident to the lapse of unspent grants for the construction of public works.

As already explained, the grant for the construction of productive public works in 1880–81 has been regulated strictly by these principles.

Customs tariff duty on cotton goods not further reduced at present.

71. There are, My Lord, various questions connected with the customs tariff to which I must now refer.

Beginning with the import duties, there is first the duty on cotton goods, and this is a subject of which I cannot speak without some reserve, because there has been in past times, as everybody knows, no unanimity of opinion regarding it among the members of the Government. Speaking, as I now am, on behalf of the Government generally, I desire to say nothing to which any of my colleagues might take exception, and, although it will not be possible for me altogether to avoid the expression of my own opinions on questions of past and future policy, I hope it will be understood that I shall, in giving such opinions, be stating only what I myself think.

The Government does not at present propose to make any alteration in the duties actually levied on cotton goods. There are, however, obvious and serious defects in the existing system, and no one can say that it can long be maintained.

No longer protective but admittedly anomalous.

72. The measures taken during the last two years, whatever other results may have followed, have at least effected the particular object for which they were declared necessary. They have, for the present, removed all grounds for the complaint, that we were levying protective duties in favour of the Indian mills in their competition with English manufacturers. Some classes of English goods may be unduly favoured in comparison with other classes of English goods; but no protection remains for the special benefit of goods produced in India.

When, last year, Your Excellency decided that it was impossible to defend the maintenance of the duty on certain classes of cotton goods, because it had a distinctly protective character, it was thought right to make a considerable sacrifice of revenue for its immediate removal. Whether the course adopted was right, as I then thought and think still, or whether it was wrong, is a question which I will not now discuss, but the Government feels that it cannot at the present moment go further, or submit to loss of revenue beyond that which the measures of the last two years have rendered unavoidable.

Cotton Duties.

73. I must say something of the effect which those measures have actually produced. Mr. Hope's Commission stated in its report last year that the remission of duty on all goods made of thirties and under "would probably soon effect a complete revolution in the piece goods trade," and it quoted, in support of its own conclusions, a report by Mr. Pritchard, the Commissioner of Customs in Bombay, who, with reference to this remission, wrote as follows :—

Effect of abolition of duty on coarser cotton goods.

"It will operate to create a new class of shirtings made of yarns 28 by 29 or 30, instead of the present standard quality of 32 by 36. This will pass free of duty, and, if it finds favour in the market, will take the place to a large extent either of the long cloths or of the shirtings now used, or of both."

The Commission also quoted the following opinion of a large mercantile firm :—

"There can be no doubt that a trade in cloth made of yarn just within the limit of exemption of duty would be fostered, and which might gradually become of considerable importance. Such cloth would probably be appreciated by consumers for its intrinsic value, as well as for its comparative cheapness, owing to there being no duty upon it ; and, if this should be the case, it might do away with the importation of cloth made of yarns varying from 32s upwards."

74. I quote these passages, because the actual results have closely corresponded with the anticipations thus formed by the Commission and adopted by the Government. The chief difference has been that those results have followed more rapidly than either the Commission or the Government expected.

Anticipated.

The immediate consequence of the exemption from duty of goods containing no yarn of a higher number than 30s, was the rapid development of the manufacture and import of a new class of goods made of 30s and lower counts. In consequence of their superior cheapness these duty-free goods have rapidly become popular ; and the experiment having thus proved successful, the tendency is now to make of the coarser yarns all cloth for which they can be used, and to substitute the coarser for the finer fabrics formerly made of yarns ranging from 30s to 40s. This process has already reached such a point, that last month the duty-free shirtings and longcloths constituted more than 74 per cent. of those kinds of imported goods, and the dutiable qualities of some other classes of goods have almost disappeared from the market. We estimated last year that we might lose in the first year revenue to the amount of £150,000, and in subsequent years more. It is now probable that the loss in the first year, now about to close, will be nearly £230,000, and for the coming year it is estimated at £20,000 more.

75. Now, clearly, the present state of things is not satisfactory. We are holding out to English manufacturers a strong inducement to supplant finer by coarser classes of goods, and it has been forcibly represented that these and other anomalies ought not to be left uncorrected. I may refer in particular to a letter addressed to us by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber points out that the declaration made last year by the Government, that "it is not reasonable that certain goods should be admitted free, while large quantities of goods of almost precisely the same character in every thing but name remain liable to duty," is still true, with this difference, that the hardship is now "not caused by the competition between Lancashire and our local mills, but by competition amongst Lancashire manufacturers themselves, to secure the full benefit of the Government of India's last act. They do not, however, carry less weight on that account." The letter of the Chamber has been seen by the Council ; I need not repeat the forcible illustrations which it contains of the anomalies which now exist, but I fully admit the accuracy of its statements.

But anomalous and objectionable.

The Chamber says that "to all appearance, these duties are dying a natural death, and as that process involves serious anomalies and hardships, it is a question whether the present is not a fitting moment to abolish them in toto. To the Committee there does not appear any other course open, consistent with the declarations of Government, to which they have referred."

Cotton Duties.

Present anomalies cannot be immediately remedied.

76. If I could now put aside financial considerations, I should say that this conclusion of the Chamber is perfectly right. I may add that the alternative course which it has suggested as possible, namely, the recall of last year's exemptions, and the re-imposition of a uniform duty of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on all imported cotton goods, would not only be, in my opinion, objectionable in itself, but seems impracticable, because it would be opposed to the policy laid down for our guidance by Parliament, and by Her Majesty's Government. That policy was declared on the 4th April 1879, by the House of Commons, in the following Resolution:—

“That the Indian import duty on cotton goods, being unjust alike to the Indian consumer and the English producer, ought to be abolished, and this House accepts the recent reduction in these duties as a step towards their total abolition, to which Her Majesty's Government are pledged.”

I need not pursue this subject further. It is impossible to deny that the present state of things is anomalous and objectionable. The Government will give to this question in the future that constant attention which its importance demands, but it cannot, at the present moment, make the large sacrifice of revenue which its complete solution would involve, and, as a provisional arrangement, meanwhile, it does not seem possible to draw any line better than that drawn last year. The abolition of the remaining duties on cotton goods would cost us £615,000, in addition to the £250,000 which we have given up already.

I may remind the Council that the measures of last year were not hastily taken, and that they were in precise accordance with the specific recommendations of the Chambers of Commerce of Manchester, of Bengal, and of Bombay. I may add that, although I cannot doubt that the objections to which I have referred must have been felt as strongly in Lancashire as anywhere else, the Government has not received from the English manufacturers any complaints regarding them.

Personal explanation.

77. Although, my Lord, I do not intend to discuss the propriety of the course that has been followed in regard to the removal of the duty on cotton goods, I must ask Your Excellency's permission to say a few words on what is, in some respects, a personal matter. We are constantly told that these measures have been adopted in disregard of the interests of the people of India, and in obedience to the selfish demands of the Manchester manufacturers. If, my Lord, we had, indeed, manipulated, in the interests of England or of any political party in England, the taxes paid by the people of India, our conduct would have been not only shameful and odious, but absolutely criminal, and I, as Your Excellency's chief constitutional adviser in the financial measures of the last two years, must have borne my share of the responsibility. But for myself, who have taken part in these measures, I wish to say that I hardly remember the time when I did not argue, in the interests of India, for the removal of these and all other restrictions on her commerce. I advocated the abolition of these duties before, to the best of my belief, Manchester had herself discovered that she was injured by them, and long before Lord Salisbury had proved in his despatches, in a manner which seems to me unanswerable, the serious injury which they were inflicting upon this country. As I said in my first Financial Statement three years ago, I would not have accepted my present office, if I had not hoped that I should have an opportunity of co-operating with Your Excellency in carrying out what, I may say without exaggeration, have been the convictions of a life-time. I have had that opportunity. The cotton duties are, in my opinion, virtually dead.

Approaching probable abolition of all customs duties
in India.

78. Before leaving this subject, I think it right once more to point out that we ought not to shut our eyes to the consequences which, as it seems to me, must inevitably follow from the loss of the cotton duties. Whether those consequences ought, as I believe, to be welcomed as fraught with a great development of wealth and prosperity to India, or ought, as others think, to be looked on as disastrous, we cannot wisely shut our eyes to the fact that the abolition of the duty on cotton goods will involve in all probability the loss of a great part of our revenue from sea customs. In the Financial Statements for 1877-78 and 1878-79 this was clearly pointed out. In the former of these, I said that I looked forward with confidence to the almost total abolition of customs duties in India, and I used these words:—"I do not know how long a period may elapse before such a consummation is reached, but, whether we see it or not, the time is not hopelessly distant, when the ports of India will be thrown open freely to the commerce of the world."

Customs Reforms.

My Lord, the fulfilment of this vision seems to me now not far off. It was shown in the Financial Statement for 1878-79 that, putting aside the duties levied on salt and alcoholic liquors, which stand on special grounds, and on which internal excise duties corresponding with the customs duties are imposed, there would remain, apart from the cotton duties, a very small amount of import duties. Taking the estimates for the coming year, the net sum which we expect to receive from the sea customs duties, exclusive of salt, alcoholic liquors, and arms, is £1,115,000. The cotton duties will yield say £615,000, and, if I am right in believing that they must ultimately be altogether given up, our whole import duties would then yield only about £500,000. The truth is that cotton goods are the sole article of foreign production, which the people of India now largely consume, and there is no present possibility of a large customs revenue from anything else. Will it be possible, when cotton goods have been freed from duty, still to tax woollen goods and many other articles? And can it be believed that we should long maintain our customs establishments for the sake of obtaining the insignificant revenue that would remain?

79. I know only one suggestion which seems to deserve discussion, for saving a considerable portion of our customs revenue. I do not remember by whom it was first made, but I have heard of it for a good many years past. I believe that it really had its origin in a plan which at one time Mr. Gladstone thought of for England. My hon'ble friend, Mr. Hope, has lately given it his attention.

Substitution of registration fees for customs duties.

Starting with the assumption that our customs tariff on its present footing cannot be maintained, this suggestion is that, instead of customs duties properly so called, we should, with certain exceptions, levy on all articles imported into India, and possibly, also, on those exported, a registration fee at a very low rate. In this way, it is urged, we might obtain a considerable revenue in an unobjectionable way. I give no opinion of my own, much less do I give any opinion on behalf of the Government, in favour of this scheme, and all I say of it is that it deserves to be considered.

80. Another solution of these difficulties has lately been suggested, but it seems to me unsound in theory, and impossible in practice. It is that a sort of treaty of commerce should be entered into between England and India, on the principle that India will admit all English merchandise free, on condition that England gives up the duties which she now levies on Indian tea and coffee; if, it is added, England, in order to maintain her duty on China tea, prefers to continue to levy duty on tea and coffee from India, she might pay the proceeds amounting to a million a year, into the Indian Treasury.

Suggested reciprocity between England and India condemned.

Of course we should be glad to see the English or any other duties on Indian tea and coffee or on anything else removed; but, if free trade be good for India, it is good for her whether other countries maintain duties on Indian products or not, and the fact that England (for, as it seems to me, excellent reasons) taxes our tea and coffee, is no reason for our taxing her cotton manufactures, and almost everything else that we get from her. To maintain the contrary is, to maintain the old delusion of reciprocity. In regard to the suggestion that England should pay to India the million which she levies on Indian tea and coffee, this is clear, that, whoever else might profit from such an arrangement, it would not be our tea and coffee interests. They would have to pay as much as before, nor would they be reconciled to the new arrangement by the reflection, that it was almost equivalent to the imposition upon them of an export duty for the purpose of saving the English treasury from loss, and for the benefit of the general revenues of India.

Not beneficial to tea and coffee interests.

Customs Reforms.

Equally applicable to tobacco,
but impracticable.

81. I must add that I do not know why tea and coffee have alone been mentioned, as if they were the only articles of Indian production on which England levies any duty. There is tobacco, from which England derives a revenue of between eight and nine millions; I hope and believe that Indian tobacco has before it a great future; I should be delighted to see every legitimate encouragement given to its production; but I cannot conceive how it can be admitted into England free of duty. As, however, the adoption of the proposals, to which I have alluded, would practically lead to the surrender by England of the greater part of her customs revenue, I need hardly say more on this subject.

Duties on exports.

82. Leaving the import tariff, I come now to questions connected with the duties on exports. Since 1875, the only export duties have been those on indigo, lac, and rice.

Exemption of indigo from export duty

83. It is surprising that the duties on the two first of these articles should have survived so long. Nobody has ever defended them, and the only reason assigned for keeping them has been that the Government could not give up the revenue yielded by them, though this has never been great. The average amount derived annually from the export duty on indigo is £42,000. The duty is levied at a fixed rate on quantity, so that the revenue does not fluctuate with the fluctuation of prices. On the finer qualities the incidence of the duty is not much over one per cent.; on the lower qualities it may be as much as four per cent. The cultivation of indigo by natives of the country has, in Northern India, been somewhat rapidly increasing, and the duty falls much more heavily on the qualities made by them, than on the better qualities turned out by the factories managed by Europeans. Indigo from Central America competes with ours in the European markets, but not very actively; and a more serious future danger to this industry is probably to be found in the competition of chemically prepared substitutes. The danger is not the less real because no efficient substitute has yet been found. The progress of scientific discovery is now so rapid, that we might hear almost any day that this highly important Indian industry was seriously threatened, and we should then be exposed to the deserved reproach that this competition had been stimulated by the suicidal folly of our fiscal legislation. Export duties enjoy the credit of having ruined the Indian trade in saltpetre; they were taken off when it was too late to repair the mischief; the Government does not wish to run any similar risk with indigo. A notification, will, therefore, be issued to-day under the powers conferred on the Governor General in Council by the Sea Customs Act, 1878, exempting indigo from liability to export duty.

And of lac.

84. The same notification will abolish the equally indefensible export duty on lac. The trade in lac has been in a depressed condition, and during the last two years the average amount of revenue yielded by the duty has been only about £9,000.

85. I do not think that any one will question the propriety of these exemptions. Taking them both together, they involve a loss of about £54,000 a year.

Export duty on rice retained.

86. The only export duty, which will now remain, is that on rice. It yielded, in 1878-79, a net revenue of £556,000. As it is an export duty, it is often assumed that its effect must be more mischievous than that of any import duty. No one can be more alive than I am to the economical objections to export duties; but this duty on rice is, in my opinion, at the present moment less open to objection than some of our other customs duties. I have before me a valuable note by Mr. O'Connor on the Indian rice trade. It is shown that more than half of our exports of rice goes to Europe. Of the remainder, the greater part is consumed in the countries near India, such as Arabia, Persia, Ceylon, the Straits, &c., or is sent to various colonies, of which Mauritius is the most important, for the supply of the cooly population. The rice exported from Bengal to Europe, "table rice," as it is called, is used as food; the rice from Burmah, a thick coarse grain, is chiefly used for distillation, or for conversion into starch.

87. There is practically, at the present time, no competition with India on the part of other countries in Asia or America in the rice trade. Great apprehensions were expressed some years ago of the competition of Saigon. Similar apprehensions have been felt in regard to Siam. As yet these apprehensions have not been justified; but I must observe that there has been this year a large increase in the export of rice from Saigon to Europe. Northern Italy produces a good deal of rice, and sends large quantities to France; other countries furnish smaller supplies. Rice cultivation, which was formerly very extensive in North Carolina, has ceased to be important, and little rice now goes from the United States to Europe. Thus, although it would not be correct to say that India has a monopoly of the trade in rice, she has something approaching to it, and so long as this remains true, it cannot be said that the export duty has a seriously injurious effect on Indian interests. At the same time, it is impossible to say how long this may continue true; the Government cannot keep too watchful an eye on the rice trade, and must be prepared, if it should become necessary, to take immediate action. While, therefore, I am not prepared to say that our export duty on rice is at the present moment especially objectionable, I feel that we cannot count upon it as a permanent source of revenue, and if we could afford the loss, I should be very glad to get rid of it. The exports of rice from India, during the last seven years, have not very greatly varied in quantity. In 1873, the year before the Bengal famine, they were 1,164,697 tons; in 1875, in consequence of the famine, they fell to 869,646 tons, and this was the lowest amount reached; in 1879 they had again risen to 1,061,861 tons, and the trade is now again increasing.

Customs Duties.

And by reason of India's practical monopoly of rice trade, not specially objectionable.

88. Considering that, between 1874 and 1878, the country was passing, with hardly any intermission, through a period of drought and famine, and that vast quantities of rice were absorbed in feeding the famine-stricken population, it is satisfactory to find that exports to other countries should have shown little diminution, and that the enormous increase in prices should not have interfered materially with the foreign demand. In 1878-79, although prices still ruled high and an active demand continued for internal consumption, the exports nearly attained the level of the trade previous to the famine period. This year the exports will, it is thought, exceed those of last year, and, if harvests continue good, next year will probably be a time of great activity in the rice trade.

Prospects of rice trade.

89. In leaving this part of my subject, I will only add, that I am as sure as ever that there is no country in the world in which the fullest application of the principles of free trade is more desirable than it is in India. India (to repeat what was said in the Financial Statement for 1878-79) "is a country which, from its poverty, the primitive and monotonous condition of its industrial life, and the peculiar character of its political condition, seems to require from its Government, before all things, the most economical treatment of its resources, and, therefore, the greatest possible freedom in its foreign exchanges." I confidently believe that the time is not far off, when the truth of this will be generally recognised.

Fullest application of principles of free trade desirable in India.

90. The re-adjustment of the salt duties, to which I must next refer, has proved a very successful measure. It will be in the recollection of the Council that, at the end of 1877, a step was taken towards equalizing the rate throughout India, by raising it, in the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay, from 1 Rupee 13 annas to 2 Rupees 8 annas per maund, and by lowering it, in the Lower Provinces of Bengal, from 3 Rupees 4 annas to 3 Rupees, and, in the Upper Provinces, from 3 Rupees to 2 Rupees 12 annas per maund. In the following August, a further reduction was made of 2 annas in Lower Bengal, and of 4 annas in the Upper Provinces. By these means a uniform rate of 2 Rupees 8 annas per maund has been established throughout India, except in Bengal, where the duty is 6 annas higher, and in Burma and part of the Punjab trans-Indus, where it is nominal.

Measures for equalisation of salt duties successful.

On the 1st October 1878, the salt sources which the British Government had, under recently negotiated agreements, obtained on lease from the Native States in Rajputana, were taken over, and at these, as well as at the Sambhar Lake already in our possession, the duty of 2 Rupees 8 annas per maund was then levied on all salt, excepting that exempted under the agreements just mentioned, the details of which were fully described in the Financial Statement of last year. Considering that this result has been obtained not only without any general increase in the rate of duty on salt, but with a large reduction of that rate throughout by far the greater part of India, and simultaneously with a reduction of price to the vast majority of the population, I think we may congratulate ourselves on the success of our policy.

Equalisation of Salt Duties.

It was formerly shown that, by the re-adjustment of the rates of duty, we hoped to lower the price of salt to 130,000,000 of people, while only 47,000,000 were affected adversely. Rajputana and Central India are now liable to the salt tax, but a portion of the population still obtains its salt free of duty, and another portion pays only half the usual rate. Throughout the greater part of these States the price of salt, independent of the duty, has been greatly diminished, not only directly, but by the extension of railways. The people have further been relieved by the abolition of local transit duties, and by the abolition of the British duty on sugar taken across the now defunct Inland Customs Line, which yielded £150,000 a year. The Government is now endeavouring to redeem all remaining transit duties on salt in Rajputana and Central India, so that the transport of salt may everywhere be free from restriction.

*Inland customs line
finally abolished.*

91. The Inland Customs Line, on the enormities of which I have so often dilated, finally disappeared at the commencement of the present official year. When I think of this abominable barrier, which was likened to the Great Wall of China, stretching 2,000 miles across the whole of India, so that, if it had been put down in Europe, would have reached from London to Constantinople, with the countless evils that it entailed, I find it difficult not to begin again my old expressions of indignation. However, it is now dead, and I congratulate Your Excellency and the country on the fact. By its disappearance we have saved about £100,000 a year.

Results of policy as regards consumption of salt and salt revenue and expenditure.

92. I will state to the Council the principal facts in my possession, illustrating the effect produced by our measures on the consumption of salt and on the public revenues.

We have complete returns for the first ten months of the present year. Comparing these with the returns for the same period in 1877-78, the last year in which the old rates of duty were in force, there has been an increase of consumption, throughout India, amounting to about 2,400,000 maunds; the total consumption in the former period was 20,373,000, and in the latter period 22,776,000 maunds. More than 537,000 maunds of this increase is the increase in Lower Bengal, and nearly 1,900,000 maunds in Northern India. About a third part of the latter is attributed to the consumption in the Native States of Rajputana and Central India. In Madras and Bombay there was a small falling off in the consumption, which fell from 8,850,000 to about 8,654,000 maunds, or by 196,000 maunds. The reduction in Madras is believed to be more apparent than real, because a large number of the population consume untaxed salt. The law relating to salt in the Madras Presidency is as yet very leniently enforced, or is, perhaps, not sufficiently stringent.

In making the above comparison, I have taken the most unfavourable figures for my own argument that I could find; 1877-78 was the great famine year, but nevertheless for some reason, which I have failed to understand, the amount of salt taxed in Madras in that year was, as I noticed in the last Financial Statement, extraordinarily large.

If we compare the returns for the first ten months of the present year with those of 1876-77 (and, if I went further back, my case would be still stronger), we find that, taking the whole of India, there has been an increase in the total consumption of 2,718,000 maunds, or from 20,058,000 to more than 22,776,000 maunds; and this increase has been spread over the whole country. In Lower Bengal the consumption has risen from 6,822,000 to 7,682,000 maunds, and notwithstanding the reduction of duty, the revenue has only fallen off by £30,000, or from £2,220,000 to £2,190,000.

In Northern India the consumption has risen from 3,775,000 to 5,442,000 maunds, and, in spite of the reduction of duty, the revenue has increased from £1,142,000 to £1,348,000. Even in Madras and Bombay, where the duty was increased, and where the revenue has risen from £1,662,000 to £2,155,000, the consumption has increased from 8,641,000 to 8,654,000 maunds.

Salt Duties.

The figures I have just quoted refer to revenue derived from the duty on salt. There are, besides this, large receipts from other heads, such as the sale price of Government salt.

In 1877-78 the gross salt revenue of the whole year was under $6\frac{1}{2}$ millions sterling; in 1878-79 it had risen to 7 millions; the Regular Estimates for the current year exceed $7\frac{1}{2}$ millions, while, for next year, our estimate of salt revenue is $7\frac{1}{2}$ millions. Thus the improvement is expected to be more than one million in four years.

While the revenue has thus increased, the salt expenditure has diminished from £508,000 in 1875-76 to £404,000 in 1878-79, and is estimated at £368,000 in 1880-81. Against this saving in expenditure, however, must be put £253,000 on account of the annual compensations paid to the Native States and to Portuguese India; this, with £70,000 for the Sambhar Lake, is charged in the public accounts under Allowances and Assignments.

93. I think, my Lord, I may now say confidently that the wisdom of the policy followed in regard to the equalization of the salt duties has been proved by experience. To what extent the increased consumption and lower price of salt throughout the greater part of India have been the consequence of the reduction of the duty, and to what extent they have been attributable to the extension of railways, to the general improvement of communications, the opening out of new markets, and the increase of the population, it is not possible to say; these various influences have, doubtless, all contributed to the result; but it was with the knowledge, and indeed with the certainty, that all the conditions with which we had to deal were highly favourable to the success of our policy, that we were induced to adopt it.

Wisdom of policy vindicated by experience.

94. I must add that we received a few weeks ago a representation from the President of the Salt Chamber of Commerce, Cheshire and Worcestershire, to the effect that one of the results of our late measures has been an increase of the former difference between the rates of duty on Liverpool salt and that produced in Northern India, which places the former at a greater disadvantage than heretofore, and has driven it back from markets in Behar formerly supplied by it. Although, as I have already shown, there has lately been a great increase in the consumption of Liverpool salt in Bengal, careful inquiry is now being made into this subject. But, whatever may be the result of that inquiry, I may say at once that, although the Government cannot, at the present moment, make any further reduction in the Salt Duty in Bengal, it fully recognises the necessity of completing, as soon as possible, the actual equalization of the duty throughout India. It is an essential part of our policy to do so, and I feel sure that the measures which have still to be taken will prove as satisfactory to the country, and as beneficial to the revenue, as those of which I have been describing the result.

Necessity for further extension of policy recognised.

95. When, my Lord, the Financial Statement for 1879-80 was published a year ago, we were far from foreseeing the extraordinary improvement which was about to take place in our financial position, and which we now perceive had even then commenced. The loss caused by the great disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver had reached alarming proportions, and there was nothing to re-assure us regarding the future. We were engaged in war; the surplus which we considered necessary to protect the country against the financial consequences of famine had disappeared; our estimates, apart from the war, showed a surplus of only £605,000. We decided, however (to quote the words of the last Financial Statement), that it was "wise to abstain from imposing any fresh burdens on the country, and to accept the temporary loss of the surplus by which it was hoped that an insurance against famine had been provided."

Improvement in financial position not foreseen.

96. I see nothing to be ashamed of in our want of foresight. I do not see how we were to know that there would be a great improvement in the exchange, which would last through nearly the whole year, and which, in spite of an increase in our remittances, would better our position by £760,000; that our Explanation.

Improvement in Financial Position.

opium estimate, which we had taken at a higher amount than, with one exception, it had ever been taken at before, would prove, taking both sides of the Account, to be too low by £1,900,000; that in consequence of the most favourable season which India has known for many years, the increased prosperity of the people, and other causes, every great branch of the public income would show an increase; that we should get £450,000 more from Land Revenue, £335,000 more from salt, and so on.

Beneficial reduction of expenditure.

97. Although, as I need hardly say, it was not a pleasant task, which I had last year to perform, in laying before the Government and the public so unpromising a budget, there are now good reasons for not expressing much regret that we were not gifted with greater powers of foresight. For the result was to make us undertake a most searching examination into every branch of the public expenditure, with the firm resolution that everything superfluous should be ruthlessly sacrificed. The reductions which we have made already, and which we hope still to make, are not the least satisfactory part of the year's history.

The Local Governments throughout India loyally responded to our invitation to co-operate in the task which we had undertaken. We left it entirely to their discretion to decide where they could reduce their expenditure, and exercised no kind of interference in their proceedings. The result of our communications with them was, that, with their full consent in every case, the assignments made to them from the Imperial treasury in the present year have been reduced by £335,000, and a similar reduction will be made in the coming year.

Especially on public works.

98. Besides less important savings, which I need not now detail, there has been in the present year a reduction in the Public Works expenditure of £661,000. I hope that £400,000 to £500,000 a year will eventually be permanently saved by getting rid of superfluous establishments. Some explanation is necessary on this subject.

Reduction of public works establishments necessary.

99. Before any orders to reduce the expenditure on Productive Public Works had been issued by the Secretary of State, or the question of reducing the Ordinary Public Works expenditure had been taken up afresh by the Government of India, it was an acknowledged fact that the strength of our Public Works establishments was enormously in excess of what was necessary. When the Secretary of State ordered, subject to certain conditions, the reduction of our annual expenditure on Productive Public Works to the sum of £2,500,000, this excess became, of course, a still more serious evil. I will not now go into the question of the causes which led to the growth of these needlessly large establishments. It is easy to be wise after the event; they were, for the most part, the result of errors of system which were only discovered to be errors by experience. However, this may have been, we found ourselves, at the beginning of the present financial year, in this position, that our Public Works establishments were declared by the highest authorities in the Public Works Department to be costing not less than £500,000 a year more than was necessary for the expenditure on Ordinary and on Productive Works which had to be carried on. We therefore resolved that these superfluous establishments must be at once reduced.

And carried out efficiently.

100. The Local Governments and the authorities in the Public Works Department deserve the thanks of the Government of India for the efficient manner in which the serious task of making this great reduction has been performed. I think it will be admitted that the measures of the Government were carried out with the greatest possible consideration to individuals, and that the engineers, with whose services we have unwillingly been compelled to dispense, have been treated liberally. The reductions actually made will save us £250,000 a year. In the present year there will, of course, be a large set-off on account of pensions and gratuities; it amounts, indeed, to about £280,000; but the greater part of the cost of reduction will be incurred once for all in the shape of gratuities.

Although these great changes in the constitution of the Public Works Department could not be made without some temporary inconvenience, there can be no doubt, I hope, that they will lead to a permanent increase of efficiency. Our difficulties, however, are not over; our Public Works establishments are still larger than they ought to be, and the constant supply of young engineers that pours in from Cooper's Hill will, if it be not speedily stopped, prove a cause of renewed embarrassment, and of useless and serious expense.

Reduction of Expenditure, 1879-80.

101. Before leaving this subject, there is one important point that I must notice. It will be plain from what I have said, or have still to say to-day, that the Government of India looks with regret on the reduction of expenditure on Productive Public Works, and that it hopes to see that expenditure again increased hereafter. How, it may be asked, holding these opinions and expectations, can you justify this reduction of Public Works establishments? If, hereafter, your expenditure is increased as you hope it will be, you will have deprived yourself of the machinery necessary for the execution of your works.

No difficulty in increasing expenditure on Productive Public Works in future.

102. If, my Lord, this were true, I should, for my own part, have thought our proceedings very foolish; but I am satisfied that we need be under no apprehensions of the kind. I think that I cannot better explain the views of the Government on this subject, than by reading to the Council the following extract from a despatch addressed by the Government of India to the Secretary of State in September last:—

The Public Works Department being re-organized to meet this difficulty.

"Our present difficulties have not disturbed our belief in the great importance of the most rapid possible development of the means of communication and other material improvements in India. * * * * *

With these convictions, we should not have acquiesced, without remonstrance, in the absolute permanent restriction to £2,500,000 a year, of our expenditure on the construction of Productive Public Works, if we had understood this to be Your Lordship's intention. * * * Accordingly, we have been careful so to frame our proposals for the re-organisation of our establishments, that we shall have no difficulty in hereafter increasing our expenditure on Productive Public Works to any extent which is likely to be considered expedient. We could not have undertaken any reductions not compatible with this condition.

The ordinary difficulty of organising an efficient and economical service has been aggravated, in the case of the Public Works Department, by the fluctuations of public policy which have manifested themselves in large variations of the grants made for expenditure in this Department. We need not now inquire into the causes of these fluctuations, and we do not wish to criticise the policy either of the school which advocates a lavish public expenditure on such works, or of that which regards with distrust any such expenditure which can be avoided. It only concerns us now to recognise the fact that we have no reason for expecting, hereafter, more immunity from such alternations of conflicting influences than we have enjoyed heretofore. Our duty, therefore, is to anticipate their recurrence, and frame our measures accordingly.

Hitherto, our establishments have been organised on a plan which demands, for successful and economical results, a steady and unbroken prosecution of works; engineers having been brought into the service on engagements which have been understood as ensuring to them continuous employment. But such employment is incompatible with the conditions on which we can provide funds for the construction of Productive Public Works; and, clearly, we must now so organise our establishments that their strength may be, at any time, readily reduced or increased. In other words, the cause of our present difficulties being that we have, on the whole, been burdened with establishments in excess of what, with the funds at our disposal, we could constantly and profitably employ, we must, for the future, take care to engage no establishments in excess of the greatest strength for which we can confidently expect to provide constant and full employment, whatever policy as to the material improvement of the country may be in the ascendant.

We have resolved therefore, to organise our permanent establishment, rather upon the model of the staff of a great contractor, supplementing it, as occasion requires, by temporary establishments engaged for particular works only, with no claim to absentee allowances, pensions, employment upon any other work, or any of the rights and privileges of a regular establishment. Moreover, we desire to look, more and more, to the employment, upon considerable undertakings, of contractors with large capital, and to the development of the existing system of petty contracts for petty works. In this way we expect to avoid a recurrence of the inconvenience from which we are now suffering.

We anticipate no difficulty in carrying out the policy thus designed; on the contrary, we believe that, while guarding us against a return of our present embarrassment, this policy will, by encouraging persons to adopt the profession of Civil Engineer, and otherwise, promote the general interests, and be favourable to the extended employment of Natives of India in this department of our service, an object which we have much at heart."

103. Before leaving the subject of reduction of expenditure, I have still to mention what I hope may prove hereafter to have been the most important

Proposals of Army Commission for reduction of expenditure.

Reduction of Expenditure.

measure of the year. I refer to the appointment of the Special Commission, presided over by Sir Ashley Eden, to inquire into the organisation and expenditure of the army in India. The Report of the Commission is now under the consideration of the Government, and I should be going altogether beyond my own proper business, if I were to attempt in any way to discuss the recommendations which the Commission has made, or to give any opinion as to the extent to which those recommendations may be carried out. But there are some facts to which I may refer without impropriety, and which seem to me highly encouraging. This Commission, presided over by one of the most eminent of Indian statesmen, and including among its members some of our greatest Indian soldiers, has arrived at unanimous conclusions on almost every one of the questions submitted to it. These high authorities believe that the adoption of their proposals would greatly increase the efficiency of the army in peace and war; that it would add to the military strength of the British portion of our forces; that the strength and efficiency of the Native army, as a fighting body, and the popularity of the service, would be increased; that the medical service would be placed in harmony with the true principles of army organisation; that in the departments of the army greater uniformity and power of administration would be obtained; that the great lines of military communication would be improved and made permanently secure; that, under a more scientific system, the troops could be more rapidly and easily mobilised; and that (to quote the words of the Commission) "with improved transport arrangements, with a more thorough knowledge of the vast resources of the country in supply and transport, and with a decentralized military system, the Government of India will be able, provided the details are thoroughly worked out beforehand, to place in the field a force which will be a powerful weapon of offence or defence, while the troops remaining in garrison will be ample to supply a reserve if needed, and to maintain the peace of the country undisturbed." The Commission believes that these great results, by which the efficiency of the army would be immensely increased, could be attained, not only without additional expense, but with a positive saving to the State of 1,250,000*l.* a year.

I have not been able to take credit for any part of such savings in the coming year; but I sincerely trust that this most important matter will not be allowed to sleep, and that no feeling that the improvement in our finances has rendered military economy less urgently necessary, will be permitted to cause delay in settling the questions which have been raised. As the Commission, quoting the principles strongly enunciated by Lord Mayo, and reiterated by his successors, has observed, "the people of India ought not to be called upon to support or pay for one unnecessary soldier."

Financial prospects though favourable still somewhat uncertain.

104. The warning which I have now given, that we ought not to be induced by the improved state of our finances to relax our efforts in the direction of economy, is not true in regard to military expenditure alone. It would be a dangerous mistake to conclude that our prospects are not still uncertain.

In the Financial Statement for last year prominent attention was called to the consequences entailed upon India by the violent disturbance of the long standing equilibrium between gold and silver. It was then stated that the Government of India had submitted its views on this subject to the Secretary of State, and, as the Council is aware, Her Majesty's Government did not think it possible to accept our recommendations.

Although the exchange has, during the present year, been less unfavourable to India than we anticipated, it would be a great error to suppose that our anxiety on this account has been removed or even seriously diminished. The gravity of the subject can hardly be better illustrated than by this fact, that, even in the present year, which has been comparatively favourable, the charge for Loss by Exchange amounts to £3,188,000, while for the coming year it is estimated at £3,411,000. Ten years ago, in 1869-70, the charge was £142,555. Although the relations between the two metals have, of late, been comparatively steady, yet, as this stability does not rest upon any known foundation, it does not afford ground for confidence in the future relations of the two metals, which, under the existing conditions, cannot be predicted for a single month.

Obviously we cannot depend on the maintenance of our Opium revenue at its present unprecedentedly high amount. Other causes for a prudent anxiety are not wanting. It is, for example, plainly impossible to say what may be the actual cost, and the future obligations entailed upon us by the war in Afghanistan; although, so far as can now be foreseen, ample provision on this account seems to have been made. Altogether, while our financial prospects look, on the whole, far brighter than they were a year ago, we cannot say that there are not many causes for anxiety remaining. The prudent view to take is this, that we ought to take advantage of the breathing time that has now been obtained, and set our house in order.

Financial Prospects.

105. I think, my Lord, that there is only one remaining subject to which I need refer. Attempts have recently been made in England to compare the financial condition of India as it is now with what it was in past periods, and it seems to have been assumed by many persons that, because difficulties are found in making such comparison without more information than is given in the published abstracts of our accounts, therefore there is something wrong in the structure of our accounts themselves. The fact is that, for many years past, we have been steadily striving to make such improvements in our published abstracts as were called for by changes in financial circumstances, and in order to give fuller information. In this view, heads of accounts which used to be lumped up together have been separated, while others have been consolidated, and, instead of entries showing merely the net result of the differences between revenue and expenditure, the actual revenue and expenditure have been entered on each side of the account respectively.

Complaints of difficulty of comparison of financial condition with past periods owing to changes in form of Abstracts.

106. For example, in Mr. Wilson's Budget Statement in 1860, there were only six revenue heads. The first was "Land Revenue, Sayer and Abkaree," and it included Land, Forest, and Excise revenue, all lumped together; then came, separately, "Customs," "Salt," and "Opium"; then "Miscellaneous," a large item of over 4 millions; and lastly, "Receipts from Railway Companies," which at that time were only £330,000. On the expenditure side the charges on account of collecting the revenue on account of Land, Forest, Excise, Customs, Salt, Opium, Post Office, and Stamps, together with Political Pensions, Allowances, Assignments, and Charitable Grants, were all included under one head; the remaining heads were "Interest on Debt in India;" "Military Charges;" "Marine;" "Civil Charges," which included all Political, Judicial, and Police Establishments, and all Public Works, except Military and Marine; "Miscellaneous;" and "Guaranteed Interest on Railway Capital." The charges incurred in England were not classified at all. In the next year, 1861, the heads of Revenue and Expenditure were re-arranged and somewhat increased in number. The net charges in England were also shown separately.

Accuracy and completeness of Abstracts now published compared with those of past years.

From that time the abstract has been, from year to year, improved in the manner I have indicated. In the last few years these changes have been considerable, involving the entry of large amounts on each side of the Account, which were previously shown net on one side only. For instance, until quite recently, the excess of the Guaranteed Interest on Railway Capital over the net earnings of the Railways was shown in one entry on the expenditure side, instead of the net earnings being entered on the revenue side and the full Guaranteed Interest on the expenditure side; this obvious improvement has caused an addition to each side of the account of some five millions sterling. So again, the Provincial Revenue and Expenditure is now entered in the gross, under the appropriate heads, instead of net on one side only of the account. This has added about a million to both sides. Finally, local revenue and expenditure which, although as much public transactions as any other, used to be excluded altogether from the Financial Statements, have now been included, adding more than 2½ millions to each side of the account.

Thus, under these three heads alone, the totals of our revenue and expenditure have been increased by about 8½ millions, without any addition whatever to our revenue or expenditure. I will not say that our form of abstract is even now perfect; but it gives detailed information which it was impossible to obtain from the abstracts as formerly framed. The improvement of late years has been great, and it is certain that few countries now publish such full and accurate accounts as India. It can hardly be contended that the difficulties which such changes throw in the way of persons who wish to make minor comparisons, ought to have deterred us, or should in future deter us, from rendering our published accounts as perfect and comprehensive in form as possible, or that because our published statements were incomplete ten or twenty years ago they ought to have remained incomplete for ever.

Present Expenditure compared with 12 years ago.

General comparison of Accounts for 1868-69 & 1869-70 with accounts of 1878-79 and estimates of 1880-81.

107. I cannot now take up the time of the Council with any elaborate comparison between our present financial position and that of ten or twenty years ago. As, however, there seems to be an impression that there has been a great increase in the public expenditure, I will briefly compare the accounts of our net expenditure in 1868-69 and 1869-70 with the accounts of 1878-79 and the estimates of 1880-81. That this comparison may be effective, I have eliminated the expenditure from Local Funds, recently incorporated with the rest of the public expenditure, and also the expenditure on the war in Afghanistan. In like manner I have removed, throughout, the credits from the extinct Military Funds. I have, then, divided the net expenditure thus ascertained into four groups, as follows:

First.—Land Revenue (except Charges of collection, Surveys and Settlements), Post Office, Administration, Minor Departments, Jails and Penal Settlements, Law and Justice, Police, Marine, Education, Ecclesiastical, Medical, Stationery, Printing, Political, and Miscellaneous.

Second.—Interest, Loss by Exchange, Furlough Allowances, Pensions, and Famine.

Third.—Public Works, Telegraphs, Railways, and Canals.

Fourth.—The Army.

The whole net expenditure thus classified is as follows:—

	1868-69	1869-70	1878-79	1880-81
	£	£	£	£
Group I.—Effective civil administration	10,084,000	10,566,000	10,901,000	11,166,000
Group II.—Non-effective civil expenditure	7,054,000	6,543,000	11,177,000	10,536,000
Group III.—Public Works	8,195,000	6,235,000	3,399,000	1,882,000
Group IV.—The Army	15,137,000	15,251,000	15,442,000	15,330,000
Total	40,470,000	38,596,000	40,918,000	38,915,000

Effective Civil Charges.

108. Group I.—The effective civil charges proper have increased in the twelve years by about one million sterling, of which £500,000, under the Head of Law and Justice, is due to the development of backward provinces, such as Assam, Burmah, and Oudh, and to improved administration; and £250,000, under Education and Medical Services, is to be attributed to the constant demands for more schools and dispensaries. It does not seem to me that either the fact that the whole active civil administration of this great country costs only a fraction over net 11 millions a year, or the increase of its cost in twelve years by one million sterling, is indicative of any laxity of financial control or any disregard of the interests of the tax-payers.

Non-effective Civil Charges.

109. Group II.—The non-effective civil charges, many of which are not subject to control, show an increase of about 3½ millions, caused mainly by the disturbance of the relative values of gold and silver, but also notably by the growth of the pension list. Notwithstanding the addition of 37¼ millions (net) to our debt, the charge for interest shows little or no increase, the rate of interest having been, by successive operations, involving labour and forethought, constantly reduced. The average rate of interest upon the whole debt is now 4.40 per cent.

Public Works.

110. Group III.—The growth of the revenue from Railways, Telegraphs, and Canals, and the reduction of the expenditure on Public Works Ordinary has produced a diminution of the net expenditure in this group of more than six and a quarter millions a year, which therefore largely exceeds the increase in Group II.

During this period we have spent $65\frac{1}{4}$ millions sterling upon Railways, including the Guaranteed Railways, Canals, and Telegraphs. The result shown in the figures here given is remarkable evidence of the manner in which India responds to outlay of this character.

We have seen that in the coming year, the revenue derived from productive public works is likely to exceed the interest on the capital expended in their construction, together with the working expenses. I have read criticisms, in which the policy of constructing these works has been condemned on the ground that they had not yielded, and in many cases were not likely to yield, any extra profit after fully paying their expenses. But if the Government has succeeded in making these magnificent works for nothing, that is, without throwing any permanent charge for them on the people of India, surely it may well be contented.

111. Group IV.—Although there was an intermediate reduction of the cost of the Army, the net military expenditure here shown is little larger in the later than it was in the earlier years. The Army.

112. Owing to the rapid improvement in the financial results of our Railways, Canals, and Telegraphs, and to economy in the expenditure on public works ordinary, the whole net expenditure shows no increase, but a positive reduction. Whole net expenditure.

113. Considering that, during this period, the charge for loss by exchange has increased by $3\frac{1}{4}$ millions, and that, including the guaranteed railways, we have invested no less than $65\frac{1}{4}$ millions in productive public works, this, My Lord, is a result of which the Government of India need not be ashamed, and which I earnestly commend to the study of those statesmen who, from motives worthy of all respect, but which appear to me to be founded upon a dangerous misapprehension of facts, would withhold from India those material benefits which are to be obtained only by the expenditure of capital upon the development of her vast resources. Comparison satisfactory.

114. It now, My Lord, only remains for me to make the motion standing against my name. If it be adopted by the Council, it will be equivalent to a resolution that the Trades and Professions Bill shall be dropped altogether, and I shall afterwards ask permission to introduce a new Bill for the amendment of the present law. It will be understood, from what I have said to-day, that it will be a very short and simple measure, and its principal effect will be to relieve the poorer classes of traders from the taxation to which they are now liable.

STATE-

I.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE GOVERNMENT

Estimates,

REVENUES.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-9.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.	£.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
I.—LAND REVENUE	22,450,808	21,939,000	22,389,000	450,000	—	22,062,000	—	327,000
II.—TRIBUTES	703,660	703,000	714,000	11,000	—	698,000	—	16,000
III.—FOREST	605,433	672,000	662,000	—	10,000	690,000	28,000	—
IV.—EXCISE	2,619,349	2,742,000	2,765,000	23,000	—	2,782,000	17,000	—
V.—ASSESSED TAXES	900,920	896,000	797,000	—	99,000	535,000	—	262,000
VI.—PROVINCIAL RATES	2,638,835	2,740,000	2,706,000	—	34,000	2,764,000	58,000	—
VII.—CUSTOMS	2,326,561	2,248,000	2,231,000	—	17,000	2,175,000	—	56,000
VIII.—SALT	6,941,120	7,000,000	7,335,000	335,000	—	7,541,000	206,000	—
IX.—OPIUM	9,399,401	9,000,000	10,459,000	1,459,000	—	9,410,000	—	1,049,000
X.—STAMPS	3,110,540	3,087,000	3,203,000	116,000	—	3,194,000	—	9,000
XI.—REGISTRATION	266,360	267,000	262,000	—	5,000	265,000	3,000	—
XII.—MINT	172,335	180,000	254,000	74,000	—	196,000	—	58,000
XIII.—POST OFFICE	911,806	983,000	968,000	—	15,000	1,008,000	40,000	—
XIV.—TELEGRAPH	426,694	380,000	486,000	106,000	—	486,000	—	—
XV.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS	84,968	58,000	98,000	40,000	—	81,000	—	17,000
XVI.—LAW AND JUSTICE	647,130	649,000	663,000	14,000	—	680,000	17,000	—
XVII.—POLICE	211,108	233,000	221,000	—	12,000	232,000	11,000	—
XVIII.—MARINE	250,595	206,000	206,000	—	—	226,000	20,000	—
XIX.—EDUCATION	147,425	139,000	137,000	—	2,000	137,000	—	—
XX.—MEDICAL	44,332	39,000	54,000	15,000	—	40,000	—	14,000
XXI.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING	47,096	46,000	52,000	6,000	—	45,000	—	7,000
XXII.—INTEREST	628,367	634,000	709,000	75,000	—	651,000	—	58,000
XXIII.—SUPERANNUATIONS	675,258	526,000	529,000	3,000	—	336,000	—	143,000
XXIV.—MISCELLANEOUS	348,554	310,000	324,000	14,000	—	268,000	—	56,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS	6,178,134	6,454,000	6,701,000	247,000	—	7,545,000	844,000	—
XXVI.—IRRIGATN. & NAVIGATN.	790,775	788,000	871,000	83,000	—	861,000	—	10,000
XXVII.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS	571,076	477,000	480,000	3,000	—	471,000	—	9,000
XXVIII.—PROVL. & LOCAL DEFICITS	973	208,000	59,000	—	149,000	247,000	188,000	—
XXIX.—ARMY	974,773	880,000	924,000	44,000	—	833,000	—	91,000
XXX.—GAIN BY EXCHANGE	133,313	78,000	324,000	246,000	—	237,000	—	87,000
GRAND TOTAL	65,207,694	64,562,000	67,583,000	3,021,000	—	66,746,000	—	837,000
DEFICIT	—	1,395,000	—	—	—	—	—	—

FORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE,
The 24th February, 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller-General.

MENTS.

OF INDIA IN INDIA AND IN ENGLAND.
1880-81.

EXPENDITURE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT	5,982,893	6,353,000	6,039,000	—	314,000	5,739,000	—	300,000
2.—INTEREST, OTHER ACCOUNTS	378,703	386,000	382,000	—	4,000	400,000	18,000	—
3.—REFUNDS AND DRAWBACKS	406,562	356,000	350,000	—	6,000	318,000	—	32,000
4.—LAND REVENUE	2,960,010	3,028,000	2,945,000	—	83,000	2,995,000	50,000	—
5.—FOREST	454,934	510,000	521,000	11,000	—	532,000	11,000	—
6.—EXCISE	87,839	118,000	110,000	—	8,000	111,000	1,000	—
7.—ASSESSED TAXES	37,617	29,000	35,000	6,000	—	20,000	—	15,000
8.—PROVINCIAL RATES	64,431	53,000	50,000	—	3,000	53,000	3,000	—
9.—CUSTOMS	200,417	203,000	201,000	—	2,000	204,000	3,000	—
10.—SALT	404,743	383,000	356,000	—	27,000	368,000	12,000	—
11.—OPIUM	1,698,730	2,500,000	2,059,000	—	441,000	2,160,000	101,000	—
12.—STAMPS	115,452	111,000	113,000	2,000	—	105,000	—	8,000
13.—REGISTRATION	160,801	155,000	162,000	7,000	—	166,000	4,000	—
14.—MINT	103,991	113,000	104,000	—	9,000	111,000	7,000	—
15.—POST OFFICE	1,033,327	1,083,000	1,131,000	48,000	—	1,142,000	11,000	—
16.—TELEGRAPH	470,790	531,000	492,000	—	39,000	467,000	—	25,000
17.—ADMINISTRATION	1,487,665	1,498,000	1,485,000	—	13,000	1,466,000	—	19,000
18.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS	355,325	375,000	367,000	—	8,000	437,000	70,000	—
19.—LAW AND JUSTICE	3,297,063	3,236,000	3,292,000	56,000	—	3,353,000	61,000	—
20.—POLICE	2,419,119	2,472,000	2,485,000	13,000	—	2,513,000	28,000	—
21.—MARINE	548,703	546,000	558,000	12,000	—	568,000	10,000	—
22.—EDUCATION	978,254	1,025,000	972,000	—	53,000	1,016,000	44,000	—
23.—ECCLESIASTICAL	155,200	161,000	156,000	—	5,000	159,000	3,000	—
24.—MEDICAL	669,059	679,000	673,000	—	6,000	709,000	36,000	—
25.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING	471,470	536,000	443,000	—	93,000	482,000	39,000	—
26.—POLITICAL	448,793	426,000	471,000	45,000	—	436,000	—	35,000
27.—ALLOWANCES & ASSIGNMENTS	1,826,484	1,909,000	1,900,000	—	9,000	1,846,000	—	54,000
28.—CIVIL FURLOUGH ALLOWANCES	231,561	232,000	220,000	—	12,000	233,000	13,000	—
29.—SUPERANNUATIONS	1,995,520	1,923,000	2,094,000	171,000	—	1,982,000	—	112,000
30.—MISCELLANEOUS	293,368	277,000	314,000	37,000	—	264,000	—	50,000
31.—FAMINE RELIEF	313,420	10,000	99,000	89,000	—	5,000	—	94,000
32.—RAILWAYS	6,561,827	6,536,000	6,987,000	451,000	—	6,751,000	—	236,000
33.—IRRIGATION & NAVIGATION	1,063,037	1,085,000	1,173,000	88,000	—	1,077,000	—	96,000
34.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS	4,318,247	4,895,000	4,146,000	—	749,000	4,306,000	160,000	—
35.—PROVL. & LOCAL SURPLUSES	716,378	17,000	324,000	307,000	—	131,000	—	193,000
36.—ARMY	17,092,426	18,255,000	21,067,000	2,812,000	—	20,293,000	—	774,000
37.—LOSS BY EXCHANGE	3,359,144	3,952,000	3,188,000	—	764,000	3,411,000	223,000	—
TOTAL ORDINARY	63,163,303	65,957,000	67,464,000	1,507,000	—	66,329,000	—	1,135,000
SURPLUS	2,044,391	—	119,000	1,514,000	—	417,000	298,000	—
38.—PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS	4,381,898	3,500,000	3,700,000	200,000	—	3,312,000	—	388,000

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.
Q 1468.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE GOVERNMENT
(Distinguishing Revenue and Charges
Estimates,

REVENUE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
I.—LAND REVENUE	22,323,869	21,778,000	21,679,000	—	99,000	21,359,000	—	320,000
II.—TRIBUTES	703,660	703,000	714,000	11,000	—	698,000	—	16,000
III.—FOREST	605,433	672,000	662,000	—	10,000	690,000	28,000	—
IV.—EXCISE	2,619,349	2,742,000	2,765,000	23,000	—	2,782,000	17,000	—
V.—ASSESSED TAXES	900,920	896,000	797,000	—	99,000	535,000	—	262,000
VI.—PROVINCIAL RATES	2,638,835	2,740,000	2,706,000	—	34,000	2,764,000	58,000	—
VII.—CUSTOMS	2,326,561	2,248,000	2,231,000	—	17,000	2,175,000	—	56,000
VIII.—SALT	6,941,120	7,000,000	7,335,000	335,000	—	7,541,000	206,000	—
IX.—OPIUM	9,399,401	9,000,000	10,459,000	1,459,000	—	9,410,000	—	1,049,000
X.—STAMPS	3,110,540	3,087,000	3,203,000	116,000	—	3,194,000	—	9,000
XI.—REGISTRATION	263,362	267,000	262,000	—	5,000	265,000	3,000	—
XII.—MINT	172,335	180,000	254,000	74,000	—	196,000	—	58,000
XIII.—POST OFFICE	911,806	983,000	968,000	—	15,000	1,008,000	40,000	—
XIV.—TELEGRAPH	426,694	380,000	486,000	106,000	—	486,000	—	—
XV.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS	84,968	58,000	98,000	40,000	—	81,000	—	17,000
XVI.—LAW AND JUSTICE	647,130	649,000	663,000	14,000	—	680,000	17,000	—
XVII.—POLICE	211,108	233,000	221,000	—	12,000	232,000	11,000	—
XVIII.—MARINE	250,595	206,000	206,000	—	—	226,000	20,000	—
XIX.—EDUCATION	147,425	139,000	137,000	—	2,000	137,000	—	—
XX.—MEDICAL	44,332	39,000	54,000	15,000	—	40,000	—	14,000
XXI.—STATIONERY & PRINTING	47,096	46,000	52,000	6,000	—	45,000	—	7,000
XXII.—INTEREST	628,367	634,000	709,000	75,000	—	651,000	—	58,000
XXIII.—SUPERANNUATIONS	675,253	526,000	529,000	3,000	—	386,000	—	143,000
XXIV.—MISCELLANEOUS	351,552	310,000	324,000	14,000	—	268,000	—	56,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS	10,822	10,000	—	—	10,000	—	—	—
XXVI.—IRRIGATION & NAVIGN.	168,619	184,000	192,000	8,000	—	181,000	—	11,000
XXVII.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS	571,076	477,000	480,000	3,000	—	471,000	—	9,000
XXVIII.—PROVL. & LOCAL DEFICITS	973	208,000	59,000	—	149,000	247,000	188,000	—
XXIX.—ARMY	974,773	880,000	924,000	44,000	—	833,000	—	91,000
XXX.—GAIN BY EXCHANGE	133,313	78,000	324,000	246,000	—	237,000	—	87,000
TOTAL	58,291,292	57,353,000	59,493,000	2,140,000	—	57,818,000	—	1,675,000
Revenue from Productive Public Works.	£
I.—LAND REVENUE	126,934	161,000	710,000	549,000	—	703,000	—	7,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS	6,167,312	6,444,000	6,701,000	257,000	—	7,545,000	844,000	—
XVI.—IRRIGN. & NAVIGATION	622,156	604,000	679,000	75,000	—	680,000	1,000	—
TOTAL	6,916,402	7,209,000	8,090,000	881,000	—	8,928,000	838,000	—
GRAND TOTAL REVENUE	65,207,694	64,562,000	67,583,000	3,021,000	—	66,746,000	—	837,000
DEFICIT	—	1,395,000	—	—	—	—	—	—

FORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE,
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

OF INDIA IN INDIA AND IN ENGLAND.
of Productive Public Works.
 1880-81.

EXPENDITURE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT -	4,575,069	4,758,000	4,452,000	—	306,000	4,014,000	—	438,000
2.—INTEREST, OTHER ACCOUNTS -	378,703	386,000	382,000	—	4,000	400,000	18,000	—
3.—REFUNDS AND DRAWBACKS -	406,562	356,000	350,000	—	6,000	318,000	—	32,000
4.—LAND REVENUE -	2,964,288	3,028,000	2,945,000	—	83,000	2,995,000	50,000	—
5.—FOREST -	454,934	510,000	521,000	11,000	—	532,000	11,000	—
6.—EXCISE -	87,839	118,000	110,000	—	8,000	111,000	1,000	—
7.—ASSESSED TAXES -	37,617	29,000	35,000	6,000	—	20,000	—	15,000
8.—PROVINCIAL RATES -	64,481	53,000	50,000	—	3,000	53,000	3,000	—
9.—CUSTOMS -	200,417	203,000	201,000	—	2,000	204,000	3,000	—
10.—SALT -	404,743	383,000	356,000	—	27,000	368,000	12,000	—
11.—OPIUM -	1,698,730	2,500,000	2,059,000	—	441,000	2,160,000	101,000	—
12.—STAMPS -	115,452	111,000	113,000	2,000	—	105,000	—	8,000
13.—REGISTRATION -	156,523	155,000	162,000	7,000	—	166,000	4,000	—
14.—MINT -	103,991	113,000	104,000	—	9,000	111,000	7,000	—
15.—POST OFFICE -	1,033,327	1,083,000	1,131,000	48,000	—	1,142,000	11,000	—
16.—TELEGRAPH -	470,790	531,000	492,000	—	39,000	467,000	—	25,000
17.—ADMINISTRATION -	1,487,665	1,498,000	1,485,000	—	13,000	1,466,000	—	19,000
18.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS -	355,325	375,000	367,000	—	8,000	437,000	70,000	—
19.—LAW AND JUSTICE -	3,297,063	3,236,000	3,292,000	56,000	—	3,353,000	61,000	—
20.—POLICE -	2,419,119	2,472,000	2,485,000	13,000	—	2,513,000	28,000	—
21.—MARINE -	548,703	546,000	558,000	12,000	—	568,000	10,000	—
22.—EDUCATION -	978,254	1,025,000	972,000	—	53,000	1,016,000	44,000	—
23.—ECCLESIASTICAL -	155,200	161,000	156,000	—	5,000	159,000	3,000	—
24.—MEDICAL -	669,059	679,000	673,000	—	6,000	709,000	36,000	—
25.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING -	471,470	536,000	443,000	—	93,000	482,000	39,000	—
26.—POLITICAL -	448,793	426,000	471,000	45,000	—	436,000	—	35,000
27.—ALLOWANCES & ASSIGNMENTS	1,826,484	1,909,000	1,900,000	—	9,000	1,846,000	—	54,000
28.—CIVIL FURLOUGH ALLOWANCES	231,561	232,000	220,000	—	12,000	233,000	13,000	—
29.—SUPERANNUATIONS -	1,995,520	1,923,000	2,094,000	171,000	—	1,982,000	—	112,000
30.—MISCELLANEOUS -	293,368	277,000	314,000	37,000	—	264,000	—	50,00
31.—FAMINE RELIEF -	313,420	10,000	99,000	89,000	—	5,000	—	94,000
32.—RAILWAYS -	226,846	94,000	360,000	266,000	—	304,000	—	56,000
33.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION	630,919	644,000	711,000	67,000	—	634,000	—	77,000
34.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS -	4,318,247	4,895,000	4,146,000	—	749,000	4,306,000	160,000	—
35.—PROVL. & LOCAL SURPLUSES	716,378	17,000	324,000	307,000	—	131,000	—	193,000
36.—ARMY -	17,092,426	18,255,000	21,067,000	2,812,000	—	20,293,000	—	774,000
37.—LOSS BY EXCHANGE -	3,359,144	3,952,000	3,188,000	—	764,000	3,411,000	223,000	—
EXPENDITURE ORDINARY -	54,988,380	57,479,000	58,788,000	1,309,000	—	57,714,000	—	1,074,000
Expenditure on Productive Public Works (Working Expenses and Interest).
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT -	1,407,824	1,595,000	1,587,000	—	8,000	1,725,000	138,000	—
32. RAILWAYS -	6,334,981	6,442,000	6,627,000	185,000	—	6,447,000	—	180,000
33.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION	432,118	441,000	462,000	21,000	—	443,000	—	19,000
TOTAL -	8,174,923	8,478,000	8,676,000	198,000	—	8,615,000	—	61,000
GRAND TOTAL -	63,163,303	65,957,000	67,464,000	1,507,000	—	66,329,000	—	1,135,000
SURPLUS -	2,044,391	—	119,000	1,514,000	—	417,000	298,000	—
38.—PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS	4,381,898	3,500,000	3,700,000	200,000	—	3,312,000	—	388,000

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt of India.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN INDIA AND

REVENUE.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.				BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.
OPENING BALANCE	£ —	£ 1,323,500	£ 1,092,700	£ 2,416,200	£ —	£ 1,331,800	£ 1,336,700	£ 2,668,500
I.—LAND REVENUE	21,236,200	1,027,300	125,500	22,389,000	20,911,300	1,025,800	124,900	22,062,000
II.—TRIBUTES	714,000	—	—	714,000	698,000	—	—	698,000
III.—FOREST	619,700	18,300	24,000	662,000	650,300	16,800	22,900	690,000
IV.—EXCISE	644,400	2,119,400	1,200	2,765,000	661,500	2,119,400	1,100	2,782,000
V.—ASSESSED TAXES	600,300	196,700	—	797,000	351,700	183,300	—	535,000
VI.—PROVINCIAL RATES	148,200	376,200	2,181,600	2,706,000	169,600	404,600	2,189,800	2,764,000
VII.—CUSTOMS	2,016,500	214,500	—	2,231,000	1,962,000	213,000	—	2,175,000
VIII.—SALT	7,318,800	16,200	—	7,335,000	7,522,500	18,500	—	7,541,000
IX.—OPIMUM	10,459,000	—	—	10,459,000	9,410,000	—	—	9,410,000
X.—STAMPS	566,800	2,636,200	—	3,203,000	566,800	2,627,200	—	3,194,000
XI.—REGISTRATION	600	261,400	—	262,000	900	264,100	—	265,000
XII.—MINT	254,000	—	—	254,000	196,000	—	—	196,000
XIII.—POST OFFICE	965,300	2,300	400	968,000	1,005,500	2,100	400	1,008,000
XIV.—TELEGRAPH	486,000	—	—	486,000	486,000	—	—	486,000
XV.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS	51,300	31,000	15,700	98,000	30,300	35,700	15,000	81,000
XVI.—LAW AND JUSTICE	77,300	577,400	8,300	663,000	77,100	594,800	8,100	680,000
XVII.—POLICE	100	181,600	39,300	221,000	100	192,900	39,000	232,000
XVIII.—MARINE	78,300	127,700	—	206,000	90,800	135,200	—	226,000
XIX.—EDUCATION	1,000	110,800	25,200	137,000	1,500	110,300	25,200	137,000
XX.—MEDICAL	2,200	49,500	2,300	54,000	1,900	35,200	2,900	40,000
XXI.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING	13,000	39,000	—	52,000	11,200	33,800	—	45,000
XXII.—INTEREST	687,900	13,400	7,700	709,000	628,900	15,500	6,600	651,000
XXIII.—PENSIONS	511,400	12,600	5,000	529,000	368,400	12,600	5,000	386,000
XXIV.—MISCELLANEOUS	67,900	144,100	112,000	324,000	49,900	131,000	87,100	268,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS	6,348,500	352,500	—	6,701,000	7,115,000	430,000	—	7,545,000
XXVI.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION	322,500	547,600	900	871,000	306,400	553,700	900	861,000
XXVII.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS	70,400	311,400	98,200	480,000	69,300	300,500	101,200	471,000
XXVIII.—PROVL. AND LOCAL DEFICITS	59,000	—	—	59,000	247,000	—	—	247,000
XXIX.—ARMY	924,000	—	—	924,000	833,000	—	—	833,000
XXX.—GAIN BY EXCHANGE	320,100	3,900	—	324,000	234,400	2,600	—	237,000
	55,564,700	9,371,000	2,647,300	67,583,000	54,657,300	9,458,600	2,630,100	66,746,000
otments	—	4,497,100	—	—	—	4,426,700	—	—
tributions	400	52,700	95,000	—	400	37, 70	115,700	—
bt	—	—	6,400	—	—	—	100	—
Total	—	13,920,800	2,748,700	—	—	13,923,000	2,745,900	—
GRAND TOTAL	—	15,244,300	3,841,400	—	—	15,254,800	4,082,600	—
OVINCIAL AND LOCAL DEFICIT	—	—	—	—	—	160,300	—	—

FORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE.
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

IN ENGLAND IN THE THREE DIVISIONS, IMPERIAL, PROVINCIAL, AND LOCAL.

EXPENDITURE.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.				BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.
	Imperial.	Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.	Imperial.	Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT - - -	5,352,200	686,800	—	6,039,000	5,010,100	728,900	—	5,739,000
2.—INTEREST, OTHER ACCOUNTS - - -	378,700	500	2,800	382,000	396,600	600	2,800	400,000
3.—REFUNDS AND DRAWBACKS - - -	193,200	150,900	5,900	350,000	190,700	121,200	6,100	318,000
4.—LAND REVENUE - - -	872,000	1,586,900	486,100	2,945,000	862,600	1,628,400	504,000	2,995,000
5.—FOREST - - -	488,200	15,300	17,500	521,000	498,300	13,200	20,500	532,000
6.—EXCISE - - -	21,900	87,400	700	110,000	22,700	87,400	900	111,000
7.—ASSESSED TAXES - - -	8,100	26,900	—	35,000	5,000	15,000	—	20,000
8.—PROVINCIAL RATES - - -	—	4,400	45,600	50,000	—	5,100	47,900	53,000
9.—CUSTOMS - - -	23,000	178,000	—	201,000	22,600	181,400	—	204,000
10.—SALT - - -	300,700	55,300	—	356,000	302,700	65,300	—	368,000
11.—OPIUM - - -	2,059,000	—	—	2,059,000	2,160,000	—	—	2,160,000
12.—STAMPS - - -	51,600	61,400	—	113,000	42,800	62,200	—	105,000
13.—REGISTRATION - - -	600	161,400	—	162,000	800	165,200	—	166,000
14.—MINT - - -	104,000	—	—	104,000	111,000	—	—	111,000
15.—POST OFFICE - - -	1,044,000	31,600	55,400	1,131,000	1,050,800	31,600	59,600	1,142,000
16.—TELEGRAPH - - -	492,000	—	—	492,000	467,000	—	—	467,000
17.—ADMINISTRATION - - -	911,700	563,100	10,200	1,485,000	881,200	572,800	12,000	1,466,000
18.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS - - -	250,400	83,000	33,600	367,000	312,700	90,200	34,100	437,000
19.—LAW AND JUSTICE - - -	583,400	2,768,500	100	3,292,000	583,700	2,769,200	100	3,353,000
20.—POLICE - - -	61,400	2,174,700	248,900	2,485,000	72,800	2,166,600	273,600	2,513,000
21.—MARINE - - -	423,700	134,300	—	558,000	409,200	158,800	—	568,000
22.—EDUCATION - - -	11,400	701,300	259,300	972,000	11,300	720,100	284,600	1,016,000
23.—ECCLESIASTICAL - - -	115,700	40,300	—	156,000	119,400	39,600	—	159,000
24.—MEDICAL - - -	166,500	421,500	85,000	673,000	171,800	435,300	101,900	709,000
25.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING - - -	86,700	355,100	1,200	443,000	122,600	358,100	1,300	482,000
26.—POLITICAL - - -	470,500	400	100	471,000	435,500	400	100	436,000
27.—ALLOWANCES - - -	1,237,100	662,900	—	1,900,000	1,193,400	652,600	—	1,846,000
28.—C. F. & A. ALLOWANCES - - -	219,500	500	—	220,000	232,500	500	—	233,000
29.—SUPERANNUATION - - -	1,944,500	148,800	700	2,094,000	1,835,700	146,000	300	1,982,000
30.—MISCELLANEOUS - - -	104,600	134,400	75,000	314,000	71,000	112,800	80,200	264,000
31.—FAMINE RELIEF - - -	98,900	100	—	99,000	5,000	—	—	5,000
32.—RAILWAYS - - -	6,694,500	292,500	—	6,987,000	6,465,100	285,900	—	6,751,000
33.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION - - -	761,100	407,500	4,400	1,173,000	645,800	421,200	10,000	1,077,000
34.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS - - -	1,478,900	1,573,200	1,093,900	4,146,000	1,475,800	1,613,000	1,217,200	4,306,000
35.—P. & L. SURPLUSES - - -	324,000	—	—	324,000	131,000	—	—	131,000
36.—ARMY - - -	21,067,000	—	—	21,067,000	20,293,000	—	—	20,293,000
37.—LOSS BY EXCHANGE - - -	3,188,000	—	—	3,188,000	3,411,000	—	—	3,411,000
	51,588,700	13,448,900	2,426,400	67,464,000	50,023,200	13,648,600	2,657,200	66,329,000
Special Contributions to Imperial Treasury -	—	335,000	—	—	—	335,000	—	—
Contributions - - -	—	123,600	59,400	—	—	99,700	44,100	—
Debt - - -	—	—	18,900	—	—	—	31,100	—
TOTAL - - -	—	13,912,500	2,504,700	—	—	14,083,300	2,732,400	—
CLOSING BALANCE - - -	—	1,331,800	1,336,700	2,668,500	—	1,171,500	1,350,200	2,521,700
GRAND TOTAL - - -	—	15,244,300	3,841,400	—	—	15,254,800	4,082,600	—
PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL SURPLUS - - -	—	8,300	256,500	—	—	—	44,500	—

W. WATERFIELD.
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN INDIA AND IN ENGLAND.

DISBURSEMENTS.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
1.—IMPERIAL EXPENDITURE -	67,545,201	69,457,000	71,164,000	1,707,000	—	69,641,000	—	1,523,000
2.—PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL DEFICITS -	973	208,000	59,000	—	149,000	247,000	188,000	—
3.—SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL -	520,026	453,000	421,000	—	32,000	451,000	30,000	—
4.—SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY -	349,940	214,000	220,000	6,000	—	32,000	—	188,000
5.—LOANS ADVANCED TO NATIVE STATES, CORPORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS -	1,277,066	416,000	1,251,000	835,000	—	232,000	—	1,019,000
6.—SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS WITHDRAWN -	690,880	700,000	648,000	—	52,000	669,000	21,000	—
7.—OTHER DEPOSITS REPAID AND ADVANCES MADE -	18,484,743	12,247,000	12,437,000	190,000	—	12,170,000	—	267,000
8.—LOCAL REMITTANCES -	42,079	837,000	—	—	837,000	—	—	—
9.—INTER-PROVINCIAL AND IN- TER-DEPARTMENTAL TRANS- ACTIONS -	19,566,018	24,525,000	25,539,078	1,014,078	—	26,667,000	1,127,922	—
10.—REMITTANCE ACCOUNT WITH THE HOME TREASURY -	1,688,813	1,290,000	1,949,000	659,000	—	1,252,000	—	697,000
11.—SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS ON INDIA PAID -	15,464,758	15,000,000	15,750,000	750,000	—	16,900,000	1,150,000	—
12.—POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	260,456	368,000	134,000	—	234,000	151,000	17,000	—
13.—PUBLIC DEBT DISCHARGED -	3,871,490	3,683,000	8,007,000	4,324,000	—	2,127,000	—	5,880,000
14.—TREASURY NOTES -	139,886	126,500	39,000	—	87,500	33,000	—	6,000
15.—GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPI- TAL WITHDRAWN -	3,339,208	3,073,000	2,660,000	—	413,000	2,391,000	—	269,000
16.—BALANCE -	13,910,078	13,500,000	16,000,000	2,500,000	—	13,250,000	—	2,750,000
TOTAL -	147,151,615	146,097,500	156,278,078	10,180,578	—	146,213,000	—	10,065,078

best that can now be made ; but they are subject to modification as the year goes on ; the Government must not be understood to or that the exact amount stated will be borrowed during the year.

Ways and Means are provided.

MATES, 1879-80.				BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.
	£				£		£
DEFICIT OF IMPERIAL REVENUE -	3,581,000			SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL -	152,000	DEFICIT OF IMPERIAL REVENUE -	2,895,000
SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY -	220,000			SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSIT -	124,000	DEFICIT OF PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL REVENUE -	116,000
LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, COR- PORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS	173,000			DEPOSITS -	436,000	SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY -	32,000
POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	60,000			PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED -	706,000	LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, COR- PORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS	19,000
REMITTANCES -	161,078			TREASURY NOTES -	275,000	REMITTANCES -	631,000
BALANCE INCREASED -	2,089,922			BALANCE REDUCED -	2,750,000	POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	68,000
TOTAL -	6,285,000			TOTAL -	4,443,000	GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPI- TAL WITHDRAWN -	682,000
						TOTAL -	4,443,000

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secty. to the Govt. of India.

V.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE
Estimates,

REVENUE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
I.—LAND REVENUE -	22,323,869	21,773,000	21,679,000	—	99,000	21,359,000	—	320,000
II.—TRIBUTES -	703,660	703,000	714,000	11,000	—	698,000	—	16,000
III.—FOREST -	603,939	670,400	660,600	—	9,800	688,400	27,800	—
IV.—EXCISE -	2,619,349	2,742,000	2,765,000	23,000	—	2,782,000	17,000	—
V.—ASSESSED TAXES -	900,920	896,000	797,000	—	99,000	535,000	—	262,000
V.—PROVINCIAL RATES -	2,638,835	2,740,000	2,706,000	—	34,000	2,764,000	58,000	—
VII.—CUSTOMS -	2,326,561	2,248,000	2,231,000	—	17,000	2,175,000	—	56,000
VIII.—SALT -	6,941,120	7,000,000	7,335,000	335,000	—	7,541,000	206,000	—
IX.—OPIUM -	9,899,401	9,000,000	10,459,000	1,459,000	—	9,410,000	—	1,049,000
X.—STAMPS -	3,110,540	3,087,000	3,203,000	116,000	—	3,194,000	—	9,000
XI.—REGISTRATION -	263,362	267,000	262,000	—	5,000	265,000	3,000	—
XII.—MINT -	172,283	180,000	254,000	74,000	—	196,000	—	58,000
XIII.—POST OFFICE -	911,806	933,000	968,000	—	15,000	1,008,000	40,000	—
XIV.—TELEGRAPH -	403,627	357,000	460,300	103,300	—	463,100	2,800	—
XV.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS -	60,142	32,400	59,500	27,100	—	61,700	2,200	—
XVI.—LAW AND JUSTICE -	647,130	649,000	663,000	14,000	—	680,000	17,000	—
XVII.—POLICE -	211,108	233,000	221,000	—	12,000	232,000	11,000	—
XVIII.—MARINE -	250,595	206,000	203,000	—	3,000	226,000	23,000	—
XIX.—EDUCATION -	147,425	139,000	137,000	—	2,000	137,000	—	—
XX.—MEDICAL -	42,419	37,500	52,000	14,500	—	38,200	—	13,800
XXI.—STATIONERY & PRINTING	47,096	46,000	52,000	6,000	—	45,000	—	7,000
XXII.—INTEREST -	612,934	624,000	701,500	77,500	—	641,000	—	60,500
XXIII.—SUPERANNUATION CON- TRIBUTIONS -	571,871	430,500	430,500	—	—	291,700	—	138,800
XXIV.—MISCELLANEOUS -	327,691	306,100	315,000	8,900	—	262,000	—	53,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS -	10,822	10,000	—	—	10,000	—	—	—
XXVI.—IRRIGATION AND NAVI- GATION -	168,619	184,000	192,000	8,000	—	181,000	—	11,000
XXVII.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS	554,295	461,000	464,600	3,600	—	456,700	—	7,900
XXVIII.—PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL DEFICIT -	973	208,000	59,000	—	149,000	247,000	188,000	—
XXIX.—ARMY -	926,962	844,500	858,300	13,800	—	800,200	—	58,100
XXX.—GAIN BY EXCHANGE -	133,313	73,000	324,000	246,000	—	237,000	—	87,000
TOTAL -	58,042,667	57,140,400	59,226,300	2,085,900	—	57,615,000	—	1,611,300
Revenue from Productive Public Works,
I.—LAND REVENUE -	126,934	161,000	710,000	549,000	—	703,000	—	7,000
XXV.—RAILWAYS -	6,167,312	6,444,000	6,701,000	257,000	—	7,545,000	844,000	—
XXVI.—IRRIGN. & NAVIGATION	621,604	603,500	678,000	74,500	—	679,200	1,200	—
TOTAL -	6,915,850	7,208,500	8,089,000	880,500	—	8,927,200	838,200	—
GRAND TOTAL -	64,958,517	64,348,900	67,315,300	2,966,400	—	66,542,200	—	773,100

PORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE,
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN INDIA.
1880-81.

EXPENDITURE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DE- CREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
CIVIL.
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT -	£ 1,981,957	£ 2,089,500	£ 1,862,600	—	£ 226,900	£ 1,644,100	£ —	£ 218,50
2.—INTEREST, OTHER ACCOUNTS -	377,827	385,000	380,600	—	4,400	398,400	17,800	—
3.—REFUNDS AND DRAWBACKS -	406,562	356,000	350,000	—	6,000	318,000	—	32,000
4.—LAND REVENUE -	2,962,494	3,025,300	2,944,100	—	81,200	2,994,400	50,300	—
5.—FORESTS -	451,106	505,900	516,200	10,300	—	527,600	11,400	—
6.—EXCISE -	87,839	118,000	110,000	—	8,000	111,000	1,000	—
7.—ASSESSED TAXES -	37,617	29,000	35,000	6,000	—	20,000	—	15,000
8.—PROVINCIAL RATES	64,431	53,000	50,000	—	3,000	53,000	3,000	—
9.—CUSTOMS -	200,417	203,000	201,000	—	2,000	204,000	3,000	—
10.—SALT -	404,743	383,000	356,000	—	27,000	368,000	12,000	—
11.—OPIUM -	1,697,792	2,499,100	2,058,700	—	440,400	2,159,500	100,800	—
12.—STAMPS -	73,807	74,900	76,900	2,000	—	77,500	600	—
13.—REGISTRATION	156,523	155,000	162,000	7,000	—	166,000	4,000	—
14.—MINT -	94,607	87,300	83,300	—	4,000	91,500	8,200	—
15.—POST OFFICE -	941,971	983,300	1,005,600	22,300	—	1,043,800	38,200	—
16.—TELEGRAPH -	388,313	392,200	385,200	—	7,000	380,900	—	4,300
17.—ADMINISTRATION	1,269,500	1,279,600	1,271,900	—	7,700	1,245,500	—	26,400
18.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS -	328,265	346,600	336,100	—	10,500	415,100	79,000	—
19.—LAW AND JUSTICE -	3,295,968	3,234,500	3,290,100	55,600	—	3,350,900	60,800	—
20.—POLICE -	2,419,119	2,472,000	2,485,000	13,000	—	2,513,000	28,000	—
21.—MARINE -	404,700	396,900	385,800	—	11,100	419,000	33,200	—
22.—EDUCATION -	977,100	1,024,500	971,600	—	52,900	1,015,800	44,200	—
23.—ECCLESIASTICAL -	153,562	159,900	154,700	—	5,200	158,600	3,900	—
24.—MEDICAL -	661,851	679,000	665,000	—	14,000	701,400	36,400	—
25.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING -	283,446	345,900	328,700	—	17,200	415,700	87,000	—
26.—POLITICAL -	435,858	375,700	428,200	52,500	—	393,600	—	35,200
27.—ALLOWANCES AND ASSIGNS -	1,792,419	1,887,900	1,878,900	—	9,000	1,824,900	—	54,000
28.—CIVIL FURLO. ALLOWANCES -	4,482	2,000	4,000	2,000	—	3,000	—	1,000
29.—SUPERANNUATIONS -	683,269	634,000	764,200	130,200	—	646,300	—	117,900
30.—MISCELLANEOUS -	266,220	245,000	294,000	49,000	—	243,300	—	50,700
31.—FAMINE RELIEF -	312,823	10,000	99,000	89,000	—	5,000	—	94,000
32.—RAILWAYS -	226,846	94,000	360,000	266,000	—	304,000	—	56,000
33.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION	629,308	643,800	710,800	67,000	—	633,800	—	77,000
34.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS -	4,220,707	4,752,200	4,006,400	—	745,800	4,216,500	210,100	—
35.—PROVINCIAL & LOCAL SURPLUS	716,378	17,000	324,000	307,000	—	131,000	—	193,000
36.—ARMY -	13,109,553	14,135,300	16,448,600	2,313,300	—	15,171,900	—	1,276,700
37.—LOSS BY EXCHANGE -	3,359,144	3,952,000	3,188,000	—	764,000	3,411,000	223,000	—
TOTAL -	45,878,524	48,027,300	48,972,200	944,900	—	47,776,400	—	1,195,800
Expenditure on Productive Public Works (Working Expenses and Interest).
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT -	1,407,824	1,595,000	1,587,000	—	8,000	1,725,000	138,000	—
32.—RAILWAYS -	1,645,705	1,697,500	1,890,200	192,700	—	1,855,000	—	35,200
33.—IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION	382,007	391,000	412,000	21,000	—	393,000	—	19,000
TOTAL -	3,435,536	3,683,500	3,889,200	205,700	—	3,973,000	83,800	—
GRAND TOTAL -	49,314,060	51,710,800	52,861,400	1,150,600	—	51,749,400	—	1,112,000
38.—PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS	3,689,029	2,720,700	3,066,700	346,000	—	1,906,000	—	1,160,700

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.
Q 1468.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

VI.

REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE HOME

Estimates,

REVENUE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
III.—FOREST - -	1,494	1,600	1,400	—	200	1,600	200	—
XII.—MINT - -	52	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
XIV.—TELEGRAPH -	23,067	23,000	25,700	2,700	—	22,900	—	2,800
XV.—MINOR DEPART- MENTS	24,826	25,600	38,500	12,900	—	19,300	—	19,200
XVII.—MARINE - -	—	—	3,000	3,000	—	—	—	3,000
XX.—MEDICAL - -	1,913	1,500	2,000	500	—	1,800	—	200
XXII.—INTEREST -	15,433	10,000	7,500	—	2,500	10,000	2,500	—
XXIII.—SUPERANNUATION CONTRIBUTIONS -	103,387	95,500	98,500	3,000	—	94,300	—	4,200
XXIV.—MISCELLANEOUS +	13,861	3,900	9,000	5,100	—	6,000	—	3,000
XXVII.—OTHER PUBLIC WORKS - -	16,781	16,000	15,400	—	600	14,300	—	1,100
XXIX.—ARMY - -	47,811	35,500	65,700	30,200	—	32,800	—	32,900
TOTAL -	248,625	212,600	266,700	54,100	—	203,000	—	63,700
Revenue from Productive Public Works.
XXVI.—IRRIGATION -	552	500	1,000	500	—	800	—	200
TOTAL -	249,177	213,100	267,700	54,600	—	203,800	—	63,900

FORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE, }
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

TREASURY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

1880-81.

EXPENDITURE.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DE- CREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
1.—INTEREST ON DEBT - -	£ 2,593,112	£ 2,668,500	£ 2,589,400	—	£ 79,100	£ 2,369,900	—	£ 219,500
2.—INTEREST, OTHER ACCOUNTS -	876	1,000	1,400	400	—	1,600	200	—
4.—LAND REVENUE - -	1,794	2,700	900	—	1,800	600	—	300
5.—FOREST - - -	3,828	4,100	4,800	700	—	4,400	—	400
11.—OPIUM - - -	938	900	300	—	600	500	200	—
12.—STAMPS - - -	41,646	36,100	36,100	—	—	27,500	—	8,600
14.—MINT - - -	9,384	25,700	20,700	—	5,000	19,500	—	1,200
15.—POST OFFICE - - -	91,356	99,700	125,400	25,700	—	98,200	—	27,200
16.—TELEGRAPH - - -	82,477	138,800	106,800	—	32,000	86,100	—	20,700
17.—ADMINISTRATION - -	218,164	218,400	213,100	—	5,300	220,500	7,400	—
18.—MINOR DEPARTMENTS -	27,061	28,400	30,900	2,500	—	21,900	—	9,000
19.—LAW AND JUSTICE - -	1,095	1,500	1,900	400	—	2,100	200	—
21.—MARINE - - -	144,003	149,100	172,200	23,100	—	149,000	—	23,200
22.—EDUCATION - - -	1,184	500	400	—	100	200	—	200
23.—ECCLESIASTICAL - - -	1,638	1,100	1,300	200	—	400	—	900
24.—MEDICAL - - -	7,208	—	8,000	8,000	—	7,600	—	400
25.—STATIONERY AND PRINTING -	188,024	190,100	114,300	—	75,800	66,300	—	48,000
26.—POLITICAL - - -	12,935	50,300	42,800	—	7,500	43,000	200	—
27.—ALLOWANCES AND ASSIGN- MENTS - - -	34,065	21,100	21,100	—	—	21,100	—	—
28.—CIVIL FURLOUGH ALLOWANCES	227,079	230,000	216,000	—	14,000	230,000	14,000	—
29.—SUPERANNUATIONS - -	1,312,251	1,289,000	1,329,800	40,800	—	1,335,700	5,900	—
30.—MISCELLANEOUS - - -	27,148	32,000	20,000	—	12,000	20,700	700	—
31.—FAMINE RELIEF - - -	597	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
33.—IRRIGATION - - -	1,611	200	200	—	—	200	—	—
34.—OTHER WORKS - - -	97,540	142,800	139,600	—	3,200	89,500	—	50,100
36.—ARMY - - -	3,982,372	4,119,700	4,618,400	498,700	—	5,121,100	502,700	—
TOTAL - - -	9,109,856	9,451,700	9,815,800	364,100	—	9,937,600	121,800	—
Expenditure on Productive Public Works.
32.—RAILWAYS - - -	4,689,276	4,744,500	4,736,800	—	7,700	4,592,000	—	144,800
33.—IRRIGATION - - -	50,111	50,000	50,000	—	—	50,000	—	—
TOTAL - - -	4,739,387	4,794,500	4,786,800	—	7,700	4,642,000	—	144,800
TOTAL - - -	13,849,243	14,246,200	14,602,600	356,400	—	14,579,600	—	23,000
38.—PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS -	692,869	779,300	633,300	—	146,000	1,406,000	772,700	—

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

VII.

RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS AT THE TREASURIES

RECEIPTS.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DE- CREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
I.—BALANCE	£ 14,498,302	£ 12,988,800	£ 12,792,153	—	£ 196,647	£ 14,193,075	£ 1,400,922	—
II.—IMPERIAL REVENUE	64,958,517	64,348,900	67,315,300	2,966,400	—	66,542,200	—	773,100
III.—PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL SURPLUS	716,378	17,000	324,000	307,000	—	131,000	—	193,000
IV.—SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL	616,401	603,000	591,000	—	12,000	603,000	12,000	—
V.—SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
VI.—LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, CORPORATIONS AND IN- DIVIDUALS REPAID	228,361	216,000	1,078,000	862,000	—	213,000	—	865,000
VII.—SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS	677,946	730,000	765,000	35,000	—	793,000	28,000	—
VIII.—OTHER DEPOSITS RECEIVED AND ADVANCES RE- COVERED	16,825,797	12,429,000	12,670,900	241,900	—	12,602,500	—	68,400
IX.—LOCAL REMITTANCES	167,330	456,000	178,000	—	278,000	86,000	—	92,000
X.—INTER-PROVINCIAL AND INTER-DEPARTMENTAL TRANSACTIONS	17,967,362	25,000,000	25,663,000	663,000	—	26,019,000	356,000	—
XI.—REMITTANCE ACCOUNT WITH THE HOME TREASURY	1,389,859	1,089,000	1,335,600	246,600	—	1,054,000	—	281,600
XIII.—POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	267,380	384,000	74,000	—	310,000	83,000	9,000	—
XIV.—PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED*	4,344,174	5,000,000	9,264,500	4,264,500	—	819,700	—	8,444,800
XV.—TREASURY NOTES	262,636	218,000	195,000	—	23,000	308,000	113,000	—
XVI.—GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL RECEIVED	2,310,878	2,149,700	2,022,600	—	127,100	1,459,000	—	563,600
TOTAL	125,231,321	125,629,400	134,269,053	8,639,653	—	124,906,475	—	9,362,578

* The Estimates in this Statement of the amounts to be borrowed and to be supplied to the Home Treasury by Bills in 1880-81 are the that the Secretary of State will raise by Bills the exact amount stated; or that the exact amount stated

Abstract of the above showing how the

ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.			REGULAR ESTI
SURPLUS OF IMPERIAL REVENUE	£ 11,955,428	SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY	£ 349,940	SURPLUS OF IMPERIAL REVENUE	£ 11,387,200
SURPLUS OF PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL REVENUE	715,405	LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, COR- PORATIONS, AND INDIVIDUALS	1,048,705	DO. OF PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL	265,000
SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL	96,375	SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS WITH- DRAWN	12,934	SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL	170,000
POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	6,924	SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS PAID	15,464,758	SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS	117,000
PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED	3,847,184	DEPOSITS REPAID	1,649,656	DEPOSITS	238,400
TREASURY NOTES	122,750	REMITTANCES	695,236	REMITTANCES	729,022
GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL RECEIVED	771,014			PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED	3,867,200
BALANCE REDUCED	1,706,149			TREASURY NOTES	156,000
				GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL RECEIVED	674,100
TOTAL	19,221,229	TOTAL	19,221,229	TOTAL	17,603,922

FORT WILLIAM:
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE,
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA IN INDIA.

DISBURSEMENTS.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DE- CREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
1.—IMPERIAL EXPENDITURE	£ 53,003,089	£ 54,431,500	£ 55,928,100	£ 1,496,600	£ —	£ 53,655,400	£ —	£ 2,272,700
2.—PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL DE- FICITS	973	208,000	59,000	—	149,000	247,000	188,000	—
3.—SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL	520,026	453,000	421,000	—	32,000	451,000	30,000	—
4.—SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY	349,940	214,000	220,000	6,000	—	32,000	—	188,000
5.—LOANS ADVANCED TO NATIVE STATES, CORPORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS	1,277,066	416,000	1,251,000	835,000	—	232,000	—	1,019,000
6.—SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS WITHDRAWN	690,880	700,000	648,000	—	52,000	669,000	21,000	—
7.—OTHER DEPOSITS REPAID AND ADVANCES MADE	18,475,453	12,243,000	12,432,000	189,500	—	12,166,500	—	266,000
8.—LOCAL REMITTANCES	42,079	837,000	—	—	837,000	—	—	—
9.—INTER-PROVINCIAL AND INTER- DEPARTMENTAL TRANS- ACTIONS	19,566,018	24,525,000	25,539,078	1,014,078	—	26,667,000	1,127,922	—
10.—REMITTANCE ACCOUNT WITH THE HOME SECRETARY	611,690	256,500	908,500	652,000	—	109,200	—	799,300
11.—SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS ON INDIA PAID *	15,464,758	15,000,000	15,750,000	750,000	—	16,900,000	1,150,000	—
12.—POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	260,456	368,000	134,000	—	234,000	151,000	17,000	—
13.—PUBLIC DEBT DISCHARGED	496,990	1,673,500	5,397,300	3,723,800	—	836,700	—	4,560,600
14.—TREASURY NOTES	139,886	126,500	39,000	—	87,500	33,000	—	6,000
15.—GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPI- TAL WITHDRAWN	1,539,864	1,608,900	1,348,500	—	260,400	1,312,500	—	36,000
16.—BALANCE	12,792,153	12,568,500	14,193,075	1,624,575	—	11,444,175	—	2,748,900
TOTAL	125,231,321	125,629,400	134,269,053	8,639,653	—	124,906,475	—	9,362,578

best that can now be made; but they are subject to modification as the year goes on; the Government must not be understood to pledge itself will be borrowed during the year; or that it will be borrowed in India or in England as the case may be.

Ways and Means are provided.

MATES, 1879-80.		BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.
	£		£
SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY	220,000	SURPLUS OF IMPERIAL REVENUE	12,886,800
LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, COR- PORATIONS AND INDIVIDUALS	173,000	SERVICE FUNDS, CIVIL	152,000
POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	60,000	SAVINGS BANKS' DEPOSITS	124,000
SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS PAID	15,750,000	DEPOSITS	436,000
BALANCE INCREASED	1,400,922	REMITTANCES	332,800
		TREASURY NOTES	275,000
		GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL RECEIVED	146,500
		BALANCE REDUCED	2,748,900
TOTAL	17,603,922	TOTAL	17,152,000
		DEFICIT OF PROVINCIAL AND LOCAL EXPENDITURE	115,000
		SERVICE FUNDS, MILITARY	32,000
		LOANS TO NATIVE STATES, CORPORA- TIONS AND INDIVIDUALS	19,000
		POLITICAL AND TRUST FUNDS	68,000
		DEBT DISCHARGED	17,000
		SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS PAID	16,900,000
		TOTAL	17,152,000

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

VIII.

RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS AT THE HOME

RECEIPTS.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DE- CREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH THE REGU- LAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
I.—BALANCE - - -	1,076,657	1,211,200	1,117,925	—	93,275	1,806,925	689,000	—
II.—PUBLIC REVENUE - -	249,177	213,100	267,700	54,600	—	203,800	—	63,900
VII.—DEPOSITS RECEIVED AND ADVANCES RECOVERED -	28,070	4,000	30,100	26,100	—	3,500	—	26,600
XI.—SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS ON INDIA AND BILLS BOUGHT IN INDIA -	15,464,758	15,000,000	15,750,000	750,000	—	16,900,000	1,150,000	—
XII.—OTHER MISCELLANEOUS REMITTANCES FROM INDIA	501,249	107,000	150,400	43,400	—	129,000	—	21,400
XIV.—PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED *	3,726,584	3,009,500	3,873,500	864,000	—	2,013,300	—	1,860,200
XV.—GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL RECEIVED -	873,799	923,300	819,400	—	103,900	250,000	—	569,400
TOTAL -	21,920,294	20,468,100	22,009,025	1,540,925	—	21,306,525	—	702,500

* The Estimates in this Statement of the amount to be supplied to the Home Treasury by Bills in 1880-81 and of the Debt transactions are the the Secretary of State will raise by Bills the exact amount stated, or that

Abstract of the above showing how the

ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.		REGULAR ESTI
£	£	£
NET DEPOSITS RECEIVED AND AD- VANCES RECOVERED - -	18,780	DEFICIT OF REVENUE - -	14,292,935
SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS -	15,464,758	NET MISCELLANEOUS REMIT- ANCES - -	575,874
NET PUBLIC DEBT INCURRED -	352,084	NET GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL WITHDRAWN -	925,545
		BALANCE INCREASED - -	41,268
TOTAL -	15,835,622	TOTAL -	15,835,622
		TOTAL -	17,039,400

FORT WILLIAM;
DEPT. OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE, }
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

TREASURY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DISBURSEMENTS.	ACCOUNTS, 1878-79.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	REGULAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.	INCREASE.	DECREASE.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.	BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81, COMPARED WITH THE REGU- LAR ESTIMATES, 1879-80.
							Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
1.—PUBLIC EXPENDITURE	14,542,112	15,025,500	15,235,900	210,400	—	15,985,600	749,700	—
2.—DEPOSITS REPAYED AND ADVANCES MADE	9,290	4,000	4,500	500	—	3,500	—	1,000
10.—MISCELLANEOUS REMITTANCES TO INDIA	1,077,123	1,033,500	1,040,500	7,000	—	1,142,800	102,300	—
13.—PUBLIC DEBT DISCHARGED	3,374,500	2,009,500	2,609,700	600,200	—	1,290,300	—	1,319,400
4.—GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL WITHDRAWN	1,799,344	1,464,100	1,311,500	—	152,600	1,078,500	—	233,000
5.—BALANCE	1,117,925	931,500	1,806,925	875,425	—	1,806,825	—	1,100
TOTAL	21,920,294	20,468,100	22,009,025	1,540,925	—	21,306,525	—	702,500

best that can now be made; but they are subject to modification as the year goes on; the Government must not be understood to pledge itself that the Debt transactions will be carried out as estimated.

Ways and Means are provided.

MATES, 1879-80.		BUDGET ESTIMATES, 1880-81.
	£		£
DEFICIT OF REVENUE	14,968,200	SECRETARY OF STATE'S BILLS	16,900,000
NET MISCELLANEOUS REMIT- TANCES TO INDIA	890,100	NET DEBT INCURRED	723,000
NET GUARANTEED RAILWAY CAPITAL WITHDRAWN	492,100	BALANCE REDUCED	1,100
BALANCES INCREASED	689,000
TOTAL	17,039,400	TOTAL	17,624,100

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

IX.

CLOSING BALANCES OF THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.

		REGULAR ESTIMATE, 1879-80.			BUDGET ESTIMATE, 1880-81.
		Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.	Provincial.	Local.	TOTAL.
INDIA	.	£ —	£ 4,900	£ 4,900	£ —	£ 3,000	£ 3,000
CENTRAL PROVINCES	.	64,500	40,700	105,200	59,400	34,100	93,500
BRITISH BURMAH	.	166,900	49,800	216,700	122,300	47,800	170,100
ASSAM	.	16,300	2,600	18,900	25,800	4,300	30,100
BENGAL	.	524,900	256,500	781,400	561,700	324,400	886,100
NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES AND OUDH	.	337,200	430,700	767,900	195,600	474,200	669,800
PUNJAB	.	86,700	54,400	141,100	98,100	58,500	156,600
MADRAS	.	44,100	372,500	416,600	76,200	306,600	382,800
BOMBAY	.	91,200	124,600	215,800	32,400	97,300	129,700
TOTAL		1,331,800	1,336,700	2,668,500	1,171,500	1,350,200	2,521,700

Fort William;
DEPT. OF FINCE. AND COMMERCE,
The 24th February 1880.

E. W. KELLNER,
Deputy Comptroller General.

W. WATERFIELD,
Comptroller General.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

APPENDIX.

TABLE I.—Miscellaneous.

	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.	1879-80.	1880-81.
DEBIT of recorded Revenue compared with whole recorded Expenditure	£ 3,930,374	£ 2,601,684	£ 5,992,062	£ 8,384,139	£ 2,337,507	£ 3,581,000	£ 2,895,000
PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS, Capital Expenditure	4,249,571	4,270,629	3,809,284	4,791,052	4,381,898	3,700,000	3,812,000
Recorded Revenue compared with the recorded Expenditure, excluding Expenditure on Productive Public Works—
Surplus	319,197	1,668,945	—	—	2,044,391	119,060	417,060
Deficit	—	—	2,182,778	3,543,987	—	—	—
Net Public Debt incurred	8,398,168	4,109,522	4,750,145	7,345,416	4,199,268	5,131,000	706,000
Net Public Debt incurred, including Capital transactions with Guaranteed
Railway and other companies and Native States, &c.	4,382,300	2,878,300	3,317,000	6,496,200	3,209,100	5,523,300	488,000
Value of Commodities exported, excluding Gold and Silver	56,339,000	58,081,000	61,014,000	65,222,000	60,937,000	—	—
Value of commodities imported, excluding Gold and Silver	36,222,000	38,887,000	37,428,000	41,464,000	37,800,000	—	—
EXCESS OF EXPORTS OVER IMPORTS, excluding Gold and Silver	20,117,000	19,304,000	23,586,000	23,758,000	23,137,000	—	—
Net imports of Gold	1,874,000	1,545,000	207,000	468,000	(Exports) 896,000	—	—
Net imports of Silver	4,642,000	1,553,000	7,199,000	14,676,000	3,970,000	—	—
TOTAL NET IMPORTS OF GOLD AND SILVER	6,516,000	3,098,000	7,406,000	15,144,000	3,074,000	—	—
Excess of Exports over Imports, including Gold and Silver	13,621,000	16,106,000	16,180,000	8,614,000	20,063,000	—	—
Grand total value of Imports and Exports of all kinds	102,348,000	104,430,000	113,908,000	126,252,000	109,777,000	18,900,000	20,230,000
SECRETARY OF STATE'S Bills sold (Rupees)	Rs. 11,74,37,000	Rs. 13,75,00,000	Rs. 14,85,70,000	Rs. 11,69,85,000	Rs. 16,91,24,000	15,750,000	16,900,000
Sterling Equivalent received	10,841,600	12,390,000	12,696,000	10,134,000	13,949,000	8,421,902	—
Silver coined at the Indian Mints	4,897,000	2,550,000	2,890,000	16,180,000	7,210,770	1,509,877	—
Gold coined in Germany	—	12,756,000	2,873,000	7,112,000	5,475,340	—	—
Silver coined in Germany	593d. (25th April)	573d. (27th April)	585d. (15th Jan.)	553d. (8th Oct.)	544d. (2nd April)	533d. (Nov.)	—
Maximum price of an oz. TROY STANDARD SILVER in London	57d. (9th March)	52d. (22nd March)	47d. (7th July)	53d. (21st June)	483d. (21st Dec.)	493d. (April)	—
Minimum	10 12 0	11 12 0	13 (7th July)	11 14 0 (5th Sept.)	12 11 (March)	12 11 (May)	—
Maximum price of a sovereign in Calcutta	10 9 0	11	11Rs. 3as. (6th Feb.)	11 4 0 (10th April)	11 11 (11th June)	11 15 (Jan.)	—
Minimum	1s. 10-22d.	1s. 9-64d.	1s. 8-49d.	1s. 8-79d.	1s. 7-76d.	1s. 8d.	—
AVERAGE EXCHANGE upon Secretary of State's Bills sold per rupee	1s. 10d.	1s. 10½d.	1s. 9½d.	1s. 9½d.	1s. 9d.	1s. 7½d.	1s. 8½d.
Fixed RATE OF EXCHANGE for the ADJUSTMENT of transactions between the Indian and Imperial Treasuries	11 (11th April)	9 (May)	11 (April)	12 (May)	9 (18)	9 (April)	—
Maximum RATE OF DISCOUNT ON LOANS ON DEMAND at the BANK OF ENGLAND, Calcutta	3½ (July to Nov.)	4 (Nov. and Dec.)	5 (Aug. and Sept.)	5 (Dec. and Jan.)	3 (7th Nov.)	3 (Jan.)	—
Minimum	6 (Dec.)	4 (Oct. and Jan.)	2 throughout the year.	5 (Oct. and Nov.)	6 (Oct. and Nov.)	2 (Nov. to Feb.)	—
Maximum	2½ (July)	2 (Aug.)	6,382,700 (July)	7,574,900 (Jan.)	2½ (26th May)	7,703,600 (Feb.)	—
Maximum MONEY BALANCES of the three PRESIDENTIAL BANKS	6,927,800 (July)	7,041,800 (July)	6,382,700 (July)	7,574,900 (Jan.)	6,978,500 (July)	7,703,600 (Feb.)	—
Minimum	4,859,200 (May)	4,762,300 (May)	4,132,500 (Oct.)	3,672,200 (April)	4,589,800 (Jan.)	4,150,400 (April)	—
Maximum price in Calcutta of Govt. FOUR PER CENT. RUPEE SECURITIES	104½ (15th July)	102½ (3rd June)	102½ (25th July)	92½ (27th June)	97 (July and Aug.)	95½ (July)	—
Minimum	101½ (25th March)	99 (31st March)	96½ (13th Jan.)	92 (8th Sept.)	91½ (March)	91½ (May)	—
Maximum amount outstanding on London Register, of RUPEE SECURITIES ENCASED FOR INTEREST DRAFTS	14,214,617 (Nov.)	14,407,861 (Oct.)	14,125,982 (April)	14,588,744	15,950,092 (Feb.)	19,210,709 (Jan.)	—
Minimum	13,098,988 (May)	14,111,441 (April)	12,655,322 (Dec.)	13,057,964	13,826,433 (Oct.)	15,998,182 (May)	—
Maximum price in London of such securities (in Gold)	98	93½ (7th April)	92 (15th Dec.)	84½ (15th April)	81½ (1st April)	80½ (Oct.)	—
Minimum	93½	82 (4th March)	77 (6th July)	81½ (23rd Jan.)	79 (23rd Oct.)	71½ (May)	—
Maximum price in London of Secretary of State's FOUR PER CENT. SERRAVALLO BONDS	104½ (Feb.)	104½ (3rd June)	104½ (22nd Feb.)	104½ (26th Oct.)	104½ (21st March)	105½	—
Minimum	100½ (April)	102½ (3rd June)	101 (26th Oct.)	100½ (21st March)	97 (Oct.)	100½	—
Maximum GOVERNMENT PAPER CURRENCY outstanding	11,327,607 (7th Feb.)	12,161,224 (22nd Oct.)	12,551,185 (7th Feb.)	15,757,790 (15th Jan.)	14,584,900 (Sept.)	14,329,700 (Jan.)	—
Minimum	9,221,438 (7th April)	10,668,628 (7th May)	10,532,294 (15th May)	11,130,528 (30th April)	11,423,600 (March)	11,113,800 (June)	—
Number of SAVINGS BANKS	326	330	340	343	338	339	—
Number of Depositors in Savings Banks	67,316	73,401	80,004	83,518	84,503	90,084	—
Amount deposited in Savings Banks	1,746,793	1,895,452	1,986,193	1,925,335	1,912,401	2,057,639	—
Average of each Deposit	25	25	24	23	22	22	—
Net addition to Deposits	9,936	148,659	40,741	10,858 (Decrease.)	12,984 (Decrease.)	145,238	—
Cash Reserve at the BANK OF FRANCE in December of each year—in 000's of Francs	1,325,300	1,679,300	2,169,000	2,042,500	2,041,700	1,979,017	—
Silver	313,200	503,000	638,600	865,400	1,068,100	1,230,501	—
Percentage of Silver on the Total Reserve	24	31	30	43	52	62	—

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE II.—Sea-borne Trade for the Year (Principal Articles arranged in order of their declared value.)

No.	EX-PORTS.	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.
1	OPIMUM— Quantity - - - - - Chests. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per chest, in Rupees - - - - - Rs.	94,746 11,956,972 1,262	88,350 11,148,426 1,261	96,870 12,404,748 1,281	92,820 12,374,355 1,333	91,200 12,993,979 1,425
2	COTTON— Raw— Quantity - - - - - £ Value - - - - - Cwt. Average declared value per { Annas lb.— { Pence, at average exchange - - - - -	5,600,086 15,257,342 As. 3 11 5-40	5,009,788 13,278,964 As. 3 9 5-13	4,557,914 11,746,184 As. 3 8 4-71	3,459,077 9,383,534 As. 3 10 4-98	2,966,060 7,913,046 As. 3 10 4-73
	Twist and Yarn— Quantity - - - - - Lbs. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per lb. - - - - - Annas. Other manufactures—Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Grey or unbleached yard— { Coloured, printed, or dyed Percentage of manufactures on whole value exported - - - - -	2,834,725 147,562 As. 8 4 364,812 — — 3-25	6,228,511 266,951 As. 6 10 396,472 As. 2 6 As. 4 9 4-76	7,926,713 367,303 As. 7 5 445,079 As. 2 6 As. 5 3 6-47	15,600,291 682,059 As. 7 0 460,674 As. 2 3 As. 4 10 10-85	21,332,508 886,481 As. 6 7 511,498 As. 2 1 As. 4 7 15-01
3	RICE AND PADDY— Quantity - - - - - Cwt. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value of { Rupees husked rice per cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	17,392,938 4,765,324 2 0 10 5-11	20,416,032 5,311,095 2 2 3 4-70	19,914,334 5,815,221 2 15 1 5-02	18,428,386 6,950,276 3 12 6 6-55	21,237,233 8,973,722 4 4 4 7-03
4	JUTE— Raw and manufactured—Value - - - - - £ Average declared value of { Rupees raw jute per cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - - Percentage of manufactures on whole value exported - - - - -	3,485,522 5 14 7 10-94 6-85	3,294,521 5 6 2 9-72 14-85	3,356,124 5 13 1 9-94 21-43	4,289,241 6 7 3 11-18 17-97	4,898,860 6 5 0 10-39 22-42
5	SEEDS— Quantity - - - - - Cwt. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value of { Rupees linseed per cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	6,074,756 3,235,950 5 0 0 9-27	10,506,822 5,461,982 5 4 6 9-52	9,582,865 5,319,124 5 5 11 9-17	12,187,020 7,860,284 5 13 10 10-16	7,200,977 4,675,036 6 3 11 10-28
6	TEA— Quantity - - - - - Lbs. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Annas lb.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	21,137,087 1,937,429 As. 14 3 1-70	24,361,599 2,166,417 As. 14 3 1-60	27,784,124 2,607,425 As. 15 0 1-60	33,459,075 3,044,571 As. 14 6 1-57	34,432,573 3,138,424 As. 14 7 1-50
7	HIDES AND SKINS— Quantity - - - - - No. Value - - - - - £ Percentage of dressed or manufactured to whole value - - - - -	18,162,851 2,677,767 18-87	19,433,332 2,943,575 40-44	19,792,877 2,998,684 49-77	22,916,317 3,756,888 48-29	21,223,403 3,096,847 42-06
8	INDIGO— Quantity - - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Rupees cwt.— { Sterling, at average exchange - - - - -	81,466 2,576,302 316 3 10 29-27	110,392 2,875,062 260 7 0 23-48	100,384 2,962,785 295 2 4 25-19	120,605 3,494,334 289 11 9 25-09	105,051 2,960,462 281 13 0 23-20
9	COFFEE— Quantity - - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Rupees cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	311,831 1,305,835 41 13 9 77-51	371,986 1,627,027 43 11 10 78-88	302,489 1,345,822 44 7 10 75-97	297,327 1,338,499 45 0 3 77-98	341,186 1,543,643 45 3 11 74-30
10	WOOL— Raw and manufactured—Value - - - - - £ Average declared value of { Annas raw wool per lb.— { Pence, at average exchange - - - - -	1,159,086 As. 7 2 9-99	1,295,193 As. 7 4 9-95	1,293,490 As. 7 2 9-22	1,151,518 As. 6 6 8-44	1,243,275 As. 6 4 7-82
11	SILK— Raw and manufactured—Value - - - - - £ Average declared value of { Rupees raw silk per lb.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	998,450 4 10 1 8-57	656,728 3 2 9 5-72	1,000,566 5 7 8 9-25	854,629 4 10 5 8-06	746,687 4 4 7 7-06
12	WHEAT— Quantity - - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Rupees cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	1,069,076 490,435 4 9 5 8-50	2,498,185 901,026 3 9 8 6-51	5,583,336 1,956,332 3 8 0 5-98	6,340,150 2,856,990 4 8 1 7-80	1,044,709 513,778 4 14 8 8-09
13	SALTPETRE— Quantity - - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Rupees cwt.— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	553,330 501,468 9 1 0 16-78	415,080 348,949 8 6 7 15-16	466,218 381,706 8 3 0 13-96	389,002 379,002 9 11 11 16-88	382,405 361,766 9 7 4 15-57
14	LAC— Value - - - - - £	254,011	755,747	536,976	362,048	298,716
15	TEAK WOOD— Quantity - - - - - Cubic Tons. Value - - - - - £ Average declared value per { Rupees cubic ton— { Sterling, at average exchange - - - - -	42,868 328,564 76 10 4 7-09	60,612 440,618 72 11 1 6-83	45,108 332,764 73 12 4 6-29	56,939 406,652 71 6 8 6-19	37,413 268,959 71 14 3 5-92
16	SUGAR— Value - - - - - £	319,238	253,937	925,196	745,851	204,360

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

Sea-borne Trade for the Year, &c.—continued.

No.	IMPORTS.	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.
1	COTTON—
	Twist and Yarn—
	Quantity - - - - - Lbs.	37,097,260	31,927,340	33,270,208	36,196,661	33,145,631
	Value - - - - - £	3,157,780	2,794,769	2,733,535	2,850,616	2,779,774
	Average declared value { Annas - - - - -	—	14·00	13·14	12·60	13·42
	per lb. - - - - - { Pence at average exchange - - - - -	—	1s. 6·93d.	1s. 4·83d.	1s. 4·37d.	1s. 4·57d.
	Other manufactures—
	Value - - - - - £	16,263,560	16,463,875	16,012,932	17,332,639	14,137,694
	TOTAL COTTON GOODS.—Gross Imports - - £	19,421,340	19,258,644	18,746,467	20,183,255	16,917,468
	Re-exports—
	Twist and Yarn—
	Quantity - - - - - Lbs.	781,220	792,668	839,539	934,437	754,648
	Value - - - - - £	56,249	57,424	58,423	62,733	51,217
	Other manufactures—
	Value - - - - - £	1,061,727	984,105	1,064,392	1,089,614	1,132,627
	Total Re-exports - - - - - £	1,117,976	1,041,529	1,122,815	1,152,347	1,183,844
	TOTAL COTTON GOODS.—Net Imports - - £	18,303,364	18,217,115	17,623,652	19,030,908	15,733,624
2	METALS - - - - - Value £	2,607,122	3,310,452	3,721,007	3,736,958	3,372,903
3	SILK (Raw and Manufactured) - - - - - " "	1,583,405	1,404,235	1,037,957	1,485,550	1,496,487
4	RAILWAY PLANT AND ROLLING STOCK - - - - - " "	780,867	1,079,105	1,194,145	1,727,560	1,491,831
5	SUGAR - - - - - " "	516,564	895,929	403,607	798,036	1,480,880
6	LIQUORS - - - - - " "	1,636,368	1,702,197	1,585,345	1,683,655	1,372,487
7	PROVISIONS - - - - - " "	363,727	717,234	664,938	361,116	990,530
8	WOOLLEN MANUFACTURES - - - - - " "	557,385	1,119,274	911,890	955,142	961,666
9	MACHINERY AND MILL-WORK - - - - - " "	1,185,943	1,439,921	963,504	873,960	893,875
10	COAL (excluding coke and patent fuel)—
	Quantity - - - - - Tons	360,252	388,480	523,384	603,731	473,027
	Value - - - - - £	685,720	647,562	918,309	1,004,942	881,444
	Average declared value { Rupees - - - - -	19·03	16·67	17·54	16·64	18·63
	per ton— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	34·94	31·01	30·34	28·83	30·63
11	SALT—
	Quantity - - - - - Tons	277,085	365,254	298,776	254,231	274,182
	Value - - - - - £	755,771	601,146	430,895	401,366	593,621
	Average declared value { Rupees - - - - -	27·28	16·45	14·42	15·78	21·65
	per ton— { Shillings, at average exchange - - - - -	50·51	29·66	24·62	27·35	35·65
12	APPAREL - - - - - Value £	629,456	634,256	542,860	579,106	546,089
13	SPICES - - - - - " "	179,126	395,988	432,991	488,884	509,043

TABLE III.—Sea-borne Trade for the first Ten Months (Principal Articles arranged in order of their Declared Value).

	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.	1879-80.
	£	£	£	£	£
Value of commodities exported, excluding gold and silver - -	46,309,370	48,265,519	52,210,342	47,821,206	51,522,819
Value of commodities imported, excluding gold and silver - -	30,830,219	30,408,746	34,457,474	32,426,805	33,557,095
Excess Exports. - - - - -	15,479,151	17,856,773	17,752,868	15,394,901	17,965,724
Net imports of silver - - - - -	966,336	5,628,814	13,117,467	2,187,577	6,680,763
Net imports of gold - - - - -	1,486,222	— 410,234	278,765	— 482,078	1,388,535
TOTAL NET IMPORTS OF GOLD AND SILVER - - - - -	2,452,558	5,218,580	13,396,232	1,705,499	8,069,298
GRAND TOTAL IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF ALL-KINDS - - - - -	83,124,766	91,365,735	104,112,057	88,090,522	96,944,010

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE III.—Sea-borne Trade for the first Ten Months, &c.—continued.

No.	EXPORTS.	TEN MONTHS, 1ST APRIL TO 31ST JANUARY.
		1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.	1879-80.
1	OPIUM - { Quantity - - - - Chests Value - - - - - £ Average value per chest - - Rs.	73,095 9,186,788 1,256-13-3	81,613 10,490,687 1,285-6-8	77,387 10,264,066 1,326-5-3	76,165 10,917,614 1,433-6-8	91,081 12,299,004 1,350-5-5
2	COTTON, RAW { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per lb. - - Rs.	4,295,871 11,476,987 0-3-9	3,561,477 8,968,014 0-3-7	2,585,377 6,949,554 0-3-10	2,281,507 6,149,132 0-3-10	2,895,909 7,992,393 0-3-11
	MANUFACTURES—
	Twist and Yarn { Quantity - - - - lbs. Value - - - - - £ Average value per lb. - - Rs.	4,587,225 196,768 0-6-10	6,817,270 316,636 0-7-5	12,779,989 558,913 0-6-11	18,306,631 767,675 0-6-8	20,445,445 854,667 0-6-8
	Other manufactures—Value - - - - £	326,201	375,860	392,895	431,844	420,624
	TOTAL COTTON (RAW AND MANUFACTURED) - £	11,999,956	9,660,510	7,901,362	7,348,651	9,267,684
3	RICE AND PADDY. { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	13,045,994 3,549,719 2-11-6	11,658,224 3,397,812 2-14-8	10,186,650 4,017,310 3-15-1	12,420,606 5,699,274 4-9-5	12,507,197 5,149,989 4-1-11
4	JUTE (Raw and Manufactured)—Value - - - - £	2,639,630	2,895,432	3,679,332	4,076,573	4,539,642
5	SEEDS - { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	8,514,379 4,414,548 5-2-11	8,559,142 4,688,529 5-7-8	11,239,493 6,758,930 6-0-2	6,357,845 4,089,485 6-6-11	5,767,116 3,764,594 6-8-5
6	HIDES AND SKINS. { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	534,504 2,378,801 44-8-1	495,367 2,309,783 46-10-0	709,852 2,990,696 42-2-1	630,278 2,455,043 38-15-2	709,755 2,786,059 39-4-1
7	TEA - { Quantity - - - - lbs. Value - - - - - £ Average value per lb. - - Rs.	21,254,915 1,899,961 0-14-4	25,186,248 2,361,799 0-15-0	30,366,610 2,770,735 0-14-7	30,692,313 2,808,432 0-14-8	34,243,539 2,746,782 0-12-10
8	INDIGO - { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	78,004 2,037,990 261-4-3	83,443 2,450,385 293-10-7	90,577 2,632,728 290-10-7	64,514 1,767,026 273-15-0	78,538 2,256,421 287-6-11
9	WOOL (Raw and Manufactured)—Value - - - - £	1,061,452	1,079,667	939,198	1,049,930	1,007,621
10	WHEAT - { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	2,155,626 775,554 3-9-6	4,839,290 1,673,400 3-7-4	6,206,669 2,790,304 4-7-11	1,035,857 508,125 4-14-6	1,814,566 918,918 5-1-0
11	COFFEE - { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	164,692 662,275 40-3-5	168,552 722,544 42-13-11	191,693 846,358 44-2-5	201,626 885,939 43-15-0	188,080 833,670 44-5-2
12	SILK (Raw and Manufactured)—Value - - - - £	531,870	801,388	766,098	607,139	584,575
13	SALTPETRE - { Quantity - - - - Cwts. Value - - - - - £ Average value per cwt. - - Rs.	300,501 254,955 8-7-9	369,887 302,734 8-2-11	311,682 304,068 9-12-1	311,091 296,222 9-8-4	421,268 386,482 9-2-9
14	TEAK - { Quantity - - - - C. tons. Value - - - - - £ Average value per ton - - Rs.	48,776 356,332 73-0-11	35,771 263,504 73-10-8	44,153 311,678 70-2-9	34,115 247,752 72-9-11	30,810 222,878 72-5-5
15	LAC - - - - - - - - - - £	593,588	425,327	299,599	234,712	220,105
16	SUGAR - - - - - - - - - - £	94,465	425,940	447,616	184,724	156,533

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE III.—Sea-borne Trade for the first ten months—concluded.

No.		IMPORTS.	TEN MONTHS, 1ST APRIL TO 31ST JANUARY.
			1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.	1879-80.
1	COTTON—
	Twist and yarn	Quantity	-	-	lbs.	25,923,585	26,724,669	30,872,371	29,736,857	27,809,866
		Value	-	-	-	£	2,286,139	2,230,376	2,425,336	2,480,030	2,248,408
		Average value per lb.	-	-	-	Rs.	0-14-1	0-13-4	0-12-7	0-13-4	0-13-2
	Ditto in sterling average exchange		-	-	-	-	1s. 7d.	1s. 5d.	1s. 4½d.	1s. 4½d.	1s. 4½d.
	Other manufactures - Value	-	-	-	-	£	13,097,382	13,056,417	14,512,524	12,274,502	13,819,200
	TOTAL COTTON GOODS		-	-	-	£	15,383,521	15,286,793	16,937,860	14,754,532	16,067,608
	Re-exports
	Twist and yarn	Quantity	-	-	-	lbs.	701,646	614,051	736,160	651,373	730,075
		Value	-	-	-	-	£	50,656	43,119	49,811	44,508	47,715
		Average value per lb.	-	-	-	-	Rs.	0-11-7	0-11-3	0-10-10	0-10-11	0-10-5
	Other manufactures—Value		-	-	-	-	£	819,803	859,708	875,357	966,712	857,852
	Total Re-exports		-	-	-	-	£	870,459	902,827	925,168	1,011,220	905,567
	TOTAL COTTON GOODS—Net Imports		-	-	-	-	£	14,513,062	14,383,966	16,012,692	13,743,312	15,162,041
2	METALS	-	-	-	-	Value	£	2,533,767	2,893,993	3,008,118	2,919,762	2,849,539
3	SILK (Raw and Manufactured)	-	-	-	-	"	"	1,126,453	831,428	1,271,782	1,313,747	1,263,602
4	LIQUORS	-	-	-	-	"	"	1,194,828	1,286,521	1,431,367	1,113,119	1,250,897
5	RAILWAY PLANT AND ROLLING-STOCK	-	-	-	-	"	"	931,228	1,013,812	1,227,159	1,249,238	1,104,248
6	WOOLLEN MANUFACTURES	-	-	-	-	"	"	856,225	823,119	849,529	846,254	901,642
7	PROVISIONS	-	-	-	-	"	"	560,436	539,059	716,939	834,573	882,062
8	COAL (excluding Coke and Patent Fuel)—	Quantity	-	-	-	Tons		262,999	347,716	469,270	377,684	446,226
		Value	-	-	-	-	£	428,558	643,794	764,610	708,320	860,491
		Average value per ton	-	-	-	-	Rs.	16-4-10	18-8-2	16-4-8	18-12-1	19-4-6
9	SUGAR	-	-	-	-	Value	£	618,833	349,806	657,043	1,137,030	853,951
10	SALT	Quantity	-	-	-	Tons		302,897	255,504	217,202	223,565	277,279
		Value	-	-	-	-	£	505,238	363,684	324,628	477,384	611,322
		Average value per ton	-	-	-	-	Rs.	16-10-10	14-3-9	14-15-1	21-5-7	22-0-9
11	MACHINERY AND MILL-WORK	-	-	-	-	Value	£	1,243,685	803,705	724,078	781,963	549,049
12	APPAREL	-	-	-	-	"	"	548,970	460,767	491,306	464,159	466,922
13	SPICES	-	-	-	-	"	"	315,656	367,877	389,649	430,862	406,197

TABLE IV.—Wholesale Prices of typical commodities in Gold and Silver in London and Calcutta in December of each year.

(Prices of March 1873=100.)

IN LONDON—(prices quoted from the LONDON ECONOMIST.)	MEASURED IN GOLD.							MEASURED IN SILVER.*
	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.	1877.	1878.	1879.	1873.	1874.	1875.	1876.	1877.	1878.	1879.
Scotch Pig Iron (Warrants) -	91	68	54	49	43	36	55	95	71	58	51	48	44	63
Coals, Hetton, Wallsend (London) -	94	90	75	57	55	60	50	97	94	79	59	61	72	57
Copper, Chili Bars -	93	93	92	85	74	64	74	96	97	98	90	82	77	85
Straits Tin -	79	65	56	52	45	42	62	82	67	60	54	50	50	71
Wheat -	112	81	83	91	94	72	85	115	84	88	96	104	87	97
Flour, town-made -	111	82	90	82	98	69	86	114	85	96	86	109	83	98
Beef, inferior -	125	110	128	98	85	90	85	129	115	136	102	94	108	97
Cotton, No. 40, Mule Twist -	95	83	86	80	71	61	77	97	88	91	84	78	73	87
Wool, Southdown Hogs -	96	89	85	80	76	65	71	99	93	91	85	84	78	81
Sugar, Foreign Muscovado -	92	87	77	113	74	80	95	95	91	82	119	82	96	108
Coffee -	124	97	105	101	98	73	83	128	101	111	106	109	88	94
Pepper -	126	95	78	69	63	N.	—	109	100	83	73	70	N.	—
Saltpetre -	86	80	83	87	98	89	96	86	82	88	92	109	108	110
Gold -	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	103	104	106	105	111	120	114
Silver -	97	96	94	95	90	83	88	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
IN CALCUTTA (prices quoted from the CALCUTTA PRICE CURRENT.)
Grey Shirtings (8½ lbs.) -	93	84	84	78	73	74	81	93	84	84	78	73	74	81
Mule Twist, white, good, No. 40 -	96	91	87	87	75	75	88	96	91	87	87	75	75	88
" " Turkey, red, No. 40 (12 lbs.) -	115	104	94	85	85	78	77	107	93	87	90	83	73	87
" " Orange, No. 40—60 -	102	100	102	93	83	80	87	102	100	102	93	83	80	87
Copper Sheathing -	115	89	78	68	60	56	76	115	89	78	68	60	56	76
Iron, flat, bolt, bar and square -	114	118	148	143	130	107	121	114	118	148	143	130	107	121
Spelter, hard -	92	88	75	104	75	69	96	92	88	75	104	75	69	96
Hides, buffalo, slaughtered -	110	Nil.	90	110	86	100	119	110	Nil.	90	110	86	100	119
Indigo, good -	144	137	125	150	147	153	169	144	137	125	150	147	153	169
Jute, picked -	87	60	55	69	58	54	73	87	60	55	69	58	54	73
Lacdyne, fine -	129	183	119	68	49	56	153	129	183	119	68	49	56	153
Shell Lac, fine orange -	111	110	92	102	106	N.	120	111	110	92	102	106	N.	120
Linseed, fine bold clean -	165	153	135	159	168	259	153	165	153	135	159	168	259	153
Rice, Ballam -	80	58	40	98	80	69	87	80	58	40	98	80	69	87
Silk, raw, Cossimbazar -	94	87	87	88	Nil.	—	—	94	87	87	88	Nil.	—	—
Sugar, Benares -	114	123	104	123	100	77	82	114	123	104	123	100	77	82
Tea, good Souchong -	115	96	78	96	104	109	109	115	96	78	96	104	109	109
Wheat, Doodiah -	102	100	102	103	105	109	110	102	100	102	103	105	109	110
Gold -	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—

* The values measured in silver in London have been calculated from the values in gold on the basis of the price of standard silver in London.

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE V.—Actual CAPITAL EXPENDITURE on RAILWAYS in 1878-79, and estimated Expenditure on such works in 1879-80 and 1880-81, and to the end of 1880-81.

	1878-79, Accounts.	1879-80, Regular Estimate.	1880-81, Budget Estimate.	To end of 1880-81.	Sanctioned Estimate.	Balance remaining to be spent.
	£	£	£	£	£	£
East Indian - - - - -	297,314	58,700	630,000	(a) 38,266,381	—	—
Rajputana - - - - -	359,296	248,000	172,000	3,545,000	3,267,000	—278,000
Western Rajputana - - - - -	344,633	681,000	385,000	1,649,000	1,604,000	—45,000
Sindia - - - - -	241,264	130,000	100,000	893,000	904,000	11,000
Holkar - - - - -	—73,865	36,000	19,000	1,260,000	1,246,000	—14,000
Neemuch - - - - -	226,255	278,000	339,000	1,786,000	2,202,000	416,000
Wardah Coal - - - - -	11,027	15,000	—	501,000	541,000	40,000
Nagpur and Chattisgarh - - - - -	106,300	250,000	217,000	593,000	837,000	244,000
Rangoon and Irrawaddy Valley - - - - -	121,375	40,000	10,000	1,262,000	1,261,000	—1,000
Northern Bengal - - - - -	386,180	129,000	60,000	2,139,000	1,945,000	—194,000
Tirhoot - - - - -	20,850	27,000	15,000	565,000	600,000	35,000
Patna and Gya - - - - -	250,105	73,000	25,000	350,000	404,000	54,000
Nalhati - - - - -	6,968	—1,000	—1,000	32,000	36,000	4,000
Calcutta and South-Eastern - - - - -	14,069	—1,000	—2,000	672,000	739,000	67,000
Cawnpore and Furruckabad - - - - -	59,715	154,900	68,000	282,000	322,000	40,000
Ghazipur and Dildarnagar - - - - -	2,653	44,000	5,000	55,000	65,000	10,000
Muttra-Hattas - - - - -	3,740	1,000	—	110,000	125,000	15,000
Muttra-Achneyra - - - - -	5,311	—	55,000	60,000	90,000	30,000
Dhond and Mapmad - - - - -	359,469	112,000	100,000	1,124,000	1,350,000	226,000
Indus Valley - - - - -	816,105	304,000	200,000	6,295,000	7,180,000	885,000
Punjab Northern - - - - -	369,905	663,000	303,000	4,053,000	3,808,000	—245,000
Fluctuations in Store Balances - - - - -	—166,725	—243,000	—80,000	155,000	—	—155,000
Reserve - - - - -	—	—	242,000	242,000	—	—242,000
	3,464,630	2,940,000	2,232,000	27,623,000	28,526,000	903,000
Deduct PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS OUTLAY in- cluded in the above - - - - -	3,327,888	2,608,000	1,982,000	26,533,000	—	—
Balance ORDINARY OUTLAY - - - - -	136,742	332,000	250,000	1,090,000	—	—
Railways constructed wholly from Ordinary Funds—
Patri Salt Railway - - - - -	—	—	—	81,000	90,000	9,000
Frontier Railways chargeable to Army - - - - -	—	1,440,000	2,040,000	3,480,000	—	—
Total ORDINARY - - - - -	136,742	1,772,000	2,290,000	4,651,000	—	—
GRAND TOTAL - - - - -	3,464,630	4,380,000	4,272,000	31,184,000	—	—

(a)—£6,550,000 added on account of premium added to the Capital of the East Indian Railway on the purchase being effected.

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE VI.—Actual Capital Expenditure on works of Irrigation, &c., for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept, in 1878-79, and estimated expenditure on such works in 1879-80, 1880-81, and to the end of 1880-81, &c.

	1878-79 Actuals.	1879-80 Regular Estimates.	1880-81 Budget- Estimates.	To END OF 1880-81.			Estimated cost (current sanctions.)	Balance of current sanctions remaining to be spent.
				Outlay against current sanctions.	Outlay against sanctions that have expired.	Total.
IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS.
Orissa Canals - - - - -	56,266	78,000	44,000	1,953,300	—	1,953,300	1,931,000	—
Midnapore Canal - - - - -	27,817	7,300	15,500	755,800	—	755,800	768,000	12,200
Tidal Canal - - - - -	—	—	—	177,300	—	177,300	177,000	—
Sone Canals - - - - -	171,768	139,700	80,500	2,298,500	—	2,298,500	2,736,000	437,500
Ganges Canal - - - - -	61,798	30,000	59,500	743,825	2,343,275	3,087,100	1,021,000	277,175
Agra „ - - - - -	6,597	5,000	7,500	786,800	—	786,800	801,000	14,200
Lower Ganges Canal - - - - -	157,693	151,100	133,000	1,688,100	—	1,688,100	2,473,900	784,900
Western Jumna „ - - - - -	79,438	58,100	65,000	462,000	312,000	774,000	722,000	260,000
Bari Doab „ - - - - -	11,376	10,000	5,000	1,509,600	—	1,509,600	1,652,000	142,400
Other projects - - - - -	233,945	318,200	220,000	—	—	4,955,600	—	—
TOTAL -	806,638	797,400	630,000	—	—	17,986,100	—	—
Deduct Ordinary outlay on Productive Public Works included above.	11,984	—	—	—	—	5,306,300	—	—
NET TOTAL *	794,654	797,400	630,000	—	—	12,679,800	—	—
IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION WORKS. (Not classed as Productive Public Works.)
Eastern Jumna Canal - - - - -	1,511	9,700	10,000	69,000	204,000	273,000	139,000	70,000
Other projects - - - - -	105,653	134,600	95,500	—	—	2,294,900	—	—
Ordinary outlay on Productive Public Works - - - - -	11,984	—	—	—	—	5,306,300	—	—
TOTAL -	119,148	144,300	105,500	—	—	7,874,200	—	—
Deduct Outlay against the grant for Productive Public Works or works not admitted to the category of Productive Public Works -	—3	—	—	—	—	255,200	—	—
NET TOTAL *	119,151	144,300	105,500	—	—	7,619,000	—	—
GRAND TOTAL -	913,805	941,700	735,500	—	—	20,298,800	—	—

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE VII.—Gross earnings, Working expenses and net traffic earnings of Guaranteed and State Railways to end of 1878-79, with Regular Estimates for 1879-80 and Budget Estimates for 1880-81.

GUARANTEED RAILWAYS.	ACTUALS.					Regular Estimates, 1879-80.	Budget- Estimates, 1880-81.
	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.
OPEN MILEAGE AT BEGINNING OF YEAR	4,057	4,093	4,308	4,495	4,532	4,541	4,562
Gross Earnings.	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
Eastern Bengal	365,956	323,889	376,650	507,641	439,942	460,000	470,000
Madras	581,955	644,832	806,164	930,759	643,613	675,000	675,000
South Indian	97,401	129,578	221,266	335,118	318,431	350,000	370,000
Bombay, Baroda, and Central India	605,398	646,577	704,747	786,775	698,533	700,000	780,000
Great Indian Peninsula	2,039,012	2,163,264	2,679,511	3,270,167	2,719,740	2,450,000	2,750,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand	226,694	238,164	369,638	437,015	468,885	400,000	480,000
Sind, Punjab, and Delhi	680,318	697,041	833,540	1,014,304	909,393	1,100,000	1,000,000
Total	4,617,734	4,833,345	5,991,516	7,281,777	6,223,337	6,135,000	6,525,000
Working Expenses.
Eastern Bengal	208,462	206,842	172,357	200,690	198,347	220,000	215,000
Madras	387,265	454,362	475,576	600,831	484,080	450,000	450,000
South Indian	56,101	66,795	118,537	186,407	225,093	265,000	240,000
Bombay, Baroda, and Central India	304,545	372,720	366,980	311,786	325,578	350,000	350,000
Great Indian Peninsula	1,143,102	1,001,079	1,235,797	1,507,671	1,447,744	1,450,000	1,500,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand	141,082	175,733	216,563	238,022	257,360	260,000	275,000
Sind, Punjab, and Delhi	439,748	452,104	549,777	582,253	584,833	700,000	600,000
Total	2,687,308	2,720,235	3,134,989	3,687,666	3,532,590	3,705,000	3,630,000
Net Traffic Earnings.
Eastern Bengal	160,494	117,047	204,293	306,951	241,595	240,000	255,000
Madras	194,687	190,470	330,588	329,928	159,533	225,000	225,000
South Indian	41,300	72,783	102,729	143,711	83,333	85,000	130,000
Bombay, Baroda, and Central India	298,853	273,857	338,367	474,989	372,955	370,000	430,000
Great Indian Peninsula	908,910	1,101,585	1,443,714	1,702,496	1,271,936	970,000	1,250,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand	86,612	112,431	153,073	198,981	236,325	140,000	205,000
Sind, Punjab, and Delhi	240,570	244,937	283,763	432,045	325,010	400,000	400,000
Total	1,980,426	2,113,110	2,856,527	3,594,111	2,690,747	2,490,000	2,595,000
STATE RAILWAYS.
East Indian.
OPEN MILEAGE AT BEGINNING OF YEAR	1,503	1,503	1,503	1,503	1,503	1,503	1,503
Gross Earnings	3,451,465	3,011,412	3,818,147	4,362,133	4,052,536	4,250,000	4,250,000
Working Expenses	1,317,081	1,140,861	1,313,076	1,396,092	1,465,990	1,500,000	1,500,000
Net Traffic Earnings	2,134,384	1,870,551	2,504,471	2,966,441	2,586,546	2,750,000	2,750,000
Other State Railways.
OPEN MILEAGE AT BEGINNING OF YEAR	221	485	683	806	1,287	2,014	2,493
Gross Earnings.
Rajputana and Western Rajputana (Northern Section)	93,319	203,102	289,349	261,434	330,077	332,500	450,000
Western Rajputana (Southern Section)	—	—	—	—	—	15,000	55,000
Holkar and Neemuch	16,702	38,340	39,272	62,666	93,311	122,500	152,500
Sindia	—	—	—	3,319	10,812	11,500	20,000
Wardah Coal	2,112	2,936	3,635	10,639	11,373	32,000	55,000
Punjab Northern	—	22,657	50,154	76,412	108,400	195,000	240,000
Indus Valley	—	—	—	—	113,921	370,000	450,000
Dhond and Mamnad	—	—	—	—	25,041	50,000	67,000
Nagpur and Chattisgarh	—	—	—	—	—	10,000	30,000
Rangoon and Irrawaddy Valley	—	—	—	—	97,561	100,000	120,000
Patna and Gya	—	—	—	—	—	33,000	40,000
Northern Bengal	—	—	—	—	109,289	140,000	160,000
Tirhoot	—	4,304	31,353	34,324	44,981	45,000	47,500
Calcutta and South-Eastern	9,861	10,486	9,775	12,616	12,599	13,000	14,500
Nalhati	8,492	7,173	8,698	9,130	8,531	9,000	9,000
Cawnpore and Furruckabad	—	—	—	—	—	—	11,000
Hatras-Mutra	—	—	8,977	9,363	10,322	12,500	12,500
Ghazipore and Dildarnagar	—	—	—	—	—	—	4,000
Total	130,936	289,512	380,668	557,890	976,828	1,531,000	1,917,000
Working Expenses.
Rajputana and Western Rajputana (Northern Section)	57,336	119,638	159,082	184,331	203,316	230,000	275,000
Western Rajputana (Southern Section)	—	—	—	—	—	15,000	60,000
Holkar and Neemuch	11,078	35,715	39,047	39,319	67,903	92,500	102,500
Sindia	—	—	—	2,137	12,734	14,000	18,500
Wardah Coal	2,403	3,150	3,658	7,043	11,104	29,500	27,500
Punjab Northern	—	13,737	45,953	70,499	83,506	160,000	160,000
Indus Valley	—	—	—	—	109,861	300,000	360,000
Dhond and Mamnad	—	—	—	—	24,569	50,000	67,000
Nagpur and Chattisgarh	—	—	—	—	—	10,000	30,000
Rangoon and Irrawaddy Valley	—	—	—	—	59,904	80,000	80,000
Patna and Gya	—	—	—	—	92,561	19,000	20,000
Northern Bengal	—	—	—	—	16,402	80,000	110,000
Tirhoot	—	4,006	14,189	23,572	32,993	34,000	27,500
Calcutta and South-Eastern	7,329	9,303	12,320	8,226	—	9,000	9,500
Nalhati	7,367	7,936	8,315	8,732	—	6,500	7,000
Cawnpore and Furruckabad	—	—	—	—	—	—	7,000
Hatras-Mutra	—	—	4,919	5,251	5,996	6,700	6,500
Ghazipore and Dildarnagar	—	—	—	—	—	—	3,000
Total	86,064	193,435	237,968	426,006	740,347	1,166,200	1,321,000
Net Traffic Earnings.
Rajputana and Western Rajputana (Northern Section)	35,983	83,464	80,267	76,603	126,261	152,500	175,000
Western Rajputana (Southern Section)	—	—	—	—	—	15,000	5,000
Holkar and Neemuch	5,624	2,634	225	23,347	25,608	30,000	50,000
Sindia	—	—	—	816	—	—	1,500
Wardah Coal	—	—	27	—	—	—	2,500
Punjab Northern	—	—	225	—	—	—	27,500
Indus Valley	—	8,920	4,196	5,913	21,894	35,000	80,000
Dhond and Mamnad	—	—	—	—	4,060	70,000	100,000
Nagpur and Chattisgarh	—	—	—	—	372	—	10,000
Rangoon and Irrawaddy Valley	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
Patna and Gya	—	—	—	2,832	5,000	20,000	40,000
Northern Bengal	—	—	—	—	—	14,000	20,000
Tirhoot	—	798	7,169	709	19,716	20,000	50,000
Calcutta and South-Eastern	2,541	1,183	—	10,752	11,988	11,000	20,000
Nalhati	1,125	—	—	4,390	14,257	4,000	4,000
Cawnpore and Furruckabad	—	—	—	398	4,052	2,500	2,000
Hatras-Mutra	—	—	4,056	—	—	—	4,000
Ghazipore and Dildarnagar	—	—	—	4,112	4,826	5,800	1,000
Total	44,982	96,027	92,680	181,834	236,431	364,800	598,000

APPENDIX.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

TABLE VIII.—Gross earnings, working expenses and net earnings of works of Irrigation, &c., for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept, to end of 1878-79, with Regular Estimates for 1879-80 and Budget Estimates for 1880-81.

	ACTUALS.					Regular Estimates, 1879-80.	Budget Estimates, 1880-81.
	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.
IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION PRODUCTIVE PUBLIC WORKS.
GROSS DIRECT REVENUE.
Orissa Canals	4,848	4,549	7,456	16,110	18,200	27,000	28,500
Midnapore Canal	11,622	11,111	13,699	17,009	17,071	22,100	26,000
Tidal Canal	5,289	2,293	4,503	6,228	6,079	6,100	6,100
Sone Canals	—	5,090	7,318	10,130	43,763	51,500	56,000
Ganges Canal	201,988	212,882	230,154	250,453	261,114	271,500	245,000
Agra "	55	3,709	8,952	21,467	42,633	35,900	43,500
Lower Ganges Canal	—	—	—	—	—	9,100	18,000
Western Jumna "	91,290	100,872	87,813	99,210	113,056	117,400	114,000
Bari Doab "	64,663	77,189	59,270	56,963	80,606	98,400	108,400
Other projects	10,462	11,984	16,036	25,372	25,748	27,900	35,100
TOTAL	390,222	429,679	425,201	502,882	613,270	666,900	680,600
INDIRECT REVENUE.
Ganges Canal	41,915	62,580	64,279	72,290	67,181	66,900	66,900
Agra "	—	—	—	4,509	—	—	—
Western Jumna Canal	37,256	40,128	38,593	37,376	10,937	21,700	11,700
Bari Doab "	14,625	16,653	4,679	11,903	17,738	14,700	10,000
Other projects	24,291	20,345	25,966	27,789	31,078	606,200	614,000
TOTAL	118,087	139,706	133,517	153,867	126,934	709,500	702,600
TOTAL DIRECT AND INDIRECT REVENUE.
Orissa Canals	4,848	4,549	7,456	16,110	18,200	27,000	28,500
Midnapore Canal	11,622	11,111	13,699	17,009	17,071	22,100	26,000
Tidal Canal	5,289	2,293	4,503	6,228	6,079	6,100	6,100
Sone Canals	—	5,090	7,318	10,130	43,763	51,500	56,000
Ganges Canal	201,988	212,882	230,154	250,453	261,114	271,500	245,000
Agra "	55	3,709	8,952	21,467	42,633	35,900	43,500
Lower Ganges Canal	—	—	—	—	—	9,100	18,000
Western Jumna "	91,290	100,872	87,813	99,210	113,056	117,400	114,000
Bari Doab "	64,663	77,189	59,270	56,963	80,606	98,400	108,400
Other projects	10,462	11,984	16,036	25,372	25,748	27,900	35,100
TOTAL	508,309	569,385	558,718	656,749	740,204	1,376,400	1,383,200
WORKING EXPENSES.
Orissa Canals	19,643	20,762	21,466	21,607	23,909	25,100	29,700
Midnapore Canal	13,043	10,740	17,128	20,932	17,283	12,900	12,900
Tidal Canal	3,453	3,904	1,243	3,056	2,318	2,700	2,400
Sone Canals	—	11,543	19,959	25,241	37,051	41,300	32,800
Ganges Canal	97,323	105,462	105,640	97,879	96,991	102,100	94,000
Agra "	4,576	8,319	11,613	13,792	18,359	19,700	20,100
Lower Ganges Canal	—	—	—	—	450	9,100	21,000
Western Jumna "	33,874	37,516	38,337	41,873	51,436	46,100	40,100
Bari Doab "	35,746	48,094	55,365	52,398	41,543	46,500	46,700
Other projects	41,337	98,418	92,605	86,239	91,710	106,300	92,600
TOTAL	247,495	350,768	363,356	364,458	381,550	411,800	393,000
NET REVENUE.
Orissa Canals	-14,795	-16,213	-14,010	-5,497	-5,709	1,900	-1,200
Midnapore Canal	-1,421	-5,629	-3,429	-3,373	-212	9,200	13,100
Tidal Canal	1,836	-1,611	3,260	3,172	3,761	3,400	3,700
Sone Canals	—	-6,453	-12,641	-15,111	6,712	10,200	23,200
Ganges Canal	146,580	170,006	179,393	224,873	231,304	236,300	217,300
Agra Canal	-4,521	-4,610	-2,661	10,184	23,774	16,200	23,400
Lower Ganges Canal	—	—	—	—	-450	—	-3,100
Western Jumna Canal	94,072	103,484	87,469	94,713	77,557	93,000	85,600
Bari Doab Canal	45,547	45,746	5,534	16,408	56,801	66,600	71,700
Other projects	-7,064	-60,989	-50,903	-35,078	-34,834	527,800	553,500
TOTAL	200,814	238,627	195,862	292,291	353,654	964,600	990,200
IRRIGATION AND NAVIGATION WORKS. (Not classed as Productive Public Works.)
GROSS DIRECT REVENUE.
Eastern Jumna Canal	61,111	59,249	56,541	57,563	63,198	72,900	60,300
Other projects	22,741	20,053	29,593	19,333	23,908	29,300	30,200
TOTAL	83,852	79,302	86,137	76,896	87,106	102,200	90,500
INDIRECT REVENUE.
Eastern Jumna Canal	16,989	22,152	22,153	22,680	22,153	22,200	22,200
Other projects	95,825	131,608	123,430	125,987	134,181	137,000	222,900
TOTAL	112,814	153,760	145,633	148,667	156,334	259,200	245,100
TOTAL DIRECT AND INDIRECT REVENUE.
Eastern Jumna Canal	78,100	81,401	78,694	80,243	85,351	95,100	82,500
Other projects	118,296	157,661	153,076	145,349	158,085	216,300	253,100
TOTAL	196,396	239,062	231,770	225,593	243,396	311,400	335,600
WORKING EXPENSES.
Eastern Jumna Canal	20,171	23,027	21,474	20,357	20,415	18,700	19,600
Other projects	95,933	108,947	108,489	109,822	95,925	91,500	94,300
TOTAL	116,104	131,974	129,963	130,179	116,340	110,200	113,900
NET REVENUE.
Eastern Jumna Canal	57,929	58,374	57,220	59,886	64,936	76,400	62,900
Other projects	22,363	42,714	44,587	35,518	62,114	124,800	158,800
TOTAL	80,292	101,088	101,807	95,404	127,050	201,200	221,700

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

NOTIFICATION.

Fort William, the 24th February 1880.

In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 23 of the Sea Customs Act, 1878, the Governor General in Council has exempted the following articles from the duties of Customs to which they are liable under Schedule B of the Indian Tariff Act, 1875 :—

INDIGO, all sorts.

LAC, all sorts.

This Notification shall take effect on and after the 25th February 1880.

R. B. CHAPMAN,

Secy. to the Govt. of India.

No. 20.

EXTRACTS from a RESOLUTION of the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, February 24th, 1880,
No. 985 (Financial).

Para. 121. The net cost of the military operations in Afghanistan recorded in the accounts of 1878–79 is 676,381*l.*, a close approximation to the estimate (670,000*l.*) made in paragraph 142 of the last financial statement. Against this must be set the gains which may be attributed to these operations under the heads of Railways and Telegraphs. It is not possible to estimate with precision either these gains, or, on the other hand, the extra expenditure in the general administration, both military and civil, in consequence of the rise of prices in Upper India attendant upon these operations. But the ultimate net total cost of the operations in Afghanistan recorded in the accounts of 1878–79 may be fairly estimated at 575,000*l.*

* * * * *

130. The original estimates provided for an abnormal military expenditure of 2,000,000*l.* for the war in Afghanistan (see para. 262 of the last statement). In consequence of the renewal of hostilities, that provision has now been increased to 4,886,000*l.*, as follows :—

	£
Military expenditure proper	3,137,000
Frontier railways	1,670,000
Post office †	37,000
Telegraphs	42,000
Total	4,886,000

Of which 4,656,000*l.* is provided under 36, Army, and 230,000*l.* under 32, Railways.

Moreover, instead of 10,000*l.*, as granted, a famine expenditure of 99,000*l.* is now estimated. So that the regular estimates provide for an abnormal expenditure amounting to 4,985,000*l.*, as follows :—

	£
War	4,886,000
Famine	99,000
Total	4,985,000

On the other hand, it is estimated that the railway and telegraph revenues are net better by reason of the war than they would otherwise have been by about 300,000*l.* Then, but for war and famine, the regular estimates would have shown a surplus revenue, as compared with ordinary expenditure, amounting to 4,769,000*l.* or about 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ millions sterling.

* * * * *

† Besides expenditure on military train.

171. 36 & XXIX. Army.—Net expenditure, 20,143,000*l.*; increase, 2,768,000*l.*

This is in consequence of the renewal of hostilities in Afghanistan, and, in particular, to provide for the construction of the railways to Kandahar and Peshawar. The original grant included 2,000,000*l.* for the operations in Afghanistan. The regular estimate contains the following provisions:—

				£
Military expenditure proper	-	-	-	3,137,000
Frontier railways	-	-	-	1,440,000
Construction of telegraphs	-	-	-	42,000
Post office	-	-	-	37,000
Total	-	-	-	4,656,000

Apart from these operations, the regular estimate is for a net expenditure of 15,487,000*l.*, being in excess of the estimate by 112,000*l.*, which is due to high prices.

187. The estimated expenditure in 1880–81 includes grants for 4,360,000*l.* for the military operations in Afghanistan, as follows:—

				£
Military operations proper	-	-	-	1,978,000
Frontier railways	-	-	-	2,270,000
Telegraphs	-	-	-	72,000
Post office †	-	-	-	40,000
Total	-	-	-	4,360,000

Of which 4,130,000*l.* is shown under 36, Army, and 230,000*l.* under 32, Railways.

Against this must be set an improvement in the railway and telegraph revenues, estimated at 300,000*l.*, leaving the net charge for the war upon the estimates of 1880–81 at 4,060,000*l.* It may be safely said that, but for the war expenditure, the true surplus upon the estimates, to compare with the standard surplus of 2,000,000*l.* (less famine and other abnormal expenditure), would not have been less than 4,000,000*l.*

236. 36 & XXIX. Army.—Net expenditure, 19,460,000*l.*; decrease, 683,000*l.* Army. Apart from the war in Afghanistan, the estimate is for 15,330,000*l.*; decrease, 157,000*l.*, which is based upon the expectation that prices will fall. Provision is made here for the operations in Afghanistan as follows:—

				£
Military expenditure proper	-	-	-	1,978,000
Frontier railways	-	-	-	2,040,000
Telegraphs	-	-	-	72,000
Post office	-	-	-	40,000
Total	-	-	-	4,130,000

Besides 230,000*l.* under 32 railways.

Thus the whole cost of the military operations in Afghanistan are now estimated as follows:—

				£
In 1878–79	-	-	-	676,381
1879–80	-	-	-	4,886,000
1880–81	-	-	-	4,360,000
Total	-	-	-	9,922,381

Of which—

				£
For the frontier railways	-	-	-	3,940,000
For the military operations proper, including telegraphs and post office	-	-	-	5,982,381

† Besides the military transport train worked by the post office for the military authorities.

Expenditure.

The net improved revenues attributed to the war amount to 701,381 $\frac{1}{2}$., as follows :—

1878-79	-	-	-	-	£ 101,381
1879-80	-	-	-	-	300,000
1880-81	-	-	-	-	300,000

701,381 to the end of 1880-81.

So that the net cost of the war is now estimated at 9,221,000 $\frac{1}{2}$., or say 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ millions, of which about 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ millions (net) may be set down for the railways, and 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ millions (net) for the military operations proper.

Stores.

All stores bought expressly for the war are included in these estimates, but not the wear and tear of equipments or the expenditure and waste of stores in excess of the normal amounts. It has been found impossible to obtain any estimate of the money equivalent of such expenditure and waste. It occurs not so much in the article of ammunition, of which the expenditure is never large, as in camp equipage, and cannot be ascertained till the campaign is over. Meanwhile the reserve stores in the arsenals are being maintained at their proper standard, the cost of replenishment being, as usual, charged as current expenditure.

No. 21.

EXTRACTS of a LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, February 25th, 1880,
No. 81 (Financial).

Paragraph 9. Our decision to endeavour to carry on the public service during 1880/81 without a loan may entail upon us some inconvenience in the course of the year, by reason of the depletion of our balances. But we deliberately determined to face this inconvenience, in order that we might announce so satisfactory an evidence of the sound state of our finances. We anticipate no difficulty in obtaining temporary assistance during the year, in case of need; and we shall not hesitate to propose a loan, if, despite our present anticipations to the contrary, events show that we ought to increase our funded debt.

Paragraph 11. We have no further objection to make to your Lordship's requisition upon us for 16,900,000 $\frac{1}{2}$., to be remitted by bills in 1880/81. In the press of business, we had overlooked the fact that the remittance of even this large sum will hardly more than suffice for the current requirements of the Home Treasury. We consider that we should never willingly, or only to support the exchange, allow our remittances to fall below this standard. It may be proper that we should use discretion in going beyond this standard, and choose our opportunity for a reduction of our sterling debt with discrimination; but it must in our opinion seldom, if ever, be proper for us to seek temporary relief, whether from the drain upon our treasuries or the losses of an unfavourable exchange, by remitting less than the current requirements of the Home Treasury, and thus increasing our sterling debt.

Paragraph 14. Your Lordship will observe that, in obedience to your instructions, we have entered under the head of the Army, instead of under their appropriate heads, all the charges which can be traced to the war. Doubtless this method is, in some respects, convenient; nevertheless, we deem it inconsistent with the principles upon which our accounts are classified, and destructive of the integrity of the heads under which the transferred charges would, but for your Lordship's instructions, have appeared. Accordingly, as already intimated, we should have preferred to follow the course taken in the case of famine, namely, to leave all charges to fall naturally under their appropriate heads of record without regard to their origin, and then, without interference with the Finance and Revenue Accounts, to extract the revenues and charges belonging to the war into a separate account or statement. We shall still be glad to be authorised to dispose of these charges in this manner, in the Accounts of 1879/80 and in future Estimates.

No. 22.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, March 13, 1880.

We were not prepared for your drawing more than eight weeks at 45 lacs, and earnestly hope that you will now reduce as much as possible. We shall not be able to meet continued drawings at 45 or even 40 lacs without borrowing, which we are extremely anxious to avoid as long as possible.

No. 23.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, March 15, 1880.

Total drawings 1880/81, for which you prepared in Budget, require 39 lacs weekly. If we reduce now, we cannot make up deficiency later. With 14 millions cash balance, why cannot you meet 45 now?

No. 24.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, March 17, 1880.

Your Lordship's telegram 15th. Opening balance 14 crores estimate only; remains to be seen whether it will be realized. Estimated closing balance only 11½ crores, which means only 8 crores in October, November. We have to meet constant military drain, ultimate aggregate amount of which quite uncertain. We cannot therefore too strongly deprecate your drawing at outset more than average 39 lacs, and earnestly trust you may be able substantially to reduce more. Securely, in our present circumstances, we cannot drain our Treasury here, in order to remit in advance. Can you not increase your bills from November as easily as now?

No. 25.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, March 20, 1880.

Experience shows large demand in November cannot be reckoned on. Important to draw when market is good; and, for interest of India, must continue 45 while present large demand lasts. Apparently nothing new in situation since Budget was published.

No. 26.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, March 23, 1880.

Your telegram 20th. (1.) We made no provision for any advance. (2.) Since estimate was framed, we have sent to form reserves, and to accumulate immediately six months' supplies for troops in field. (3.) Abnormally large opium crops expected. All phenomena indicating correctness of my telegram 13th. Cost of war still quite uncertain. We cannot possibly acquiesce in a continued accumulation of 45 allotments.

No. 27.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, March 24, 1880.

Yours yesterday. Most anxious to meet all reasonable wishes, but 16,900,000*l.* essential, and agreed to in your Letter 81 of 25th February, and adopted in your Budget. In forecasting drawings necessary to obtain that sum, I feel reduction at this period would prevent our obtaining whole amount, as average cannot be drawn throughout summer. Nor can I borrow here without violating pledges given to Parliament. Refer to concluding passage of para. 52 of my Despatch 17th July last, and to para 9 of your Letter 81 of 25th February. You must obtain temporary assistance until you can raise a loan in India for Productive Works, which seems, from what you say, almost inevitable. If terms good to-day, I must continue drawing 45.

No. 28.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 8, 1880.

Outgoing from our treasury for the war very alarming, far exceeding estimate. Immediate loan highly objectionable; indeed, as we cannot now estimate amount necessary to carry us through year, essential to postpone loan till we can see our way more clearly. Our Budget arrangements were made on the confident assumption that weekly allotments of 45 lacs would not exceed 8. If you now continue such allotments we cannot answer for the consequences. Inconvenience may result hereafter. We consider it essential that you should reduce temporarily to at most 30 lacs. We feel no confidence that even this will give us sufficient relief. We shall ask you to enlarge again as soon as we can safely do so.

No. 29.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 8, 1880.

Telegraph immediately present state of your balances.

No. 30.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 9, 1880.

Yours 8th. Much surprised by contents. What has caused unexpected and excessive war demand? I reduce to 40 lacs in notice next week, but further sudden drop, in middle of busy season, to 30 lacs would excite much adverse criticism, and probably cause Indian securities to fall in value. Obtain temporary assistance to meet present pressure.

No. 31.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 10, 1880.

Balance end of February 13,103 lacs;* estimated balance end of March 1,260; April 1,075; May only 897 lacs; but such estimates are usually too unfavourable. Excessive military drain chiefly explains deficiency from the regular Estimate.

No. 32.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 13, 1880.

From yours 10th it appears there is an unexpected deficiency by end of May, when balances should be about same as at end of March, of $5\frac{1}{4}$ crores. Allowing 1 crore for excess bills and opium, there remains $4\frac{1}{4}$ crores. How is this accounted for? What is your present estimate of war expenditure, excluding railways, for 1879/80 and 1880/81, and what for each month from February to June 1880 inclusive? Please explain why estimated deficiency of $1\frac{1}{2}$ crores in March, and change in situation, were not reported sooner. As you evidently must have a loan, it is most important not to damage your credit by suddenly reducing drawings. Bills will, therefore, be advertised for 40 lacs for at least next two weeks. Surely this small addition of 10 lacs weekly over your proposed 30, and payable in May, cannot materially affect your position.

No. 33.

DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, April 15, 1880, No. 119 (Financial).†

MY LORD,

Para. 1. It is with much regret that I have found myself unable to accede to the request contained in your telegrams of the 13th, 17th and 23rd of March, for a reduction of the amount of bills which is now being weekly offered for sale; and I desire to draw the attention of your Government to the following considerations.

2. At the time of the pressure on your Treasury arising from the famine in Southern India, your difficulties were greatly relieved by the reduction of the drawings of the Secretary of State in Council. The balances of the Home Treasury were thereby brought down to an unusually low point; but the strain caused by the war last year prevented the remittance by you of the sum needed to replenish them. The arrangements made with regard to the payment of the East Indian Railway annuity and the dividend on the India 4 per cent. stock issued in exchange for that at 5 per cent. will, however, throw on the Home Treasury an additional expenditure of 920,000*l.* in April 1881, which, together with the other liabilities, will involve a payment of upwards of 1,900,000*l.* between the 1st and 5th of April in that and future years. In view of this state of affairs, it became evident that, considering the improved condition of your finances, it would not be prudent longer to delay the remittance from India of the amount required to bring the cash balances in the Home Treasury on the 31st of March 1881 up to a sum of about 2,000,000*l.*

3. Accordingly, in the estimate forwarded with my Despatch of the 11th of December last, No. 484, the cash balance on the 31st of March 1881 was taken at 1,958,525*l.* (which was altered to 1,985,825*l.* by my telegram of the 7th of

* Sic. ? Rs. 13,10,30,000.

† Approved by the Secretary of State in Council, April 13th.

February), and, for this purpose, it was calculated that 16,900,000% must be remitted from India in the year 1880-81, at an average of 39 lacs a week.

4. On receiving that Despatch, your Excellency, in a Letter, dated the 7th of January, No. 9, requested me to reduce the demand to 16,000,000%, and, in order to judge whether it was absolutely necessary that I should accede to the request, at the risk of great inconvenience in this country, I inquired at what amount you estimated your surplus in 1880-81, and your cash balance at the close of that year.

5. In reply, you telegraphed on the 14th of February that the surplus was estimated at about 40 lacs; and the balance in India on the 31st of March 1881 at 1,225 lacs, after borrowing 150 lacs. As I could see no reason why you should abstain from borrowing the full amount of $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores which has been authorised for outlay on Productive Public Works, if it was needed to give you the requisite balance, I informed you, by a telegram of the 17th of February, that, holding that view, I considered your arguments not sufficient to justify me in borrowing here, even temporarily, which would be necessary if the drawings were reduced.

6. On receiving this decision, your Government determined to announce the Financial Estimate for the coming year, as reported in your Excellency's telegram of the 24th of February, as showing a surplus of 417,000%, the drawings of the Home Government being taken at 16,900,000%; and you added that "no loan" was "to be raised in coming year according to present intentions, unless events "not now foreseen occur, but power to borrow in case of need reserved." The closing balances would, however, be reduced to 11,444,000%.

7. In the 9th paragraph of your Letter of the 25th of February, No. 81, it is stated that this "decision to endeavour to carry on the public service during "1880-81 without a loan may entail upon us some inconvenience in the course "of the year, by reason of the depletion of our balances. But," you add, "we deliberately determined to face this inconvenience in order that we might "announce so satisfactory an evidence of the sound state of our finances."

8. I find it difficult to reconcile with these words the request made in your telegram of the 13th of March, that I would reduce my drawings as much as possible, because you would "not be able to meet continued drawings at 45 or "even 40 lacs without borrowing."

9. In the 52nd paragraph of my Despatch of the 17th of July 1879, No. 261, I pointed out the importance of your "making such arrangements in future years "as will admit of the largest drawings at the time when your treasuries are at "the fullest, if the rate of exchange should then be favourable," as drawings on a large scale in the summer can never be relied on, and it is necessary that the heavier portion of the demand should be placed on the market in the height of the export season, if the average required throughout the year is to be preserved. In 1878 an allotment of 50 lacs was made each week, from the 6th of March to the 8th of May; and, similarly, in this year, having taken care that the total drawings in 1879-80 should not put a greater strain on your treasury than you were prepared to meet,* I deemed it essential that, with the prospect of a large trade and a rising rate of exchange, the opportunity of receiving in the month of April some considerable portion of the remittances required during the year should not be thrown away. Your available balances, moreover, as estimated for the 31st of March 1880, were at a higher point than they had been in recent years,†

* Drawings in 1879-80.

		Rs.
Original estimate	-	18,95,20,000
Revised estimate of 16th October 1879	-	18,94,52,059
Actual drawings :		Rs.
Bills	-	18,35,00,000
Gold	-	60,71,681
Total	-	Rs. 18,95,71,681

† Balances in India 31st March.

		Rs.
1877	-	12,75,06,980
		Rs.
1878	-	14,49,83,020
Less Cash Subscriptions to Transfer Loan	-	1,40,94,800
	-	13,08,88,220
1879	-	12,79,21,530
1880 (estimate)	-	14,19,30,750

and there seemed no reason why my demands should not be met for the time, your balances being subsequently replenished either by a loan for productive works, or by temporary assistance, which you state that you anticipate no difficulty in obtaining.

10. Your Excellency inquires whether it would not be possible to increase the bills from November as easily as now, but at that time of year the demand on account of the ensuing export season has scarcely commenced, and, as a matter of fact, it has been found impossible to be sure of obtaining even a moderate amount at that time, regardless of the rate at which tenders may be made.

11. I am thus forced to the conclusion that, unless the drawings are continued so long as there is a good demand for bills, there would be no alternative but to raise money by borrowing in England at a later period of the year. Such a step would, in my opinion, be far more damaging to the credit of the Government than the raising of a loan in India; and as, moreover, the necessity for it would manifestly have been caused by your refraining from strengthening your balances by the usual loan in India, while proceeding to incur an outlay of more than three millions sterling during the year on Productive Public Works, it would be alleged that it was the expenditure on such works which made the occasion for borrowing in this country, and hence the recommendations of the Select Committee of the House of Commons would have been disregarded, and the pledges given by Her Majesty's Government to Parliament would have been violated.

12. Independently, too, of these considerations, there are grave objections to any addition to the sterling debt. Many measures have been adopted in recent years which, though reducing the Military and Civil expenditure in India, have added considerably to the non-effective charges in this country; and the policy of constructing public works through the agency of the State, while greatly increasing the payments for stores purchased in England, has led to a discontinuance of the raising and deposit in the Home Treasury of railway capital which for many years aided the Government in meeting the demands. On extraordinary emergencies, such as the famine in Southern India, it may become impossible to avoid resorting to a loan in England, again increasing the expenditure for which remittances must be made from India. From these and similar causes, it has happened that the amount of bills which it has been necessary to offer for sale has risen from 6,789,473*l.* in 1864-65 to 13,939,095*l.* in 1872-73 (in neither of which years was any money raised by loan in this country), and is now further increased to 17,000,000*l.* (reduced to 15,900,000*l.* by the loan from the British Government) in 1879-80, and 16,900,000*l.* for 1880-81. Borrowing in England merely to reduce the amount of the Secretary of State's drawings, can only purchase temporary relief at the expense of greater embarrassment hereafter, and it must be obvious that, unless some reduction of the debt in England be made in seasons of financial prosperity, the time may come when it will be impossible to meet the increasing requirements of the Home Government by drafts on India.

13. I trust that you will find no serious difficulty in surmounting the present inconvenience caused by my decision, and that on another occasion your financial arrangements will be so made that no doubt may exist as to your power of meeting drawings of even 50 lacs a week at this period of the year, if the necessities of the Home Treasury and the condition of the market make it desirable to offer so large an amount.

14. I have only further to observe that it is, in my opinion, better that a moderate sum should be borrowed each year for productive works, than that the cash balances should be dangerously reduced at one season and be refilled by an unusually large loan in the following year.

15. Since this Despatch was written, I have received your Excellency's further telegram of the 8th instant, stating that the outgoing from your Treasury for the war is very alarming, far exceeding the estimate, and that it is, in your opinion, essential that the drawings should be temporarily reduced to at most 30 lacs a week, though you feel no confidence that even this will give you sufficient relief. Your telegram gave no information regarding the state of your balances, and I therefore inquired on the same day what is the present amount.

16. In the discussion which took place in the Legislative Council on the 2nd of March, your Excellency referred to the remarkable accuracy of your estimates of the expenditure on the war, so far as it had yet been possible to verify them; and I am not aware of any development of the military operations which was not foreseen, and should not have been provided for, two months ago, when the net cost was estimated at 4,060,000*l.* during the year 1880–81, including the frontier railways, or about 2,000,000*l.* for the military operations proper.

17. Assuming, however, that, in addition to this outlay of 2,000,000*l.* during the whole year, you now find it probable that further expenditure to even the extent of another 2,000,000*l.* will be needed during the next six months, your balances can in July, if not earlier, be replenished by a loan of 2½ millions for Productive Public Works, and they will then, if in other respects your estimates prove correct, be higher than they were taken when Sir John Strachey made his Financial Statement.

18. Moreover, I am apprehensive that the sudden reduction of the drawings which you urge would impress the public with the belief that your estimates were untrustworthy, and that some emergency was anticipated which made it necessary for the Home Government to come to your assistance. I have, accordingly, not thought it right to invite tenders on the 21st instant for less than 40 lacs, but a further reduction will be made as soon as the position of the market and the requirements of the Home Treasury justify such a step.

19. The following telegram was sent to your Excellency on the 9th instant :—
 “ Yours 8th. Much surprised by contents. What has caused unexpected
 “ and excessive war demand? I reduce to 40 lacs in notice next week,
 “ but further sudden drop in middle of busy season to 30 lacs would excite “ much adverse criticism, and probably cause Indian securities to fall in value.
 “ Obtain temporary assistance to meet present pressure.”

I have, &c.

CRANBROOK.

No. 34.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 15th 1880.

Your Lordship's telegram 13th. Some mistake must have occurred in the transmission of my message of the 10th. Balances then telegraphed were, March 1,260 ; May 897 ; difference 363, not 525 lacs. Bills paid intermediately are a principal factor in the relation between March and May balances. In 1878 we paid 363, and balances fell 21 lacs. This year we expected, on the assumption that the 45 allotments would continue, to pay 405 lacs, besides which we estimated our war expenditure 125 lacs. We are carefully revising war estimate by our present information, and telegraph result soon. Balances telegraphed on your requisition on 10th were usual monthly estimate, compiled by the Comptroller from the returns of the Accountant General, which had been received only on the 9th. As already said, such estimates are ordinarily too low, and are useful only as general indication of the prospect of our resources. We will telegraph actual March balances in a fortnight. We will not object further to your drawing 40 lacs twice, and then reducing to 35, leaving for future consideration whether we can dispense with further reduction. We have ascertained that, in case of need meantime, Bengal Bank can give us temporary assistance. We must probably issue loan early in May for the full amount of our productive expenditure. Whether even this will suffice for the service of the year will depend on actual cost of the war.

No. 35.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 19th 1880.

Your explanation by no means accounts for whole anticipated reduction of balances from Budget estimate 1,419 lacs on 31st March. Send as soon as possible detailed letter, explaining wide deviation from original Budget. Telegraph proposals regarding loan, before announcing.

No. 36.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 20th 1880.

Until clearer idea can be formed of the probable course of events in Afghanistan, and probable date of our withdrawal from the country, which we are most anxious to complete as quickly as possible, it is impossible to frame with any confidence revised estimate of the future and total cost of the war. The following statement of our present anticipation must be, therefore, taken with great reserve, and may hereafter require much correction :—

War expenditure in February and March estimated at 75 lacs monthly. Nevertheless, regular estimate of expenditure recorded in the account of last year may not be much exceeded, although we shall have adjusted as much as possible in the account of that year.

With regard to this year, it was hoped, when the Budget estimates were made, that the war expenditure would be more rapidly reduced by the withdrawal of our troops than has been since found possible. On the contrary, the number of troops has been greatly increased, in order to meet new combinations and probability of attack in various directions; and it is clear that troops cannot be withdrawn as soon as had been hoped.

Expenditure on carriage and supplies of all kinds has greatly increased. Prices have become enormous. Famine rates rule at Peshawur and Rawul Pindee. Probable result will be a large increase of expenditure over Budget estimate.

From April inclusive, monthly expenditure is now estimated at 50 lacs. If the war continues for six months on something like present scale, estimate of two crores may have to be increased to $5\frac{1}{2}$ or 6 crores, of which one crore may possibly not be recorded till next year. If the regular estimate of the expenditure to be recorded in the account of last year be exceeded, preceding estimate for two later years may be proportionately reduced; on the other hand, if the expenditure recorded in the account of last year is less than regular estimate, it may be increased.

We shall telegraph immediately about proposed loan.

No. 37.

MINUTE by MR. STANHOPE, Under Secretary of State for India, April 21, 1880, on the Expenditure for the Afghan War.

LORD CRANBROOK,

ALTHOUGH our information is at present much too meagre to enable us to form any confident opinion, yet the recent financial telegrams from India appear to disclose a state of things which is disheartening, and comes upon the India Office as a complete surprise. It may be well at this juncture to place on record the information we possessed as to the expenditure for the Afghan War.

The Budget of 1879–80 had estimated the war expenditure in Afghanistan for 1878–79 at 670,000*l.*, and for 1879–80 at two millions. On the 9th of September 1879, after the commencement of renewed hostilities, a telegram from the Viceroy informed us that, “although it is of course impossible now to estimate future military expenditure in Afghanistan, it is desirable that Her Majesty’s Government should know that in all other respects our financial prospects seem to us very favourable.” And, after giving certain details of improvement, which were expected to result in a surplus of three millions, it is added, “We hope this will more than suffice to meet all probable additional expenditure in Afghanistan” in the year 1880–81.

On 24th December 1879 another telegram from the Viceroy informed us that the revised estimates for 1879–80 showed an improvement on the Budget estimate (apart from war) of no less than 3,819,000*l.*, so that, after allowing $2\frac{1}{2}$ millions for frontier railways, and one million for the war, in addition to the amount estimated in the Budget, the estimated deficit upon the year 1879–80 would be reduced from 1,395,000*l.* to 1,036,000*l.*

The estimates themselves, received on the 12th of January 1880, fully bore out these statements. But the letter enclosing them added :—

“4. The extra one million which we have entered under ‘Army,’ is, as yet, only a very rough forecast. Until the situation in Afghanistan is more settled than at present, and until we are in a position to determine our future policy in regard to that country, it is impossible to say, with any approach to accuracy, even what the whole cost of the military operations there will be, much less how much will be brought to account during the current year.

"5. All that we can say at present is, that we estimate the whole cost of all the military operations in Afghanistan, original and renewed, to the end of the current year, 1879-80, at 3,600,000*l.*, of which about 600,000*l.* is recorded in the accounts of 1878-79."

In a private letter from Sir J. Strachey, dated 19th December 1879, and received in the middle of January, he adds, "Considering the nature of the data which have been at our disposal, the estimates of the cost of the military operations have hitherto been singularly near the truth, and they have erred rather on the side of being too high than too low."

Speaking at Hackney, on the 19th January 1880, I said of the estimates for the war that they "are made in India by gentlemen of undoubted integrity and financial reputation. . . Their statements have hitherto been singularly accurate, and I have no reason to suppose they will be otherwise than accurate for the future." And then I added, "We shall approach the Budget of next year (1880-81) without any apprehension whatever. And as regards the current year (1879-80), I believe that we shall be able to meet, not only the largely increased cost of operations of the Afghan war, but also all the charges for the frontier railways we are pushing on, which is no less than 2½ millions for the current year, and we shall be able to meet it, I say, out of surplus revenue."

On the 19th of February 1880, the Secretary of State in Council, in acknowledging the receipt of the revised estimates, stated that they "give, on the whole, a highly satisfactory view of your finances."

On the 24th of February a telegram from the Viceroy gave the details of the annual budget, as follows:—

"Results are highly favourable. In 1878-79, surplus 2,044,000*l.*; in 1879-80, surplus 119,000*l.*; budget estimate 1880-81, surplus 417,000*l.* Foregoing figures in each case are after paying from ordinary revenue all charges for famine, Afghan war, and frontier railways.

"War charges, 1878-79, 676,000*l.*; 1879-80, 3,216,000*l.*; 1880-81, 2,090,000*l.* Setting off increase railways and telegraph revenues, total net expenditure on war to end of 1880-81, 5¾ millions. Frontier railways, present year 1,670,000*l.*, next year 2,270,000*l.*; total, 3½ millions. . . . War estimates have hitherto proved very accurate, and are believed to be ample for all contingencies now contemplated."

The Financial Statement itself (received in London on March 12th) states:—

"8. The original estimates provided for an additional military expenditure of 2,000,000*l.* for the war in Afghanistan. If the war had ended with the treaty of Gundamak, I believe that this estimate would not have been exceeded. . . ."

"27. The estimates of the cost of the war must, of course, be to a great extent speculative; but they have been prepared with much care, and their accuracy up to the present time is highly creditable to Major Newmarch and the Military Department. There is no reason to suppose that they err on the side of being too low. To what extent it will be found hereafter that stores, chiefly camp equipage, have been expended and wasted and lost, we cannot possibly know accurately until the war is over; but everything bought for the war is included in the estimates, and the reserves in our arsenals are being maintained at their proper standard, the cost being charged for the present as current expenditure."

It will be seen that, whereas the revised estimates in December had shown that (apart from war) the prospects of 1879-80 had improved by no less than 3,819,000*l.*, the circumstances had so far changed in February that the improvement was estimated at 4,400,000*l.*, while the war expenditure payable in the financial year 1879-80 was expected to exceed the December estimate only by 216,000*l.* The estimate of war expenditure in 1880-81, including, as it did, the charge for further military operations, was, of course, of a more uncertain character: Upon this estimate, of course, various opinions have been expressed at the India Office; but as regards that for the year 1879-80 I never heard any doubt expressed there, and indeed it was in India alone that any data existed for framing either of them.

So satisfied did the Government of India appear to be with their estimates, that they not only remitted certain export duties, and unanimously resolved to abandon the proposed extension of the License Tax, but they also refused to borrow anything at all, even in aid of the capital expenditure upon productive Public Works, and they pressed forward, as a charge upon the revenue of the year, an extensive system of frontier railways.

In the "Times" of Monday, 8th March, a long telegram described the debate on the budget which had taken place in Calcutta on the previous Tuesday, and the Viceroy in the course of his speech was reported to have said, "He now came to Mr. Gladstone's last allegation.* It was that the Indian Government had deliberately falsified its military accounts to conceal the real cost of the Afghan war." After expressing his indignation at the charge, he went on to add: "So far from seeking to conceal the true cost of the war, they had charged against it all stores and material, as well as the cost of frontier railways, telegraphs, and postal communication."

The text of the Viceroy's speech, since received, confirms this account, and he goes on to say: "Our estimates, so far as it has hitherto been possible to verify them, have proved to be remarkably accurate."

On the 12th of March there was a debate in the House of Commons on the cost of the Afghan war, when I took occasion in answer to Mr. Gladstone to deny the statement that the full cost of the war had not been put forward, and said that I believed that the Government of India "had put forward as honestly as any Government could, every item of expenditure that could possibly be included" in the cost.

Up to that time no information, either public or private, had reached us, which tended to show that the estimates for the war would be exceeded, and it was only on the 17th of March that the first note of alarm was sounded, in a telegram from the Viceroy which stated, "Opening balance, 14 crores, estimate only; remains to be seen whether it will be realized. . . . We have to meet constant military drain, ultimate aggregate amount of which quite uncertain." Even this telegram, as it referred only to an increase in our drawings from 40 to 45 lacs, did not seem to be very serious. At this time the annual migration to Simla was commencing, and Sir John Strachey had already left Calcutta.

On the 23rd of March we heard further, "cost of war still quite uncertain," and on the 8th of April, "outgoing from our Treasury for the war very alarming, far exceeding estimate." All these telegrams, with the answers to them, were, according to the usual course, submitted to the Finance Committee and your Council.

It is no part of my present purpose to make any comment on these recent telegrams, which may, I hope, prove to be exaggerated, but as to which much further information is required.

EDWARD STANHOPE.

No. 38.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 21, 1880.

With reference to my telegram of yesterday, we consider it essential to raise as quickly as possible loan of 330 lacs of rupees, being full estimated expenditure on productive works. For the reason given in our Budget Despatch we propose $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. loan. Draft notification will reach Financial Secretary 6th May, which we propose publishing 7th. Please publish simultaneously, substituting amount herein telegraphed, leaving all dates unchanged.

We hope Her Majesty's Government will borrow in London anything that may be necessary additional during the year, if, in consequence of prolongation of the war, further help becomes unavoidable. May we promise that nothing more will be borrowed in India?

* This, Mr. Gladstone, on 12th March 1880, explains to have never been "his allegation. It was the allegation of others, given to him with such an appearance of truth that he thought it right to mention it publicly, in order that if inaccurate it might be contradicted."

No. 39.

DESPATCH to the Government of India, April 22, 1880, No. 133 (Financial).

MY LORD,

Para. 1. In the 16th paragraph of my Despatch of the 15th instant, No. 119, I mentioned that I had found it necessary to telegraph, on the 8th of April, for information regarding the present amount of your cash balances, and in the last paragraph I referred to the telegram which I addressed to your Excellency on the following day, inquiring the cause of the unexpected and excessive war demand, and explaining that, in view of the importance of taking no step which should adversely affect Indian securities, I could not reduce the weekly drawings below 40 lacs at present.

2. On the 10th of April your Excellency telegraphed the balance at the end of February as "13,103 lacs," which I understand to mean Rs. 13,10,30,000. The estimate of your balances at the end of March was 1,260 lacs; at the end of April 1,075 lacs, and at the end of May only 897 lacs; but you added that "such estimates are usually too unfavourable." The excessive military drain would, you stated, chiefly explain the deficiency from the regular estimate.

3. According to the estimate formed towards the close of February you anticipated a balance on the 31st of March of Rs. 14,19,30,000, and as, in normal years, the balance at the end of May is not lower than two months previously, there would have been reason to expect that the balance on the 31st of May would be as high as Rs. 14,19,30,000. Your present estimate of Rs. 8,97,00,000, therefore, shows a deficiency of Rs. 5,22,30,000, which can be only attributed to a falling off in the receipts (which has not been suggested), or to expenditure not foreseen at the time that the Budget was prepared.

4. In your telegram of the 23rd of March three reasons were assigned as having brought about a change in the situation. The first of these was the fact that, notwithstanding the explicit instructions in my Despatch of the 17th of July 1879, No. 261, para. 52, you had "made no provision for any advance," by which I understand you to mean that you had made no provision in the early part of the official year for any increase in the amount of my bills during that period above the weekly average of 39 lacs. Thus, it would seem that, although you were aware that it was necessary to draw on the average 39 lacs of rupees a week throughout the year, and had told me that you had arranged your Budget on that understanding, you had made preparation for meeting no more than that amount of bills during the latter part of April and May, to be drawn while the export season was at its height, notwithstanding the well known impossibility of maintaining such an average throughout the summer. In my Despatch of the 15th instant, I impressed upon your Excellency the necessity of meeting more than the average at such a time; and, therefore, I need now only observe that, on the assumption that you have to pay in April and May nine drawings of 45 lacs instead of two of 40 and seven of 39 lacs, for which it would appear that you estimated, the reduction of your balances attributable to this cause is only 52 lacs.

5. Another reason assigned as affecting your position is the expectation of an abnormally large opium crop. The estimated charge under the head of Opium was entered in the Budget as 2,160,000*l.*; I have no information as to the amount which you now expect to pay, but I find that the heaviest charge defrayed in any year was 2,842,000*l.*, so that the excess can scarcely be expected to exceed 682,000*l.*, of which it is improbable that the whole will be incurred by the end of May. I may observe, moreover, that this charge is of such a character that the amount should have been foreseen when your Financial Statement was made.

6. The third ground assigned for anticipating decreased balances is that, since your estimate was framed, you have "sent to form reserves and to accumulate" immediately six months' supplies for troops in field." When the Budget Statement was prepared, some portion of the sum of 3,216,000*l.* inserted in your Regular Estimate for 1879-80 must have been in hand to meet the expenditure during the five weeks which remained of the year; and you were satisfied with the provision, in addition thereto, of an amount of 2,090,000*l.* for the whole of the year 1880-81. At the very least, one sixth of the latter sum, or 350,000*l.*, must have been expected to be spent in the first two months of the official year. From your telegram of the 15th of April, I gather that you now estimate the outlay during those two months at 1,250,000*l.*, or 900,000*l.* in excess, in addition to which the difference of 1,593,000*l.* between your estimates of 24th February and 10th April, as to the amount of the closing balance on the 31st of March, is said to be chiefly due to "excessive military drain."

7. Adding together these unanticipated advances on account of Military expenditure, charges for opium, and payment of bills, I arrive at an amount of 3,693,000*l., which might possibly have to be met from your balances by the 31st of May; but this falls short by 1,530,000*l.* of the deficiency between your Budget estimate for the 31st of March and your present estimate for the end of May.†

8. Finding that, after allowing 1,000,000*l.* for the probable excess under the heads of Bills and Opium advances to the end of May, there was a difference between these two estimates of 4,223,000*l.*, I telegraphed on the 13th instant to know how this was to be accounted for, and I asked for more detailed estimates regarding the outgoings on account of war. In your reply of the 15th you observe that some mistake must have occurred, as your balances at the end of March were estimated at 1,260 lacs; but in saying this you overlook the necessity for an explanation of the discrepancy between that estimate and the former one giving 1,419 lacs. You further state that the "bills paid intermediately are a principal factor in the relation between March and May balances;" but, as the anticipated weekly drawings of 45 lacs would not in the nine weeks be more than 52 or 54 lacs above the average of 39 lacs weekly which you seem to have taken in the estimate, it cannot be admitted that such a reduction is a "principal factor" in a deficiency of either 363 or 525 lacs.†

9. It seems evident that your difficulties must mainly have arisen from an under-estimate of your liabilities in regard to the war; and I am desirous of drawing your attention to the manner in which this question has been placed before Her Majesty's Government. On the 24th of February your Financial Statement was published, showing an anticipated expenditure on account of military operations in 1880-81, amounting to 2,090,000*l.*, subject to reduction by railway and telegraph receipts. So sanguine were you of the adequacy of this estimate, that you determined not to proceed with the revision of the License Taxes which had been proposed to me as tending to remove certain inequalities felt to be injurious, and had received my cordial sanction, and you abandoned the measure, notwithstanding some urgency on my part, because you stated that in the flourishing state of your finances neither your Excellency nor any member of your Government was prepared to proceed with that part of it which involved fresh taxation. You further determined to remit the export duties on certain articles, and you resolved on the unusual step of meeting, during a time of war, an expenditure of 3,312,000*l.* for Productive Public Works, without resorting to the money market for a loan. At the same time, you informed me that you had deliberately determined to face any inconvenience resulting from the depletion of your balances, in order that you might announce so satisfactory an evidence of the sound state of your finances.

10. In reliance on these assurances, statements were made in Parliament on the part of Her Majesty's Government, in the full belief that the expectation of a surplus rested on a sure basis. Yet on the 13th of March, or less than three weeks from the time when your statement had been laid before the public with so much confidence, your Government found itself unable to meet the usual drawings at this time of year; on the 17th of March you telegraphed regarding the "constant military drain," of which the "ultimate aggregate amount" was "quite uncertain," and on the 23rd you informed me that you had been obliged "to form reserves, and to accumulate immediately six months' supplies for troops

	£
* War in February and March - - - -	1,593,000
„ in April and May - - - -	900,000
Opium advances - - - -	680,000
Bills - - - -	520,000
	£3,693,000

† NOTE.—Since this despatch was written, it has been explained that this deficiency of 1,530,000*l.* is accounted for by the drawings of the Secretary of State during March and April having been greater than in the average of previous years, so that, apart from other causes, the balances at the end of May would have been considerably less than those at the end of March.

“ in field,” in consequence of which it was impossible to fulfil your undertaking to meet the wants of the Home Treasury. It further appears that the estimate of 2,090,000*l.* was so utterly inadequate for the War expenditure to be incurred beyond that provided for 1879–80, that by the end of May a sum of nearly 2,500,000*l.* has to be met in excess of that for which you had made provision.

11. Your Excellency will of course understand that I am not now expressing any opinion as to the necessity for this unexpected charge for military expenditure, which must be determined by other than financial considerations, but I cannot avoid the conclusion that, considering the extent of the military operations in progress, it was not prudent to reject the means of improving your revenue, and of increasing your cash balances. It is now shown by your telegrams that those balances have in your opinion been reduced to so dangerous an extent, that the transfer of even 50 lacs of the home remittance to an earlier period of the year than you had estimated imposed such pressure that you “cannot answer for the consequences.” Even now that your difficulty has been laid before me, the information is so meagre and so inconsistent with the previous announcements, that, having in view the extreme importance of meeting the remittances required for the Home Treasury, the absolute necessity of raising in India whatever amount is needed for the purposes of your Government, so far as that can be done without imprudently straining the resources of the local money market, and the necessity for avoiding any sudden step which may cause Indian securities to be depreciated, I have not felt justified in making any but a gradual reduction of the drawings. In my telegram of the 10th of April, therefore, I stated that bills would be advertised for 40 lacs for at least two weeks. In your reply of the 15th your Excellency says, “We will not object further to your drawing 40 lacs twice, “and then reducing to 35, leaving for future consideration whether we can “dispense with further reduction.” I trust that, before the time arrives for deciding this point, you will have been able to send the estimate of outgoings on account of the war called for by my telegram of the 13th of April. This, however, is insufficient without a detailed explanation of the wide deviation from the original Budget; and accordingly, in my telegram of the 19th instant, I have requested that Her Majesty’s Government may be furnished with a letter as soon as possible, giving the requisite information.

12. Since this Despatch was written I have received your Excellency’s telegram of the 20th of April, from which I learn that the expenditure on military operations in February and March is estimated to have been 1,500,000*l.*, the bulk of which, however, seems likely to fall into the present year as a matter of account; and that in April and May it is expected to amount to 1,000,000*l.* It is not stated that this outlay is in excess of that provided in your Budget; but, assuming it to be so, the total of 2,500,000*l.* to the end of May corresponds almost exactly with the sum reckoned in the calculation given in the 7th paragraph of this Despatch. The discrepancy of 1,530,000*l.* in the estimates of the cash balances is therefore still unexplained.

13. In addition to the excess of 1,500,000*l.* in February and March, you now contemplate the possibility of an excess on account of the war expenditure of 3,500,000*l.* or 4,000,000*l.* in 1880–81, of which, perhaps, 1,000,000*l.* may not be brought to account till 1881–82. In place, therefore, of an anticipated surplus of 417,000*l.*, the result of the current year may be a deficit of 3½ or 4 millions, in addition to a charge of one million deferred to the following year.

I have, &c.,

CRANBROOK.

No. 40.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 22, 1880.

Yours as to proposed loan. As only holding office until successor named, cannot deal with the matter.

No. 41.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, April 29, 1880.

Actual closing balances exceed 13 crores. Chief cause of the deficiency, military outgoings underrated 60 lacs, and London bills paid 28. Revenue returns satisfactory. Aggregate collection under all principal heads approximates closely to the regular estimate.

Will telegraph further about the war expenditure immediately.

No. 42.

EXTRACT from TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, April 30, 1880.

Amount (of loan), if announced as for Productive Works only, must not exceed 313 lacs for fixed grant and East Indian; but you may advertise larger loan if war renders it necessary. Make no promises as to further borrowing. Time must be allowed me to consider proposed notification. Telegraph necessary alterations, and await approval before any publication.

No. 43.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, May 3, 1880.

Summary of Despatch regarding war estimates issuing to-morrow:—

Paras. 1 and 2 report belief that cost of war will seriously exceed estimates in Financial Statement.

Paras. 3 and 4 send memorandum by Military Accountant General, detailing manner in which estimates made, with Minute by Sir Edwin Johnson showing that estimates were examined and accepted by Military Department, and, on official advice of that Department, dated 26th January, embodied by Financial Department in Budget. Military Department maintained estimate till last, and Financial Department saw no cause for distrust.

Para. 5. Early in March, uneasiness being caused by unexpected large demands on frontier treasuries, fresh inquiries showed that drafts of Military Department so much exceeded normal payment as to suggest strong doubts of accuracy of Military Department estimates.

Para. 6. Although balances in Military treasure chests very large, and other causes mentioned may reduce obligations, cannot now doubt that total war charges will much exceed estimates.

Paras. 7 and 8. Cannot yet send satisfactory new estimates, but will telegraph latest estimates before Financial Statement made to Parliament. For the present, advise addition of at least 4 crores to estimate for 1880-81. Responsible officers of Military Department still confidently expect that 10 crores will not be nearly reached, but Financial Department fears that it may rather be exceeded. Careful inquiry as to possible neglect of precautions and individual responsibility being made. Although amount of War charges outstanding from 1879-80 and adjustable in 1880-81 will be much larger than expected, not anticipated that amount brought to account in former year will seriously differ from regular estimate. Condition of finances in all other respects as satisfactory as described in Financial Statement. We still believe that, apart from war, there would have been surplus of four millions in both past and present years, and we modify no favourable anticipations of Financial Statement.

Military Member's minute assumes complete responsibility for War Estimates; states reasons for which Military Department accepted them and recommended adoption by Financial Department, and causes which were not foreseen, and which led to their insufficiency. Among these are specially noticed purchase, instead of hire, of great proportion of transport,—purchase and transport of six months' supplies to be stored at front before hot weather,—enormous increase in price of grain supplies and stores, both at base and in Afghanistan,—necessity of paying increased wages to all followers from dread of service and other causes,—necessity of works to maintain positions and protect troops consequent on prolongation of war; local resources being exhausted, supplies and transport have to be sent from distant provinces, at constantly increasing cost. States that, when War Estimate was made, it was believed by Military Department sufficient to provide for war expenditure at rates found sufficient for preceding year. In such operations cost increases in progressive ratio with continuance.

Memorandum by Military Accountant-General shows, in detail, manner in which Estimates were prepared in usual course by the three Military Controllers, and revised by him.

We have thought it necessary to publish here greater part of Despatch and Minute to prevent mischievous misapprehensions.

No. 44.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, May 13, 1880.

April balance 1,150 lakhs.

No. 45.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, May 4, 1880, No. 142 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

By Viscount Cranbrook's telegram dated 19th April we were instructed to send, as soon as possible, a detailed letter explaining the wide deviation of the closing balance of 1879-80 from the "original budget," by which we understand his Lordship to have meant the closing balance brought out by the Regular Estimates published on the 24th February last.

2. In this instruction, Lord Cranbrook refers to the revised estimate of 1,260 lakhs as the closing balance of the year, which, in obedience to His Lordship's request, we telegraphed on the 10th April. In our message of that date, and again on the 15th April, we were careful to explain that intermediate estimates of the kind are usually too unfavourable, and that they are useful only as a general indication of the prospects of our resources. Being familiar with such estimates, and understanding exactly the degree of confidence which they deserve, we are able ourselves to appreciate their value more correctly than a distant authority can do, and we can hardly be surprised that Her Majesty's Government should have been startled by figures which, although the only estimates that we could supply, we should not have thought of reporting except in obedience to a special requisition.

3. As we have repeatedly explained, and as is, indeed, self-evident, the balances remaining at our disposal on any date are the final outcome of innumerable transactions at our numerous and widely-scattered treasuries and sub-treasuries. No estimate of the contents of our treasuries and our balances in the Presidency banks on any future day, with whatever care, experience and skill it may be made, can be, within a considerable margin, any better than a guess.

4. The actual balances in our treasuries and at our credit in the Presidency banks, on the 31st March 1880, are now reported to have aggregated 1,301 lakhs, which amount is still subject to correction when the remittances between treasuries shall have been adjusted by the Comptroller General.

5. Appendix VII. to the Financial Statement contains the figures which worked up to the closing balance of 1,419 lakhs expected according to the Regular Estimates. Until the accounts of 1879-80 are completed it will be impossible to say, with any completeness, how those figures will be altered in order to produce the balance of 1,301 lakhs now returned, or whatever may be the final adjusted balance.

6. But we are able at once to offer the following general explanations of the deficiency of the approximately actual balance of 1,301 lakhs, as compared with the 1,419 lakhs of the Regular Estimates:—

- (1.) Before closing our Regular Estimates we had ascertained by telegraph that our balances on the 31st January had aggregated approximately 1,358 lakhs. They eventually proved to be only 1,352 lakhs.

- (2.) We estimated at that time that we should pay, during February and March, Council bills for 355 lakhs. We actually paid 383 lakhs. Our under-estimate is due to the bills having been presented for payment with unusual promptitude, so that on the 1st April bills for only 20 lakhs were outstanding unpaid.
- (3.) The Military Accountant General calculated that the demands of the Military Department upon us would amount during the two months to 280, or, to be on the safe side, 300 lakhs, which sum we adopted. We shall not know our actual military disbursements for some little time; but they are not likely to have been less than 350 lakhs.
- (4.) The grant for the construction of the Jhelum and Rawal Pindi Section of the Punjab Northern State Railway having been exhausted early in March, we were obliged to allow a supplementary grant for this work of 10 lakhs,* in order that the progress of this important accessory to our military operations might not be impeded.
- (5.) Owing to a check in the Málwa Opium and Sámbar Lake Salt Trades, our principal heads of fluctuating Revenue—namely, I.—Land, IV.—Excise, V.—Assessed Taxes, VII.—Customs, VIII.—Salt, IX.—Opium, and X.—Stamps—yielded, in the aggregate, 8 lakhs less than we estimated.
7. Thus, of the 118 lakhs by which the approximately actual closing balance of 1879-80 fell short of the Regular Estimate, we can account already, roughly, for 102 lakhs, as follows:—

	Lakhs.
January balance over-estimated - - - - -	6
London Bills paid under-estimated - - - - -	28
Military disbursements under-estimated - - - - -	50
Extra grant for the Punjab Northern State Railway - - - - -	10
Revenue known to have been over-estimated - - - - -	8
	102

8. The remaining discrepancy is unimportant: our estimate was based upon the assumption that, excepting the items which we have mentioned, the net result of the aggregate transactions in February and March, at our treasuries or upon our accounts at the Presidency banks, would be the same this year as last year. A variation of 17 lakhs, on the whole, between the two years is not surprising.

We have, &c.

LYTTON.
F. P. HAINES.
J. STRACHEY.
E. B. JOHNSON.
RIVERS THOMPSON.
ALEX. FRASER.

No. 46.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, May 4, 1880, No. 143 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

IN continuation of our Despatch, No. 81, dated 25th February, and with reference to the telegrams cited below,† we regret to report, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, that we have grave reasons for apprehending that the cost of the military operations in Afghanistan will seriously exceed the amount entered in the Financial Statement for 1880-81.

* In our telegram dated 29th April this item was, for brevity's sake, included with item (3) as a military disbursement.

† To Secretary of State, dated 8th April.	To Secretary of State, dated 15th April.
From " " 9th "	From " " 19th "
From " " 10th "	To " " 20th "
To " " 10th "	To " " 21st "
From " " 13th "	To " " 29th "

2. The total expenditure upon those operations in India was calculated in that document at 5,512,670*l.*, as follows :—

	£
In 1878-79 (Account No. 57) - - - -	600,270
In 1879-80 (para. 130 of Statement, less expenditure from the Home Treasury)* - - - -	2,954,400
In 1880-81 (para. 187 of Statement, less expenditure from the Home Treasury)* - - - -	1,958,000
	5,512,670

3. The estimates for 1879-80 and 1880-81 were prepared in the Military Department by the usual methods, with careful deliberation. We forward with this Despatch a Memorandum by Major Newmarch, the Military Accountant General, detailing the procedure in ordinary use, describing how it was actually employed on the present occasion, and explaining, in particular, his estimates of the cost of the war. Major Newmarch submitted his estimates to the Military Department with a Memorandum, No. 4108, dated 19th January. It is shown in the Minute of our Honourable Colleague, Sir Edwin Johnson, which accompanies this Despatch, that those estimates were carefully examined and accepted in the Military Department; they were formally transferred by that department, on the 26th January, to the Financial Department, with the recommendation that they should be adopted; and they were incorporated, in usual course, in the Budget presented with the Financial Statement.

4. The estimates were held open to revision till just before the Statement was made; but no correction was suggested in the Military Department, or considered necessary in the Financial Department. On the contrary, the unexpectedly high amount of our January balances (1,352 lakhs), coupled with the comparatively moderate amount of the military expenditure brought on record up to that date, gave rise to a doubt whether the Accountant General in the Military Department might not have entered too large an amount in his Regular Estimate; but it was ascertained specifically on the 18th February, six days before the Statement, that the Accountant General in the Military Department fully maintained that estimate, and it was not altered. There being thus, at that time, no apparent cause for distrusting the sufficiency of the Military Department's estimates, Sir John Strachey, in paragraph 27 of the Financial Statement, while pointing out that "the estimates of the cost of the war must of course be, to a great extent, speculative," said that he saw "no reason to suppose that they erred on the side of being too low."

5. Before the middle of March, however, we became uneasy at the unexpectedly large demands upon our frontier treasuries; and, not being satisfied with the result of a summary investigation of the causes, we instituted a fresh inquiry into the cost of the war, which has brought to light the fact that the aggregate net disbursements from our treasuries to the Military Department since the beginning of the operations have so much exceeded the normal payments to that department as to suggest strong doubts of the correctness of its estimates of the cost of the war.

6. No doubt, the balances in the treasure chests and with the military disbursers are much in excess of the ordinary amount. Moreover, apart from the operations in Afghanistan, the disbursements on account of the Malta Expedition, the Naga disturbances, and political events in Burma have caused exceptional military drafts upon our treasuries; and there may be other abnormal transactions which may operate, eventually, in reduction of the obligations of the Military Department. Nevertheless, and taking the most sanguine view of the prospects of the termination of the war, we cannot now doubt that its cost will largely exceed the departmental estimates.

7. There is, however, much still to be done before we can venture to estimate the cost of the war afresh with any precision. It has not yet been fully explained why the large outflow from our treasuries in excess of the military estimates did not show itself sooner in the diminution of our balances, which we are now at last witnessing. Nor is the Accountant General in the Military Department, an officer in whose prudence and ability we place the greatest confidence, as yet able to reconcile the treasury figures with the estimates which reach him from the Military Controllers.

* NOTE.—The "Military Expenditure proper" in 1879-80, mentioned in paragraph 130 as 3,137,000*l.*, included 182,600*l.* in England, leaving the expenditure in India (exclusive of frontier railways, post office, and telegraphs) at 2,954,400*l.* The estimate of 1,978,000*l.* for 1880-81, mentioned in paragraph 187, similarly included 20,000*l.* in England.

8. Under ordinary circumstances, we should have thought it desirable to wait until we could explain the facts better than is yet possible. But we are sensible of the inconvenience which must result from the failure of our war estimate, and deem it incumbent on us to substitute for that estimate at once the most correct forecast that we can make with our present data, however imperfect such may be. We hope that, before your Lordship makes the yearly Financial Statement to Parliament, we may be in a position to telegraph more trustworthy estimates of the cost of the war than we can now make. Meanwhile, we consider that it will be necessary to add at least 4,000,000*l.* to our estimate of the cost of the war in 1880-81. We can only speak now with much reserve of the total amount which the war, apart from the Frontier Railways, will ultimately cost. The responsible officers in the Military Department still confidently expect that its cost will not be nearly so much as 10,000,000*l.*; but we are unable, at present, to reconcile this expectation with the actual outgoings from our treasuries.

9. Our Honourable Colleague, General Sir Edwin Johnson, has recorded, for our information and for that of Her Majesty's Government, a Minute, which we transmit herewith, describing the action of the Military Department throughout the whole proceedings, the manner in which the estimates for the war were made, and the circumstances under which the Military Department thought itself justified in recommending the Financial Department to accept them, and explaining, so far as this can now be done, the causes which, in our Honourable Colleague's opinion, have operated, and are still operating, to render those estimates insufficient.

10. As stated by the Military Accountant General in paragraph 14 of his Memorandum, although it cannot now be doubted that the amount of the war charges outstanding at the close of 1879-80, and which will have to be adjusted in 1880-81, will be much larger than was anticipated, there is no reason for supposing that the amount of these charges brought to account in the former year will seriously differ from the Regular Estimate presented with the Financial Statement.

11. The duty of supplying funds for the conduct of the operations in the field was entrusted to our Comptroller General, in immediate personal concert with the experienced Comptroller of Military Accounts in Bengal. We have not yet ascertained why it did not sooner occur to either of these high officers to warn us, that the rate of outflow from our treasuries appeared to be greatly in excess of the estimated cost of the war. We shall use our best endeavours to discover by what neglect of precautions we have been misled, and to what degree, if at all, individual officers are responsible for such neglect.

12. It seems probable that the error may be traced mainly to the peculiarity of the procedure for the record of our Military Accounts. As a general rule, to which we attach the greatest importance, our revenue and expenditure is severally brought to account immediately from the transactions at our treasuries. We thus know the facts many weeks before we should know them if we were to wait till the Departmental Accounts were prepared and audited. In the Military Department and in some other departments, however, this procedure has been pronounced impracticable, owing to the intermixture of debt items in the treasury transactions and to other causes. We have long since endeavoured to apply in the Military Department the procedure found so convenient in other departments, but have hitherto been unable to do so. The consequence is, that the Military Accounts, though doubtless admirably correct when completed, are not usually known to us for nearly three months after the end of the month to which they refer, and, which is still worse, even then exclude many items awaiting audit or adjustment. In time of war, the discrepancy between the audited accounts and the treasury transactions becomes, as we now experience to our cost, such that the progressive accounts convey a false and inadequate impression of the facts. We shall consider afresh whether this cannot be remedied.

13. As we have been obliged to take the unusual course of revising our estimate of one important item before the Financial Statement is made to Parliament, we subjoin, for any use which your Lordship may think fit to make of it, a statement of the other variations from our Regular Estimates which are now known to us:—

	Regular Estimates.	Approximate Accounts.	Better.	Worse.
	£	£	£	£
I. Land Revenue - - - - -	22,389,000	22,426,200	37,200	—
IV. Excise - - - - -	2,765,000	2,792,587	27,587	—
V. Assessed Taxes - - - - -	797,000	783,800	—	13,200
VII. Customs - - - - -	2,231,000	2,283,352	52,352	—
VIII. Salt - - - - -	7,335,000	7,256,698	—	78,302
IX. Opium - - - - -	10,459,000	10,361,555	—	97,445
X. Stamps - - - - -	3,203,000	3,192,811	—	10,189
TOTAL - - - - -	49,179,000	49,097,003	—	81,997

14. We shall not know for some time whether the slight improvement in the land revenue belongs to the Revenue from Productive Works or not. Meanwhile it had better be shown under the general head of Land Revenue. The deficiency under Salt is due to an unexpected intermission of the deliveries from the Sámbar Lake, which will, doubtless, soon be resumed. The deficiency under Opium is owing to a similar temporary check in the trade in Málwa Opium.

15. On the whole, our estimates have been very satisfactorily realised. The only considerable Revenue Head of which we do not yet know the approximate result is that of Railways, the accounts of which cannot be quickly closed. We know no grounds for revising our estimates of Railway revenue.

16. On the expenditure side, however, 100,000*l.* must be added under Head 32—Railways, being the supplementary grant made for the Jhelum-Rawalpindi Section of the Punjab Northern State Railway, as explained in paragraph 6 (4) of our Despatch No. 142 of this date. This is, in truth, part of the cost of the war.

17. However disappointing it is to find that the war is likely to cost so much more than was expected, the permanent effect upon the condition of our finances will be limited to the extent to which the charge for interest on the debt may be increased. In all essential respects the condition of our finances appears to us no less sound and satisfactory now than it did when the Financial Statement was made. The improvement in our general financial position remains as unquestionable as before; there is still no reason to doubt that, but for the war, our surplus of revenue over expenditure would have hardly been less than 4,000,000*l.*, both in the year 1879-80, which has just closed, and in the year 1880-81, which has now commenced; nor do we see reason to modify any of the views regarding the past, or any of the anticipations regarding the future, which were set forth in the Financial Statement.

We have, &c.,

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

RIVERS THOMPSON.

ALEX. FRASER.

Enclosure 1 in No. 46.

MEMORANDUM by MAJOR O. R. NEWMARCH, Accountant General, Military Department No. 451, dated Simla, 30th April 1880, to the SECRETARY to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, Military Department.

WITH reference to Military Department No. 6538K, of the 28th April 1880, the undersigned has the honour to explain, for the information of Government, the course followed in the preparation of the estimates of expenditure on account of the operations in Afghanistan:

2. The military estimates are prepared by the Comptrollers of Military Accounts, Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, received and consolidated in this branch, and submitted by the Military Department to the Financial Department. In all ordinary cases the figures proposed by the Comptrollers—officers of considerable experience and having the advantage of local knowledge—are accepted. But when there is reason to suppose, from a reference to past actuals, from a consideration of impending changes of organisation or other facts not known to the Comptrollers when their estimates were prepared, from the prospects of the harvests, from the progress of the accounts which are more advanced when the estimates are finally consolidated, and for other reasons, that their estimates are not correct, then they are increased or diminished to the extent thought to be necessary, in view of the foregoing considerations.

The reasons for any variation from the figures of previous years are always given in abstract and in detail in the transmitting memorandum and its appendices.

3. The first provision for the Kabul Campaign was made in the revised estimate for 1878-79.

In this estimate the Comptroller of Military Accounts, Bengal, provided 90 lakhs on this account, with the remark:—

“This sum may cover the extra charges that will be brought forward this year, but a correct estimate seems impossible at present.” The Madras Comptroller made no provision. The Bombay Comptroller estimated the charges at 20 lakhs; total of estimates 110 lakhs. Judging from the state of the accounts when the estimate was made up, and from the known delays in their receipt from officers in the field, it appeared to the undersigned that the charges to be brought into the year would not exceed 67 lakhs, and that there would remain between 50 and 60 lakhs to be adjusted in the accounts of 1879-80.

4. In proposing these figures the following remarks were made in paragraph 5 of the transmitting memorandum:—

“Looking at the two-fold uncertainty attending this item, the doubtful estimate of the probable expenditure, and the progress of adjustment, every allowance must be made for any want of accord hereafter between the revised estimate and the actual charges.” The amount charged in the year in India was Rs. 60,02,703, a tolerably close approximation to the estimate.

This left, according to the above calculation, about 60 lakhs outstanding from 1878-79, under the head of advances recoverable, unadjusted items, &c., which would have to be adjusted and charged in the accounts of 1879-80.

5. In the budget estimates of that year, the Bengal Controller, writing on the 17th December 1878, made no provision whatever for Kabul, remarking, “At present it is impossible to state what amount will be charged to this head in the accounts of 1879-80; perhaps later on more definite information than now exists may be available.” The Comptrollers of Military Accounts, Madras and Bombay, made no provision for the “Kabul operations,” having no information as to whether the war was likely to extend to the year 1879-80, or, if it did, as to how long it might be expected to continue. Allowing for the arrears to be brought forward from 1878-79, and in the anticipation of an early termination of the campaign, the extra expenditure of the year was estimated in this branch at 200 lakhs, with the following remark:—“It is, of course, impracticable to form any trustworthy estimate of the year, but it is not considered necessary to make any larger provision on this account at present than the above sum.”

The above anticipation was realised by the signing of the Treaty of Peace on the 26th May 1879, and had the war then been finally concluded, the estimate would probably have proved to be fairly correct.

6. On the renewal of hostilities in September, it, of course, became necessary to increase the estimate.

In submitting his revised estimate for the year 1879-80, the Bengal Comptroller provided 300 lakhs under the head of “Kabul” in lieu of 170 lakhs, the sum allotted to Bengal in the budget estimate, with the remark—“increased, to provide for charges on account of the second expedition.”

The Madras Comptroller reduced his allotment of 12 lakhs to 8 lakhs, with reference to the amounts compiled under this head in the accounts received by him up to date.

The Bombay Comptroller increased the 18 lakhs assigned to that Presidency to 40 lakhs, with the remark—“provision made for second Kabul Expedition.”

The total of these estimates amounted to 348 lakhs.

7. After the most careful and anxious consideration of all the facts available, and after personal consultation with the officers in charge of the field commissariat accounts, with the special examiner of these accounts, and with the Comptroller of Military Accounts, Bengal, the undersigned considered that about 300 lakhs would probably be charged in the year, and that something over 100 lakhs would, as in 1878-79, be outstanding under the head of advances recoverable, unadjusted items, &c., and fall into the charges of 1880-81.

8. It was, as may be easily understood, extremely difficult, if not wholly impracticable, with the scanty materials available, and in view of the uncertainty as to the progress, extent, and duration of operations, the phases of which were changing from week to week, to frame even an approximate estimate of the extra cost of the war, and the above conclusion was not arrived at without much hesitation and anxious consideration. In submitting it, the following remarks were offered for the consideration of Government :—

“ In the revised estimate it has been deemed necessary, owing to the renewal of hostilities, to increase the provision on this account to Rs. 3,00,00,000. The estimates submitted by the Comptrollers provided Rs. 3,48,00,000 on this account; but, so far as any estimate can be made of charges so uncertain, both in their nature and as to the period within which they may be brought forward, their estimates appear susceptible of reduction by Rs. 48,00,000. There is one charge in particular which may affect the calculation very considerably—the compensation for loss of camels; but up to date no trustworthy statistics, or even estimate, of the probable losses and consequent claims have been received. With every desire to make full provision for the war charges, the undersigned can, at present, see no reason for going beyond the above figures.”

9. These figures are exclusive of the charge for the construction of frontier railways and telegraphs, the estimate for which in India is Rs. 1,12,15,000 in 1879-80, and Rs. 1,04,22,000 in 1880-81.

10. In the estimate for the year 1880-81, the Comptroller of Military Accounts, Bengal, provided 200 lakhs for “Kabul” without remark. The Madras Comptroller provided six lakhs with remark that the figure had been reduced (that is, from last year’s figures), with reference to the first four months of 1879-80. The Bombay Comptroller made no provision, with the remark—“provision on this account was made by the Accountant General in the current year’s budget, and will, it is assumed, be similarly made for 1880-81, if necessary.”

11. Following the course pursued in preparing the estimate of 1879-80, as explained in paragraph 5, it was estimated by the undersigned that about 100 lakhs would be brought forward from 1879-80, and that, anticipating, as in 1879-80, an early termination of the campaign, 100 lakhs would be spent on the war during the year 1880-81. This rate of expenditure was based on rough estimates prepared in this branch of the cost of the war, and supported by a consideration of the expenditure incurred in 1878-79 and in the early months of 1879-80.

12. In submitting this estimate the following remarks were made in the transmitting memorandum :—

“ For the Kabul charges it has not been considered necessary to do more than repeat last year’s provision, Rs. 2,00,00,000. But for the renewal of hostilities in September last, that sum would probably have sufficed to meet the extra charges of the year. With an early settlement of affairs beyond the frontier, the same amount may suffice to wind up the accounts of the campaign; should the operations be protracted, this figure will, no doubt, have to be increased hereafter in the revised estimate, as has been done this year.”

13. As regards the threatened inadequacy of the estimates, the undersigned proposes to defer any explanation on this head till the accounts for the year 1879-80 are completed, and the further information called for by the Military Department has been received.

14. The completed accounts for January 1880 have been received, with approximate figures for the remaining two months of the year; and there are grounds for supposing that, apart from the charges for frontier railways and telegraphs, the recorded charges of the year will not much exceed the estimate of 300 lakhs. There is, however, reason to fear that, owing to the largely increased expenditure of the last three months of the year—January, February, and March 1880—considerably more than 100 lakhs will be outstanding at the close of the year, and have to be adjusted in the accounts of 1880-81. At the same time this increased rate of expenditure shows no signs of diminution, and the war promises to be protracted considerably beyond the anticipation of the estimate, while the operations are more extended than they were, or than was foreseen, when that estimate was prepared. It may also be noted that from various causes, which will, no doubt, be elucidated hereafter, the war expenditure has increased, beginning from January last, and is progressing at a rate far beyond any calculation that could have been made, based on the past rate of expenditure, and on the relative number of troops in the field at various periods.

From these two causes, the expected increase in the outstandings from 1879-80 and in the cash expenditure in 1880-81, the budget estimate of the year threatens to prove very inadequate. To what extent it will actually be found to be insufficient can only be determined on the receipt of the further information lately called for, and by the progress, extent, and duration of the campaign.

On this point a further report will be submitted hereafter.

Enclosure 2 in No. 46.

MINUTE by General the Honourable SIR E. B. JOHNSON, K.C.B., C.I.E.

THE attention of the Financial Department having been directed to the large disbursements which were being made from the Civil Treasury on account of the war in Afghanistan—disbursements seriously in excess of the estimated cost of the operations—the Military Department was requested to cause inquiry to be made, and to furnish information as to the cause of this difference between the estimates and the actual expenditure.

In accordance with this request, the Military Accountant General was called on for a report on the subject; and at the same time full inquiry was ordered in other branches of the Military Department, in view to eliciting the causes of these unexpected calls on the Civil Treasury.

Pending the result of these inquiries, the Military Accountant General has furnished a statement explaining, fully and clearly, the course he has followed in the preparation of the estimates of expenditure on account of the operations in Afghanistan for 1880-81.

To Major Newmarch's statement, which I attach, I need add nothing; but, as head of the Military Department, I desire to state that the estimates which were prepared by the Military Accountant General were not submitted by me to the Financial Department until, in personal and anxious communication with him, I had satisfied myself that they were framed on just principles and on data which might fairly and reasonably be accepted in the forecast of the probable expenditure on account of the war.

Satisfied, therefore, of the correctness of the estimates, which appeared to me as accurate as any estimate of the cost of military operations can be, I accepted them, and caused them to be sent to the Financial Department, with a recommendation that they should be adopted.

It will be seen, therefore, that though the estimates were prepared by the Military Accountant General, they were submitted and explained to me before acceptance; and I desire to state, without any reserve whatever, that, as head of the Military Department, I alone am responsible for the estimates, and that I fully accept such responsibility.

That this Department has under-estimated the probable cost of the war cannot be gainsaid; but until the result of the inquiries which have been ordered to be made is received, it is not possible for this Department to state either the extent to which the estimates have been exceeded, or the causes which have led to such excess.

Without attempting to anticipate the result of the inquiry, I may be permitted, however, to touch very briefly on some of the causes which have led to such a disturbance of our calculations, and which were not, and could hardly have been, foreseen at the time the estimates were prepared.

First, the purchase of a very great proportion of the transport, instead of hiring it. This recommended itself to the Comptroller General of Transport and Supply as not only a measure of expediency and improved organisation, but one which, owing to the nature of the service and to the extreme difficulty of hiring, appeared to be an absolute necessity. The outlay under this head has been considerable.

The necessity, as a measure of precaution when it became evident that the war would not be brought to a close as early as was anticipated, for purchasing and transporting six months' supplies to be stowed at the front and on all the lines of communication before the hot weather set in.

The enormous increase in the price of grain and other supplies—famine prices in fact—owing to the unexpected scarcity which prevailed in the Peshawar and Rawalpindi districts, notwithstanding the promise of an abundant harvest, which has been fulfilled everywhere else.

A similar, and also unexpected, increase in the price of stores, such as firewood, forage, &c., purchased in Afghanistan itself.

The necessity for paying increased wages, in addition to half rations, to all followers north of Jhelum, a necessity which arose partly from the growing dread of service in Afghanistan, and partly from the extreme demand for labour, locally, by the railway authorities on the line to Rawalpindi.

In addition to what has been already stated, there is also this fact to be taken into consideration, that when it became evident that the occupation would be prolonged through the summer months, and even into autumn, the works necessary for the maintenance of our positions and protection of the troops, thus detained, necessarily far exceeded any charges which had hitherto been incurred, or would under other circumstances have been needed, both at Kabul and on the whole line of communications.

In short, in such operations as those in which we are engaged, their cost increases in a progressive ratio, week by week, with their continuance. For not only are the local resources of a poor country drawn on to a point almost of exhaustion, thereby forcing supplies to be sent from remote bases, but also the transport, which has to be continuously renewed to supply the ordinary casualties, has to be procured and drawn from far distant provinces in India at an ever-increasing cost.

It is now clear to myself that, in accepting, as the basis of the estimated cost of the war carried on in the year 1880–81, the estimates which had proved sufficient for the operations of the corresponding months of the previous year, I had not sufficiently appreciated the main fact of progressive rates of expenditure—an expenditure necessarily increasing through an expansion both of the period and scope of the operations which have since been developed.

It seemed to me that, in providing for the war expenditure up to the month of July of the present year, based on the rate which had proved sufficient for those of the preceding year, which I had no reason to believe was being materially exceeded, I was making the utmost provision which I could at the time have been justified in recommending to the Council; and I submit that the correctness of the course I then pursued is not invalidated by the facts which have since come to our knowledge.

E. B. JOHNSON.

Simla, 1st May 1880.

No. 47.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, May 20, 1880.

Failure of the war estimate. Despatch by next mail, in continuation of Despatch 4th May, with minutes by Viceroy and Finance Member of Council, gives complete information, which it was not possible to give in that letter. We trust that, pending its receipt, you will postpone orders.

L O N D O N :
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty. •
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE
RELATING TO THE
ESTIMATES
FOR THE
WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty,

LONDON:
PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1880.

[C.—2617.] Price 3½d.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 48.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, June 1, 1880, No. 176
(Financial). (Received June 26, 1880.)

MY LORD MARQUIS,

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 143, dated 4th May, we have the honour to forward a minute by Sir John Strachey, dated 20th May, and a minute by his Excellency the Viceroy, dated 26th May, in explanation of the principal causes of the failure to estimate more correctly the cost of the military operations in Afghanistan.

2. Our Despatch of the 4th May, although it correctly indicated those causes, was, necessarily, incomplete. The papers now transmitted will fully explain the circumstances of the case. They show how the military accounts, in themselves accurate, gave an altogether erroneous representation of the actual cost of the war, and misled the Government, not only in regard to the probable future expenditure, but in regard to the expenditure which had already been incurred.

3. The system of our military accounts was elaborated under the advice of the most Erratum.

In the Correspondence relating to the Estimates for the War in Afghanistan, on page 46, in the Abstract of the Accounts for 1878-79, for "Secretary of State's Bills Discharged," read "Remittances."

origin of our error.

5. We have only, now, to express our regret for the serious extent to which Her Majesty's Government has thus been misled in regard to the cost of the Afghan war. But there is no reason to suppose that the failure to estimate its cost aright has led to any increase in the actual expenditure on the war, or that that failure will cause an addition to the public burdens which a better forecast would have enabled us to avoid.

The question whether our military operations have been conducted with that regard for proper economy which we have always desired to enforce, has little connexion with the accuracy or failure of our estimates; but we concur with his Excellency the Viceroy in thinking that a careful inquiry, hereafter, into the cost of the war will be valuable for future guidance, and that it ought certainly to be undertaken.

6. Revised estimates of the cost of the war are under preparation, and will be submitted at an early date.

We have, &c.

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

RIVERS THOMPSON.

J. GIBBS.

ALEX. FRASER.

Enclosure 1. in No. 48.

MINUTE by the Honourable Sir JOHN STRACHEY, G.C.S.I., C.I.E., on the failure of the estimates of the expenditure on the Army in 1879-80 and 1880-81 in India.

In making the following observations for the consideration of the Governor-General in Council, and, eventually, of Her Majesty's Government, on the error which has occurred in the military estimates, I thoroughly recognise the fact that, while Her Majesty's Government holds the Government of India responsible for the correctness of the yearly estimates, that responsibility obviously falls in particular on the Financial Department, and on myself as the member in charge of it. It is, therefore, my duty to give, as soon as possible, a complete statement of the nature and causes of the error which has come to light, and to show what measures have been taken to prevent the recurrence of similar errors. When our Despatch No. 143, of the 4th May, was sent to the Secretary of State, our information was, in many respects, incomplete; but we are now able, if not to clear up all points of doubt, to explain much more fully than we could do before, what has actually occurred.

2. The object of the Government of India in that Despatch was not to define the separate or relative responsibilities of its several officers or departments for the war estimates; that is a matter which mainly concerns its own internal administration. Its purpose was to make it clear, in limine, that those estimates had not been prepared arbitrarily, but by the usual means and in the usual way, and, especially, that there had been no irregular interference in their preparation. All this has already been done, and I do not propose to enter further into such considerations. It has been sufficiently described how the estimates were made in the Military Department, how they were accepted in the Financial Department, and how they were incorporated in the Budget.

3. In his minute of the 1st May my honourable colleague, Sir Edwin Johnson, with a generosity which all who know him will feel to be characteristic, claimed for himself personally complete responsibility for the estimates which have proved so inaccurate. Now it is true that my honourable colleague is the head of the Military Department, and that the Military Department was responsible for supplying to the Financial Department the estimates of the whole military expenditure; but Sir Edwin Johnson could no more make those estimates, or supervise their details, than I could have undertaken such a duty myself. He trusted the machinery which had been provided, and which he, and all of us, believed to deserve complete confidence. An elaborate system had been carefully devised and matured by the most competent authorities that the Government could find; it had worked for many years in a manner that had given no suspicion of practical imperfection; and it was believed that, under this system, the Government would always be kept informed of everything regarding the military expenditure that it behoved it to know. We now find that this belief was incorrect; the system which we trusted has failed us, and the Government has been left in ignorance of facts of essential importance. Sir Edwin Johnson was misled, and the Financial Department also was misled, by accounts which were in themselves, as far as they went, perfectly correct, but which, nevertheless, totally failed to show the actual expenditure on the war.

4. I do not now propose to enter into further consideration of the points to which the attention of my honourable colleague Sir Edwin Johnson was chiefly directed in his minute of the 1st May, or to discuss the causes which led, in his opinion, to increased expenditure. Such points are apart from the main question now before me, which is how it happened that both the Military and the Financial Departments failed to appreciate not only what the war would cost in the future, but what it had cost in the past. For we have now not merely to show why we failed in the task of making an accurate estimate of the future cost of a war; if this had been the extent of our error, we need not have troubled ourselves about it much. Our real failure has been far more serious; we have not only been unable to foresee the expenditure of the future, but we have been deceived in regard to the expenditure of the past, and in regard to the expenditure that was actually going on. It is this that really requires explanation, and on which I shall throw the fullest light in my power.

5. In the 12th paragraph of our Despatch of the 4th May, we stated our belief that our inability to estimate aright the cost of the war was mainly due to the peculiarity of the system of our military accounts. It has become more and more clear that the principal source of our mistake was then indicated.

6. Our civil revenues and expenditure are, for the most part, recorded in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, directly from the transactions at our treasuries, a procedure which ensures the promptest possible record of the facts, and that nothing shall be kept out of the accounts, pending inquiries and perhaps controversies, which may be interminable.

The Government knows how tenaciously the Financial Department clings to this procedure, and resists the many endeavours which are made to disturb, by interdepartmental adjustments and the like, the simple record thus provided. Secure in this record, we trouble ourselves comparatively little about the subsequent completion of the several departmental accounts, which would often be found lagging long behind.

7. To this wholesome procedure there are some exceptions, which have, hitherto, been considered unavoidable, owing to the admixture in the treasury transactions affected of items which are neither revenue nor expenditure. For example, the transactions at our treasuries with the Post Office include money-order remittances and many other debt items, and would, therefore, be no guide to the postal revenue and expenditure. In like manner the transactions with the Public Works Department include the revenue and working expenses of the railways, State and Guaranteed, the outlay upon the construction of productive public works, and so on.

In such cases it has been considered that we should lose more than we should gain by attempting to work upon the treasury figures; and it has been thought better to wait for our accounts until the departmental account officers can audit and classify the treasury transactions. It is an essential part of the duty of those officers to take care that their accounts, eventually, correspond in all particulars with the treasury transactions; but it is plain that the system is much less satisfactory than the simpler method to which we adhere whenever possible.

8. It has not hitherto been thought practicable to treat the military accounts by the simpler and safer method; the plan always adopted has been to wait until the pecuniary transactions of the Military Department could be classified and audited in the Military Account Department, upon which rests the responsibility of seeing that the accounts of the military revenue and expenditure are in true accord with the treasury transactions. The character of the military accounts will be readily understood from a paper written in 1868, by the late Colonel Arthur Broome, when Controller General of Military Expenditure,* extracts from which are printed in Appendix A. (II.). The accounts rendered by the military disbursing officers are audited, classified, and compiled in the Account Department; disbursements which cannot be sufficiently vouched by the disbursers, or which are challenged by the auditors, being entered under the suspense head "Advances Recoverable," and not recorded as expenditure. The general result is, that the audited and classified expenditure in any month is not known for about ten weeks, and that an indefinite balance, which is really expenditure, always remains unaudited and, therefore, unadjusted. In quiet times this balance is not large, and no serious inconvenience ensues; but when field operations are in progress on a large scale, the unadjusted residue may attain to such dimensions that the accounts of the audited and classified expenditure afford no indication of the real outlay. It is in consequence of disregard of these considerations that the present error has occurred.

9. The system of our military accounts was carefully remodelled by the English Commissioners of inquiry into Indian accounts, Messrs. Foster and Whiffen, as explained in their elaborate report dated 30th August 1864; but they suggested no material organic changes in the procedure previously followed. The Commissioners did not, apparently, think it practicable to follow, in respect of the military accounts, what I have called the simpler system; but they were alive to the dangers involved at several points of the procedure which they advocated. I have extracted in Appendix A. (I.) the paragraphs of their report which bear immediately upon this subject, and show the nature of the precautions which they recommended.

10. Effect was gradually given to the recommendations of the Commissioners; but the final orders of the Government on their report were not issued till the 7th July 1868. In Appendix A. (II.) will be found extracts, which now possess a special significance, from the review by Colonel Broome upon which the orders of the Government were based.

11. The Government of India in the Military Department re-echoed the spirit of Colonel Broome's remarks, as follows:—

"3. The conclusion at which Colonel Broome has arrived in paragraph 23 also appears to his Excellency in Council to be strictly correct; the new head of 'Advances Recoverable' being, in reality, nothing else than an 'Inefficient Balance' with the same inconvenience, and with no actual diminution of amount. Considering, however, the extensive and multifarious character of military charges, it is, the Governor General in Council observes, almost inconceivable that any system can be devised which can free the military accounts from some amount of unadjusted charges—in other words, an 'Inefficient Balance.'

* By a resolution in the Financial Department, No. 4474, dated 21st October 1871, the title of this officer was changed to "Accountant General, Military Department," without material change of his functions.

“4. Colonel Broome’s review of the new system appears to the Governor General in Council to be a fair and candid one; and the conclusion he arrives at, viz., that the present system should be regarded as one of a permanent nature, trusting to vigilance to mitigate the defects inherent in the system, has the cordial assent of the Government of India in the Military Department.”

12. The final resolution by the Government in the Financial Department was of a formal character, and contains no reference to the defects thus recognised. None of the authorities who took part in those discussions allude to the possibility of the elimination of these defects by the direct record, in the finance and revenue accounts, as military revenue and expenditure, of the military transactions at our civil treasuries, after a few suitable adjustments.

This preliminary discussion may appear tedious; but it is essential to the full understanding of the case.

13. I now invite attention to the two appended statements marked B and C, being returns of—

(B) the net military expenditure in India as recorded in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, month by month, from April 1869 to February 1880, which is the latest month for which the accounts are complete, with an estimate for March; and

(C) the net disbursements from the civil treasuries in India to the Military Department, month by month, from April 1869 to April 1880. The entry for March is, however, only an estimate. We know that the net amount disbursed in March was 2,082,500*l.*; but we do not yet know the sets-off still to come in the shape of excess payments made, during the year, by the Military Department on account of the Civil Department, and the like, which still await adjustment in the accounts of March. Such sets-off will certainly be large. I have, therefore, entered 1,750,000*l.*

14. If these two statements be compared it will be found that—

(1) until the end of 1877-78, the recorded net military expenditure was, invariably, more or less in excess of the net disbursements to the Military Department : the explanation of this excess is that, besides the sums withdrawn from the civil treasuries, the Military Department spends some portion of the departmental receipts, including money which it receives for remittances to families in England, and so on :

(2) till the end of 1877-78, if allowance be made for the aforesaid normal difference, the two accounts corresponded closely: clearly, with a few appropriate adjustments, the treasury accounts might, till then, have been substituted for the accounts of audited and classified revenue and expenditure without substantial or ultimate inaccuracy; but, apparently, till the end of 1877-78, little would have been gained by such substitution:

(3) from the beginning of 1878-79, these normal conditions were reversed, the net disbursements having, since the beginning of 1878-79, constantly exceeded the net recorded expenditure; and

(4) from October 1878, this excess became constantly larger and larger.

Our troops crossed the frontier on the 21st November 1878; but as we all remember, expenditure in preparation for war had been going on for some time before that event.

15. Instead of the moderate excess, usual in previous years, in the net recorded expenditure as compared with the net disbursements, the net military disbursements from the civil treasuries, during the two latest years, exceeded the net recorded military expenditure by 4,214,000/., as follows:—

	£
In 1878-79	- - - - -	2,222,000
and
In 1879-80 (by estimate as regards March, and compared with the regular estimate)	- - - - -	3,092,000
Total	- - - - -	5,314,000
Deduct—
Advances made on account of the Malta expedition, and recovered from the Imperial Government	£ 250,000
Unspent balances in the hands of the military disbursers or held at the disposal of the Military Department	850,000	1,100,000
Remains	- - - - -	£4,214,000

16. To this large excess some considerable addition should, probably, be made, because, as has been pointed out, the net recorded expenditure ordinarily exceeds the disbursements; so that there remains a very large sum which must be eventually adjusted, in the finance and revenue accounts, as military expenditure in India, in excess of the estimates of 1879-80 and 1880-81.

17. It would be premature to attempt to state precisely the amount by which the estimates have thus been exceeded; and it would be still more premature to inquire how much of such excess is due to the war in Afghanistan, and how much to other causes, such as the operations on the North-Eastern Frontier, the military preparations in Burma, or, even, to an under-estimate of the normal military expenditure, apart from all extraordinary operations. Moreover, it is manifest that a similar excess is still accruing as compared with the estimate for 1880-81. We are not yet, therefore, in a position to conjecture, with any approach to accuracy, by what aggregate amount, and in what particulars, the estimates of the two years 1879-80 and 1880-81 will, eventually, be found deficient.

In paragraph 8 of our Despatch of the 4th May, the opinion was expressed that at least 4,000,000*l.* must be added to the estimate of the cost of the war in 1880-81, and we said that we could only speak with much reserve of the total amount which the war would ultimately cost. "The responsible officers," it was added, "of the Military Department still confidently expect that its cost will not be nearly so much as 10,000,000*l.*; but we are unable, at present, to reconcile this expectation with the actual outgoings from our treasuries." I feel still less able to share that expectation now. Although I will not attempt to anticipate the results which our advisers may place before us as their revised estimate of the total cost of the war, yet, considering what we already know regarding the expenditure of the past; considering, also, the present scale of our military operations, the uncertainties of the future, and, on the other hand, the certainty, under the most favourable expectations which can be entertained, that a great expenditure is still before us; considering I say, all the facts and probabilities of the case, it appears to me hardly possible to doubt that the fears expressed in our Despatch of the 4th May will be justified, and that the ultimate cost of the war will largely exceed the sum of 10,000,000*l.*, which was then named with so much hesitation. With our present knowledge, I cannot feel any confidence that, even if the war is brought to a termination as soon as we now anticipate, it will cost, independently of the frontier railways, less than 15,000,000*l.*

18. Statement C has been compiled only since the Government found reason to doubt the correctness of the military estimates. So far as I am aware, no similar comparative statement of the disbursements to the Military Department during a long succession of months has ever before been compiled. The English Commissioners of Inquiry into Indian Accounts suggested no such check, and the expediency of a precaution of this nature has not occurred, at any time, to any of the officers of the Civil or Military Account Department. Thus, this statement, which seems to me to show plainly what has happened, was not in the hands of any of the officers who took part in the preparation of the military estimates; nor was it before the Government of India in either the Military or the Financial Department, when those estimates were under consideration. When the military estimates were before the Government in the Financial Department, the latest completed military accounts were those for October 1879; they showed a net expenditure, in the first seven months of the year 1879-80, of 7,161,000*l.*, being only 724,600*l.* more than the corresponding expenditure of 1878-79, and only 1,061,000*l.* more than the least corresponding expenditure during the preceding 10 years. There was nothing in these figures to suggest any distrust of the departmental estimates.

19. From the extracts collected in Appendix A, it appears that the system of the military accounts provides for a vigilant attention to the expenditure held in suspense under the head "Advances Recoverable"; and that the English Commissioners insisted prominently upon the vital importance of a punctual interchange of the military accounts with the civil treasuries.

I will not, with the information actually before me, assert, in regard to any individual officer, among the responsible officers concerned, that the salutary warnings of the Commissioners were, in the present instance, neglected, and it is true that the most exact observance of the prescribed precautions would not have supplied the place of such a check as Statement C, the virtue of which consists in the means which it affords for the promptest possible comparison of the total current military outgoings from our treasuries with the corresponding transactions in the past, and with the contemporary estimates of the military receipts and expenditure.

Plainly, however, it was the duty of the officers of the Military Account Department, in the preparation of their estimates, to pay special regard to the large advances of which they must have been aware. They have been officially called upon to explain upon what grounds they, nevertheless, believed that their estimates of the cost of the war in Afghanistan were adequate, and it will be right to await their explanations before we impute blame to officers who have, hitherto, been distinguished for the zealous and intelligent discharge of their duties, and have enjoyed the confidence of the Government of India; but I must say, at once, that it appears inconceivable that the Government could thus have remained in ignorance of facts which it was essential it should know, if the duties imposed on the several departments concerned had been performed in a really intelligent manner.

20. It must be remembered that the elaborate recommendations of the English Commissioners concern exclusively the Offices of Account; primarily, the Military Offices of Account, and, in a secondary degree, the Civil Offices of Account in their relation to the Military Offices. Those recommendations had no reference at all to the procedure of the Government of India itself, but only to the provision of the best precautions which could be devised against such oversight or failure in the Account Offices as might cause the Government to be misled.

21. In popular apprehension, the Financial Department is regarded as one homogeneous organisation, the responsibilities of which are common to the whole body. But, in truth, the Financial Department consists of two separate sections with distinct and clearly defined functions, namely—

- (1) the Financial Department of the Government; and
- (2) the Offices of Account and Audit.

Although the Account Offices are entirely subordinate to, and at the command of, the Government, the functions and responsibilities of the Financial Department of the Government should not be confounded with those of the Account Department.

It is the duty of the Government to make intelligent use of the Finance and Revenue Accounts and Estimates laid before it, and to correct the estimates by any fresh information in its possession, or if it draws different inferences from the data furnished by the Account Department; but although the Government alone is responsible for the estimates ultimately adopted, it takes no part in their detailed preparation.

A costly trained agency is provided, whose whole time and attention is devoted to the record of the public accounts, and periodically to the preparation of the public estimates. An elaborate system and carefully considered rules are prescribed for the guidance of this agency. The Government is bound to introduce any improvement in that system which experience may suggest, and to correct any defects which may come to light; but only mischief and confusion would ensue, if the Government were to interfere with the Account Department in the discharge of its daily duties, or to test, by extraneous checks, the correctness of its work. Any such misdirected activity would, almost inevitably, result in the formation of a second and less trustworthy system of public accounts, in a weakening of the proper sense of their responsibilities on the part of the Account Officers, and in a dissipation of energy injurious to the public interests. The true policy in this matter lies in the proper division of labour, and not in the interference of one Department with the proper functions of another. The procedure of the Government of India in this respect does not, I believe, differ from that of Her Majesty's Government, or from that of the Governments of other civilised countries.

22. The preparation of a correct, intelligent, punctual and efficient record of the actual public receipts and disbursements, and of the most trustworthy possible estimates of the public receipts and disbursements, is the duty of the Account Department, upon which rests the obligation of seeing that the Government is not misled by any superficial aspects of the public accounts, or otherwise. It is of great public importance that these responsibilities of the Account Department should be in no way compromised or lost sight of; and in this view I proceed, now, to give a sketch of the duties of the principal officers concerned on the present occasion.

What follows will be better understood if it be borne in mind that the machinery for the compilation of the public accounts in India is, to all intents and purposes, divided into three independent departments. The departments which keep the accounts of the Army and of the Public Works Department are quite separate from the department which keeps the Civil Accounts, and, although their accounts eventually flow into the general books kept by the Comptroller General, in the Central Office of Account, they owe no direct allegiance to the Comptroller General. The Military Account Department is directly subordinate to the Government of India in the Military Department; and the Public Works Account Department to the Government of India in the Public Works Department.

It was the particular duty of the Controller of Military Accounts in Bengal to watch the expenditure on the military operations in Afghanistan, as an obviously important part of that section of the public expenditure for the record of which he is responsible; to take especial care that there was no avoidable delay in the audit and classification of the war expenditure; to bring immediately to notice any obstacles or hindrances in the way of its prompt adjustment; to ascertain with particular vigilance that the accounts corresponded with the transactions of the Military Department, or on behalf of the Military Department, at the civil treasuries within his jurisdiction; to keep the Government constantly and truly informed of the progress of the war expenditure; and, at the prescribed intervals, to estimate its probable amount, after carefully collating all the data necessary for the purpose.

With this officer rested the duty of issuing assignments or letters of credit upon the civil treasuries in favour of the spending departments; so that he had in his own hands the means of knowing readily the general scope and progress of the bulk of the outlay. This remark does not include the expenditure by civil officers on behalf of the Military Department, but the Controller should have taken special precautions to acquaint himself with such expenditure as promptly as possible. It was not the specific duty of the Controller of Military Accounts to suggest the particular check the application of which has now discovered the error in the war estimates, but he might have been expected to ascertain, by some equally effective check, that his accounts and estimates of the war expenditure were consistent with the disbursements to the Military Department from the treasuries within his own jurisdiction, which constituted by far the greater part of all the war disbursements.

23. The functions of the Accountant-General, Military Department, are less exactly defined than those of the Controller of Military Accounts; but they include the whole of India, and thus extend over a wider range. His duties are twofold:—

- I.—He is responsible for the scrutiny of the several presidential estimates and accounts, and for their review and consolidation into the Imperial estimates and accounts. He is also required to collect and prepare statistics and other information on military subjects required by the Government.
- II.—He is the ex-officio adviser of the Government of India in the Military Department in respect to military accounts, economy, and finance; in this capacity his office is a branch of the Military Secretariat.

In the first of these capacities, the Military Accountant-General deals only with the completed estimates and accounts received from the Controllers of Military Accounts, Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, supplementing and correcting their estimates, reports, &c. by the light of the further information, which he may possess as to the views and intentions of the Government, probable changes of organisation, or other circumstances. He has no executive functions as regards pay, audit, and allotment of funds to the military disbursing officers.

As regards his duties under the second head, he advises the Government of India on the financial aspect of all military questions which may be referred to him, and in this respect, and in his close connexion and subordination to the Military Department, he occupies in relation to the Military Department very much the position of the Accountant-General in relation to the War Office in England. The duties, however, of the two officers are not otherwise analagous, as the Military Accountant-General in India is not an executive officer, and keeps no detailed accounts, these being kept and compiled for each Presidency by the several Controllers.

But although the functions of this officer are rather those of a Financial Deputy Secretary in the Military Department than of an Accountant-General, yet in respect to the war in Afghanistan, the Government might, I think, fairly have looked to him to watch the proceedings of the Controllers of Military Accounts, and to take care that the Government was informed of the facts of the war expenditure as punctually as possible. Indeed, I know that, although his endeavours have been unsuccessful, the Accountant-General did anxiously endeavour to discharge such duties. At all events, the sooner such duties, and perhaps other cognate duties, are definitively imposed upon the Accountant-General the better. It is one of the defects of the present system that the Accountant-General is an Accountant-General only in name; there is really no one head of the Military Account Department in the sense in which the Comptroller-General is at the head of the Civil Account Offices, and to a limited extent, of all account offices in India, and in which the Accountant-General, Public Works Department, is at the head of all account offices in the Public Works Department. The Controllers of Military Accounts occupy this position each in his own presidency, but there is no Military Comptroller-General for all India. The Military Accountant-General, according to the present definition of his duties, does not supply this void.

24. The Comptroller-General is head of the Civil Account Department. He has nothing to do with the preparation of the military estimates, or even of the civil estimates. It is not his specific duty to take official note of the military estimates, or to ascertain that the subsequent facts are in accord with those estimates. Eventually, indeed, the military receipts and expenditure are recorded from the military books in the Comptroller-General's books, and it would be incumbent on him to bring to notice any error, or any practice or procedure likely to lead to error, of which he might at any time or in any way become cognisant. The immediate connexion of the Comptroller-General with the present war expenditure is confined to the provision of funds on the demand of the Controller of Military Accounts, the two officers having been placed in special communication for the purpose. He has been called upon to say whether he has made any comparison between the funds he has thus supplied and the war estimates, and if not, why not.

It was open to the Comptroller-General to apply the check that has now been applied, the essential figures of which were, indeed, in his own keeping; but it cannot be said that it was his recognised duty to do so.

25. Early in March last the Comptroller-General brought to the notice of the Government in the Financial Department the increasing drain from the Punjab treasuries in connexion with the war, and the Government thereupon seeing, for the first time, reason to fear that the estimates of the cost of the army prepared in the Military Account Department might be untrustworthy, lost no time in instituting inquiries which revealed the facts stated in this minute. The check now applied was not thought of in the Military or Civil Account Department, but originated in the Financial Secretariat.

26. I do not intend now to offer any opinion as to the degree of responsibility that may attach to the several officers concerned. As already said, before coming to any conclusions in this respect the Government must await the explanations which have been called for. If it be found, hereafter, that there have been shortcomings, we must be prepared to find some excuses for them in the strain to which the system of military accounts must have been subjected during the progress of field operations of the magnitude of those in which the army has been engaged. On such occasions the disbursements are on a suddenly increased scale, and the disbursing officers being actively engaged in the field or at the base, have less time to give to the punctual and orderly preparation of their accounts. Under such circumstances delays and irregularities may be almost unavoidable.

But meanwhile, without losing sight of my disclaimer of any intention to repudiate my personal responsibility, or that of the Financial Department of the Government, for the failure of the war estimates, I think it necessary to make it clear at once that for the ignorance of the war expenditure actually incurred, to which this failure is due, it is in the first instance to the Account Department rather than to the Secretariat, in either the Military or Financial Department, that we must look for an explanation. And although I am most anxious not, prematurely, to award blame to any individual officer, I think it right to state, in the plainest terms, my conviction that no mere defects of system can possibly explain away the ignorance in which the Government has been left. The Government of India cannot take refuge in generalities, or attempt to make it appear that such gross errors can occur, and, nevertheless, that nobody is to blame. There must have been extreme negligence, or extreme want of intelligence, somewhere among the responsible officers, and the Government will not shrink from the duty of calling to strict account the officers concerned, whatever may be their position, and whatever may be their previous services or high character.

Whether the Government of India itself took all the steps which it ought to have taken to acquaint itself, in some summary way, with the general progress of the cost of the chief military operations; whether the Military or Financial Department ought not, at an earlier date, to have mistrusted the military estimates; and whether we should not sooner have taken into our own hands the duty of ascertaining the facts, and testing the correctness of those estimates by exceptional and unusual methods, is another question. The confidence that misled the Government is certainly reprovved by the facts now known to us, which show that the Military Department was ignorant of facts which it ought to have known, and that the Financial Department should not have taken the war estimates on trust. I in no way wish to extenuate my own responsibility or that of the Financial Department for our erroneous reliance on those estimates. We were so completely misled by the apparent correspondence of the estimates of past expenditure with the expenditure actually brought to account, that, in spite of the doubts freely expressed on various occasions in public criticisms, we entertained no misgiving as to their soundness. At that time the Financial Department had discovered no data whatever which could have justified interference with the estimates prepared by the responsible officers.

I do not say this by way of apology. It is clear to me that it is quite impossible, and would be altogether unfair, to throw the whole fault either on the system or on the offices of account. The Military Department of the Government must accept the blame of having recommended to the Financial Department totally inadequate estimates; and the Financial Department must accept the blame of having adopted them. If the system was bad, it was the business of the Government to have found this out, and to have amended it. Our responsibility is indisputable; it cannot be extenuated; nor must it be obscured by any investigations which are made either into the system of accounts or into the conduct of individual officers.

But whatever blame may attach to the Government, or to any of its officers, for this want of precaution and foresight, this at least is clear, that the occurrence of an error of the magnitude now discovered shows, beyond the possibility of doubt, not only that there is something radically wrong in our system of accounts, but also in my opinion that this system cannot have been applied with proper care and intelligence. It is our obvious duty to probe this matter to the bottom.

27. The nature of our failure was not ascertained immediately upon our confidence in the estimates being disturbed. Inquiries were, indeed, promptly instituted and, as the result has proved, in the right direction. But although the figures in statement C were obtained from the civil account offices with a speed which is creditable to their efficiency, it took time to verify them in the Military Account Department. Thus we could not at first feel quite sure that we had discovered the true character of our error. The gradual process by which we have satisfied ourselves on this point will explain some apparent inconsistencies between this minute and our telegram to the Secretary of State at different dates, as well as some want of harmony between Sir Edwin Johnson's minute of the 1st May and the Despatch No. 143, with which it was sent to Her Majesty's Government. In that Despatch, our principal error was plainly indicated, though not in such detail, or with such an absence of all hesitation, as in this minute.

28. My conclusion then is, that the failure of our estimate is due to our ignorance of the actual expenditure on the army, rather than to an inadequate a priori appreciation of the probable cost of the field operations.

In the absence of any independent investigations of their own, it is not surprising that the advisers of the Government, in either the Military or the Financial Department, should have failed to frame any approximately accurate estimate of the cost of the war, seeing that, as we now know was the case, not only were they without the assistance of accounts punctually completed, but the facts which appeared on the face of the accounts were, taken alone, wholly misleading. Personally, I never doubted that the estimates which I presented were framed upon a full and correct knowledge of our actual expenditure to a comparatively recent date. As they were not so, I do not wonder that they have proved fallacious.

29. I have at the present moment nothing more to say as to the past, except to express my great regret that so great an error should have found its way into the Budget.

30. It is more satisfactory to turn to the future. I cannot say whether our inquiries will result in the Government of India thinking it desirable to alter the record in the finance and revenue accounts, of our military receipts and expenditure, in the manner which I have indicated; or whether if the Government of India should advocate such an alteration, it will be acceptable to Her Majesty's Government. I am aware that the obstacles in the way of this alternative are formidable. Among them is the impossibility of reconciling accounts based directly upon the treasury transactions with the classified and detailed record of the cost of the army, which forms an important section of the finance and revenue accounts as now presented to Parliament. These are questions which require careful consideration; and they must be treated separately. It is plainly the immediate duty of the Government to subject them to the most thorough investigation. But I may at once say that if the change in question be found practicable it will, in my opinion, be highly desirable to make it; for the existing system is essentially defective.

31. Whether, however, that system be maintained or altered, we are, I believe, now secure against being again surprised and discredited. A simple check is already in operation which will effectually save us from such ignorance as that from which we have now suffered.

Experience shows that it is no easy matter to reconcile in detail the transactions at the civil treasuries with the military accounts. The Report of the English Commission in 1864 contains serious animadversions on the neglect of this duty in the past; and we are aware that the difficulty still continues. The work involves tiresome, detailed, and apparently unimportant correspondence, which is apt to be neglected or overlooked; and although much attention is constantly given to the subject, there are arrears of this kind now as there were in 1864. But there is nothing to prevent the Government of India, in the Military and Financial Departments, being made acquainted, soon after the end of each month, with the actual amounts disbursed to the Military Department from all the treasuries all over India. Arrangements have accordingly been made for the prompt and regular compilation of these figures, and for their communication to the Accountant-General, Military Department, upon whom will devolve in future the duty of comparing the expenditure of the Military Department with the departmental transactions at the civil treasuries throughout India.

32. It will not, indeed, be possible to ascertain by this method the exact cost of any particular military operation, or of any branch of the military service. But with such a return before itself and the proper account officers, the Government of India may, I think, be assured that any very large divergence between the estimates and the facts can never again evade prompt detection; and that the Government will be as well protected from a sudden surprise in respect to the military expenditure as I believe it to be already protected from any like surprise in respect to any of the civil revenues or expenditure. No system can ensure us absolutely against the failure of one estimate or another; but we ought to be secure against such a failure happening, as it has happened on this occasion, without our immediately discovering it; and I believe I may safely promise this degree of immunity from error in the military estimates in future.

33. To sum up the whole matter, the error in the estimate is in my judgment mainly due, not to any misapprehension as to the extent or character of the military operations, but to the fact that we were ignorant of the actual current cost of the war. I attribute this ignorance mainly to the defect which I have described in the military accounts, which although themselves perfectly correct, failed to give to the Government timely information of the expenditure which was really going on. In this respect the whole history furnishes a fresh illustration of the fact that, in regard to such matters as keeping accounts and framing estimates, it is never safe to assume that the care and intelligence of individuals will afford sufficient safeguards against the dangers of a defective system.

I admit that, if, instead of depending according to custom on the accounts alone, the Government of India had itself watched the current cost of the war, it might have, to a great extent, avoided the error into which it has fallen. But I place the defect in the system of the military accounts in the forefront, because, but for that defect, no oversight, omission, or negligence by departments or individual officers, whether in the Secretariat or in the account offices, could have prevented the earliest possible knowledge of the facts, and because such knowledge would itself have neutralised all individual and minor failures.

JOHN STRACHEY.

Simla, 20th May 1880.

APPENDIX A (I).

EXTRACTS from the REPORT of the ENGLISH COMMISSION OF INQUIRY into INDIAN ACCOUNTS, dated 30th August 1864.

31. The paymaster of each circle is furnished by the regimental paymaster or other disbursing officer with an estimate of the amount required, during the ensuing month, for the payment of the troops; this estimate is certified by the officer commanding the regiment or battery. The circle paymaster compiles these estimates into a general return, adding thereto the amount he requires for the payment of staff and other allowances, and he specifies the sum that he will require to draw upon each treasury; this document is furnished to the Military Accountant on the 1st of the month for the ensuing month's payments, in whose office the returns from the several circle paymasters and other accountants are compiled into a general statement showing the amount to be drawn, during the month, at each treasury in the several presidencies; this statement is forwarded to the Controller, who transmits it to the Civil Department, from whence the necessary authority is issued to the treasury officers.

70. The aggregate amount of the inefficient balance was, on the 31st March 1864, as follows, viz. :—

	Rs.
Presidency Circle - - - - -	2,84,849
Allahabad - - - - -	2,82,936
Lucknow - - - - -	3,89,401
Meerut - - - - -	5,63,000
Lahore - - - - -	2,39,241
Trans-Ravi - - - - -	2,69,689
Hyderabad Contingent - - - - -	56,683
Total - - - - -	20,85,799

71. The amount of the inefficient balance in the Madras Presidency is $8\frac{1}{2}$ lakhs, and in the Bombay Presidency it is 9 lakhs, or, in all, no less than upwards of 38 lakhs.

72. The inefficient balance is an exceedingly embarrassing item in the military accounts, and leads to great difficulties in adjusting them at the end of the year; for, whilst the Annual Account of Receipts and Disbursements made up by the Military Department exhibits the audited expenditure only, the account of military expenditure compiled by the Financial Department for the information of the Home Government shows the audited expenditure, plus the amount of inefficient balance at the end of the year, minus the amount of that item at the commencement of the year. The two accounts can never agree, and it is always a matter of opinion and not one of fact, as to what has been the military expenditure for any one year; moreover, the “inefficient balance” is differently treated in each presidency.

74. We are in possession of a copy of the “Preliminary Rules and Instructions for conducting the duties of the Military Finance Department,” dated 18th October 1861; it is therein stated, article VII., p. 19—“The Military Accountant will also take care that outstandings are not allowed to remain unsettled, and he will carefully scrutinise the state of all inefficient balances.”

III.—ADVANCE FROM LOCAL TREASURIES.

211. The course pursued in regard to supplying the disbursing officers with funds has already been described in paragraph 31. We would here wish to draw attention to the manner in which a settlement is effected in regard to these advances between the Military and Civil Departments.

212. The adjustment of the advances from civil treasuries for military services is a duty that appertains to the Military Accountants. They alone have the information upon which the amount drawn by disbursing officers can be checked, and they alone can certify that the sums claimed by civil treasuries on account of military advances have been duly acknowledged by the officers to whom the advances have been made.

213. Knowing the importance of a prompt settlement in regard to these transactions, we inquired very minutely into the course pursued in the office of the Military Accountant. We found it unsatisfactory in the extreme. The adjustment with the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-General was considerably in arrear, and no adjustment had been effected in regard to the advances from the Bengal treasuries since April 1869.

214. It would appear, from papers referred to us, that this important part of the business of Military Accountant is in an equally unsatisfactory state in the presidencies of Madras and Bombay. The papers to which we allude contained a Report from the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-General, Bombay, complaining that he had not received from the Military Accountant any statement of civil charges incurred in the Military Department, nor the reports of the result of the examination of the statements furnished in regard to military remittances.

215. On the papers in question we suggested that the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-

Generals of the several presidencies and provinces should be called upon to report—

- I. The period to which the statement of advances from civil treasuries on account of military charges has been rendered to the Military Accountant.
- II. The period to which the accounts between the two departments have been adjusted.
- III. The differences, if any, that exist between the record in the military books and that in the books of the Civil Department.
- IV. What steps have been taken to reconcile the differences.

216. The replies to these inquiries are worth a careful perusal, as they plainly indicate that the system adopted in the Military Department, at least in regard to this important element, has entirely broken down.

* * * * *

342. Before we proceed to the explanation we have to submit in regard to the record of the expenditure, and the books that should be kept, we would direct attention to what we consider one of the most important elements in the military accounts.

343. The funds necessary for carrying on the military service throughout the country are, for the most part, furnished from civil treasuries. The manner in which disbursing officers draw upon these treasuries has already been described in paragraph 31. There can be no doubt that, unless the accounts between the Civil and Military Departments in regard to these transactions are promptly and regularly adjusted, inextricable confusion will take place, the whole system of accounts will be compromised, and frauds to a large extent might remain undetected.

* * * * *

351. The following arrangements are submitted with the view of obtaining a prompt settlement of the amount drawn by disbursing officers on the civil treasuries :—

352. I.—The Deputy Auditor and Accountant-General of each presidency or province should, so soon as the monthly accounts of the several treasury officers shall have been received, transmit to the Military Account Department, Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be, an abstract list (see Appendix No. 22) of all advances for military services in the previous month. This list should be supported by copies of the original details furnished by the officer in charge of each treasury and by the original drafts or orders.

353. II.—The disbursing officer should debit himself in his monthly account current or pay list with the amount that he has drawn upon the several civil treasuries, and he should transmit a list of all the drafts or orders drawn by him on the form given in Appendix No. 20.

354. The course to be adopted in order to record these transactions in the books of the Accountant-General may be as follows :—

355. I.—The disbursing officer will be debited, in the principal books, with the amount stated by him as having been drawn during the month. The aggregate amount drawn by disbursing officers will be passed to their debit and to the credit of an account to be opened in the principal ledger, to be entitled “Advances from Civil Treasuries.”

356. II.—The monthly lists forwarded by the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-Generals of the several presidencies or provinces will be examined by the Accountant-General, Military Department, so far as Bengal is concerned, with the original orders, drafts, &c., forwarded in support of the charge. To facilitate this operation, a register, as per form Appendix No. 21, should be kept, showing the amount that has been drawn from each civil treasury.

357. III.—The differences between the amount drawn by disbursing officers and that paid by the civil treasuries should be explained in detail monthly. A copy of this explanation, which should show all drafts or outstanding orders, should be rendered to the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-General of each presidency or province. (See Appendix No. 23.)

358. IV.—In concluding this subject, we would suggest that there should be established, under the immediate direction and control of the principal book-keeper, a section of the Accountant-General's office specially charged with the duty of regulating and adjusting the entire transactions relating to cash advances from the several treasuries.

* * * * *

II.—REGISTER OF CLAIMS, No. 2.—Orders on Mofussil Treasuries.
Appendix No. 13.

362. In this book would be recorded all claims, after they have been examined, which are made wholly payable by orders signed by the Accountant-General on Mofussil Treasuries. This is also a branch of the business hitherto conducted by the presidency paymaster. The course to be followed in regard to the final record is similar to that suggested in regard to Register No. 1. The account to be opened in the ledger, instead of being styled "Orders Payable," should be denominated "Advances from Civil Treasuries." It must be distinctly understood that these orders have no connexion with the drafts or orders drawn by disbursing officers on the treasuries in question. The treasury officers need, however, send to the Civil Department but one general list for all drafts or orders discharged during the month. The due appropriation of these orders to the debit of the accounts concerned would be conducted in the office of the Accountant-General.

* * * * *

X.—REGISTER FOR THE RECORD AND ADJUSTMENT OF ADVANCES FROM CIVIL TREASURIES.
Appendix No. 21.

375. In this book will be recorded the particulars of every draft drawn or order issued by the several disbursing officers upon the civil treasuries. The orders will be carefully compared with the returns furnished by the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-General, and the transactions should be adjusted monthly on the adjustment sheet prepared for that purpose.

* * * * *

408. We would again direct particular attention to the importance of adjusting every separate account now standing unclosed in the "deposit" and "advances repayable" ledger. The Military Accountant should be directed to report the total number of unsettled accounts; and a monthly return should then be forwarded by that officer to the Accountant-General, showing the number of these accounts which have been adjusted month by month.

409. The adjustment of the advances from civil treasuries on account of military services is another subject that should demand the immediate and earnest attention of the Military Accountants of the three presidencies. No time should be lost in obtaining a complete explanation in regard to every item of difference that may exist between the military and civil books, and the accounts should be adjusted to the latest date.

410. We regret that we have not had an opportunity of personally inspecting the books and accounts kept in the Military Account Offices of Madras and Bombay. It would appear that, so far as relates to the adjustment of the advances from civil treasuries, there is every reason to apprehend that the books are in an unsatisfactory state. This, however, cannot be fully ascertained, unless they are subjected to a searching investigation by an officer totally unconnected with the department. This, so soon as an opportunity should arise, we would suggest, should be done.

* * * * *

CONCLUSION.

417. We will now proceed to summarise the principal recommendations contained in this Report.

* * * * *

Disbursing officers should render monthly statements of the drafts or orders drawn by them on the civil treasuries; and the Deputy Auditor and Accountant-Generals of the several presidencies or provinces should send corresponding statements to the Accountant-General, Military Department, in Bengal, and to the controllers at Madras and Bombay, respectively.

* * * * *

The greatest importance should be attached to a prompt and careful adjustment of the advances from civil treasuries on account of military services. A separate section of the book-keeper's branch of the office should be established with the view of making these adjustments.

APPENDIX A (II).

EXTRACTS from the REVIEW (No. 1367 A., dated 29th February 1868) of the COMMISSION'S REPORT by COLONEL ARTHUR BROOME, Controller General of Military Expenditure.

20. The main object to which all the changes of system introduced by the English Commissioners have converged, is the timely rendering of the accounts in a classified and intelligible form; and as these are required to be based on deliberately audited transactions, there is, presumed, imparted to them a reliability which was wanting in the former system. This quality of reliability, however, does not pervade all the transactions exhibited, but only extends to the classified charges, as set forth therein, they being merely that portion of the entire charges which on investigation has been found unobjectionable.

21. On the most favourable estimate of the present system, it cannot be said either to give the charges under the prescribed classified heads complete for the year, or to ensure accuracy of description or certainty in respect of amounts in the accounts of the transactions of the year.

This remark may need further explanation. One of the fundamental principles of the present system of accounts is, that the annual receipts exhibited shall be the sums which come in course of receipt during the year, and that the annual expenditure, that is, the charges falling against the budget grants, shall be the sums which come in course of payment during the year. But, in order to expedite the compilation of the monthly accounts, two courses are adopted—

1st. When disbursing officers are unable to produce complete vouchers for services involving cash disbursements, for instance, moneys advanced to commissariat agents for purchases, &c., they are permitted to charge such disbursements to the head "Advances Recoverable," subject to further adjustment.

2nd. When vouchers for services said to have been completed are found by the auditors to be insufficient, the amount is disallowed, and deducted from the disbursements taken credit for by the executive officer; and this sum also passes under the head "Advances Recoverable." The classified charges, therefore, are exclusive of these transactions, and, to that extent, incomplete. As, however, these unaudited or unauthorised disbursements under the head "Advances Recoverable" (to be afterwards adjusted) are necessarily admitted in the accounts of the year as a set-off against the cash receipts from the civil treasuries, &c., they form the uncertain element adverted to in the preceding paragraph.

22. By this arrangement it will be perceived that there is a certain sum disbursed within the year that is neither a charge against the budget nor a balance, not being practically treated as an asset of the Government. The effect of this arrangement on the classified and recorded charges of a year may be favourable or unfavourable. If the previous year had closed with a larger sum under the head "Advances Recoverable," and the following year with a smaller sum, the difference, which must necessarily have been adjusted in the interim, will tend to swell the classified charges of that particular year, and vice versa. At the close of the last official year, the amount standing to credit and

Cr. 4,51,85,312

Dr. 4,42,25,750

9,59,562

debit of this head in the three presidencies was as noted in the margin, indicating that the legitimate charges of the year were increased by a sum of Rs. 9,59,562, appertaining properly to the charges of previous years. In this instance, the per-centage of increase is small, being only .06 per cent. of the aggregate amount of charges; but, with any relaxation of audit, or during extensive field operations, the results might probably be inconvenient. It may be as well to observe also that the amount disbursed in March last, and exhibited under this head at the date of the closing of the accounts of the year 1866-67, was Rs. 46,34,416 in the three presidencies, indicating that expenditure to this extent had remained unpassed and unclassified, but which will appear as classified charges in the succeeding year's accounts.

23. Without the slightest desire to revive previous objections, or to criticise the present system in any carping spirit, the undersigned feels bound to point out that the new head of "Advances Recoverable" is, in reality, the much-abused "Inefficient Balance" under a new name, with the same inconvenience, and with no actual diminution of amount.

*

*

*

*

*

*

25. A perfect system is not to be hoped for; and, in noticing these drawbacks or defects, the undersigned has no desire to suggest any change or modification in that so recently adopted. The defects referred to, being inherent, could only be removed by a complete reorganisation; and of late the changes have been so many, and their effects so unsettling and embarrassing, that any further measures of the kind are greatly to be deprecated. Moreover, the present system has been introduced under special advantages. A prominence was given to the question which no previous discussion of plans of accounting was ever fortunate enough to secure; and this has been attended with energy of action, and no little expenditure of money and labour. The disruption of former modes of procedure has been radical; establishments have been re-formed and re-constituted; printed forms reducing the duties to a definite and regular routine, and prepared at considerable cost, have been prescribed; and all offices of military account have been, or are being, arranged in adaptation to the system. It is very desirable, therefore, that it should be regarded as one of a permanent nature. But while the undersigned conceives it his duty to make this recommendation in the interests of Government, and zealously to act on it, he believes it to be no less his duty to indicate the obvious but inseparable defects of the system. It has struck him that, in its arrangements, despatch has been considered of more importance than accuracy, and that a rigid check has been subordinated to the advantages anticipated from a combination of duties, or, as it is termed, "a systematic allotment of work"; and further that being a graft of the War Office system, the difference between the character and qualifications of the subordinate agency available in India and England has not been sufficiently considered in the changes made.

26. The fact, however, of being alive to the defects is, next to their removal, the best means of obviating evil results, and by care and constant watchfulness, the greater evil* may be guarded against, and the lesser one mitigated.

* NOTE.—By "the greater evil" Colonel Broome here means the evil described in paragraphs 20 to 23 above.

(C.)—Net Monthly Disbursements from the Civil Treasuries in India to the Military Department. (In thousands of Rupees, omitting 000.)

	1869-70.	1870-71.	1871-72.	1872-73.	1873-74.	1874-75.	1875-76.	1876-77.	1877-78.	1878-79.	1879-80.	1880-81.	1881-82.	1882-83.
IN THE MONTH.
April -	1,04.40	96.51	93.70	1,02.15	94.58	92.59	92.13	89.35	96.87	1,10.78	1,70.18	1,71.99
May -	99.05	90.59	93.92	94.57	91.32	89.08	91.68	88.59	94.41	99.30	1,34.08
June -	94.93	89.84	88.17	86.88	86.58	89.86	86.81	84.76	89.48	90.05	1,18.51
July -	98.53	90.92	85.07	87.56	82.09	86.65	86.28	80.99	88.46	90.11	1,06.46
August -	94.39	83.48	83.09	83.67	81.45	79.72	81.11	77.53	88.93	85.14	1,15.97
September	95.09	86.88	79.75	81.49	81.86	79.74	78.79	75.79	84.72	85.46	1,23.45
October -	96.02	85.87	86.57	86.97	88.40	87.26	84.76	88.20	95.47	1,04.74	1,49.55
November -	99.66	93.17	97.36	93.88	88.70	94.17	96.40	89.85	97.70	1,29.35	1,57.84
December -	87.53	86.36	89.63	83.29	87.02	90.94	84.15	92.12	89.35	1,28.95	1,53.16
January -	1,05.10	99.29	94.99	99.45	92.38	97.46	93.15	92.76	95.28	1,51.85	1,76.67
February -	88.39	89.95	91.86	81.46	90.87	86.17	89.55	89.07	93.60	1,51.05	1,71.51
March -	1,01.25	91,27,28*	88.43	88.35	96.58	895.44	84.96	91.43	96.40	2,13.68	1,75,00†
Total	11,64.34	11,20,14*	10,72,54	10,69,72	10,61,83	10,69,08	10,49,77	10,40,44	11,10,67	14,40,46	47,52,38
Net military expenditure in India recorded in the Finance and Revenue Accounts	11,76.83	11,60,55*	11,14,68	11,09,38	10,89,02	10,79,39	10,78,68	10,96,42	11,54,85	12,18,26	44,43,18	43,28,95
Net expenditure compared with net disbursements	+ 12.49	+ 40.42	+ 42.14	+ 39.66	+ 27.19	+ 10.31	+ 28.91	+ 55.98	+ 44.18	- 2,22,20	- 3,09,20
TO THE END OF THE MONTH.
April -	1,04.40	96.51	93.70	1,02.15	94.58	92.59	92.13	89.35	96.87	1,10.78	1,70.18	1,71.99
May -	2,03.45	1,87.10	1,87.62	1,96.72	1,85.90	1,81.67	1,83.81	1,77.94	1,91.28	2,10.08	3,04.26
June -	2,98.38	2,76.94	2,75.79	2,83.60	2,72.48	2,71.53	2,70.62	2,62.70	2,80.76	3,00.13	4,22.77
July -	3,96.91	3,67.86	3,60.86	3,71.16	3,54.57	3,58.18	3,56.90	3,43.69	3,69.22	3,90.24	5,29.23
August -	4,91.30	4,51.34	4,43.95	4,54.83	4,36.02	4,37.90	4,38.01	4,21.22	4,58.15	4,75.38	6,45.20
September	5,86.39	5,38.22	5,23.70	5,36.32	5,17.88	5,17.64	5,16.80	4,97.01	5,42.87	5,60.84	7,68.65
October -	6,82.41	6,24.09	6,10.27	6,23.29	6,06.28	6,04.90	6,01.56	5,85.21	6,38.34	6,65.58	9,18.20
November -	7,82.07	7,17.26	7,07.63	7,17.17	6,94.98	6,99.07	6,97.96	6,75.06	7,36.04	7,94.93	10,76.04
December -	8,69.60	8,03.62	7,97.26	8,00.46	7,82.00	7,90.01	7,82.11	7,67.18	8,25.39	9,23.88	12,29.20
January -	9,74.70	9,02.91	8,92.25	8,99.91	8,74.38	8,87.47	8,75.26	8,59.94	9,20.67	10,75.73	14,05.87
February -	10,63.09	9,92.86	9,84.11	9,81.37	9,65.25	9,73.64	9,64.81	9,49.01	10,14.27	12,26.78	15,77.88
March -	11,64.34	11,20,14	10,72,54	10,69,72	10,61,83	10,69,08	10,49,77	10,40,44	11,10,67	14,40,46	47,52,38

a. Exclusive of a nominal credit of about 4,28.09 and a nominal debit of 62.03 in adjustment of certain charges and receipts on account of the Abyssinian Expedition.
b. Exclusive of a nominal debit of 58.97 in adjustment of certain charges on account of the Abyssinian Expedition.
* Includes a write back of 39½ lakhs on account of the overland troop transport service.
† Net disbursements reported at 2,08,25; transfer adjustments still to come.

Enclosure 2. in No. 48.

MINUTE by HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY, dated 26th May 1880.

1. I circulate herewith a minute by the Honorable Sir John Strachey, on the failure of the military estimates for 1879-80 and 1880-81.

2. Beyond the acknowledgment due to the clearness with which he has stated it, I have but very few remarks to make on the case as it now stands. I must first, however, refer to the minute written upon this subject by Sir Edwin Johnson on the 1st instant, which reached my hands on the 4th instant, when it was forwarded to the Secretary of State with our Despatch of that date.

3. I could not with advantage make any comment on Sir Edwin Johnson's above-mentioned minute pending the completion, thus far, of inquiries which the Financial Department had then in hand, and of which the result has now been laid before us by Sir John Strachey. I fully appreciate the chivalrous impulse of our military colleague in taking to himself personally whatever responsibility might rest on his department. But it is now obvious that both the impressions which inspired, and the explanations which accompanied, that minute are inapplicable to the facts established by subsequent inquiry, and unknown to Sir Edwin Johnson when he wrote it.

4. In whatever manner, or degree, responsibility for the failure that has occurred may, hereafter, be apportioned between persons or departments, the immediate duty involved in the responsibility which rests collectively with the Government of India, is to search out the whole matter down to the root of it, by prosecuting energetically and impartially the investigations initiated by Sir John Strachey; and to lay before the Secretary of State, as soon as we can confidently do so, a complete statement of the final result of these investigations.

5. What we have now to ascertain, with the utmost possible precision, is how, and why, this failure has occurred; the extent to which the evil has reached; and the most effectual means of preventing its recurrence.

6. It is, clearly, not to be explained by reference only to the defects of a system, or to the errors of individual subordinate officers, whatever those errors or defects may have been. Inquiry must also be directed towards every other aspect of the subject, in connexion with which a more active exercise of intelligence could have prevented what has occurred.

7. The statements contained in Sir John Strachey's minute appear to me as complete as they can possibly be, pending the replies still awaited by this Government to the references already made, on the subject of them, to its officers of account and control.

8. The absence of those replies need not, meanwhile, delay the submission of our further report to Her Majesty's Government. Nor do I think that the failure in the war estimates, serious and extensive though it is, can materially affect that real and substantial improvement in the Government of India's general financial position, which Sir John Strachey described in his late financial statement.

9. Neither does this failure in any way affect the soundness of the general principles of our financial policy. It has, however, misled the Government of India, and it has caused us to mislead the Government of Her Majesty, as to the cost of the Afghan War. For this we owe to the Secretary of State the expression of an unqualified regret. But, in contemplating every other aspect of what has occurred, the Government should, I think, be upon its guard against premature assumptions, or exaggerated apprehensions.

10. Whether, apart from the seriously mistaken estimate of it, the actual expenditure incurred on account of the Afghan War has been as reasonable and economical as we have striven to render it, and believed it to be, is a question which cannot now be determined. It is one, however, which, in my opinion, will hereafter demand searching and independent investigation on the part of the Government of India.

11. Such an inquiry cannot be opened while military operations are still in active progress, and while our knowledge of the expenditure actually incurred, or to be incurred, is necessarily imperfect. But if, hereafter, conducted with wisdom and impartiality, it will not only give to the Government valuable information in regard to the past, but will also furnish means for utilising the lessons of the past, to the best advantage, for the guidance of the future.

LYTTON.

No. 49.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, June 1, 1880.

War estimate Despatch posted, with minute by Viceroy and Sir John Strachey, in continuation of Despatch 4th May. That Despatch avowedly incomplete, but opinion of Government now unanimous that principal causes of failure were defects in system of military accounts, indicated in para. 12. System revised by English Commissioners in 1864 worked satisfactorily in peace, but during war proved defective, and precautions ineffectual. Consequently we were misled entirely by military accounts.

Regarding actual war expenditure, which to end of 1879-80 greatly exceeded amounts shown by accounts, consequent misapprehension vitiated estimates for future. Inquiries still being prosecuted into questions of individual responsibility and otherwise. No reason to suppose that error in estimate has affected actual expenditure. Revised estimates as soon as possible, although postponing opinion regarding probable total cost of war. We fear doubts expressed at end of para. 8, Despatch 4th May, are justified, and must expect total cost largely to exceed sum therein mentioned.

So many technical and other matters involved, that telegraphic summary of Despatch and minute is impossible. We can only repeat former request that you will await papers now sent, which contain full information. We shall not publish here anything more.

No. 50.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, June 4, 1880.

It would much help me to understand the case if your Excellency could telegraph dates when first information reached Government, or orders were issued, on points mentioned by Sir Edwin Johnson, namely, purchase of transport, supplies for six months, great increase of prices, necessity for extra wages to followers, and for construction of protective works.

No. 51.

DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, June 7, 1880, No. 179 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

1. I HAVE received and considered in Council the letter from the Government of India, dated the 4th of May, No. 143, reporting that they had grave reasons for apprehending that the cost of the military operations in Afghanistan would seriously exceed the amount entered in the financial statement for 1880-81.

2. I have also received a telegram from the Viceroy, dated the 20th of May, stating that a further letter was about to be sent, containing minutes by his Excellency and the Financial Member of Council giving complete information on the subject, and requesting that orders by Her Majesty's Government may be deferred pending its receipt; and I have received a further telegram of the 1st of June announcing the despatch of that letter, and indicating the nature of its contents.

3. In accordance with the request of your predecessor's Government, I suspend my final judgment until the arrival of their further communication; but, in the meantime, I think it right to apprise your Excellency that I consider the explanations at present before me to be unsatisfactory and insufficient.

4. From a careful examination of the information which has been supplied, I am unable to gather that the estimates for 1880-81 will be even sufficient to meet the outstanding charges of 1879-80, so that there was in effect no provision whatever for the military operations of the current year.

5. I find that the estimate of the Military Accountant-General for the year 1880-81 was submitted by him on the 19th of January 1880, with a memorandum containing the following words:—"For the Kabul charges it has not been considered necessary to do more than repeat last year's provision, Rs. 2,00,00,000. But for the renewal of hostilities in September last, that sum would probably have sufficed to meet the extra charges of the year. With an early settlement of affairs beyond the frontier, the same amount may suffice to wind up the accounts of the campaign; should the operations be protracted, this figure will no doubt have to be increased, hereafter, in the revised estimate, as has been done this year."

6. Major Newmarch states that he had the following data for his estimate :—

1. He considered that something over 100 lacs of expenditure incurred in 1879–80 would be outstanding at the end of the year, and have to be provided for in 1880–81.

2. The estimates of the Controllers of Military Accounts for 1880–81 (of which the dates are not given) were as follows :—

Bengal, 200 lacs, without remark.

Madras, 6 lacs, with a remark that it was prepared with reference to the first four months of 1879–80, which appears to imply that it was an estimate for the cost from April to July inclusive, at the rate of expenditure of 1879–80.

Bombay, nothing, the Controller leaving it to Major Newmarch to supply the figures.

7. Thus the Controllers' estimates amounted to 206 lacs, without any provision for the expenses in 1880–81 of the Bombay army engaged on the Kandahar-line, or for the arrears on that line for 1879–80, so far as regarded Bombay troops. Major Newmarch, however, submitted an estimate of 200 lacs upon the supposition that this amount would suffice if the operations were not protracted. Even upon this supposition, the estimate seems to have been insufficient; the 200 lacs provided in 1879–80 included arrears of only 60 lacs, whereas the 200 lacs provided for 1880–81 included an estimated arrear of 100 lacs; consequently, the provision for the current expenditure of the later year was less by 40 lacs than had been allowed for the past year.

8. But, putting aside this minor question, I cannot understand how an estimate based on the expenditure of 1879–80 could have been thought sufficient for 1880–81. I find, from statements transmitted in the Military Department, that the total force in the field and warned for service amounted to 40,260 on the 1st January 1879, and to 51,746 on the 1st January 1880, a large part of the latter force being employed at a much greater distance from its base, and on much more extended operations, than in 1879. During January and February last the military expenditure is stated to have greatly increased; yet, without any prospect of a speedy termination of the operations when the estimates were revised just before the financial statement was delivered, no alteration of the figures was made.

9. Sir Edwin Johnson does not state whether, in recommending the estimate for adoption on the 26th of January, he drew attention to the remark of Major Newmarch above quoted; but I presume that, according to what I understand to be the usual practice, the memorandum was forwarded to the Financial Department with the estimate. If this was done, it requires explanation how, when the time came for revision, no correction was considered necessary in the Financial Department.

10. It is stated in the 4th paragraph of the letter from the Government of India of the 4th of May, that a doubt was felt whether too large an amount had not been inserted by the Military Accountant-General in the Regular Estimate for 1879–80; but, as he maintained the accuracy of the estimate, it was not altered. The great increase of expenditure, however, which is said to have begun in January, and which would materially affect the estimates for 1880–81, seems to have been unknown to the Government of India, or overlooked by them, when the statement was made in the Legislative Council by Sir John Strachey on the 24th of February, and when the Viceroy concluded the debate on the 2nd of March.

11. Yet, assuming that Major Newmarch had made allowance in his original estimate for the great increase of the force shown in the orders given at the end of December 1879, it seems unaccountable that it should not have been foreseen that additional expense would be caused by the orders issued in January.

12. I further remark that this increase, actual or possible, in the force engaged in active operations is not one of the reasons assigned by Sir Edwin Johnson as having led to a disturbance of the calculations. In his minute of the 1st of May he assigns five causes for the disturbance, "which were not, and could hardly have been, foreseen at the time the estimates were prepared;" namely (1), the purchase of a very great proportion of the transport, instead of hiring it; (2), the necessity for purchasing and transporting six months' supplies, to be stowed at the front and on all the lines of communication before the hot weather set in; (3), the enormous increase in the price of grain and other supplies, and of stores, such as firewood and forage; (4), the necessity for paying increased wages, in addition to half-rations, to all followers north of Jhelum; and (5), the necessity for constructing works for the maintenance of the positions and protection of the troops.

13. The dates when orders were issued or information received regarding these several measures are not stated by Sir Edwin Johnson; and I have applied for this information by a telegram to your Excellency on the 4th instant.*

14. But another question remains, on which none of the papers before me appear to throw any light. I have already referred to the passage in the memorandum of Major Newmarch (para. 12) enclosed in the letter of 4th May, in which it was distinctly stated that his estimate of Rs. 2,00,00,000 was a simple repetition of the sum which, but for the renewal of hostilities in September last, would probably have sufficed to meet the extra charges of the year 1879-80, when, as is known, the spring campaign terminated in the course of June, and the extra military expenditure was reduced within narrow limits.

15. I am unaware of any circumstances which could have enabled the Government of India, at any moment since the commencement of the present year, to anticipate the termination of the campaign of 1880 before the later months of the autumn; and all the information which I possess points to the opposite conclusion.

16. The state of affairs in January rendered it impossible for the Government of India to forecast, with any precision, the duration of their military operations in Northern Afghanistan. At that time the plan of the campaign involved not only the movement of troops on a considerable scale and the purchase and transport of large supplies for Kabul, but also the special enlistment of native soldiers under a system of bounties which were to be granted during nine months from February last. A display of force in the spring was also distinctly contemplated, while there was no indication of any approach to such arrangements for the future Government of the country as could have rendered probable the withdrawal of the troops before the winter.

17. It does not, therefore, appear that, when the estimate of Major Newmarch was finally accepted by the Government of India on the 18th February, any reasonable hope could have been entertained of an "early settlement of affairs beyond the frontier," on which assumption alone the estimate of Rs. 2,00,00,000 had been considered by that officer to be "probably" sufficient; and I am unable to understand how the Government of India, fully acquainted, as they must have been, with the political and military position of affairs in Afghanistan, could have arrived at the conclusion stated in the 4th paragraph of their letter of the 4th May, that there was "no apparent cause for distrusting" the sufficiency of the Military Department's estimates."

18. Your Excellency will gather from the preceding observations that I regard the circumstances connected with the estimates of war expenditure published in the Budget of this year as of the utmost gravity; and I am only awaiting the explanations which your predecessor's Government have promised me, to communicate to your Excellency the conclusions at which her Majesty's Government may arrive upon these transactions.

I have, &c.

HARTINGTON.

No. 52.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, June 7, 1880.

Your telegram 4th. Orders for purchase (of) transport, mobilisation, reserves, storage, supplies, &c. all issued before closure of estimates, but local failure of crops and other causes augmented expense (of) measures thus sanctioned. Sir E. Johnson did not, in his minute, intend to imply that above-mentioned orders had not been considered in framing estimates, but that cost of carrying them out was not then sufficiently appreciated, and was increased by circumstances, some of which could not have been foreseen. Sir E. Johnson desires to explain that, in framing his estimates, he fully realised that in any circumstances it would most probably, for sanitary reasons, be impossible to completely withdraw troops to within our own frontier before October, but he considered that active military operations, and consequently war expenditure properly so called, were not likely to extend beyond July, after which date military expenditure would be confined to maintenance of positions, with consequent large reductions of cost. All such considerations as these, however, have become unimportant, as explanations of failure of estimate in light of full information subsequently obtained, which was not before Sir Edwin Johnson when he wrote, and which was sent by last mail. It is now shown that failure (of) estimates is due to Government having been misled as to actual past cost of war, not to any unforeseen expansion of military operations. It has been explained in papers accompanying last Despatch that, for some time after first discovery of failure of estimates, we were looking for explanation in wrong direction; and some of our telegrams, as well as parts of Sir E. Johnson's minute, were consequently written under entire misapprehension of real causes. See specially telegrams of 23rd March and 20th April.

* "It would much help me to understand the case, if your Excellency could telegraph dates when first information reached Government or orders were issued on points mentioned by Sir Edwin Johnson, namely, purchase of transports, supplies for six months, great increase of prices, necessity for extra wages to followers, and for construction of protective works."

No. 53.

EXTRACT of a LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, dated June 8, 1880, No. 177 (Financial). (Received July 3, 1880.)

We have the honour to reply to Lord Cranbrook's Despatches, No. 119, dated the 15th April, and No. 133, dated the 22nd April 1880.

In his minute forwarded with our Despatch No. 176, dated the 1st June, Sir John Strachey has explained the origin and nature of the failure of the estimates of the cost of the war in Afghanistan included in the financial statement of the 24th February last, and has given such indications of its apprehended extent as are possible, in anticipation of the formal revised estimates.

That failure fully accounts for our disappointment in respect to the opening balances of the current year and for our present financial condition, and explains our inability to meet your Lordship's bills, as we expected to do.

2. We cannot be surprised at the dissatisfaction manifested in these Despatches at the contrast between the representations of the condition of our finances contained in the financial statement and subsequent communications. We have already expressed our regret that, having been misled ourselves, we have so misled Her Majesty's Government.

3. Under these circumstances, we think it unnecessary to notice all the details of the criticisms contained in Lord Cranbrook's Despatches. Some of them are based upon hypotheses (as for example estimates of our balances) which later events have disturbed, and others will appear unimportant in the light of later information.

4. We have only to add, upon this part of the subject, that the expectations of an abnormal production of opium under the Bengal agencies have not been realised. The unseasonably early heat appears to have seriously interfered with the amount of the produce, both in Bengal and Malwa, so that it is now doubtful whether we shall not have to indent upon our reserve stock of Bengal opium to complete the provision of 56,400 chests in 1881.

5. Apart from the cost of the war, the accounts of 1879-80 seem likely to show, on the whole, results at least as favourable as the regular estimates; and we are aware of no present reason for anticipating any failure of our estimates for the current year.

6. In the light of subsequent events, we entirely share Lord Cranbrook's regret that we did not arrange for a loan in India as part of the programme of the year; but, with reference to paragraph 14 of Despatch No. 119, we desire to explain that the course which we took was not based upon any intention to borrow a very large sum in 1881. On the contrary, the general prospects of our finances seemed so favourable, that we had some hope that we might avoid borrowing in 1881 also, and certainly did not anticipate that we should have to borrow more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores in that year, unless some unforeseen calamity such as war or famine should occur.

* * * * *

We have, &c.

LYTTON.

F. P. HAINES.

J. STRACHEY.

E. B. JOHNSON.

RIVERS THOMPSON.

J. GIBBS.

ALEX. FRASER.

No. 54.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, June 16, 1880.

Can you telegraph how far provision made in Budget for war in 1879-80 and 1880-81 respectively will be insufficient, and do you adhere to estimates for frontier railways?

No. 55.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, June 22, 1880.

Yours, 16th. Cannot yet send detailed revised estimates. Following based on actual treasury outgoings to May. No better estimate probable before statement (for) Parliament. Cannot safely reduce 15 millions (in) paragraph 17, financial member's minute (of) 20th May, but, assuming evacuation begins (in) October, that sum probably sufficient. Total deficiency (in) military estimates 9 millions,—almost wholly due depends on (? to defects in) war record (in) accounts. Financial member's suggested reform. If reform complete, war charges in 1879-80, $8\frac{3}{4}$ millions,—1880-81, $5\frac{1}{2}$ (millions); being excess over estimates (of) 1879-80 (of) $5\frac{1}{2}$ millions,—1880-81, $3\frac{1}{2}$ (millions). If system unchanged, total recorded charges (in) 1878-79, 676,000l.; 1879-80, $3\frac{3}{4}$ millions; 1880-81, 9 (millions); 1881-82, $1\frac{1}{2}$ (millions). Foregoing figures all gross. Sets off, increased railway (and) telegraph receipts, possibly one million. Suggested account reforms also involve record (in) 1879-80 (of) other unadjusted differences (in) military and civil accounts, about 450,000l. Thus total possible addition in 1879-80 6 millions. Charges (for) frontier railways, 1879-80, closely agree (with) regular (estimate). 260,000l. more granted (in) 1880-81 to prevent stoppage (of) work, especially Rawulpindee section.

No. 56.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, June 24, 1880.

Yours, 22nd. Am I right in believing excess $5\frac{1}{2}$ millions 1879-80 was disbursed during that year, and therefore, when March balance 1,301 lacs was ascertained, $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions excess, besides 260,000l. railways, was all that remained to be met beyond Budget provision, 2,090,000l.?

No. 57.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, June 26, 1880.

Yours, 24th. Yes, present estimates only $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions excess (of) war payments this year besides 260,000l. railways; rest paid last year. To reconcile 4,214,000l., paragraph 15 (of) minute, with $5\frac{1}{2}$ millions, add 850,000l. unspent balances, and 500,000l. (for) reasons given (in) paragraph 16.

No. 58.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, June 30, 1880.

Yours, 26th. Besides balance 13,010,000l., was 850,000l. unspent balances available for war? If so, deducting that sum and budget provision from 5,500,000l., is not excess to be met 2,560,000l. only? What is your revised estimated balance for 31st March 1881, assuming home drawings 15,000,000l.?

No. 59.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, July 2, 1880.

No. Including balances, war payments this year 635 lakhs; closing balance 12 crores.

MEMORANDUM ON THE FOREGOING TELEGRAMS.

The total cost of the war in Afghanistan, excluding the expenditure on frontier railways, was given in the financial statement as 676,381l. expended in 1878-79, 3,216,000l. estimated for 1879-80, and 2,090,000l. estimated for 1880-81, making a total of 5,982,381l., or say 6,000,000l.

In the telegram of the 22nd of June, the total gross cost (that is, without allowing for extra receipts from railways and telegraphs) is estimated at 15,000,000l. shewing an excess of 9,000,000l. over the former estimate. If a reform which has been suggested by the Financial Member of Council be carried out, by which the military expenditure would apparently be brought into the accounts at a much earlier date than before, the portion of the excess so brought to account in 1879-80 would be 5,500,000*l.* By this alteration the sum of 71,164,000*l.* shewn (on page 47 of the correspondence laid before Parliament) as "Imperial expenditure" in that year, would be increased by 5,500,000*l.*, a corresponding reduction being made under the heads of "other deposits repaid and advances made" and "balances." Thus, the war expenditure brought to account to the 31st of March 1880 would be nearly 9,500,000*l.*

The cash balance in India was, on the 31st of March 1880, about 1,183,000*l.* below the estimate of February. It has since been strengthened by the loan in India, of which the proceeds will amount to about 3,229,770*l.* On the other hand, the war disbursements in 1880-81 would, under the suggested reform be 5,500,000*l.* instead of 2,090,000*l.* or an excess of 3,410,000*l.* over the provision in the budget. Adding this last 5,500,000*l.* to the former expenditure of 9,500,000*l.*, the total becomes 15,000,000*l.* in the three years.

To this excess of 3,410,000*l.* must be added 260,000*l.* granted for frontier railways; but an extra receipt of 300,000*l.* seems to be expected from railways and telegraphs. Thus there will be a total amount of 3,370,000*l.* to be provided in the current year, if the present estimates of the Government of India regarding the war should be realised, and if in other respects the anticipation of the budget estimate should prove correct.

It is uncertain what amount of bills will be drawn in 1880-81; but, on the assumption that the drawings will be reduced to 15,000,000*l.*, the cash balances in India on the 31st of March 1881 are now estimated at 12,000,000*l.*, or about 556,000*l.* higher than the estimate of February last.

India Office, July 2, 1880.

HENRY WATERFIELD,
Financial Secretary.

LONDON:

Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE
RELATING TO THE
ESTIMATES
FOR THE
WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1880.

[C.—2674.] Price $\frac{1}{2}d$.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE

No. 60.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, 14th July 1880.

How do you explain that during last year $5\frac{1}{2}$ crores were expended beyond estimate, but cash balance only reduced by 118 lakhs? Where did remainder come from?

No. 61.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, 16th July 1880.

EXPLAIN basis of calculation of war estimate 15 millions, if evacuation begins October. Does it assume total withdrawal from Kabul; and if so, when completed? Does it assume retention of force in Khyber, Kurram, and Kandahar or Pishin, and how long? Does it include half million batta?

No. 62.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, 17th July 1880.

JUNE military issue only 139 lakhs. Fifteen millions may be taken now as an outside estimate.

No. 63.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, 20th July 1880.

ESTIMATE 15 crores, based on (1) actual Treasury issues to end of June; (2) assumption that we shall have completed evacuation of Northern Afghanistan by the end of October, present rate of expenditure continuing meanwhile. On this assumption there will then remain at least two crores, which, with the proceeds of sale of surplus carriage and stores, should certainly cover all remaining expenditure till end of March, including batta. Whatever may be decided about Kurram and Khyber, no subsequent serious expenditure probable on our north-west frontier. Kandahar prospects uncertain, but any probable expenditure there and in Pishin will be fully met from the balance aforesaid.

No. 64.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, 25th July 1880.

YOURS 14th. Of remaining 432 lakhs, 230 disbursed in advances (in) 1878-9. We cannot fully explain remaining 202 till accounts closed, but betterness public works explains part. We anticipate other improvements, item 43 lakhs less bills paid than drawn. More hereafter.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE

RELATING TO THE

ESTIMATES

FOR THE

WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1881.

Price 2d.

[O.—1772.]

BOMBAY BRANCH

OF THE

Royal Asiatic Society

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 65.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, September 8, 1880.

War Estimates. Do you intend to reply to my Despatch 7th June, or is yours of June 1st final explanation?

No. 51 of Correspondence given to Parliament.
No. 48.

No. 66.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, September 10, 1880.

Shall not answer your 179 till you answer our 176, which contains final explanation.

No. 67.

DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, September 23, 1880,
No. 317 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Para 1. I desire to draw the attention of your Excellency to the following passage in Her Majesty's speech, delivered on the occasion of the prorogation of Parliament on the 7th instant:—

"I regret that it has not hitherto been possible to give you such information on the general state of Indian finance, and the recent miscarriages in presenting the accounts of military expenditure, as you would justly require before entering on a practical consideration of the subject. You may, however, rest assured that I shall redeem my pledge to supply you with this information at the earliest period in my power."

2. You will perceive from these words the necessity of losing no time in taking such measures as may be necessary in order to present to Parliament immediately on its reassembling the most complete statement that can be given of the expenditure incurred in the Afghan war.

3. Inasmuch, too, as Her Majesty's Government have determined that a substantial contribution to these expenses shall be made by the Imperial Treasury, and as the financial arrangements for the ensuing year, both of the British and the Indian Governments, will be largely affected thereby, it is essential that the actual cost of the war should be determined without delay.

4. If the recent success in Southern Afghanistan should, as may be hoped, lead to a termination of the active military operations, there is no reason that the accounts should not be completed within a few months, provided that measures are at once adopted for their systematic preparation, while the officers on whose orders the expenditure has been incurred are at hand to render any requisite explanations. Otherwise, the experience of former campaigns shows that claims are preferred, the correctness of which it is impracticable to check, and that not merely is much time lost in the endeavour to verify their accuracy, but frequently payments are unavoidably admitted which it might at an earlier period have been possible to refuse.

5. Your Excellency will be able to judge of the propriety of forthwith issuing a notification that all claims of every description, in connection with the war, shall be submitted at once to the respective Military Controllers in the three Presidencies, and that none will be entertained if brought forward after a specified date, say the 31st of December next, unless sufficient cause is shown to your Government for the delay.

6. All possible efforts should be made to obtain accounts from the Paymasters and the Officers of the Commissariat, Transport, and Supply Departments, who have to account for money advanced to them for the purposes of the war, as well as to expedite the audit and classification of the accounts when received, and the requisite clerical aid should be sanctioned for this purpose.

7. Complete returns should be rendered of payments, of whatever description, made from Civil Treasuries for military purposes during the years 1878-79, 1879-80, and 1880-81.

8. All civil and military account officers should be enjoined to co-operate heartily in giving effect to the wishes of Her Majesty's Government for an early adjustment of the expenses of the war, and the results of the accounts, as progress is made, should be carefully noted, and thrown into the form of a comprehensive account and report, which should be submitted by your Excellency to Her Majesty's Government as soon as you are in a position to do so.

9. The account will of course include all civil and political charges connected with the war, and, bearing in mind the heavy burden likely to be imposed for pensions, it will be necessary to frame an estimate of the capitalized value thereof. It may be possible for you to send a brief abstract by telegraph, with sufficient information to furnish the means of arriving at a decision regarding the apportionment of the expenditure between the two Treasuries.

10. In the foregoing paragraphs I have not referred to the question of the causes of the error in the Estimates. You will of course lose no time in completing the investigation which you are conducting into the matter, and in reporting to me the conclusions at which you may arrive.

I have, &c.,
HARTINGTON.

No. 68.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, October 2, 1880.

Essential in view of contribution from English Treasury that we should have by middle November complete account of cost of war to latest possible date, and best estimate possible of war expenditure after such date to probable close.

Please take immediate steps for preparation of such account and estimate. Despatch sent 23rd September with instructions on the subject, but necessary to anticipate complete account by preliminary information required by us.

No. 69.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, October 10, 1880.

Yours dated 1st (2nd).

Including occupation of Kandahar to end of March, we estimate gross cost of war at 1,578 and frontier railways at 590 lakhs. These amounts include all sterling expenditure, converted at 1s. 8d. Deducting net war gains to railway and telegraph revenues, grand total of estimated net cost of war and frontier railways, about 21 crores of rupees, or 17½ millions sterling, viz., 5 for railways and 12½ for war.

Despatch by next mail.

No. 70.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, October 22, 1880.

Yours dated 1st.

Including occupation Kandahar to end March, we estimate gross cost of war 1,578, and frontier railways 590 lakhs. These amounts include all sterling expenditure converted at 20 pence. Deducting net war gains to railway and telegraph revenues, grand total estimated net cost of war and frontier railways about 21 crores, or 17½ millions sterling, namely, 5 railways and 12½ army. Despatch next mail.

No. 71.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, October 26, 1880, No. 354
(Financial). (Received November 24, 1880.)

MY LORD MARQUIS,

WE have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the following telegram from No. 68.
your Lordship, dated the 1st instant:—

"It is essential, in view of the proposed contribution from the English Treasury, that we should have by the middle of November a complete account of the cost of the war in Afghanistan to the latest possible date, and the best estimate possible of the war expenditure after such date to the probable close of the war. Please take immediate steps for the preparation of such an account and estimate. A despatch was sent on the 23rd of September with instructions on the subject, but it is necessary to anticipate the complete account called for in that despatch by the preliminary information required by us in November."

2. The Despatch No. 317 of the 23rd September, to which your Lordship refers, No. 67. reached us on the 16th instant, and will receive our immediate attention. We had already taken measures to hasten, by every means in our power, the completion of the accounts of the war.

3. In complying now with the request contained in your telegram we shall make the following assumptions:—

First—That, until our future permanent military frontier position is settled and occupied, all extra expenditure for the troops which continue upon a war footing, beyond our old frontier, is part of the cost of the war:

Second—That upon this basis the war expenditure may be expected to continue to the end of the current financial year:

Third—But that no expenditure within our old frontier (excepting that upon the frontier railways), incurred after the end of the current month of October, should be attributed to the war:

Fourth—That our military expenditure in the Year 1877-78 may be taken, for purposes of comparison, to be a fair measure of our normal military expenditure before the war.

4. We append an account and estimate of the cost of the war in Afghanistan, prepared upon these hypotheses, from which Her Majesty's Government will learn that we now estimate the net cost of the war, including that of the frontier railways, at about 21 crores of rupees, or 17½ millions sterling, as follows:—

	Rs.	£
Net military expenditure proper	- 15,77,71,000	=@ 1s. 8d. 13,148,000
Frontier railways	- 5,90,03,000	4,917,000
Grand total	- 21,67,74,000	18,065,000
Deduct excess revenues from telegraphs and railways attributed to the war	- 68,00,000	567,000
Estimated net cost of the war	- 20,99,74,000	17,498,000

5. We offer the following observations upon this account and estimate:—

- (1.) Our object being to make as correct a calculation as possible of the cost of the war, we have converted all the sterling expenditure upon the war into rupees, at the rate of Re. 1=1s. 8d.
- (2.) We have included the whole civil and political expenditure beyond the frontier during the war.
- (3.) The estimated cost of the frontier railways does not include the sum of Rs. 76,98,000,=£641,500, expended, or to be expended, on the completion of the Jhilm-Rawalpindi section of the Panjab Northern State Railway; because, under the orders contained in paragraph 4 of Lord Cranbrook's Despatch No. 54, dated 19th February 1880, this amount is being recorded, in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, under the head 32, Railways.

- (4.) It will be easy for your Lordship to deduct any portion of the estimated remaining monthly cost of the war if you deem it expedient to close the account of the expenditure to be attributed to the war, upon any hypothesis other than what we have assumed.
- (5.) On the one hand, we have made no allowance for the proceeds sale of surplus stores and animals on the return of our army into its quarters within our frontier: on the other hand, (i) without detailed inquiries, which will take time, we are quite unable to frame any estimate whatever of the capital value of the pensions, in excess of the average incidence of such charges, which will result from the war; (ii) we have not specially provided for the cost of the extra British troops temporarily upon our hands, owing to their earlier despatch to India after the defeat at Maiwand; and (iii) we have estimated no further expenditure from the Home Treasury excepting upon the frontier railways. We are disposed, however, to think that a better aggregate estimate cannot now be made than the total which we have named.
6. It is impossible for us at present to say how the war expenditure will be distributed in the Finance and Revenue Accounts among the several years affected.
7. The Military Accounts, classified and audited to the end of July in India, and of August in England, contain the following record of the net expenditure on the war:—

	In India. £	In England. £	Total. £
1878-79 Fin. & Rev. Acct. No. 57	600,109	76,111	676,220
1879-80 - - -	4,595,300	174,480	4,769,780
1880-81 - - -	1,623,116	38,016	1,661,132
Total - - -	6,818,525	288,607	7,107,132

or, if the sterling expenditure be converted into rupees at 1s. 8d., Rs. 7,16,49,000; so that, if our estimate is correct, there remains, apart from the cost of the frontier railways, net, Rs. 8,61,22,000 yet to be recorded in the Finance and Revenue Accounts, under the head 36, Army. We are doing all that we can to expedite this process.

8. The distribution of the record of the cost of the frontier railways is equally uncertain. We do not expect that this record will be completed before the year 1882-83.

9. In anticipation of this despatch, we telegraphed, on the 22nd instant, the following reply to your Lordship's message:—

"Your Lordship's message dated 1st instant. Including our occupation of Kandahar to the end of March, we estimate the gross cost of the war at 1,578 lakhs, and that of the frontier railways at 590 lakhs. These amounts include all the sterling expenditure converted into rupees at 20 pence the rupee. Deducting the net war gains to the railway and telegraph revenues, the grand total estimated net cost of the war and frontier railways is about 21 crores of rupees, or 17½ millions sterling, namely, 5 millions for the railways and 12½ millions for the Army et cetera. Despatch by next mail."

We have, &c.,

RIPON.

F. P. HAINES.

J. STRACHEY.

W. STOKES.

J. GIBBS.

D. M. STEWART.

C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure in No. 71.

NET COST of the WAR in AFGHANISTAN, as now estimated.
(In Rupees, 000's omitted. No digits omitted from the sterling figures.)

I.—NET MILITARY EXPENDITURE PROPER.

Net disbursements from the Civil Treasuries in India to the agents of, or on account of, the Military Department, from 1st April 1878 to the 31st August 1880					Rs.	39,81,26
Deduct—Advances by the Military Department for the Malta Expedition, recovered at the Home Treasury					Rs.	20,89
Nága Campaign						5,88
Preparations for military operations in Burma						7,53
Added to the balances of the Military Department						28,39
Deficiency as compared with 1877–78, in the supplies obtained by the Military Department from sources other than the Treasuries (causing a corresponding excess demand upon the Treasuries)						5,39
Excess net military expenditure due to other causes*						24,51
						92,59
						38,88,67
Corresponding net disbursements on the scale of 1877–78, namely, two years at 11,10,67=22,21,34+(first five months) 4,58,15						26,79,49
Excess net disbursements to the end of August, in India, due to the war						12,09,18
Spent in England—					£
In 1878–79						76,111
In 1879–80						174,480
In 1880–81						38,016
Total					288,607 @ 1s. 8d.	34,63
Estimated net military disbursements proper on account of the war, to the end of August						12,43,81
Add—Donation Batta authorised by G. O. G. G. No. 459, dated 6th April					Rs.	60,00
Compensation to the Native Cavalry ditto						10,00
Compensation for the loss of hired camels						12,00
Subsidy to the Amír Abd-Ur-Rahmán (still to pay)						13,00
Postal war expenses (1880–81)						16,90
Telegraph ditto (1880–81 and 1881–82)						12,00
Current war expenses for seven months, @ Rs. 30,00 a month						2,10,00
						3,33,90
Total					Rs.	15,77,71

	1878–79.	1879–80.	1880–81.
			(First four months.)
* Thus calculated :—	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Recorded military expenditure in India	12,18,26	16,41,26	5,42,93
Deduct—Afghán war expenditure	60,01	4,59,53	1,62,31
Nága campaign	—	3,88	2,00
Burma preparations	—	7,53	—
Total deductions	60,01	4,70,94	1,64,31
Remains for comparison with 1877–78	11,58,25	11,70,32	3,78,62
Recorded expenditure, 1877–78	11,54,85	11,54,85	3,74,11†
Excess due to causes other than war	3,40	15,47	4,51

	Abstract.	Rs.
1878–79	—	3,40
1879–80	—	15,47
1880–81	—	4,51
Do. August 4,51÷4	—	1,13
		24,51

† Includes 3,86 for stallions transferred to the Civil Department, for which credit was originally taken in the Military Accounts, but which was written back after the Monthly Accounts were closed.

II.—FRONTIER RAILWAYS.

	Rs.	Rs.
Expenditure to the end of 1879-80—
In India - - - - -	1,09,00
In England, 244,475 l. @ 1 s. 8 d. - - - - -	29,33	1,38,33
Estimated remaining expenditure—
In India (less expected recoveries) - - - - -	2,13,50
In England, 1,985,000 l. @ 1 s. 8 d. - - - - -	2,38,20	4,51,70*
Total - - - - -		5,90,03

III.—GRAND TOTAL.

	Rs.	£
Net military expenditure proper - - - - -	15,77,71=@1 s. 8 d.	13,148,000
Frontier railways - - - - -	5,90,03	4,917,000
Total - - - - -	21,67,74	18,065,000
Deduct—
Excess revenue from railways (55,50), and telegraphs (12,50), attributed to the war - - - - -	68,00	567,000
Grand total estimated net cost of the war - - - - -	20,99,74	17,498,000

No. 72.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, November 2, 1880. (Financial.)
(Received December 1, 1880.)

MY LORD MARQUIS,

No. 71.
No. 67.

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 354, dated 26th ultimo, and with reference to paragraph 9 of your Lordship's Despatch No. 317, dated 23rd September, we think it right to point out that the calculation of the capital cost of the pensions which will result from the war will involve considerable labour and expense, and that as it will not always be possible to trace the connection between the war and its consequences in this respect, the result must, after all, be inconclusive and unsatisfactory.

2. It must be borne in mind that the whole true cost of the war is not susceptible of precise calculation. Doubtless the bulk of the expenditure upon the war can be so classified, without doubt or difficulty, but there must always remain a large margin of expenditure concerning which it will be a matter of opinion whether it should or should not be attributed to the war.

3. Moreover, some items of public outlay cannot, under any circumstances, be so charged. For example, there can be no question that one effect of the war has been largely to increase the cost of labour, transport, and supplies in many parts of India, especially in the Punjab, and that this has caused much excess expenditure on the general administration, particularly on Public Works and on the Army in garrison. But it would be quite impracticable to calculate this excess with any sufficient accuracy for its inclusion among the war charges. On the other hand the calculation of the war gains to the Telegraph and Railway Revenues is equally problematical.

* Distributed in the Department of Public Works, with all reserve, as follows :—

	In India. Rs.	In England. £
1880-81 - - - - -	1,73,50	1,285,000
1881-82 - - - - -	80,00	700,000
1882-83 - - - - -	20,00	—
	2,73,50	1,985,000
Deduct—Expected recoveries - - - - -	60,00	—
	2,13,50	1,985,000

4. We venture, therefore, to think that it will not really be worth while to undergo the labour and incur the expense of the detailed calculations necessary for an estimate of the capitalised value of the pensions attributable to the war, and we shall be glad if Her Majesty's Government should see fit to relieve us from this duty.

We have &c.,

J. STRACHEY.
F. P. HAINES.
W. STOKES.
J. GIBBS.
C. U. AITCHISON.

No. 73.

DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, November 4, 1880, No. 368 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

In my Despatch of the 7th of June, No. 179, I drew the attention of your Excellency to various points connected with the preparation of the estimates for the war in Afghanistan, on which I considered the explanations then before me to be unsatisfactory, and I stated that I was only awaiting the explanations which your predecessor's Government had promised me, to communicate to you the conclusions at which Her Majesty's Government might then arrive. No. 51.

2. Shortly afterwards I received the Letter from the Government of the Earl of Lytton dated the 1st of June, No. 176, forwarding minutes by his Lordship and Sir John Strachey; but I have hitherto deferred the further communication promised, under the impression that you might wish to make some reply to my Despatch of the 7th of June. As, however, I have now learned, from your telegram of the 10th of September, that the final explanation which the Government of India have to make was contained in the letter of the 1st of June and its enclosures, I proceed to communicate to you the views which Her Majesty's Government entertain on the subject of this correspondence. No. 48, No. 66.

3. From the Minute of Sir John Strachey I learn that the estimates of the war expenditure in the year 1880-81 were framed on a calculation based on the amounts actually brought to account and audited at the time when the estimates were prepared; that the Government were thus misled, both as to the expenditure already incurred, and as to that which was likely to occur in the coming year; that, notwithstanding the doubts freely expressed on various occasions in public criticisms, no mistrust was felt of the military estimates; and that the Financial Department never tested their accuracy by reference to the issues of cash from the civil treasuries to the military disbursing officers. Encl. 1 in No. 48.

4. Sir John Strachey sums up his explanation in the concluding paragraphs of his Minute as follows:—

“The error in the estimate is, in my judgment, mainly due, not to any misapprehension as to the extent or character of the military operations, but to the fact that we were ignorant of the actual current cost of the war. I attribute this ignorance mainly to the defect which I have described in the military accounts, which although themselves perfectly correct, failed to give to the Government timely information of the expenditure which was really going on. In this respect the whole history furnishes a fresh illustration of the fact that, in regard to such matter as keeping accounts and framing estimates, it is never safe to assume that the care and intelligence of individuals will afford sufficient safeguards against the dangers of a defective system.

“I admit that if, instead of depending, according to custom, on the accounts alone, the Government of India had itself watched the current cost of the war, it might have, to a great extent, avoided the error into which it has fallen. But I place the defect in the system of the military accounts in the forefront, because, but for that defect, no oversight, omission, or negligence by departments or individual officers, whether in the Secretariat or in the Account offices, could have prevented the earliest possible knowledge of the facts, and because such knowledge would itself have neutralized all individual and minor failures.”

5. It is thus admitted by Sir John Strachey that if the Government of India “had itself watched the current cost of the war,” it might have, to a great extent, avoided the errors into which it has fallen. I am compelled, therefore, in estimating their responsibility for these errors, to inquire what were the means at their command for obtaining the requisite information.

6. In considering this question, I must remark that, whatever defects may exist in the system of military accounts, there was nothing, as Sir John Strachey himself observes, "to prevent the Government of India in the Military and Financial Departments from being acquainted, soon after the end of each month, with the actual amounts disbursed to the Military Department from all the treasuries all over India."

7. It is admitted that no recourse was had to this obvious check, viz., the comparison of the issues of cash with audited expenditure, nor can I discover any other trace of the careful examination and deliberation with which, it is stated in the Government Despatch of the 4th May, the estimates were prepared and accepted in the Military Department.

No. 46.

8. The Memorandum of the Military Accountant General, transmitted with that Despatch, gave an account of the procedure adopted, and there is nothing whatever in the information before me to show what were the measures taken for verifying its sufficiency or for inquiring as to the current expenditure of the war.

9. In a war, the scale and duration of which is uncertain, and of which the circumstances may vary from day to day, it is obviously impossible to frame any accurate estimate for a period far in advance, but there were two elements in such a calculation which it was both possible and necessary to take into account, viz., the actual war expenditure of the past, so far as means existed for ascertaining it, and the duration of the war in the future, so far as it was possible to foresee it.

10. Neither of these elements of opinion appears to have received consideration.

11. As I have already observed, no attempt was made to compare the actual disbursements with the audited expenditure, and, with a full knowledge that there was little hope of a termination of the campaign before the end of the autumn, an estimate was sanctioned which was avowedly framed on the assumption that it would be brought to a close at the same time as in the preceding year, viz., at the end of the spring.

12. The failure in the estimates, therefore, is in no way due to causes which might not have been known or foreseen, but to the fact that they rested on no solid foundation either of actual experience or of reasonable opinion. Nor was the error under review an error merely in an estimate of future expenditure.

13. It is not denied that both the Financial and Military Departments were altogether ignorant of the scale of expenditure in progress at the time when the estimate was framed, and which had been going on for several previous months.

Encl. 2 in
No. 48.

14. From Lord Lytton's Minute of 26th May, I learn that the Government of India had striven to render the war expenditure, and believed it to be, both "reasonable and economical."

15. I am unable to perceive how the smallest results can be expected from the efforts of a Government to secure reasonable economy in expenditure, when neither its Financial nor Military Departments possess any accurate or even approximate information as to the scale of that expenditure, as it is difficult to see how, in such circumstances, any intelligent or effectual control can be exercised.

16. I cannot, therefore, refrain from expressing my surprise that the responsible members of the Government of India should have accepted the military estimates thus placed before them. As pointed out in my Despatch of the 7th June, the estimating officers took no account of the increase of force, of the greater extent of the operations, and of the probability of their being longer protracted than in the previous year; but no inquiries were made by the Government regarding the principle on which the estimate was prepared, nor any steps taken to ascertain whether allowance had been made for facts which could not have been known when the estimate was first framed, and of which the framers of the estimates might have still been ignorant.

17. Yet, although no such examination had been made, the language publicly used regarding the estimates was calculated to convey the idea that all that was possible had been done to ascertain their accuracy. It was stated by Sir John Strachey that they had "been prepared with much care," and that there was "no reason to suppose that they err on the side of being too low;" and the Governor General said that, "so far as it has hitherto been possible to verify them," the estimates have proved to be remarkably accurate.

18. Lord Lytton has now vacated the office of Viceroy, and the Military and Financial Members have resigned; and it is, therefore, unnecessary to enlarge on their responsibility for statements by which Her Majesty's Government were seriously misled, not merely as to the amount of the military expenditure, but also as to the care and attention which the estimates had received before sanction, by language which could not fail to have the effect of allaying any suspicion of error. But it is with great regret that I feel it to be my duty to place on record the opinion of Her Majesty's Government that the Government of India must be held to have failed in taking measures of ordinary precaution, at a time when unusual vigilance was peculiarly required; to have neglected the means at their command for obtaining the materials of trustworthy estimates of the cost of great operations which were being conducted under their orders; and to have given public expression to their confidence in those estimates for which in such circumstances there was no justification.

19. It is not my wish, even if I had the means of doing so, to attempt to decide as to the degree of blame attaching to the officers of your Government in these transactions. I can only observe that the explanations which I have received convey a general impression of inefficiency in the Financial Department as well as in the Department of Military Accounts. In a Despatch of the Government of India, of the 1st June, I was informed that an inquiry was in progress which would enable them to decide how far the errors under review were the result of defects of system, and what responsibility attaches to individual officers by whom the system has been administered. I have also deemed it to be my duty to appoint a Committee in this country to inquire, with reference to the recent error, into the system of military account and estimate in India, and as to the relations existing between the Military Account Department and the Comptroller-General, and to report whether any defects exist therein, and, if so, the best mode of remedying them. No. 48.

20. I hope that I may be shortly furnished with the result of these inquiries, which I consider essential in the interests of good government, and also in justice to the several officers concerned, on some of whom an undue share of blame may otherwise devolve.

I have, &c.,

HARTINGTON.

No. 74.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, November 11, 1880.

Your Telegram of 22nd October. I understand your estimate of war expenditure, No. 70. exclusive of railways, down to 31st March 1881 to be 12½ millions. Does promised despatch state total disbursements on military account from civil treasuries from beginning of war to 30th September 1880, and basis of estimated war expenditure to 31st March next, and if any remaining liabilities beyond that date?

No. 75.

TELEGRAM from the PRESIDENT IN COUNCIL, Simla, November 12, 1880.

Despatch of 26th October explains fully basis of war estimates. Please await.

No. 71.

No. 76.

TELEGRAM to the VICEROY, November 20, 1880.

Your Financial 354 Appendix. Doubt correctness of comparison* with net disbursements at 11,10,67 in 1877-78. If made with audited expenditure at 11,54,85 in 1877-78 and deficiency in other supplies 539 omitted, result gives 14,92,13 to August, or 15,21,17 if audited September is added, estimating in each case 30 monthly to end of year. Or taking net disbursements for three years estimated at 49,49,03, and deducting advances, except deficiency in other supplies, there is excess over net audited expenditure on scale of 77-78 of 13,97,28. Adding English expenditure, batta compensation, subsidy, post and telegraph, result is 15,55,81. Have you ascertained from frontier treasuries and military chests all claims advised but outstanding?

Encl. in No. 71.

No. 77.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, November 22, 1880.

No. 75. Yours 20th. We prefer our own method and deprecate reduction of our war estimate. Treasuries know nothing about outstanding claims, which are probably moderate.

No. 78.

LETTER to the SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, dated India Office,
November 24, 1880.

SIR,

No. 71. WITH reference to the intention expressed by Her Majesty's Government in Parliament to propose that a contribution should be made from Imperial Revenues towards the expenses of the Afghan war, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to transmit, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, a copy of a Letter* which has been received from the Government of India, enclosing an estimate of the total expenses in connection with that war.

It is explained that the estimate is framed on the basis of including all probable extra expenditure for troops beyond the former frontier line to the 31st of March 1881 (estimated at 30 lakhs a month from September 1880 to March 1881 inclusive), and all civil and political expenditure beyond the frontier during the war, but no expenditure within the frontier, except on the railways, after the 31st October last.

On this hypothesis it is estimated that the net disbursements from the Civil Treasuries to the Military Department will, after allowing for abnormal expenditure not connected with the Afghan war, and after the inclusion of expenditure in England and of certain other expenses which are specified, amount to Rs. 15,77,71,000, or (at the exchange of 1s. 8d. the rupee) 13,148,000l. in excess of the military expenditure of 1877-78, which is taken as the normal military expenditure before the war.

The outlay on the frontier railways, after deducting the cost of completing the line from Jhilmam to Rawalpindi, which would probably have been undertaken irrespectively of the war, is estimated at Rs. 5,90,03,000 or 4,917,000l.

From the aggregate of these sums is deducted Rs. 68,00,000 or 567,000l., estimated to be the revenue derived from telegraphs and railways in consequence of the military operations; and the result is to show a total estimate of Rs. 20,99,74,000 or 17,498,000l. as the net cost of the war.

It would seem that, while the Government of India may, perhaps, be able, in the spring, to show a larger portion of the expenditure as audited and a smaller portion as estimated, it is not probable that any very different figures can be given as the aggregate expenditure until the whole outstanding amount has been finally audited.

In these circumstances I am directed to say that, for the purpose of distributing the expenses between the two Governments, the Secretary of State in Council is prepared, on his part, to accept the statement now forwarded as representing the whole cost of the late war, any further charges being treated as ordinary Indian expenditure, and I am to inquire whether the papers now forwarded are sufficient for the purposes of their Lordships, as, if further information is needed, it will be necessary to give instructions to the Government of India without delay to procure it.

I have, &c.,
LOUIS MALLET.

No. 79.

DESPATCH to the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, December 9, 1880, No. 410 (Financial).

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Para. 1. I HAVE considered in Council your Excellency's Letters, dated the 26th of October and 2nd of November, Nos. 354 and 363, regarding the estimate of expenditure incurred and likely to be incurred to the 31st of March 1881 in connection with the war in Afghanistan. Nos. 71 and 72.

2. As I did not feel sure that the basis of comparison with the net disbursements from Civil Treasuries to the Military Department in 1877-78 afforded so accurate a measure of the true war charges as would a comparison with the actual audited military charges of that year, I addressed to your Excellency a telegram on the 20th ultimo, in which I also inquired whether allowance had been made for claims still outstanding, but of which advice had been sent to the frontier treasuries and military chests by the officers incurring the liability. No. 76.

3. Learning from your Excellency's telegraphic reply of the 22nd ultimo that you deprecated any reduction of your estimate, and that there was no information at the treasuries about any outstanding claims, I caused your Letter of the 26th of October, with the accompanying estimate, to be sent to the Treasury in a letter dated the 24th of November, of which I enclose a copy for your information. No. 77. No. 78.

4. Your Excellency will observe that, in view of the necessity for placing before Her Majesty's Government at once an estimate on which it would be possible for them to act, in deciding the proportion of the cost which they propose to Parliament to defray from Imperial revenues, I have determined that, unless further information is required by the Treasury, the estimate which you have transmitted shall be taken as representing, for the purpose of that decision, the whole cost of the late war, any further charges being treated as ordinary Indian expenditure. It will, therefore, be unnecessary that you should attempt to frame an estimate of the capitalised value of the pensions.

I have, &c.,
HARTINGTON.

No. 80.

LETTER from the SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY to the SECRETARY OF THE INDIA OFFICE, dated Treasury Chambers, December 31, 1880.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acknowledge the receipt of your Letter of the 24th ultimo, covering a Despatch from the Government of India, giving an estimate of the total expense of the Afghan war. I am to say that there are some points on which my Lords would be glad if the Secretary of State in Council could supply further information, with the view of facilitating the main question of the contribution to be made by this country towards the cost of the war. No. 78.

1. It is assumed, in paragraph 2 of your Letter, and under No. 3 of paragraph 3 of the Despatch of the Government of India, that no expenditure within the old frontier incurred after 31st October last—except upon the railways—is included in the account. I am to ask whether my Lords are to understand that, from that date, your establishment within the frontier is a normal one.

2. In paragraph 5 (5) of the Despatch, allusion is made to the proceeds of sale of surplus stores and animals hereafter; but it is not stated whether on the whole the stock of stores has been unduly swollen or unduly depleted by the war; if the former, the real cost of the war has been overstated, if the latter, understated. Is there any information on the subject in the possession of your Department?

3. My Lords observe that the net cash issues from Civil Treasuries to the 31st of August have been taken as the basis of the estimate. But it is not said whether on that date large or abnormal balances existed in field chests, or in the hands of Military Disbursing Officers. If there were, the excess should be applied in diminution of the estimate of issues in the period 1st November 1880—31st March 1881, which is taken at Rs. 3,00,000 a month.

I have, &c.,
F. CAVENDISH.

No. 81.

LETTER to the SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, dated India Office,
January 4, 1881.

MY LORD,

No. 80.

I AM directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 31st ultimo, No. 20143/80, regarding the estimate of the total expense of the Afghan war, and, in reply, to make the following observations.

With reference to the inquiry whether the military establishment within the frontier of India has, from the 31st of October last, been a normal one, I am to point out that, immediately after the close of the war, and while the political condition of Afghanistan remains as unsettled as at present, it is impossible that the military establishment to be eventually kept up within the frontier of India can be determined, and that, in the fifth clause of the fifth paragraph of the letter from the Government of India, dated the 26th of October 1880, a temporary excess of strength was mentioned. Measures are, however, in progress for reducing the military force to the point at which it is for the present considered necessary to maintain it.

With regard to the inquiry whether the stock of stores has been unduly swollen or depleted, the only information sent to the Secretary of State is contained in the 27th paragraph of Sir John Strachey's Financial Statement,* in which it was mentioned that the waste of stores and camp equipage could not be then determined, but that the reserves in the arsenals were being maintained at their proper standard.

* See Command Paper 2560, page 13.

It is, however, evident that the Government of India consider that it will be not unfair to set off the proceeds of the sale of surplus stores and animals against the temporary excess in the Military establishment, and the cost that will have to be borne by that Government on account of pensions arising from the war.

On the question whether the military balances on the 31st of August 1880 were large or abnormal, I am directed to state that they had been reduced from 1,009,600*l.* on the 1st of April 1880 to 432,900*l.* on the 1st of September; and that the estimate of expenditure contained in the enclosure to the above-mentioned letter from India was apparently based on the supposition that the disbursements in the last seven months of the year 1880-81 would amount to the sum therein mentioned in addition to the excess of the departmental balances above the amount of 149,000*l.* at which they stood on the 31st of March 1878, and to which it was assumed, for the purpose of the estimate, that they would be reduced by the 31st of March 1881.

I have, &c.,
LOUIS MALLETT.

LONDON:

Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

IX. Parliamentary Papers:—
 Afghanistan. Further Correspondence relating to the estimates for the war
 in.
 Further Papers relating to the occupation of Kandahar.
 Central Asia. Correspondence respecting affairs in.
 Central Asia. Further Correspondence respecting affairs in.
 Army (Indian Home charges).
 East India (Vernacular Press Act).
 East India (Bengal Rent Law Commission.)

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE

RELATING TO THE

ESTIMATES

FOR THE

WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
 PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1881.

[C.—2840.] Price 2½d.

BOMBAY BRANCH

OF THE

Royal Asiatic Society

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 92.

LETTER from the GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, January 26, 1881,
No. 19 (Financial). (Received February 23, 1881.)

MY LORD MARQUIS,

IN continuation of our Despatch No. 354 of October 26, 1880, we have the honour to make the following reply to your Lordship's Despatch No. 317 of the 23rd of September. No. 71.
No. 67.

2. The only information in connection with the war expenditure, based on ascertained facts, which we are at present in a position to submit to your Lordship consists of (1) the net disbursements from the Civil Treasuries in India to the agents of or on account of the Military Department up to December 31, 1880, (2) the total amount of audited and classified war expenditure in England and in India up to October 31, 1880.

3. The total amount of net disbursements from the Civil Treasuries to the agents of or on account of the Military Department, from April 1, 1878, to December 31, 1880, is as follows:—

	Rs.
1878-79	14,41,00,000
1879-80	18,07,05,000
1880-81 (to December 31, 1880)	12,93,33,000
TOTAL	45,41,38,000*	= £37,845,000.

The monthly detail of these figures is given in Appendix A.

4. In our Despatch No. 354 of October 26, 1880, para. 3, we laid down the principle that "our military expenditure in the year 1877-78 may be taken, for purposes of comparison, to be a fair measure of our normal military expenditure before the war." It follows that the difference between our net disbursements from April 1, 1878 to December 31, 1880, and the amount which those issues would have been had our expenditure been on the scale of 1877-78, affords as near an approximation of the actual cost of the war in India up to December 31, 1880 as it is, for the present, at all events, possible to make.

	Rs.
Two years at Rs. 11,10,67,000	22,21,34,000
Nine months (April 1st to Dec. 31st)	8,25,39,000
TOTAL	30,46,73,000

5. The net disbursements during the period in question, based on the scale of 1877-78, would have been Rs. 30,46,73,000 (£25,389,000).

6. The actual net disbursements amounted, as we have already observed, to Rs. 45,41,38,000 (£37,845,000). In order, however, to arrive at a just comparison between the actual disbursements and the normal scale, it is necessary to eliminate from the former the sum of Rs. 83,52,000* (£696,000), being abnormal disbursements made between April 1, 1878 and December 31, 1880 on other accounts than that of the war. Deducting this amount we arrive at Rs. 44,57,86,000 (£37,149,000) as the amount of the net disbursements for ordinary military expenditure and on account of the Afghan war during the period in question.

* We have, throughout this Despatch, converted rupees into sterling at the exchange of 1s. 8d., because that rate was adopted in our Despatch No. 354 of October 26, 1880. A comparison between the figures in that despatch and those now given is thus facilitated.

7. If now we deduct Rs. 30,46,73,000 (£25,389,000), being the amount of the disbursements on the normal scale, we arrive at a sum of Rs. 14,11,13,000 (£11,760,000). This sum may, therefore, be taken as the actual net disbursements from the Civil Treasuries in India on account of the war up to December 31, 1880.

8. In the Appendix to our Despatch No. 354 of October 26, 1880, we estimated that the total cost of the war in India, exclusive of the Frontier Railways would be Rs. 15,39,54,000 (£12,825,000). It follows, therefore, that a sum of Rs. 1,28,41,000 (£1,070,000) may be spent in the months of January, February, and March 1881, without the total war expenditure exceeding that estimate.

* Advances by the Military Department for the Malta Expedition recovered at the Home Treasury		Rs.
Nágá Campaign		-	20,89,000
Preparations for Military Operations in Burma		-	7,57,000
Added to the Balances of the Military Department		-	7,53,000
Deficiency, as compared with 1877-78, in the supplies obtained by the Military Department from sources other than the Treasuries (causing a corresponding excess demand upon the Treasuries)		-	23,56,000
Excess Net Military Expenditure due to other causes†		-	21,15,000
			2,82,000
			83,52,000
			Rs.
		1878-79.	1879-80.
			1880-81
			(First seven months.)
† Thus calculated :—		Rs.	Rs.
Recorded Military Expenditure in India		12,18,26,000	16,43,34,000
DEDUCT—
Afghan War Expenditure		60,01,000	4,59,17,000
Nágá Campaign		—	3,93,000
Burma Preparations		—	7,53,000
Total Deductions		60,01,000	4,70,63,000
Remains for comparison with 1877-78		11,58,25,000	11,72,71,000
Recorded expenditure, 1877-78		11,54,85,000	11,54,85,000
Differences due to causes other than the War		+ 3,40,000	+ 17,86,000
			— 14,34,000
			Rs.
Worse than 1877-78—		Rs.	Rs.
1878-79		—	3,40,000
1879-80		—	17,86,000
Better than 1877-78—
1880-81 (first seven months)		—	14,34,000
Do. (8th and 9th months)		$\frac{14,34,000}{7} \times 2 =$	4,10,000
			Rs.
Net worse than 1877-78			2,82,000

† The audited and classified war expenditure in England at the same date was as follows :—

		£
For 1878-79		76,111
„ 1879-80		174,480
„ 1880-81		67,464
TOTAL		318,055	(Rs. 38,17,000.)

9. We could readily give the total audited and classified military expenditure up to October 31, 1880; but we think it will render the actual position of affairs clearer if we compare the audited and classified expenditure on the war only with the net disbursements on account of the war up to that date.

10. The audited and classified war expenditure in India to October 31, 1880 was as follows:—

	Rs.
For 1878-79	60,01,000
„ 1879-80	4,59,17,000
„ 1880-81	4,29,41,000
Total	9,48,59,000 (£7,905,000)

	Rs.
Net disbursements to October 31*	13,35,26,000	It follows, therefore, that on October
Audited and classified expenditure to October 31	9,48,59,000	31st there remained Rs. 3,86,67,000
Difference	3,86,67,000	(£3,222,000) outstanding which had to be brought to account.

The details of the war expenditure audited and classified to the 31st October, 1880 are given in Appendix B.

11. The measures which we have taken to expedite the classification and audit of the considerable expenditure awaiting these processes are explained in the accompanying Report by the Controller of Military Accounts, Bengal, to the Secretary of the Military Department, and in the letter addressed on the 5th instant by the Secretary in the Military Department to the Commissary General.

12. We have carefully considered whether in view of the desirability of laying full information before Parliament with the least possible delay, it would not be possible to classify roughly the outstanding charges under a few general heads, such as Transport, Supplies, &c. After full consideration we have decided to make no such attempt at classification. The results would, we are convinced, be untrustworthy, and the additional labour thrown on the Commissariat Officers would only serve to retard the compilation of more accurate information. In arriving at this conclusion we have been to some extent guided by the consideration that much of the present delay in rendering accounts is the result of the necessity in which we have been placed, owing to the pressure caused by the war, of employing officers in the Commissariat Department, whose experience in the matter of rendering accounts is very limited. We think that for the present, at all events, the object we have in view will be better attained by inciting the officers concerned to exert themselves in carrying out the existing system, rather than by adopting any changes which might affect their procedure at a time of unusual pressure.

13. We have also considered whether it would expedite matters to issue any such notification as that to which allusion is made in paragraph 5 of your Lordship's despatch No. 317 of September 23, 1880. If the Government had any considerable creditors, some such notification might perhaps be useful, but the real difficulty in the present case consists in the fact that large advances have been made to agents, called in India "gomáshtas," to whom nothing is due, but who on the contrary more often owe money to Government. We can only rely on the individual energy of the disbursing officers to bring pressure to bear on these agents, whose interest it often is to delay the production of their accounts, until, from the absence of the officers who are most intimately acquainted with the detail of their transactions with Government, or other causes, a thorough scrutiny of those transactions is rendered difficult.

We have, &c.
 (Signed) RIPON.
 „ F. P. HAINES.
 „ W. STOKES.
 „ RIVERS THOMPSON.
 „ J. GIBBS.
 „ D. M. STEWART.
 „ E. BARING.

* Calculated in the same manner as the figure Rs. 14,11,13,000 in paragraph 7 is calculated.

Enclosures in No. 82.

APPENDIX A.

NET DISBURSEMENTS from the CIVIL TREASURIES in INDIA to the agents of, or on account of the MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

	In the Month.			To the end of the Month.
	1878-79.	1879-80.	1880-81.	1878-79.	1879-80.	1880-81.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
April - - -	1,10,78,000	1,70,18,000	1,72,83,000	1,10,78,000	1,70,18,000	1,72,83,000
May - - -	99,30,000	1,34,08,000	1,61,78,000	2,10,08,000	3,04,26,000	3,34,61,000
June - - -	90,05,000	1,18,51,000	1,40,18,000	3,00,13,000	4,22,77,000	4,74,79,000
July - - -	90,11,000	1,06,46,000	1,29,06,000	3,90,24,000	5,29,23,000	6,03,85,000
August - - -	85,14,000	1,15,97,000	1,27,36,000	4,75,38,000	6,45,20,000	7,31,21,000
September - - -	85,46,000	1,23,45,000	1,46,72,000	5,60,84,000	7,68,65,000	8,77,93,000
October - - -	1,04,74,000	1,49,55,000	1,43,03,000	6,65,58,000	9,18,20,000	10,20,96,000
November - - -	1,29,35,000	1,57,84,000	1,38,25,000	7,94,93,000	10,76,04,000	11,59,21,000
December - - -	1,28,95,000	1,53,16,000	1,34,12,000	9,23,88,000	12,29,20,000	12,93,33,000
January - - -	1,51,85,000	1,76,67,000	—	10,75,73,000	14,05,87,000	—
February - - -	1,51,05,000	1,71,51,000	—	12,26,78,000	15,77,38,000	—
March - - -	2,14,22,000†	2,29,67,000	—	14,41,00,000	18,07,05,000	—
Total - - -	14,41,00,000†	18,07,05,000	—	—	—	—

* The net disbursements in January 1881 have, subject to correction, been telegraphed as 149 lakhs.

† These figures differ slightly from those appended to Sir John Strachey's Minute, dated May 20, 1880, having been affected by certain transfers made while the books were being closed.

APPENDIX B.

NET CHARGES ON ACCOUNT of MILITARY OPERATIONS in AFGHANISTAN classified and audited to the end of October 1880.

Grants.	Charges.	1878-79.	1879-80.	April to October 1880.	Total.
		Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
1.	Army and garrison staff - - -	1,91,713	6,72,256	6,88,919	15,02,888
2.	Administrative staff - - -	10,699	64,423	69,358	1,44,480
3.	Regimental pay and allowances - - -	7,40,231	36,55,788	30,41,468	74,37,487
4.	Commissariat - - -	37,47,003	3,03,37,413	3,22,55,965	6,63,40,381
5.	Remount and cattle establishments - - -	19,250	14,881	12,857	46,988
6.	Clothing - - -	5,09,399	7,60,493	7,31,996	20,01,888
7.	Barrack - - -	54,827	54,582	90,596	2,00,005
8.	Martial law - - -	2,887	15,290	24,044	42,221
9.	Medical - - -	1,30,775	2,75,896	3,03,217	7,09,888
10.	Ordnance - - -	3,06,639	5,00,789	4,73,544	12,80,972
11.	Ecclesiastical - - -	6,203	31,437	12,923	50,563
12.	Education - - -	—	113	240	353
13.	Sea transport - - -	32,309	1,58,523	2,58,268	4,49,100
14.	Miscellaneous (includes civil, political, telegraph, and postal charges). - - -	2,50,768	98,79,356	58,93,707	1,60,23,831
18.	Military pensions - - -	—	138	106	244
19.	Widows' pensions, &c. - - -	—	50	—	50
	Total charges - - -	60,02,703	4,64,21,428	4,38,07,208	9,62,31,339
	Total receipts in 1878-79, 1879-80, and up to October 31, 1880. - - -	1,614	5,04,990	8,65,739	13,72,343
	Net charges - - -	60,01,089	4,59,16,438	4,29,41,469	9,48,58,996

No. 15,433, dated December 31, 1880.

From Colonel W. T. CHITTY, Controller of Military Accounts, Bengal, to the SECRETARY to the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, Military Department.

I HAVE the honour to submit, for the early and serious consideration of Government, the great embarrassment and difficulty experienced from the present state of the accounts in the Military Department, to remedy which it appears to me to be imperative that stringent measures should be taken.

2. I am called upon to submit estimates to Government of the military expenditure; but as the accounts now stand, as I have already represented to the Accountant General, Military Department, this duty cannot, if possible at all, be performed with any degree of accuracy, or with that reliability that Government have a right to expect. The Military Account Department, whilst doing all that can be done by it to meet the orders of Government, cannot therefore be held responsible for failure arising from causes over which it has no control.

3. The outstandings of disbursing officers, commissariat and transport, at this present time are, I believe (for no exact amount can be given at present), little short of five crores of rupees. To say how much of this amount will be brought into the current year's account is not possible, for it does not rest with the Account Department, but with disbursing officers, to bring it forward. Since I assumed charge of my present duties, the matter has had my most serious and constant attention. I would have preferred deferring any representation to Government on the subject until I could obtain more exact details; but foreseeing that this would take some time, I feel I should be assuming a grave responsibility were I any longer to postpone bringing it to notice.

4. I submit two statements furnished by the Examiner and Additional Examiner of Commissariat Accounts of the sums held in the latest inefficient balances received by them. Some Controller of Military Accounts' letter No. ³³⁶ of November 25, 1880. have not yet been rendered as already represented to Government, but these aggregate Rs. 2,73,06,962, and to this would have to be added the amount of those not received. There is also a large amount to come forward in the accounts now being rendered by the Field Account Offices, which, though it cannot be given with any degree of accuracy, will probably be 150 lakhs. It is, however, to the items shown in the inefficient balance statements I would more particularly draw attention.

5. The Examiners have, I believe, done all they can, and have not failed to bring the matter to my notice. In a recent letter Major Pritchard says, referring to the balances, of the several Commissariat ranges—

"I beg that measures may be adopted to urge the officers concerned to at once take steps to adjust these balances by bringing the transactions regarding them into their accounts supported by proper vouchers. I am, as Examiner, quite powerless to bring sums into this year's accounts if the disbursing officers do not submit to me their accounts of the same."

The Commissary General is fully aware that this large amount is outstanding, and has received the orders of Government to impress on his officers the necessity for the prompt settlement of all outstandings connected with the war.

6. It is, however, not to the war alone that these outstandings are attributable, for I find that Commissariat Officers are in the habit of placing in their inefficient balance statements items without any authority and contrary to orders.

I have had a few such items taken out by the Examiner to exemplify this, and annex a statement thereof. It would also appear that bills submitted for payment are paid and not charged, as they should be, in the month's accounts, but placed in the inefficient balance to be charged in the following month. So long as the regulations and orders are thus ignored and disregarded, so long will these inefficient balances remain as a hindrance to the adjustment of accounts, the embarrassment of the Examiners, and not improbably involve a loss to the State, for they facilitate delay, as can be shown from the statements, until adjustment becomes so difficult as to be almost impracticable.

7. The tendency of all advance payments is to delay adjustment, for it is far more difficult to obtain bills after than before payment. In time of war such payments are unavoidable, but Government has a reasonable right to expect that, whilst allowing such advances as a convenience and necessity for carrying on the public service, officers will take prompt measures to adjust them, instead of allowing month after month to pass with little, if any, attempt to clear them, and still more that they should immediately settle sums which have been improperly treated as advances.

8. The statements annexed show how little has been done. If the demands of the Secretary of State for bringing the charges to account is to be met at all, I am of opinion that each accounting officer must receive from Government imperative orders to bring these charges forward within the next three months, and further be prohibited from treating payments, which should be final in any other way, by entering them in their inefficient balance.

9. In conclusion I would remark that whilst doing their best to prevent delay and arrears, it is impossible for the several examiners to do so, and perform their duties properly, unless the accounts come to them in regular order and at due date. They have not only at times to deal with a mass of papers coming irregularly and imperfectly, but to watch outstandings which should not exist. The result is delay at every stage except disbursement of the money, inconvenience to all parties concerned, and serious increase of clerical labour.

A.

STATEMENT showing the TOTAL AMOUNT OF ADVANCES OUTSTANDING in the INEFFICIENT BALANCE STATEMENTS for the month of October 1880.

Stations.	Total Amount Outstanding.			Outstandings.		Remarks.
				From.	To.
	Rs.	As.	P.
Calcutta - - -	59,750	0	11	July 1879 -	October 1880
Store and Shipping, Calcutta	51,289	2	10	December 1879 -	Do.
Dinapore - - -	22,456	10	11	February 1880 -	Do.
Darjeeling - - -	18,952	15	5	April 1877 -	Do.
Allahabad - - -	39,111	14	1	March 1879 -	Do.
Jubbulpore - - -	34,843	9	9	January 1880 -	Do.
Lucknow - - -	20,884	14	4	December 1879 -	Do.
Cawnpore - - -	3,35,576	0	1	May 1879 -	Do.
Gwalior - - -	12,101	10	11	August 1879 -	Do.
Agra - - -	16,522	15	9	February 1880 -	Do.
Bareilly - - -	47,127	9	10	July 1878 -	Do.
Ranikhet - - -	15,079	10	11	November 1879	Do.
Meerut - - -	91,350	2	11	September 1879	Do.
Umballa - - -	6,68,787	9	4	May 1879 -	Do.
Kasauli - - -	12,541	2	11	April 1880 -	Do.
Lahore - - -	6,53,945	9	1	July 1879 -	Do.
Ferozepore - - -	3,98,177	6	5	May 1878 -	Do.
Sialkot - - -	64,545	1	3	September 1879	Do.
Mooltan - - -	4,65,409	5	6	December 1878 -	Do.
Rawal Pindi - -	7,75,924	13	5	July 1880 -	Do.
Do. (arrear) -	27,13,818	14	11*	May 1878 -	-	*Total amount for sup. March and June 1880.
Peshawar - - -	14,97,851	12	7†	-	-	†Inefficient balance statement not received.
Dacca Khedda - -	16,086	2	7	May 1879 -	October 1880
Naga Expedition -	2,91,483	2	2	November 1879 -	Do.
Total - - -	83,23,618	6	10

(Signed)

H. PRITCHARD, Major,
Examiner of Commissariat Accounts.

Military Account Department,
Office of Examiner Commissariat Accounts,
Calcutta,
December 16, 1880.

B.

INEFFICIENT BALANCES.

STATEMENT showing the AMOUNTS OUTSTANDING on ACCOUNT of the 1st and 2nd CAMPAIGNS, as taken from the latest CASH ACCOUNT received up to the 17th December 1880.

Cash Account.	Amounts.			Total.
	Rs.	As.	P.	Rs.	As.	P.
1ST CAMPAIGN ACCOUNT.
Right 1st Division for October 1880	2,36,838	8	10
Do. 2nd ditto for ditto	4,35,098	13	10
Kuram for ditto	2,18,956	7	4
Jhelum for November 1880	55,466	6	0
Left 1st Division from January to March 1880	37,18,751	11	2
Do. 2nd ditto for November 1880	1,86,351	4	7
				48,51,463	3	9
2ND CAMPAIGN ACCOUNT.
Kuram for October 1880	23,87,277	9	8
Jhelum ditto	31,40,688	1	10
Advance Force ditto	16,63,389	9	8
Reserve ditto ditto	68,373	5	3
Khyber ditto	24,47,168	5	6
				97,06,896	15	11
TRANSPORT ACCOUNT.
Khyber for August 1880	39,01,317	7	6
Kuram for April 1880	3,15,378	13	1
Advance Force for November 1880	2,08,287	11	10
				44,24,984	0	5
Total				1,89,83,344	4	1

(Signed) C. CARTER, Lieut.-Col.,
Additional Examiner,
Commissariat Accounts.

C.

STATEMENT showing a few SELECTED ITEMS of PAYMENTS IRREGULARLY MADE by EXECUTIVE COMMISSARIAT OFFICERS and shown in their INEFFICIENT BALANCE STATEMENTS for October 1880; also ADVANCES made for DEPARTMENTAL PURPOSES, which it would appear should have been adjusted monthly instead of being delayed and shown in the inefficient balance statements.

Executive Commissariat Officer concerned, and Name of Officer.	Date of Payment.	Amount Paid.	On what Account Paid.	Proper Mode of Settlement.
Calcutta Executive. Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. D. Broughton, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	1880. 6th Jan.	Rs. As. P. 19 0 11	Sergeant McArthur, A. C. D.—Balance of advance on account of his pay, &c., when proceeding for field service at Naga Expedition.	By Circle Paymaster.
	30th „	100 0 0	Deputy Commissary-General, Lower Circle—Advance for his office telegram charges.	From office contingent allowance, and reimbursed by bill submitted to Circle Paymaster.
	25th Feb.	8 4 5	Private Miller, late acting Cattle Sergeant, Hastings—Balance of advance on account of his staff pay from 1st to 24th February 1880.	By Circle Paymaster.
	11th June	9 13 1	Mrs. Martin, wife of Sub-Conductor Martin—Balance of advance on account of her husband's pay for March 1880.	Ditto. ditto.

Executive Commissariat Officer concerned, and Name of Officer.	Date of Payment.	Amount Paid.	On what Account Paid.	Proper Mode of Settlement.
Calcutta Executive. Lieutenant-Colonel W. E. D. Broughton, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	1880. 8th Sept.	Rs. As. P. 4 5 9	Mrs. McArthur, wife of Sub-Conductor McArthur—Balance of advance on account of her husband's pay for July and August 1880.	By Circle Paymaster.
	27th „	12 4 0	Kalleemooddeen, Duftry—Cost of binding files, &c., for August 1880.	From office contingent allowance, and reimbursed by bill on Circle Paymaster.
	30th „	109 10 2	Officiating Sub-Conductor Saxon—Advance on account of his pay, &c., for September 1880.	By Circle Paymaster.
	1st Oct.	18 12 0	Proprietor of the Probhakar Press—Cost of advertising commissariat notices.	From office contingent allowance, as above.
	5th „	50 0 0	Mrs. McArthur, wife of Officiating Sub-Conductor McArthur—Advance on account of her husband's pay for September 1880.	By Circle Paymaster.
	7th „	60 0 0	Mrs. Clements, wife of Sergeant Clements—Advance on account of her husband's pay for September 1880.	Ditto. ditto.
	7th „	12 0 0	Manager, Indian Daily News —Cost of advertising commissariat notices.	From office contingent allowance, as above.
	9th „	100 0 0	Deputy Commissary-General, Lower Circle—Advance on account of his office telegram charges.	Ditto. ditto.
	20th „	10 0 0	Sergeant Hatchins, proceeding to Dacca to bring elephants—Advance on account of his pay.	By Circle Paymaster.
	23rd „	100 0 0	Officiating Sub-Conductor McArthur—Advance on account of his arrear pay.	Ditto. ditto.
	27th „	151 2 0	Officiating Assessor to the Municipal Corporation on account of water, police, and lighting rates on premises No. 6, Park Street, Commissariat Offices, for the quarter ending December 1880.	From office contingent allowance, as above.
	29th „	649 10 6	Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot & Co., on account of office rent for September 1880.	From office contingent allowance, as above, or by direct bill on Circle Paymaster.
	24th April	23 4 0	Superintendent, Bhagalpore Jail—Cost of blankets.	Cash payment prohibited. Should be adjusted by inter-departmental book debit.
	4th May	4 11 5	Sergeant Williams, in commissariat charge, Chunar—Advance on account of his pay.	By Circle Paymaster.
Allahabad Executive. Major H. G. Waterfield, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	7th June	150 0 0	Ditto ditto
	31st July	100 0 0	Sergeant J. J. Carter, in commissariat charge, Chunar—Advanced by Store and Shipping Office, Calcutta.
	19th Aug.	60 0 0	Sergeant J. J. Carter, in commissariat charge, Chunar—Advance of pay.
	15th Sept.	60 0 0	Ditto ditto	Cash payment prohibited. Should be adjusted by inter-departmental book debit.
	28th Jan.	49 8 0	Pertabghur Jail, per Bill Register No. 97.
	6th July	8 12 0	Jubbulpore Executive—Paid to Central Jail, Naini, as per memo. No. 415, dated 26th June 1880, from Jubbulpore Commissariat.

Executive Commissariat Officer concerned, and Name of Officer.	Date of Payment.	Amount paid.	On what Account paid.	Proper Mode of Settlement.
Allahabad Executive. Major H. G. Waterfield, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	1880. 3rd Aug.	Rs. As. P. 150 0 0	Field Account Office, Murree—Mrs. Whitehead, advance for July 1880.	By Circle Paymaster on station order.
	3rd „	60 0 0	Field Account Office, Murree—Mrs. Griffiths, advance for July 1880.
	3rd „	60 0 0	Field Account Office, Murree—Mrs. Ellis, wife of Sergeant Ellis, advance.
	7th Oct.	150 0 0	Field Account Office, Murree—Mrs. Whitehead advance for September 1880.
	7th „	60 0 0	Field Account Office, Murree—Mrs. Griffiths advance for September 1880.
Bareilly Executive. Colonel Alexander Callander, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	3rd Jan.	100 0 0	Paid to Sub-Conductor Little, Commissariat Department.	By Circle Paymaster.
	19th March	100 0 0	Paid to Sub-Conductor Little, in charge of Bareilly godown, in part of his pay.
	22nd April	27 0 0	Amount advanced to Sub-Conductor Little on account of his pay for payment of bill of Lawrencepoore Asylum.
	7th May	100 0 0	Amount advanced to Sub-Conductor Little in part of his pay.
	17th June	100 0 0	Paid to Sub-Conductor Little in part of his pay.
	8th July	100 0 0	Ditto ditto
	11th Sept.	500 0 0	Paid to Sub-Conductor Little in charge of godown as an advance on account of his pay.
	19th Oct.	160 0 0	Ditto ditto.
Allahabad Executive. Major H. G. Waterfield, Officiating Executive Commissariat Officer.	11th and 25th Sept.	3,226 4 0	Badoolla, Meat Agent—Cost of cattle and sheep purchased.
	8th and 29th Oct.	7,500 0 0	Ambica Pershad, Cattle and Station Gomashta—Advance in part of his bills for September and October 1880.
	8th Oct.	1,554 2 0	Badoolla, Meat Agent—Cost of cattle and sheep purchased.
	18th and 27th Oct.	5,000 0 0	Sree Nath Sircar, Station Gomashta, Benares—Advance.
Cawnpore Executive. Major F. P. Worthy, Officiating Sub-Assistant Commissary General.	1879. 9th Dec.	10,000 0 0	Abdool Gunny—Advance for 81st Regiment.
	1880. 2nd Feb.	10,000 0 0	Abdool Gunny—Advance for current month.
	1879. — Oct.	30,000 0 0	Chotey Lall, Contractor—Advance for current expenses.
	— Sept.	10,000 0 0	Abdool Gunny, Station Gomashta Advance for stores, shoes, &c.

(Signed) H. PRITCHARD, Major,
Examiner of Commissariat Accounts.

Mily. Acct. Dept.,
Office of Exmr. of Comst. Accts.; Calcutta,
The 16th December 1880.

No. 16 B, dated 5th January 1881.

From Colonel G. CHESNEY, Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, to the COMMISSARY GENERAL, Bengal.

I AM directed to forward the accompanying copy of a letter from the Controller of Military Accounts, 15433, dated 31st. December 1880, representing the degree of embarrassment and difficulty experienced in dealing with the adjustment of the Commissariat accounts, and to communicate to you, by order of the Governor General in Council, the following observations thereon.

From the statement which accompanies the Controller's letter, it would appear that in addition to the very large arrears in the accounts of disbursing officers connected with the war, there are also large outstanding balances of current expenditure in some of the Commissariat offices which have had nothing to do with the war.

As regards these last, although it may be admitted that the present condition of your department is exceptional, in consequence of the numerous transfers of officers which the war has rendered necessary, still this procrastination in the submission of accounts is altogether excessive and irregular, and the Government of India desire that you will take vigorous measures for at once putting a stop to it, and requiring that this part of the duty of the department shall be properly and punctually performed.

As regards the other officers which have had to deal with war expenditure, the Government of India is fully sensible of the great difficulties with which the Commissariat Department has had to contend, both in the field and in garrison, owing to the peculiar character of the campaign, and to the absence of many of the permanent officers and establishments on field service, and is quite prepared to make all reasonable allowances for delays and imperfections in the submission of the accounts. The audit offices have already been instructed to relax the ordinary and technical rules of audit as far as this can safely be done.

The arrears, however, are so enormous, and the amounts involved so vast, that their continuance is a most serious evil, and even danger, to counteract which it is absolutely necessary that the most stringent measures should now be adopted. Where it is clearly shown that all possible exertions have been made, the officers of the Commissariat Department may rest assured that those exertions will be fully appreciated and acknowledged, and that every allowance will be made for unavoidable delays and difficulties. But equally, in cases where it appears clear that such efforts have not been put forward, and that the work has been carried on in an apathetic or perfunctory manner, the Governor General in Council will not fail to visit such conduct with the severe displeasure of Government.

The head assistants of offices also, and all clerks concerned with the preparation of the accounts, should be warned that the Government of India will not fail to notice and hold them accountable for any want of progress in the adjustment of the accounts for which they are responsible. Should the Controller of Military Accounts report that he has reason to believe that all possible efforts have not been made to overtake the arrears in any particular office, the establishment of that office will, on his report, be put on a reduced scale of pay till Government is assured that a marked improvement has been effected, and that satisfactory progress is being made.

The cases of executive officers whose accounts continue unduly in arrears will be dealt with specially by Government.

The Governor General in Council is satisfied that if strenuous efforts are made, the greater portion of the sums now outstanding in the inefficient balances of the Commissariat ranges can be cleared off within three months, and a special report will be required in explanation of any items still remaining unadjusted after that period. As regards the expenditure in the field, there is also no reason why the cash accounts of the field offices should not be finally adjusted by the end of September, so as to admit of their inclusion in the official accounts of the year 1881-82. Any extra establishments that may be required solely for this purpose will at once be sanctioned, but it must be clearly understood that no deviation from these orders will be permitted.

His Excellency in Council leaves it to you to issue such detailed instructions as may be necessary to give effect to the above orders, and will look to receive at an early date a copy of the instructions issued.

I am to request that at the end of the present financial year you will report which officers have shown that necessary alacrity and zeal in bringing up these arrear accounts which the Government of India expect them to display, and you will also bring to notice the names of any officers who in your judgment have failed in this important respect; such recommendations and notices will be duly recorded and taken into account in determining the departmental promotions.

Copies of the above forwarded for information to the Finance Department; the Controller of Military Accounts, Bengal; and the Accountant General, Military Department.

No. 83.

LETTER to the SECRETARY TO THE TREASURY, dated India Office,
March 2, 1881.

SIR,

In continuation of the letters addressed to you on the 24th of November 1880, and the 4th of March last, regarding the estimates of the cost of the Afghan War, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to transmit for the information of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury a copy of a letter from the Government of India, dated the 26th of January, No. 19, with its enclosures, giving the fullest particulars which can be obtained from ascertained facts regarding the war expenditure. Nos. 78 and 81.

From this letter it appears that the net disbursements from the civil treasuries in India to the agents of, or on account of, the Military Department between the 1st of April 1878, and the 31st of December 1880, after excluding abnormal disbursements made on other accounts than that of the war, exceeded by Rs. 14,11,13,000 (or at the rate of 1s. 8d. the rupee, 11,760,000L.) the net disbursements for a similar period on the scale of 1877-78. Adding to that sum 318,000L. as the amount of audited and classified war expenditure in England to the 31st of October last, the aggregate 12,078,000L. leaves 1,070,000L. to complete the sum specified in Sir Louis Mallet's letter of the 24th of November as representing the cost of the military operations (excluding the outlay on the frontier railways and receipts from railways and telegraphs) to the 31st of March 1881, so that the last-mentioned sum, namely, 1,070,000L., is available for expenditure in India and in England in January, February, and March 1881 without exceeding the estimate framed by the Government of India in October last, and accepted by the Marquis of Hartington. No. 82.

The amount audited and classified to the 31st of October last was Rs. 9,48,59,000 (or 7,905,000L.) and in the opinion of the Government of India, it would not be desirable to attempt a classification of the charges not yet passed by the officers of audit.

I have, &c.

T. L. SECCOMBE.

No. 84.

TELEGRAM from the VICEROY, March 8, 1881.

WAR Estimate October 26 assumed, all war expenditure would close by the end of March, whereas troops have not yet begun move. Consequently, preliminary regular war estimate Rs. 1,52,00,000 more than October estimate, of which Rs. 96,00,000 increased expenditure (in) India and England; balance explained by erroneous calculation of the standard upon comparison with which October estimate was based. Expenditure must continue till troops are in cantonments. We shall provide two crores next year, on the assumption all troops but those left about Quetta returned (to) quarters by the end of May. Thus total cost (of) war now estimated (at) Rs. 19,30,00,000 compared with Rs. 15,78,00,000 of October. It must be clearly understood that the regular estimate (is) still subject to much change. There are some compensations; saved Rs. 1,03,00,000 in the frontier railway. No. 71.

No. 85.

LETTER to the SECRETARY to the TREASURY, dated India Office,
March 15, 1881.

MY LORD,

No. 83. IN continuation of the letter addressed to your Lordship on the 2nd instant regarding the estimates of the cost of the war in Afghanistan, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to transmit, for the information of the Lords
No. 84. Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, a copy of a telegram, dated the 8th of March, which has been received from the Viceroy of India.

No. 71. In the estimate which was forwarded to the Treasury on the 24th of November 1880, containing the calculations of the Government of India of all probable extra expenditure for troops beyond the former frontier line to the 31st of March 1881, the total charge at the rate of 1s. 8d. the rupee was put at 17,498,000l.

It is now estimated that that amount will probably be exceeded by 800,000l. (Rs. 96,00,000) owing to the delay in the withdrawal of the troops, and by 470,000l. (Rs. 56,00,000) in consequence apparently of an over-estimate of the charge in 1877-78 which was taken as the normal peace expenditure in order to arrive at the amount due to the war. On the other hand, there is a saving of 860,000l. (Rs. 1,03,00,000), through the restriction of the expenditure on the frontier railways. The cost to the 31st instant is, therefore, reckoned at 17,908,000l. instead of 17,498,000l., as before stated.

It is further estimated by the Government of India that the expenditure to be borne in 1881-82 will amount to about 1,666,000l. (Rs. 2,00,00,000) making the total expenditure on the war 19,574,000l. instead of 17,498,000l., as previously stated.

No. 78. In Sir Louis Mallet's letter of the 24th of November last, it was said that, "for the purpose of distributing the expenses between the two Governments, the Secretary of State in Council is prepared, on his part, to accept the statement now forwarded as representing the whole cost of the late war, any further charges being treated as ordinary Indian expenditure." It does not appear to Lord Hartington that, for the above-mentioned purpose, there is sufficient ground in the telegram now received for departing from the decision at which he then arrived, by which the total net cost of the war was fixed at 17,498,000l.

I have, &c.

T. L. SECCOMBE.

No. 86.

EXTRACTS of a LETTER from the GOVERNMENT of INDIA, dated February 21, 1881, No. 49, (Financial). (Received March 15, 1881.)

7. The following is the expenditure included in the accounts of 1879-80 attributed to the war:—

	£	£
Punjab Northern State Railway - -	336,770
Frontier Railways - -	1,334,350
Military Operations Proper (Account No. 57, p. 152) - - - -	4,816,623
	 	6,487,743
Deduct—
War Receipts - - - -	50,499
Estimated Excess Revenue under Railways and Telegraph attributed to the war (see Despatch No. 354, dated 26th October 1880)	312,600	363,099

Net Expenditure in consequence of the war - -		6,124,644

No. 71.

8. Of this total of 6,124,644 ¹ / ₂ the Local Governments contributed during the year			No. 19.
	£	£
Revenue	-	68,484,666
Ordinary Expenditure	- 69,667,615
Deduct War (less contributions of the Local Governments)	- 5,789,644
		63,877,971
Surplus	-	4,606,695

335,000¹/₂., as explained in paragraphs 11 and 170 of the financial statement for 1880-81. Excluding this contribution, the Imperial Revenue would, but for the war, have exceeded the Imperial Expenditure by 4,606,695¹/₂l. As explained in paragraph 15 under the head 36, Army, the burden upon the accounts owing to the war, and the surplus apart from that burden, really exceeded even the amounts here stated.

11. The net expenditure on the war, shown in the Accounts of the years 1878-79 and 1879-80, is as follows, the calculations being made as in para. 7 :—

	£
1878-79	557,419
1879-80	6,124,644
TOTAL	6,682,063

14. We are now in a position to complete our reply to your Lordship's telegram, dated 14th July last.

This telegram was as follows :—

"How do you explain that, during last year, 5½ crores was expended beyond Estimate, but the Cash Balance was only reduced by 118 lakhs? Where did the remainder come from?"

The following is the substance of our reply, dated 25th July :—

"Of the remaining 432 lakhs, 230 were disbursed as Advances in 1878-79. We cannot fully explain the remaining 202 lakhs till the Accounts for 1879-80 are closed."

15. We now invite attention to Appendix C. to this despatch, being an Abstract of our Accounts of Receipts and Disbursements in India in 1879-80, in which the Accounts are compared with the Regular Estimates. The following is a compendium of that Abstract, which shows the exact improvements which counterbalanced the failure of the Regular Estimate of the cost of the War :—

Accounts of 1879-80 compared with the Regular Estimates.

	Better. £	Worse. £
Net Imperial Revenue, exclusive of the Capital Expenditure on the East Indian Railway	—	1,289,633
Capital Expenditure on the East Indian Railway	—	44,923
Provincial and Local Surpluses	348,299	—
Civil, Military, and Trust Funds and Treasury Notes	—	42,413
Loans to Native States, &c.	359,357	—
Savings Bank Deposits	265,607	—
Other Deposits, Advances, and Remittances	—	1,986,411
Public Debt incurred	142,383	—
Capital received from Guaranteed Companies	248,647	—
Secretary of State's Bills	835,906	—
TOTAL	2,200,199	3,363,380
Balance less	1,163,181	—
	3,363,380	3,363,380

16. From this compendium, it appears that the accounts are more unfavourable than the regular estimates by 3,363,380¹/₂l., distributed among four groups of heads; but that this unfavourable result is counterbalanced to the extent of 2,200,199¹/₂l., owing to the accounts being more favourable than the regular estimates under six heads.

We have already explained in detail the discrepancies in the accounts from the regular estimates of revenue and expenditure, as well Provincial as Imperial.

We now offer the following remarks upon the remaining heads:—

Funds and Treasury Notes.—The difference 42,413*l.* is not large, and is the net outcome of several items.

Loans to Native States.—Better 359,357*l.* Of this 185,000*l.* is the Sinking Fund of the Calcutta municipality. The several loans to this municipality were consolidated during the year, a fresh arrangement being made for their liquidation by yearly payments extending over 30 years. Upon this arrangement being concluded, the municipality reduced the amount of its debt to us by the surrender of the securities which constituted its old sinking fund. The amount was not received in cash, and is therefore set off by an entry under advances on the other side of the account. The transaction was not included in the regular estimates. The remainder of the improvement under this head is not particularly explained.

Savings Banks' Deposits.—Improvement 265,607*l.* We under-estimated the effect of the concessions to depositors, which operated from the 1st of January 1880. As your Lordship is aware, the greater part of these concessions have since been cancelled.

Public Debt incurred.—Improvement 142,383*l.*, of which 119,369*l.* is set off by an entry under productive public works capital expenditure, as explained under that head.

Capital received from Guaranteed Companies.—Improvement 248,647*l.*, which is more than explained by the charging off, as expenditure, of the sum of 264,527*l.*, being the capital overdrawn by the East Indian Railway Company. The amount is one of the items entered upon our Indian books as expenditure, on the occasion of the purchase of the East Indian Railway, the net result of which entries is the sum 164,923*l.* as shown on the opposite side of the account. The estimate 220,000*l.* was, by an oversight, not entered in the regular estimate under this head.

Secretary of State's Bills.—Improvement 835,906*l.* Of this 486,947*l.* is nominal. Gold yielding this amount in London was bought in India and remitted home during the year. In the regular estimate these transactions were included under this head; but they were eventually recorded under the general remittance head. Of the remainder, 347,716*l.* (nearly the whole) is owing to the bills outstanding at the end of the year being, to this extent, more than the bills outstanding at the beginning of the year. (See Account No. 79.)

Other Deposits and Advances.—Worse 1,986,411*l.* Of this, 791,316*l.* is counter-balanced by entries on the opposite side of the abstract, namely:—

185,000, as explained under Loans to Native States.
119,369, as explained under Public Debt incurred.
486,947, as explained under Secretary of State's Bills.

791,316*l.*

The bulk of the residue is, doubtless, due to our under-estimate of the cost of the war.

17. The answer, therefore, to the question contained in your Lordship's telegram of July 14th is as follows:—

2,300,000*l.* had already appeared in the accounts of 1878–79 under the head of Advances.

The cash balance was actually less than our Regular Estimate by 1,163,000*l.*

The remainder (2,040,000*l.*) is due to the receipts being greater or the disbursements less under the various other heads of which particulars have now been given.

*

*

*

*

24. We have shown (paragraph 11) that during these two years the classified and audited expenditure on the war amounted to 6,682,063*l.*

The funds supplied to the Military Department in India during the two years exceeded the whole net classified and audited military expenditure by 3,863,500l., thus—

Funds supplied—

	£	£
1878-79	14,410,000
1879-80	18,070,500
		32,480,500
Classified and audited—
1878-79	12,182,600
1879-80	16,434,400
		28,617,000
Still to be accounted for		3,863,500

This sum represents, roughly, the actual expenditure on the war to the end of 1879-80 in excess of the 6,682,063l. brought to account, so that the whole expenditure on the war in the two years must have been about 10,500,000l.

APPENDIX

RECEIPTS.	1879-80.		Increase.	Decrease.
	Regular Estimates.	Accounts.
I.—Imperial	£ 67,315,300	£ 68,160,893	£ 845,593	£ —
II.—Public Debt incurred	9,264,500	5,191,886	—	4,072,614
III.—Treasury Notes	195,000	250,949	55,949	—
IV.—Service Funds, Civil	591,000	669,072	78,072	—
V.—Service Funds, Military	—	—	—	—
VI.—Savings Banks' Deposits	765,000	1,009,056	244,056	—
VII.—Excluded Local Funds	462,000	488,265	26,265	—
VIII.—Political and Trust Funds	74,000	54,658	—	19,342
IX.—Provincial and Local Surplus	324,000	633,077	309,077	—
X.—Other Deposits received, and Advances recovered.	12,208,900	47,350,538	35,141,638	—
XI.—Loans to Native States, Corporations, and Individuals, repaid.	1,078,000	1,255,075	177,075	—
XII.—Guaranteed Railway Capital received	2,022,600	2,221,536	198,936	—
XIII.—Local Remittances	178,000	272,606	94,606	—
XIV.—Inter-Provincial and Inter-Departmental Transactions.	25,663,000	21,194,689	—	4,468,311
XV.—Remittance Account with the Home Treasury.	1,335,600	1,314,848	—	20,752
Total	121,476,900	150,067,148	28,590,248	—
Balance April 1st	12,792,153	12,792,153	—	—
GRAND TOTAL	134,269,053	162,859,301	28,590,248	—

	1879-80.
	Regular Estimates.	Accounts.
	£	£
I. & 1.—Surplus of Imperial Revenue apart from 1A	11,507,200	10,217,567
II. & 2.—Public Debt incurred	3,867,200	4,009,583
III. & 3.—Treasury Notes	156,000	85,151
IV. & 4.—Service Funds, Civil	170,000	151,684
VI. & 6.—Savings Banks' Deposits	117,000	382,607
VII. & 7.—Excluded Local Funds	—	23,841
IX. & 9.—Provincial and Local	265,000	613,299
X. & 10.—Deposits	255,400	—
XI. & 11.—Loans to Native States, Corporations, and Individuals	—	186,357
XII. & 12.—Guaranteed Railway Capital received	674,100	922,747
XIII., XIV. & XV. & 13 to 16.—Remittances	729,022	1,229,460
TOTAL	17,740,922	17,822,296

C.—INDIA.

DISBURSEMENTS.	1879-80.		Increase.	Decrease.
	Regular Estimates.	Accounts.
1. Imperial Expenditure, excepting 1A.	£ 55,808,100	£ 57,943,326	£ 2,135,226	—
1A. Capital Expenditure on E. I. Railway	120,000	164,923	44,923	—
2. Public Debt discharged	5,397,300	1,182,303	—	4,214,997
3. Treasury Notes	39,000	165,798	126,798	—
4. Service Funds, Civil	421,000	517,388	96,388	—
5. Service Funds, Military	220,000	227,085	7,085	—
6. Savings Banks' Deposits withdrawn	648,000	626,449	—	21,551
7. Excluded Local Funds	479,000	464,424	—	14,576
8. Political and Trust Funds	134,000	60,821	—	73,179
9. Provincial and Local Deficits	59,000	19,778	—	39,222
10. Other Deposits repaid and Advances made	11,953,500	49,622,828	37,669,328	—
11. Loans advanced to Native States, Corporations, and Individuals.	1,251,000	1,068,718	—	182,282
12. Guaranteed Railway Capital withdrawn	1,348,500	1,298,789	—	49,711
13. Local Remittances	—	95,701	95,701	—
14. Inter-Provincial and Inter-Departmental Transactions.	25,539,078	20,378,678	—	5,160,400
15. Secretary of State's Bills on India paid	15,750,000	14,914,094	—	835,906
16. Remittance Account with the Home Treasury	908,500	1,078,304	169,804	—
Total	120,075,978	149,829,407	29,753,429	—
Balance March 31st	14,193,075	13,029,894	—	1,163,181
GRAND TOTAL	134,269,053	162,859,301	28,590,248	—

	1879-80.
	Regular Estimates.	Accounts.
1A. Capital Expenditure on E. I. Railway	£ 120,000	£ 164,923
V. & 5. Service Funds, Military	220,000	227,085
VII. & 7. Excluded Local Funds	17,000	—
VIII. & 8. Political and Trust Funds	60,000	6,163
X. & 10. Deposits	—	2,272,290
XI. & 11. Loans to Native States, Corporations, and Individuals	173,000	—
15. Secretary of State's Bills paid	15,750,000	14,914,094
Balance increased	1,400,922	237,741
TOTAL	17,740,922	17,822,296

L O N D O N :
Printed by GEORGE E. EYRE and WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

AFGHAN CAMPAIGN (CASUALTIES).

RETURN to an Address of the Honourable The House of Commons,
dated 11 August 1879;—for,

“RETURN per REGIMENT, TROOP, or BATTERY, of the Numbers KILLED or DEAD of DISEASE or INVALIDED in each of the Three ARMIES operating beyond the Indus in the late Campaign in Afghanistan, from the Date of the Advance beyond our Frontier into the Khyber Pass, up to the Return across the Indus, of the Regiments ordered back at the Close of the Operations in the Field.”

India Office, }
6 February 1880. }

EDWARD STANHOPE,
Under Secretary of State.

(Sir Arthur Hayter.)

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
13 February 1880.

RETURN showing the Numbers KILLED, DIED of DISEASE and INVALIDED, in each of the Three ARMIES operating beyond the Indus in the late Campaign in Afghanistan, from the Date of the Advance beyond our Frontier into the Khyber Pass, up to the Return across the Indus, of the Regiments ordered back at the Close of Operations in the Field.

PESHAWAR VALLEY FIELD FORCE.

CORPS.	Killed in Action or Died from Wounds.			Died of Disease.			Invalided.			TOTAL.
	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	Total.
BRITISH TROOPS:
9th Lancers	-	-	-	-	-	8	3	-	49	3	-	57	60
10th Hussars	-	-	1	1*	-	94*	1	-	61	2	-	156	158
D-A Royal Horse Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	8	1	-	8	9
H-C " " "	-	-	-	-	-	7	-	-	2	-	-	9	9
I-C " " "	-	-	2	1	-	11	-	-	18	1	-	31	32
C-3rd Royal Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	2	2	-	11	2	-	13	15
E-3rd " " "	-	-	-	-	-	16	-	-	7	-	-	23	23
13-9th " " "	-	-	-	-	-	2	-	-	-	-	-	2	2
1st Battalion, 5th Foot	-	-	-	2	-	27	3	-	48	5	-	70	75
" " 17th " "	1	-	5	3	-	36	-	-	80	4	-	121	125
" " 25th " "	-	-	1	-	-	3	-	-	47	-	-	51	51
" " 51st " "	-	-	1	-	-	34	-	-	49	-	-	84	84
" " 81st " "	-	-	1	-	-	3	3	-	259	3	-	263	266
4th Battalion, Rifle Brigade	-	-	-	3	-	80	1	-	198	4	-	278	282
TOTAL British Troops	1	-	11	10	-	323	14	-	832	25	-	1,166	1,191
NATIVE TROOPS:
11th Bengal Lancers	-	-	1	1	-	15	-	-	18	1	-	34	35
18th " " "	-	-	2	1	-	10	-	-	9	1	-	21	22
Corps of Guides	1	1	7	-	-	22	-	-	55	1	1	84	86
Sappers and Miners (Head Quarters)	-	-	-	-	1	30†	-	3	57	-	4	87	91
6th Native Infantry	-	-	3	-	1	29	-	2	113	-	3	145	148
14th " " "	-	-	8	-	1	40	1	-	97	1	1	75	77
20th " " "	-	-	-	-	1	49	-	2	66	-	3	115	118
27th " " "	2	-	6	1	1	47	2	1	170	5	2	223	230
2nd Goorkhas	-	-	3	-	-	9	1	-	17	1	-	29	30
4th " " "	-	-	1	-	2	28	1	1	1	1	3	30	34
1st Sikh Infantry	-	-	-	-	-	63	1	-	27	1	-	90	91
Bhopal Battalion	-	-	-	-	-	36	-	2	47	-	2	83	85
Mhairwarra	-	-	3	-	-	16	1	1	52	1	1	71	73
Sappers and Miners (Madras)	-	-	-	1	1	22	-	-	8	1	1	30	32
TOTAL Native Infantry	3	1	34	4	8	416	7	12	667	14	21	1,117	1,152

KURAM FIELD FORCE.

BRITISH TROOPS:
9th Lancers (1 Squadron)	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
NATIVE TROOPS:
5th Punjab Cavalry	-	-	1	-	2	17	-	-	22	-	2	40	42
Sappers and Miners (1 Co.)	-	-	-	-	-	9	-	-	7	-	-	16	16
2nd Punjab Infantry	-	-	8	-	1	44	-	1	72	-	2	124	126
TOTAL Native Troops	-	-	9	-	3	70	-	1	101	-	4	180	184

* Includes one officer, 46 men drowned, accidentally, in crossing the Kabul River. † Includes three European Non-commissioned Officers.

KANDAHAR FIELD FORCE.

CORPS.	Killed in Action or Died from Wounds.			Died of Disease.			Invalided.			TOTAL.
	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	Total.
BRITISH TROOPS:
15th Hussars	-	-	-	-	-	1	2	-	10	2	-	11	13
I-1st Royal Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	3	-	-	2	-	-	5	5
P-4th "	-	-	-	-	-	2	-	-	4	1	-	6	7
16-8th "	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	1	-	1	2
70th Foot	-	-	-	-	-	19	3	-	77	3	-	96	99
TOTAL British Troops	-	-	-	2	-	26	5	-	93	7	-	119	126
NATIVE TROOPS:
8th Bengal Cavalry	-	-	-	-	-	5	1	-	6	1	-	11	12
3rd Peshawar Mountain Battery	-	-	-	-	-	20	1	-	26	1	-	46	47
Sappers and Miners (four Companies)	-	-	-	-	-	21	-	-	5	-	-	26	26
12th Native Infantry	-	-	-	-	-	65	1	-	1	1	-	66	67
26th "	-	-	-	-	-	14	-	-	-	-	-	14	14
32nd "	-	-	-	1	2	80	2	-	49	3	2	129	134
1st Goorkhas	-	-	-	-	-	3	2	2	71	2	2	74	78
1st Punjab Infantry	-	-	6	1	-	66	-	1	19	1	1	91	93
30th Bombay Native Infantry	-	-	-	1	1	34	-	1	15	1	2	49	52
TOTAL Native Troops	-	-	6	3	3	303	7	4	192	10	7	506	523

ABSTRACT.

FORCES.	Killed in Action or Died from Wounds.			Died of Disease.			Invalided.			TOTAL.
	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	Total.
BRITISH TROOPS:
Peshawar Valley	1	-	11	10	-	323	14	-	832	25	-	1,166	1,191
Kuram	-	-	-	2	-	26	5	-	93	7	-	119	126
Kandahar	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-
TOTAL British Troops	1	-	11	12	-	349	19	-	925	32	-	1,285	1,317
NATIVE TROOPS:
Peshawar Valley	3	1	34	4	8	416	7	12	667	14	21	1,117	1,152
Kuram	-	-	9	3	3	70	-	1	101	-	4	180	184
Kandahar	-	-	6	3	3	303	7	4	192	10	7	506	523
TOTAL Native Troops	3	1	49	7	14	794	14	17	960	24	32	1,803	1,859
GENERAL TOTAL
	4	1	60	18	14	1,143	33	17	1,885	56	32	3,088	3,176

Office of Adjutant General in India, Simla,
10 December 1879.

(signed) T. E. Gordon, Colonel,
Deputy Adjutant General.

* Assassinated.

AFGHAN CAMPAIGN (CASUALTIES).

RETURN per REGIMENT, TROOP, or BATTERY, of the Numbers KILLED or DEAD of DISEASE or INVALIDED in each of the Three Armies operating beyond the Indus in the late Campaign in Afghanistan, from the Date of the Advance beyond our Frontier into the Khyber Pass, up to the Return across the Indus, of the Regiments ordered back at the Close of the Operations in the Field.

(Sir Arthur Hayer.)

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed
13 February 1880.

AFGHAN CAMPAIGN (CASUALTIES).

A M E N D E D R E T U R N

(in lieu of Return Ordered to be Printed 13 February 1880).

RETURN to an Address of the Honourable The House of Commons,
dated 11 August 1879;—for,

“RETURN per REGIMENT, TROOP, or BATTERY, of the Numbers KILLED or DEAD of DISEASE or INVALIDED in each of the Three ARMIES operating beyond the Indus in the late Campaign in Afghanistan, from the Date of the Advance beyond our Frontier into the Khyber Pass, up to the Return across the Indus, of the Regiments Ordered back at the Close of the Operations in the Field.”

India Office, }
23 July 1880. }

LOUIS MALLET,
Under Secretary of State for India.

(Sir Arthur Hayter.)

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
26 July 1880.

	39th "	"	"	"	"	"	(e) 1	-	-	-	7	20	-	1	1	1	27	28
45th "	-	-	-	-	-	-	(e) 2	-	-	-	32	47	2	2	1	1	81	85
2nd Gorkhas	-	-	-	-	-	2	(f) 1	-	-	-	8	17	1	-	1	-	28	29
4th "	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	-	18	1	1	1	1	3	20	24
Corps of Guides	-	-	-	-	-	5	(g) 3	-	-	-	18	55	1	1	1	1	80	82
Hazara Mountain Battery	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	3	1	1	-	-	-	4	5
1st Sikh Infantry	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	60	16	-	-	-	-	76	76
Bhopal Battalion	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	12	47	-	2	-	-	59	61
Mhairwarra Battalion	-	-	-	-	-	3	-	-	-	-	16	52	1	1	1	1	71	73
Sappers and Miners (Madras)	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	4	8	1	-	-	-	12	13
TOTAL Native Troops	3	1	29	1	-	6	12	2	-	19	419	812	25	25	18	1,272	1,922

KURAM FIELD FORCE.

[illegible]

KANDAHAR FIELD FORCE.

C O R P S.	Killed or Died of Wounds Received.					Died of Disease.			Invalided.			TOTAL.			R E M A R K S.
	In Action.			Otherwise than in Action.		European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.		TOTAL.
	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.												Men.
BRITISH TROOPS:
15th Hussars	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	2	-	10	-	2	-	11	13	(a) Attacked by a fanatic at Kandahar.
A-B Royal Horse Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	7	-	-	13	-	-	-	20	20
L-1st Royal Artillery	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2	-	-	2	-	-	-	4	4
D-2nd "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	4	-	-	6	-	-	-	10	10
E-4th "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	2	-	-	4	-	1	-	6	7
G-4th "	-	-	-	(a) 1	-	1	-	3	1	-	3	-	2	-	6	8
16-8th "	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	2
5-11th "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	-	-	-	1
6-11th "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	-	-	-	-	-	1	1
11-11th "	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	-	-	-	-	1	-	1	2
59th Foot	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	7	-	-	3	-	-	-	12	12
2-60th Foot	-	-	-	-	-	(b) 2	-	9	1	-	29	-	1	-	38	39	(b) By Ghazis at Kandahar.
70th Foot	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	9	3	-	77	-	3	-	86	89
TOTAL British Troops	-	-	-	1	-	3	-	47	8	-	147	-	12	-	196	208
NATIVE TROOPS:
8th Bengal Cavalry	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	5	1	-	6	-	1	-	11	12	(a) On escort duty.
19th "	-	-	-	(a) 1	-	-	1	23	-	1	24	-	-	2	48	50
Sappers and Miners	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	19	-	-	(b) 21	-	-	-	40	40	(b) Includes one European.
12th Native Infantry	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	55	1	-	-	-	1	-	55	56
15th "	-	-	-	(c) 1	-	-	-	12	1	2	12	-	1	2	25	28	(c) Murdered by villagers.
19th "	-	-	-	(d) 2	-	-	-	25	1	3	30	-	1	3	57	61	(d) Murdered by fanatics.
25th "	-	-	-	(e) 1	-	-	3	42	-	2	66	-	-	5	109	114	(e) Murdered by Hill-men.
26th "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	12	-	-	-	-	-	-	12	12
32nd "	-	-	-	(f) 1	-	1	2	79	2	-	49	-	3	2	129	134	(f) Shot by the inhabitants.
1st Goorkhas	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	3	2	2	71	-	2	2	74	78
3rd "	-	-	-	-	-	1	1	7	1	-	25	-	2	1	32	35	(f) Shot by the inhabitants.
1st Punjab Cavalry	-	-	-	-	-	1	-	33	-	-	36	-	1	-	70	71
2nd "	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	20	-	2	41	-	-	2	61	63

[illegible]

ABSTRACT:

C O R P S.	Killed or Died of Wounds Received.						Died of Disease.						Invalided.						Total.				REMARKS.
	In Action.			Otherwise than in Action.			Died of Disease.			Invalided.			Total.
	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	European Officers.	Native Officers.	Men.	Total.
BRITISH TROOPS:
Peshawar Valley Force	1	-	13	-	-	1	6	-	242	14	-	837	21	-	1,093	1,114
Kuram Force	-	-	4	-	-	-	-	-	26	2	-	192	2	-	222	224
Kandahar Force	-	-	-	1	-	2	3	-	47	8	-	147	12	-	196	208
TOTAL	1	-	17	1	-	3	9	-	315	24	-	1,176	35	-	1,511	1,546
NATIVE TROOPS:
Peshawar Valley Force	3	1	29	1	-	12	2	6	419	19	18	812	25	25	1,272	1,322
Kuram Force	3	1	34	-	-	3	-	6	201	7	9	264	10	10	502	538
Kandahar Force	1	-	12	-	-	8	3	9	509	13	16	510	16	25	1,080	1,080
TOTAL	7	2	75	1	-	23	5	21	1,129	38	43	1,586	51	66	2,813	2,930
GENERAL TOTAL	8	2	92	2	-	26	14	21	1,444	62	43	2,762	86	66	4,324	4,476

Office of the Adjutant General in India, }
Head Quarters, Simla, 19 May 1880. }

•
ARGHAN CAMPAIGN (CASUALTIES).

RETURN per REGIMENT, TROOP, or BATTERY, of the Numbers KILLED or DEAD of DISEASE or INVALIDED in each of the Three ARMIES operating beyond the Indus in the late Campaign in Afghanistan, from the Date of the Advance beyond our Frontier into the Khyber
Pass, up to the Return across the Indus, of the Regiments Ordered back at the Close of the Operations in the Field.

(Sir Arthur Hayter.)

Ordered, by The House of Commons, to be Printed,
26 July 1880.

AFGHANISTAN (1881) No. 1.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE

RELATING TO THE

AFFAIRS OF AFGHANISTAN,

INCLUDING

THE RECOGNITION OF SIRDAR ABDUL RAHMAN KHAN AS AMIR OF KABUL.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY GEORGE EDWARD EYRE AND WILLIAM SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE.

1881.

[C.—2776.] Price 1s. 2d.

CONTENTS.

No.	—	From	To	Date.	Subject.	Page
1	Telegram	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State -	1880. 3 Jan.	Proposed assurance to Sirdar Shere Ali of Kandahar.	1
2	Letter	Government of India	" -	7 " (No. 2.)	Review of circumstances connected with the massacre of the British Mission at Kabul.	I.
3	"	"	" -	7 Jan. (No. 3.)	Policy to be adopted in reference to Afghanistan.	4
4	Telegram	Secretary of State	Viceroy - -	8 Jan.	Assurance to be given to Sirdar Shere Ali of Kandahar.	8
5	"	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State -	11 Feb.	Report of passage of the Oxus by Sirdar Abdul Rahman.	8
6	"	" - -	" -	3 March	Political arrangements at Kandahar.	9
7	"	Secretary of State -	Viceroy - -	4 "	Approving the above - -	9
8	"	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State -	14 "	Proposed recognition of Sirdar Abdul Rahman as ruler of Northern Afghanistan.	9
9	"	Secretary of State -	Viceroy - -	15 "	Conditionally approving the above.	9
10	"	Viceroy - -	Secretary of State -	17 "	Movements of Sirdar Abdul Rahman.	9
11	Letter	Government of India (with 6 enclosures.)	" -	31 " (No. 81.)	Recognition of Sirdar Shere Ali as Wali of Kandahar.	9
12	"	Government of India (with 3 enclosures.)	Secretary of State -	7 April (No. 90.)	Policy of the Government of India in Afghanistan.	14
12A	"	Mr. Griffin -	Sir F. Roberts -	15 April	Durbar at Kabul on the 13th April 1880.	16
13	"	Government of India (with 1 enclosure.)	Secretary of State -	27 April (No. 93.)	Kandahar Diary, 15th March 1880.	20
14	"	Government of India (with 4 enclosures.)	Secretary of State -	4 May (No. 104.)	Correspondence with Sirdar Abdul Rahman. Instructions to Mr. Griffin.	22
14A	"	Mr. Griffin -	Sir D. Stewart -	8 May	Date of Evacuation of Kabul -	28
15	Despatch	Secretary of State -	Government of India	21 May (No. 23.)	Policy of Her Majesty's Government in reference to Afghanistan.	29
16	Letter	Government of India (with 1 enclosure.)	Secretary of State -	15 June (No. 131.)	Kandahar Diary, 11th May 1880. Delivery of the Viceroy's letter to Wali Shere Ali.	34
17	"	Government of India (with 2 enclosures.)	Secretary of State -	15 June (No. 134.)	Reply of Wali Shere Ali to the Viceroy's letter.	35
18	"	Government of India (with 2 enclosures.)	Secretary of State -	—	Instructions to General Sir D. Stewart in reference to the political situation at Kabul.	37
19	"	Government of India	Secretary of State -	27 July (No. 166.)	Recognition of Sirdar Abdul Rahman as Amir of Kabul. Review of negotiations.	40

No.		From	To	Date.	Subject.	Page
20				1880.
20		Correspondence between Mr. Lepel Griffin and Sirdar Abdul Rahman				46
20A	Letter	Mr. Griffin	Sir D. Stewart	4 Aug.	Interview with Sirdar Abdul Rahman.	51
21	Telegram	Viceroy	Secretary of State	5 "	Recommendation of Sir D. Stewart for evacuation of Kabul.	53
22	"	Secretary of State	Viceroy	6 "	Approving evacuation of Kabul.	53
23	Letter	Government of India (With 1 enclosure.)	Secretary of State	24 " (No. 191.)	Proposal of Sir D. Stewart for continuous withdrawal from Northern Afghanistan.	54
24	Telegram	Viceroy	Secretary of State	3 Sept.	Permission to Sirdar Abdul Rahman to occupy the Hariob District of the Kuram Valley.	56
25	Letter	Government of India (With 15 enclosures.)	"	14 " (No. 208.)	Withdrawal from the Khyber Pass and Kuram Valley. Future government of the Turi Tribe.	56
26	Despatch	Secretary of State	Government of India	30 Sept. (No. 40.)	Approving evacuation of Kabul and Northern Afghanistan.	88
27	Letter	Government of India (With 1 enclosure.)	Secretary of State	19 Oct. (No. 225.)	Delivery to Amir Abdul Rahman of a letter defining his political position.	88
28	Despatch	Secretary of State	Government of India	11 Nov. (No. 45.)	Policy of Her Majesty's Government in reference to Kandahar.	89
29	Telegram	Viceroy	Secretary of State	12 Nov.	Proposal of the Wali of Kandahar to retire to Karachi.	93
30	Letter	Government of India (With 11 enclosures.)	"	16 " (No. 233.)	Arrangements for future government of the Turi Tribe.	94
31	Telegram	Viceroy	Secretary of State	17 Nov.	Acceptance of retirement of Wali of Kandahar.	103
32	Despatch	Secretary of State	Government of India	19 " (No. 46.)	Approving arrangements in reference to the Khyber Pass and Kuram Valley.	103
33	Telegram	Viceroy	Secretary of State	30 Nov.	Intended departure of the Wali of Kandahar.	104
34	"	"	"	" "	Public announcement of the above.	104
35	Despatch	Secretary of State	Government of India	3 Dec. (No. 48.)	Review of negotiations with Sirdar Abdul Rahman.	105
36	"	"	"	17 Dec. (No. 53.)	Approving final arrangements for government of the Turi Tribe.	107
37	Telegram	President in Council.	Secretary of State	29 Dec.	Arrival of Sirdar Shere Ali at Karachi.	107

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE.

No. 1.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 3rd January 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

FOLLOWING from Stewart, 1st. Begins :—Effect of Kabul disturbances begins to be felt here. Another Ghazee yesterday. Seditious meetings in mosques last two nights. Sirdar alarmed, and has twice asked permission to send his family to India. Please remember I have nothing to offer him but vague assurances, and cannot even promise our friend that we do not intend to abandon Kandahar again. Ends.

I consider it is now necessary to give Sirdar confidential but precise assurance, that if he behave well, Kandahar will be placed under his hereditary government, supported by us, in order to secure him to our interest, and detach him permanently from other influence, which may increase through his uncertainty of our intentions.

No. 2.

No. 2 of 1880. (Extract.)

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 7th January 1880.

In our letter, No. 160, of the 7th July last, we reviewed the course of events which preceded the signature of the treaty concluded at Gandamak with the Amir Yakub Khan. We explained the objects and reasons of this treaty, and stated the grounds upon which we considered ourselves justified in regarding it as an advantageous resettlement of our relations with Afghanistan. We drew attention, at the same time, to contingencies which might affect the character and permanence of the relations thus established; observing that the practical value of the treaty mainly depended upon the conduct or disposition of the Amir himself; that a settlement effected under the most favourable conditions, and with the most promising prospects, might be impaired by the disloyalty of Afghan princes; and that, for these reasons, we had been careful to render our position substantially independent of the caprices of any Afghan ruler, by securing permanent command of the main avenues from India into Afghanistan. But we thought, and still think, that the arrangements entered into with Yakub Khan at Gandamak were the best that could then be made; we believe that, at the time, the treaty was regarded by the Amir, and his best advisers, as a satisfactory conclusion of hostilities; and, even if an advance on Kabul had, in these circumstances, been justifiable, the serious inexpediency of it has, we think, been sufficiently proved by the political disorganization which has ensued from the unsought, and unavoidable, renewal of hostilities.

2. On the conclusion of the Treaty of Gandamak, the Amir returned to Kabul, accompanied by his Mustaufi, Habibulla Khan, his Commander-in-Chief, General Daud Shah, and a Native Agent in the employ of Sir Louis Cavagnari, named Bakhtiar Khan, who was entrusted with the duty of making preparations for the reception of the British Mission. As already reported to your Lordship, the Amir had at no time evinced reluctance to the subordination of his foreign relations to British control, as a necessary condition of British protection. This claim, with the subsidiary one requiring him to admit British officers to reside at certain places, not specified, within his territories, the Amir had accepted unhesitatingly. When these two conditions were proposed to His Highness in reply to his overtures for the cessation of hostilities, and for the renewal of friendship, he characterized the former as "a good and proper" proposal, in conformity with friendship, leaving "no room for discussion or refusal."

To the second condition the Amir added only the qualification that the British officer should reside at Kabul, under his immediate protection; and during subsequent negotiations the Amir's language certainly conveyed the impression that he admitted the presence of a British Envoy at his capital to be, on the whole, the best means of giving practical effect and recognition to the alliance between the two Governments. It had not been our intention to propose Kabul for the residence of our representative; but, when the capital was thus expressly selected by the Amir himself, there were many motives for deferring to the choice of His Highness, and there was no tenable ground for opposing it. If the Amir felt reluctance to the establishment of a British Embassy at Kabul, he certainly exhibited no sign of it, he raised no difficulties, he suggested no impediments, and while strenuously combating some clauses of the treaty he expressed, from first to last, no disinclination to receive the Envoy, nor any mistrust of his power to protect him.

3. In these circumstances, we deemed it desirable that the British Resident should proceed without delay to take up his appointment at Kabul. Assuming the Amir to be dealing with us in good faith, the advantage to both parties of early action under the treaty was incontestable, while hesitation or inactivity appeared likely to operate adversely not only to our own interests, but to those of the Amir. This view of the situation was strengthened by reports received from Bakhtiar Khan, whose letters warned Sir L. Cavagnari that the party opposed to the British alliance were making open endeavours to neutralize the effect of our recent successes, and to render the Amir averse to a liberal treatment of those persons in whose interests the amnesty clause had been framed, and in whose protection the honour of the British Government was specially concerned. The Amir himself had expressed to Bakhtiar Khan his desire for an early meeting with Sir Louis Cavagnari, and the impression produced by these letters and messages was that the mission should be organized as speedily as possible, and that it should proceed to Kabul without loss of time. This was undoubtedly the view of Sir Louis Cavagnari, who was at the time at Simla, and whose opinion on such a point necessarily carried great weight.

4. The constitution of the Envoy's staff, and of his escort, was carefully considered with Sir Louis Cavagnari at Simla. A strong military escort had been attached to Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission; but the duties which this escort was intended to perform, and the contingencies against which it was meant to provide, were of a wholly different character. Sir Neville Chamberlain, carrying with him valuable gifts for Sher Ali, was about to enter the country of predatory and probably hostile tribes, while the disposition of the Kabul Government toward his mission was very uncertain. Sir Louis Cavagnari, on the other hand, entered Afghan territory under the safe conduct and public guarantee of the Amir, who had recently been a guest in our own camp. Moreover, the strength of Sir Neville Chamberlain's escort, although, for the reasons above mentioned, it was in our opinion absolutely requisite, had furnished the late Amir with a pretext for attributing an unfriendly purpose to the mission which that escort accompanied. It had also been criticised by others, on the ground that, whilst too great for an escort, it was too small for an army, and calculated to provoke an opposition which no mere escort could overcome. Such criticism, though inapplicable to the conditions of Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission, would have been relevant to those which the Government of India had to consider in connection with the Embassy of Sir Louis Cavagnari. If our original plan of placing British officers at some points in Afghanistan, other than the capital, had not been overruled by the Amir's express stipulation regarding Kabul, it might have been expedient to attach to the Envoy a force that would have rendered him independent of the Afghan Government for protection against sudden attacks of local outbreaks. But Sir L. Cavagnari went, at the special desire of the Amir, to reside at the capital of the Amir's country, within the Amir's own stronghold, and in the closest proximity to the Amir's own residence. It was well known that the Bala Hissar was always occupied by the household troops upon whom the actual ruler believed he could best rely; and it was recollected that, at previous periods of extreme anarchy and revolt, the fort had afforded a secure refuge to those officers who succeeded in reaching it. To have required the Amir to entertain within the Bala Hissar a British escort sufficient for ensuring the safety of the Envoy in all eventualities, or to have demanded that these troops should be allowed to occupy an entrenched position within the Amir's own fortifications, would have been inconsistent with the whole character of the relations which Sir Louis Cavagnari's embassy represented; and compliance with such a demand would have relieved the Amir from the greater part of the responsibility which his treaty guarantees had solemnly affirmed. It is probable, indeed, that a force of this strength and character would not have been admitted within the fortress ; while the objections against placing our Embassy, thus guarded, upon the confines of the city, would have been found to be very serious. All experience shows that in such situations the risk of collisions and misunderstandings is multiplied in proportion to the number of British soldiers and camp followers that are brought into contact with an armed and excitable population. The dangers to which Sir L. Cavagnari considered himself and those who accompanied him most liable were those of assassination by the hand of a fanatic, or assault provoked by some street quarrel between the soldiers of his escort and those of the Amir ; and he was therefore personally desirous that his staff and escort should be reduced to the most moderate and manageable dimensions. In accordance with these considerations, the Envoy's suit was restricted to a Secretary (Mr. Jenkyns), a Medical Officer (Dr. Kelly), and a Military Attaché (Lieutenant Hamilton) in charge of a carefully picked escort of 25 cavalry and 50 infantry of the Guide Corps.

5. Sir Louis started for Kabul from the British frontier at Thull on the 14th July, and entered that capital on the 24th of the same month. He was received beyond the Shutargardan pass by the Amir's Ministers and troops, treated with distinguished attention along the route, and conducted to the Court of His Highness with every possible demonstration of honour and respect, as a welcome guest. The unfortunate death of Bakhtiar Khan, who died suddenly, just before the arrival of the Envoy, had closed a valuable channel of information regarding intrigues or movements below the surface. So far, however, as the disposition of the Amir and his chief officers could be judged from their public acts, such as, for instance, their dismissal of the Russian Envoy, and their compliance with various minor requests and suggestions, it betrayed no tendency towards reaction against the British alliance. The letters and telegrams of the Envoy mentioned the disorderly and mutinous behaviour of some regiments recently arrived at Kabul from Herat, but expressed confidence in the Amir's determination and ability to remove or overcome any danger arising from the disaffection of the soldiery. There had been a dispute in the bazaar between some men of the British escort and some of these troops from Herat, but this had been settled to the satisfaction of Sir Louis Cavagnari ; the regiments from Herat were being paid off and dismissed to their homes, and the uneasiness caused by their presence and conduct at the capital appeared, from later news, to be passing away. The principal difficulties anticipated by our Envoy arose from the opposition of Sirdar Yahia Khan, the Amir's father-in-law, who had great influence with the Amir, and from the general discontent created throughout the country by the maladministration and oppression of the late Kabul Government, from which all classes hoped to obtain relief through the agency of the British representative. As regards the second article of the Gandamak Treaty, which engaged the Amir to publish a full and complete amnesty, Sir Louis more than once mentioned in his correspondence that the persons it concerned had not been dealt with in a liberal spirit, and that the Amir showed no disposition to treat them with generosity. He added, however, that there had been no actual infringement of the article ; that the persons protected by it had been molested neither in person nor in property ; and that His Highness had " done nothing and will do nothing " opposed to the letter of the treaty. His last letter (30th August) concluded with the words, " I personally believe that Yakub Khan will turn out to be a very good ally, " and that we shall be able to keep him to his engagements." Sir Louis Cavagnari always described the personal relations between himself and the Amir as satisfactory. The Amir had suggested that his proposed visit to the Viceroy should take place in the end of December, and had commenced some preparations for carrying it out. His Highness had given orders to tradesmen for the equipment of his retinue, and many of the later communications from Sir Louis Cavagnari referred to the details of the forthcoming visit. The last personal telegram addressed by Sir Louis to the Viceroy was on this subject. That telegram was dated the 2nd September, and it concluded with the words " all well."

6. On the 3rd of September the British Embassy at Kabul was attacked by three regiments, called the Ordal regiments, who had come to the Pay Office in the Bala Hissar to receive arrears of pay. These regiments, it is understood, were the Amir's household troops, composed of men picked from the whole army, and principally, it is said, recruited from the Wardak tribe. They were quartered in the Chaman, under the walls of the fort, and on that day had furnished several of the guards in the Bala Hissar. Two of these three regiments broke out into violent mutiny at the Pay Office on finding that they were not to be paid up in full; and suddenly turned upon the Residency. The mutineers appear to have been joined by men from other regiments and by some of the city populace; they besieged the Residency from all sides in great numbers, the building was set on fire, and its defenders perished after a desperate resistance. The Government of India must lastingly deplore the untimely and irreparable loss of Sir Louis Cavagnari; who, by his life and death, has bequeathed to the service he adorned a splendid example, and to the Empire for whose interests he lived and died the grateful guardianship of his honoured memory and spotless name.

7. The first intelligence of this catastrophe was received on the morning of the 5th of September last; and on the afternoon of the following day General Roberts left Simla under instructions to lose no time in advancing upon Kabul with a force of between 6,000 and 7,000 men. General Massy was instructed to re-occupy the Shutargardan, and General Stewart to re-occupy Kandahar; whilst a force of the same strength was detailed for the re-occupation of Jellalabad, with an efficient reserve of 5,000 men between Rawal Pindi and Peshawur. We need not here recapitulate the results of these measures, which have been reported to your Lordship, as they occurred, in our preceding Political letters. Their practical consequence has been the occupation of Kabul and the re-occupation of Kandahar and Jellalabad, the voluntary abdication of the Amir Yakub Khan and his deportation at his own request to India, and the complete dissolution of the Afghan Government. These events have annulled the Treaty of Gandamak, and materially altered the situation to which that Treaty had reference.

8. In our accompanying Letter, No. 3, we shall state, and explain, the general principles on which, subject to the approval of them by Her Majesty's Government, we now contemplate the resettlement of our relations with the Afghan people, whenever adequate guarantees for the stability of such a resettlement shall have been thoroughly secured by the successful completion of our present military operations.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) LYTON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
" A. CLARKE.
" J. STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSON.
" W. STOKES.
" A. R. THOMPSON.

No. 3.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 7th January 1880.

1. IN our letter, No. 2, of this day's date, we have reviewed the series of events which, terminating in the occupation of Kabul and the dissolution of Yakub Khan's Government, have annulled the Treaty of Gandamak, and totally altered the political situation to which that treaty was applied. It now devolves on us to indicate, so far as it is at present possible to do so, the general lines of the policy which, under these altered circumstances, we propose to adopt in pursuance of the object we have kept constantly before us, viz., the safety of the Indian Empire and the permanent tranquillity of our northern frontier.

2. Before proceeding, however, to the consideration of a future Afghan policy, we desire to express our strong conviction that no purely political action is desirable, or can be effective, until all military resistance has been effectually overcome, and the pacification of the country fully completed. We also feel that, owing to the unsettled character of events now passing in Afghanistan, and our still imperfect knowledge of the changing influences by which, from day to day, they are forcibly affected, any present indication of future policy must necessarily be somewhat conditional and indefinite. In short, we can deal only with the general principles of arrangements, subject, in detail, to such modification as may hereafter be dictated by increased knowledge and experience.

3. The Treaty of Gandamak represented a final endeavour to bring into effect the policy of maintaining on our frontier a strong and independent kingdom with a foreign policy exclusively subordinate to British direction, a national unity relying upon the British Government for support against external aggression, and a commercial system connected with India by a natural community of interests. It had been in the hope of consolidating such an alliance that the British Government aided the Amir Sher Ali with money and arms, and enabled him, by his countenance and diplomatic support, to bring under his sovereignty a larger territory than had ever before been united under the rule of the Barakzais. But Shere Ali's estrangement from our Government increased in proportion to his power, until finally, at a critical moment, he leagued himself with a foreign Power which openly courted his friendship, in furtherance of projects and preparations directed against the Government of India.

4. After the discomfiture and death of Sher Ali, his son made overtures for the restoration of peace and friendship between the two Governments; and, believing, as we still do, that Sher Ali's estrangement arose partially from misunderstandings and other causes, to some extent at least preventible, we did not then abandon the hope that arrangements requisite for the permanent security of the Indian Empire might be reconciled with the maintenance of an independent and united Afghan kingdom under a friendly ruler. The result has disappointed this hope. The Amir Yakub Khan has failed altogether to maintain order even in his own capital, or to prevent the treacherous massacre of the British Embassy. The kingdom, laboriously recovered by Sher Ali, has fallen to pieces at the first blow; and it would now be a difficult if not impracticable task, even were it politically desirable, to reunite these fragments under any single ruler.

5. It must not be forgotten that the absorption of the Afghan principalities into one kingdom under Dost Muhammad, and again, after an interval, under Sher Ali, represented only a temporary, and to some degree an accidental, phase of their recent political history. In 1818, the Suddozai monarchy, after much internal dissension, was completely dismembered; and all its territories, except Herat, passed into the hands of different members of the Barakzai family. Dost Muhammad succeeded, after many vicissitudes, in obtaining possession of all the provinces which have since been recognized as belonging to Afghanistan. But he only established his permanent supremacy over Afghan Turkestan in 1850; Kandahar remained separate till 1856; and Herat did not surrender to him until just before he died in 1863. Immediately after Dost Muhammad's death, the ill-compacted and discordant kingdom was plunged into civil war, during the course of which Kabul and Herat became the head-quarters of rival Chiefs, until, after five years of anarchy, the Amir Sher Ali obtained the predominance which, partly through British countenance and support, he consolidated into a well defined kingdom. That kingdom, which it took Dost Muhammad a lifetime, and Sher Ali five years, to rebuild, has been again dissolved. Its provinces are left disconnected and masterless, and any attempt on our part to reconstitute them under one Government would commit us to a course of military and political interference which would certainly entangle us in great and protracted difficulties, and would end, as we believe, in failure.

6. We are of opinion, therefore, that the question of the resuscitation of the fallen kingdom of the Barakzais cannot now be entertained, and that we must accept the separation of its constituent provinces as our basis for the political reconstitution of Afghanistan. But, while the political conditions of the problem we have to deal with are thus altered, the military position, and the objects towards which our military and political action is directed, remain unchanged. It is our desire to avoid territorial annexation and the further extension of our administrative responsibilities. While maintaining a dominant influence over those provinces which form the outworks of our Indian Empire, we still desire to minimize our interference in their internal affairs; and it is still our wish to hold only such military positions as will enable us to maintain that influence, by commanding the highways which cross our frontier. It has been to us a source of satisfaction to observe how fully the operations of the past autumn have justified the selection of the military positions secured under the Gandamak Treaty. When, in September last, a rapid march on Kabul became suddenly necessary, our forces already held open the two main lines of advance; our communications with India were established without difficulty, and our advanced position at Ali Khel gave us short and speedy access to the capital. Until all resistance has been overcome, and the situation has further developed, it is impossible to say precisely what military positions it may be necessary to hold permanently. But the unanimous opinion of the officers now holding high command in Afghanistan is that the military frontier should not be very materially extended beyond the line taken up under the treaty of last year, and to this line we propose to adhere as closely as circumstances permit.

7. In dealing with a disunited Afghanistan, the more difficult problems are presented by the remoter provinces. The value of Herat to India has been long recognized; and hitherto the policy of Her Majesty's Government has been to keep it in the hands of an independent Afghan State whose interests on that frontier of Afghanistan were considered to be identical with our own. But the circumstances which dictated that policy have now entirely changed; the Afghan States which we maintained in possession of Herat have ceased to exist; and it has become necessary to make, without delay, upon a different basis, some fresh dispositions for the conservation of our interests in this important fortress and province. It is obvious, however, that the distance of Herat from India places it beyond the ordinary range of our military operations, and would, therefore, render difficult the exercise of direct political control. The annexation of Herat to Kabul or Kandahar would neither be popular at Herat, nor provide for the political security of a province peculiarly exposed to the intrigues and cupidity of powerful neighbours; while, as a separate State, Herat would be too weak to stand by itself, and might thus be compelled, in default of control from India (which, as we have already said, would be difficult), to look elsewhere for protection and support. For these reasons we concur in the decision which, as we understand, has already commended itself to Her Majesty's Government on grounds of Imperial policy, whereby Persia will be provisionally permitted to occupy Herat, under sufficient guarantees for her good administration of it, and for her adequate protection of British and Indian interests at that point, and with a special reservation of our right to occupy the place with British forces in certain eventualities.

8. While the terms of this understanding with Persia will, we feel certain, receive from Her Majesty's Government an attention proportionate to the magnitude of the question it raises, and the interests it involves, we are more immediately concerned with those conditions which directly affect our dealings with the rest of Afghanistan. Of these, one of the most important is the future boundary to be assigned to Herat; and this is a point so intimately connected with the territorial and political re-arrangement of the rest of Afghanistan that, if any room is left for misunderstanding or dispute as to the extent of the territory to be assigned to Persia, much confusion and embarrassment may ensue. We are not yet in a position to demarcate this boundary, but we conceive that the question is one that should be decided mainly and specially on considerations of Indian interests and policy; and we are of opinion that Furrah certainly, and possibly Lash Jowain also, should be excluded from the territories placed under Persian control. We are now actively engaged in pushing forward a railway towards Kandahar; and, believing, as we do, that the opening of such communication affords the surest guarantee not only for the peaceful development of the countries traversed, but for the permanent security of our frontier, we consider that Persia should be bound to contribute substantially towards the ultimate extension of this line to Herat. It will be apparent to Her Majesty's Government that such an extension of our Kandahar Railway will be a most effective means of ensuring the stability of any political arrangement with Persia regarding Herat, and will materially strengthen Persia in fulfilling her engagements.

9. The question of Seistan is nearly connected with that of Herat. The conditions which justified our intervention and arbitration in 1872 no longer apply; and if it is decided to make over Herat to Persia, we are prepared to recommend a revision of the Seistan boundary also in favour of Persia. This, however, is likewise a question on which we are not yet in a position to express a decided opinion; though we trust that the decision of it will be practically left to this Government when the general delimitation of the provinces of Afghanistan is considered.

10. Assuming that Herat, and possibly a part of Seistan, will be bestowed conditionally upon Persia, and reserving for separate examination the questions that may arise as to the status of certain semi-independent tribes, we would propose to subordinate the remainder of Afghanistan, directly or indirectly, to distinct Native Governments at Kabul and Kandahar. There can, we conceive, be no doubt of the expediency of separating Kandahar from Kabul. The Duranis of South Afghanistan, who form the predominant class, have no leanings towards the Kabul Government, which has always represented, to the mass of the Kandahar people, an alien and oppressive rule. We propose, therefore, to establish the province of Kandahar as an independent and separate State, under an hereditary ruler selected from the representative of the old ruling families. Having regard to the advance of Persia to Herat, and the responsibilities devolving on us, in relation to that province, as well as to the maintenance of our due influence in Western Afghanistan, we consider that it will be necessary to retain a British garrison at or near Kandahar. But we contemplate no interference in the internal administration of the province. The ultimate boundaries of the province, and the precise terms of the treaty or agreement under which it is made over to the Native ruler, are questions on which we are not yet in a position to place our views before Her Majesty's Government; but they will receive our earliest attention, when the broader questions of policy have been decided.

11. The districts of Pishin, Sibi, and Kuram were assigned to us by the Amir Yakub Khan, under the Treaty of Gundamak, and are now being administered by our officers. We have had under consideration the question of restoring Pishin to Kandahar under its new constitution, and of transferring Sibi to the Khan of Khelat, in recognition of his loyal services during the late and present military operations. It appears to us, however, that there are objections to placing under a Native ruler populations that have once been under our own administration. Furthermore, Sibi and Pishin are both on the line of the proposed Sind-Kandahar Railway, which will run for a considerable part of its course through these districts; and, while the fact of its running through territory administered by us will undoubtedly facilitate the construction and working of this line, it seems also right and desirable that we should reap such profit and advantage as accrues from the development of the districts traversed by a railway constructed at our cost. There are also political advantages in interposing a belt of territory under British administration between the Afghan and Biluch provinces. For these and other reasons, therefore, we do not recommend any present change in the status of the assigned districts.

12. Of the future of Kabul it is difficult to speak at this moment, when military operations are still in progress around its capital. We are decidedly of opinion that this province must remain under military occupation until all resistance has ceased, and until its turbulent population has been thoroughly convinced of our military power, and of the futility of contesting it. Until this has been effected, any attempt at a political settlement would be delusive and dangerous. General Roberts has, however, already, by his large captures of guns, arms, and munitions of war of all kinds, done much to weaken that military power which the Amir Sher Ali had so carefully fostered; and we trust that it will be thoroughly broken by the result of the present operations. When this task has been fully accomplished, and not till then, it will be possible to undertake the political settlement of the country. In this part of the country the disorganization is more complete, and the elements of disorder are stronger and more intractable than elsewhere; and it is impossible at present to forecast with any precision the period within which our occupation of the capital and our direct authority over the surrounding districts are likely to be withdrawn. Our aim, however, is to minimize that occupation and control, and ultimately to make over the internal administration to a Native ruler in subordinate alliance with ourselves, supported and controlled by a strong British cantonment established at some suitable point. Where, however, that cantonment should be, and what should be our permanent line of communication with Kabul, we are not yet in a position to state. The determination of such questions requires more accurate knowledge than we yet possess of the country generally, and a more detailed examination than has yet been made of the several routes and their capabilities for roads or railways.

13. We are unable at present to make distinct proposals regarding the Oxus provinces of Afghanistan. Our information about the events and state of feeling in that country is at present most scanty; it is divided from Kabul by a strong natural boundary, and our interests, whether strategic or political, in these districts are.

comparatively, of minor and less pressing importance. So long, therefore, as Russia observes the engagements which place all Afghan-Turkestan beyond the sphere of her political action, we should deprecate interference with these provinces, which might remain nominally subject to the Kabul Governor, though enjoying practical independence. But on this side, our policy must largely depend upon the action of Russia; and upon the truth, or otherwise, of the rumours which ascribe to that Power the intention of moving forces to the Oxus, next spring, with ulterior designs against Afghanistan. We consider our withdrawal from Kabul to be impossible if the Oxus provinces are entered, or seriously threatened, by a foreign Power; and indeed any political interference from beyond the Oxus would unavoidably embarrass our plans for the evacuation of Kabul. We earnestly trust, however, that Her Majesty's Government will be able to secure us against any such contingency, which might not only necessitate the continued occupation of Kabul, but might possibly compel us to uphold, by force of arms, our supremacy up to the banks of the Oxus.

14. Such are, in general outline, the arrangements we should regard as most suitable for the resettlement of our permanent relations with the Afghan States, whenever the requisite material conditions for the stability of such arrangements have been effectually secured. We consider that the outlines thus sketched may, with safety and advantage, be firmly filled in, as time proceeds and opportunity occurs. And, although the task immediately before us is the removal or destruction throughout Northern Afghanistan of all existing means of armed menace or resistance to our authority, we are of opinion that, when this task has been completed, the political arrangements above indicated will be more conducive than direct annexation, or permanent military occupation, to the attainment of that object which we have already described as the untroubled peace, and improved defensive power, of the Indian Empire, so far as these depend upon the military strength of its north-western frontier, and the undisputed character of its relations with the States beyond.

15. It is, at present, impossible to foresee the precise duration of our military operations in Northern Afghanistan; and we consider that our troops should in any case visit Ghazni and the Hindu-Kush boundaries of the Kabul province before permanently withdrawing from the country. But, subject only to the demarcation of boundaries which cannot yet be undertaken, we recognize no serious impediment to the early application to Kandahar and Herat of the principles discussed in paras. 7 and 8 of our present letter.

	We have, &c.,
(Signed)	LYTTON.
"	F. P. HAINES.
"	A. J. ARBUTHNOT.
"	A. CLARKE.
"	J. STRACHEY.
"	E. B. JOHNSON.
"	W. STOKES.
"	A. R. THOMPSON.

No. 4.

TELEGRAM from the SECRETARY OF STATE, 8th January 1880, to VICEROY.

(Extract.)

OUR intention to protect Shere Ali in the Governorship of Kandahar may be communicated to him.

No. 5.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 11th February 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

RUMOUR from Turkestan that Abdul Rahman has crossed the Amu and occupied Ghor, that Sultan Murad Khan has joined him, and that troops sent by Gholam Hyder to oppose him have gone over to him.

No. 6.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 3rd March 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE. (Extract.)

ST. JOHN has brought here friendly letter from Sirdar Sher Ali. St. John returns to Kandahar immediately to assume separate political charge on Stewart's departure for Ghuznee. It seems advisable he should take reply from Viceroy to Sher Ali, communicating informally to Sirdar the substance of arrangements proposed regarding Kandahar, mentioning also railway, light subsidy towards cost of troops, and British control of external relations. Sirdar now has verbal assurances only. No objection on his part anticipated.

No. 7.

TELEGRAM from SECRETARY OF STATE, 4th March 1880, to VICEROY.

YOURS, yesterday. Your proposals as to Sher Ali approved.

No. 8.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 14th March 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE. (Extract.)

NECESSARY to find, without delay, some Native authority to which we can restore Northern Aghanistan, without risk of immediate anarchy, on our evacuation of Kabul not later than next autumn, and, if possible, earlier. No prospect of finding in country any man strong enough for this purpose. I therefore advocate early public recognition of Abdur Rahman as legitimate heir of Dost Mahomed, and open deputation of Sirdars with British concurrence to offer him throne of Afghanistan, as sole means of saving country from anarchy.

No. 9.

TELEGRAM from SECRETARY OF STATE, 15th March 1880, to VICEROY. (Extract.)

YOURS, yesterday. Assuming that Abdul Rahman is acceptable to the country, and that he would be contented with Northern Afghanistan, it is desirable to support him at Kabul.

No. 10.

TELEGRAM from VICEROY, 17th March 1880, to SECRETARY OF STATE.

Griffin reaches Kabul on 20th, and will lose no time in endeavouring to ascertain precise whereabouts of Abdul Rahman, but I have now received authentic intelligence that the Sirdar is in Afghan Turkestan, having lately arrived there from Badakshan, where he defeated the Mir Shahzada Hassan, who has fled to Mustoj.

No. 11.

No. 81 of 1880. (Extract.)

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 31st March 1880.

WITH reference to your Lordship's telegram of the 4th March, we have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of papers regarding the recognition of Sirdar Sher Ali Khan as independent ruler of the province of Kandahar.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) LYTTON.
E. B. JOHNSON.
RIVERS THOMPSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 11.

TELEGRAM, dated 11th February 1880.

From SIR D. STEWART, Kandahar, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta.

FORMAL orders from Commander-in-Chief for advance to Ghazni under my personal command received. Hope to be in position to move by 20th March. I beg to reiterate request for instructions ratifying continuance of political relations here. Sirdar is as yet uninformed of my projected departure, and will naturally be anxious about future arrangements. The transition should be therefore so managed as to be as little abrupt as possible. I consider that he should be informed at an early date of proposed movement and political arrangements. If these are to be left to me, I will at once submit details for approbation, but would first ask name of the officer appointed to command Bombay troops, which I understand are to remain under my general control even after I leave Kandahar. Also Euan Smith having arrived, is St. John at liberty to leave?

Enclosure 2 in No. 11.

TELEGRAM, No. 593 E.P., dated 12th February 1880. (Extract.)

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Calcutta, to GENERAL STEWART, Kandahar.

YOURS 11th. Please submit detailed proposals for political arrangements at Kandahar, including terms of future relations with Sirdar, assistance he may need, and territory to be placed under his government. St. John should remain for the present transition. Name of officer to command troops will follow.

Enclosure 3 in No. 11.

No. 68 G., dated Kandahar, 16th February 1880.

From Lieutenant-General SIR D. M. STEWART, K.C.B., Commanding Her Majesty's Forces in Southern Afghanistan, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

IN compliance with the instructions conveyed in your telegram of the 12th instant, I have the honour to submit proposals, detailed as much as possible under the circumstances, for future political arrangements in Southern Afghanistan.

The subject naturally divides itself under two heads—the extent and nature of the authority to be enjoyed by Sirdar Shir Ali Khan, and of the control to be exercised over his rule by the representative of the Government of India; secondly, the machinery for carrying out that control.

2. The minimum boundaries of the State over which the independent authority of the Sirdar is to be acknowledged have already been practically fixed, and include the province of Kandahar proper, excluding the assigned districts of Pishin and Sibi with possibly that part of Afghan Seistan watered only by the Helmund; the district of Kelat-i-Ghilzai separated from Kandahar in 1855; the districts of Pusht-i-Rud and Zamindawar, separated about nine years ago; and the district of Farah originally belonging to Herat, but which has formed a separate province since the capture of that city by the Amir of Kabul in 1863.

3. Our limited knowledge of the topography of these countries renders it impossible to define with sufficient accuracy the boundaries of the State formed by the aggregation of these provinces and districts, but, a cutting herewith enclosed from the latest map issued by the Survey Department shows its extent and approximate limits. In general terms they would include the whole basin of the Helmund as low down as Rudbar, with the exception of the upper valleys of those of its tributaries which rise in the independent and Hazara and Pathan countries, and of the valley of the Tarnak beyond the Kelat-i-Ghilzai district. North of the Helmund the new State would include the lower part of the valleys of the Har-rub and Farah-rub, and to the south so much of the desert round the dependent principality of Kharan as intervenes between Persian and Biluch territory. This is at present quite indefinable. Azad Khan of Kharan in correspondence which is now in my hands declares his independence of, and contempt for, the Khan of Kelat, and acknowledges himself a vassal of Kandahar, which vassalage has, I believe, been recognized by Her Majesty's Government. If this be the case, the southern frontier of Afghanistan is very incorrectly shown in the Surveyor-General's map attached. But the question of the sovereignty over the desert south of the Helmund is a matter of very minor importance as regards Kandahar. The only object of the Khan of Kharan in declaring himself a subject of Afghanistan was to free himself from dependence on his two immediate neighbours, Persia and Kelat. Whether Kharan remains with or is separated from Kandahar will, I believe, be a matter of indifference to Sirdar Shir Ali Khan.

4. Supposing Kharan and the adjacent desert to remain attached to Kandahar, the State thus formed would be shown in the map by an irregular figure not far removed from an equilateral triangle with sides nearly 400 miles in length and covering about 70,000 square miles. A very small portion of this is cultivated or indeed cultivable. The number of inhabitants I am inclined to place somewhere between half a million and a million, three-fourths of them being Duranis, according to their own account, the only true Afghans.

5. The revenue for the next year (1880-81) has been estimated by Major St. John at 20½ lakhs, a total which will be largely increased by settled government, and still more by the construction of a railway from India to Kandahar.

6. The above is a brief definition of the State over which the tide of affairs has unexpectedly called Sirdar Shir Ali Khan to rule.

7. As regards the measure of authority to be allowed to him, I have no hesitation in recommending that this should be as ample as possible. The only limitations I would recommend being placed on his authority are that foreign relations should be wholly conducted through the representative of Her Majesty's Government, with the possible exception of any Native State which may be formed at Kabul; that his military force should be limited in numbers and at the disposal of the Government of India for the defence of Kandahar against external enemies; and that commercial relations must be the subject of mutual agreement at stated intervals.

8. In all other matters, the Sirdar for whom I would suggest Wali as a suitable title, should be entirely free from control; but, for the support of the British force it would be necessary to keep in his country or on its borders, he should contribute a certain fixed amount of coin or grain, preferably the latter.

9. For telegraph and railway construction and maintenance it would be impossible to insist on any contribution now, but this question like that of commerce may be specially excepted from any treaty as subjects for future agreement.

10. The question of the location of a force above the Passes is not one for full discussion in this letter, but I am of opinion that it will be advisable to continue the location of the main cantonment in or about Kandahar instead of shifting it to Pishin. But I think that the Sirdar will never feel himself independent, or be looked on as independent by his people, with British soldiers in his citadel, or within a stone's throw of his gates; and I therefore consider that the British garrison should, as soon as circumstances permit, be established at some distance from the capital, and that the position of the troops should be mutatis mutandis that of the garrison of Secunderabad in the Deccan.

11. I am not yet prepared to give a decided opinion as to the best site for a cantonment. More detailed surveys of the country are required, and the settlement of the railway question and other points must be awaited. But the locality fixed on should, I think, be not less than five or more than twenty miles from the city.

12. As regards political control, I think that the safest plan will be to follow the ordinary precedent by keeping the political and military authority in separate hands, except on those special occasions when important military operations are in actual progress. From certain points of view it would no doubt be convenient to entrust both duties to the same individual, and officers are, no doubt, to be found equally competent for both. But in practice it might, I feel sure, be productive of gross evils if our political relations with the country were to fall into the management of any officer who might chance to fall into the military command.

13. This part of the question is one that requires most careful consideration. The maintenance of satisfactory relations with the ruler of Kandahar and the attitude of the Afghan authorities towards the British officers entrusted with the conduct of affairs in Southern Afghanistan will, in a very great measure, depend on the personal qualifications of the officer who may be appointed by Government to hold chief political authority in that quarter. In my opinion the strongest Political officer in Government service should be selected for this important duty; he should be made Resident and Agent, Governor-General, in Southern Afghanistan; his authority should extend to Biluchistan, and the general conduct of the affairs of that Agency should be placed entirely under his control, the appointment of Agent, Governor-General, in Biluchistan being thus no longer rendered necessary. These measures would, in my opinion, be productive of great advantages to the public interests, but it is of the last importance that the officer selected for this duty should be thoroughly well qualified to deal with the Afghan authorities, whether as regards his knowledge of the Persian language, his political experience or his capabilities for obtaining and retaining the friendship, confidence, and respect of those with whom he has to deal.

14. The measures proposed above must of course be considered as furnishing merely a general outline of the course that, in my opinion, should be followed by Her Majesty's Government with regard to Southern Afghanistan and the Kandahar Sirdar; and the details of such measures will have to be very carefully considered, if once the general basis be approved. Colonel St. John, who leaves for Calcutta this day, is in full possession of the ideas and wishes of Sirdar Shir Ali Khan as to the future of this part of the country, and having my full confidence is also well acquainted with my own views on the subject. These views I have commissioned him to submit fully for the consideration of the Government of India.

Enclosure 4 in No. 11.

Abstract Translation of a Letter from SIRDAR SHERE ALI to the address of HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY AND GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA, 5th Rabi-ul-Awal 1297 H., corresponding with the 16th February 1880.

After compliments. As at this auspicious time my illustrious and kind friend, Colonel St. John, is about to go and wait upon your Excellency, I thought it expedient to bring my sincerity to the notice of your Excellency through this letter. I hope that after Colonel St. John has seen your Excellency he will mention before your Excellency all that I have represented to him regarding my goodwill and firm devotion (to the British Government).

As General Sir D. Stewart has been very kind to appoint me, on behalf of the British Government, to the Governorship of Kandahar and its dependencies, I beg to offer my grateful thanks to the Government of Her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress, and to your Excellency for this great kindness. It is incumbent on me to thank also General Sir D. Stewart, Colonel St. John, and their subordinate officers, before your Excellency, for their kindness and help, especially for those of the last-named officer and his subordinates which have secured peace and tranquillity to the people of the province, who feel themselves grateful for the kindnesses of the British Government.

Enclosure 5 in No. 11.

To His Highness SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN, Wali of Kandahar and its Dependencies.

MY HONOURED AND VALUED FRIEND,

Fort William, 13th March 1880.

It has given me much pleasure to read the expressions of friendship contained in your Highness' letter, and I have to assure you that your Highness' honourable and straightforward conduct is fully appreciated, and will always be remembered by the British Government. It is a source of congratulation both for England and for the Durani nation that one of the descendants of Payindah Khan has continued in the straight part of rectitude, and has not wandered into the waterless desert of dishonour and faithlessness.

For good service and faithful conduct reward is justly due, and it is also incumbent on those to whom God has given high birth and capacity for government that they should not shrink from the duty imposed on them. Therefore I have great pleasure in announcing to you that Her Majesty the Queen-Empress has been pleased to recognize your Highness as independent ruler of the province of Kandahar according to limits to be hereafter defined. For the consolidation of your power, and for the proper guardianship of the frontiers of Her Majesty's Empire, it is necessary that a force of Her Imperial troops remain in a cantonment at or near the city of Kandahar. It will therefore be right and proper that a certain portion of the grain revenue of the State, to be fixed hereafter by mutual agreement, should be allotted yearly towards the provision of supplies for these troops. It is also expedient that a special officer of rank shall be deputed to reside in the cantonment as a medium of friendly communication, and to conduct the relations of the British Government with the States upon the frontiers of your Highness' territory. Upon this understanding the government will remain entirely in the hands of your Highness under the protection of the great Government of England.

At a future time it may be necessary to draw up a formal record of the terms upon which your Highness has entered into possession of your country, but this must be postponed until the affairs of other parts of Afghanistan shall have been settled, when the respective interests of British India and Kandahar will have become more fully known.

Your Highness is doubtless aware that Her Majesty's Government has constructed a railway to Sibi to be continued to Kandahar. No greater benefit could be bestowed on the country, since by the commercial advantages and general facilities of friendly intercourse that will thus be secured, the prosperity of the Durani people, and their close connection with the great and powerful British Government, will, if it please God, become firmly established.

I beg to express the high consideration I entertain for your Highness, and to subscribe myself your Highness' sincere friend.

(Signed) LYTTON,
Viceroy and Governor General of India.

Enclosure 6 in No. 11.

No. 1093 E.P., dated Fort William, 23rd March 1880.

From H. M. DURAND, Esq., Under Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to Lieutenant-General SIR D. M. STEWART, K.C.B., commanding in Southern Afghanistan.

I AM directed to acknowledge your letter No. 68 G., dated 16th February 1880, submitting proposals for future political arrangements in Southern Afghanistan.

2. In reply, I am to forward, for your information, copy of a letter from His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General to the address of Sirdar Sher Ali Khan, dated 13th March 1880, that Her Majesty the Queen Empress has been pleased to recognise the Sirdar as independent ruler of the province of Kandahar according to limits to be hereafter defined. The original of this letter has been entrusted to Lieutenant-Colonel O. St. John, C.S.I., for delivery to the Sirdar.

3. I am to add that the several measures proposed in your letter under reply will be considered in detail hereafter.

No. 12.

No. 90 of 1880. (Extract.)

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD,

Fort William, 7th April 1880.

WE have the honour to submit, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, a copy of the papers noted in the accompanying Abstract of Contents, which will serve to show the present situation of affairs in Afghanistan.

2. The policy we are endeavouring to carry out is summed up in the Minute by His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General, which forms one of the enclosures to this Despatch. In pursuance of this policy, we have, as already reported, recognized Sirdar Sher Ali Khan as independent ruler of the province of Kandahar. The letter to the Sirdar, a copy of which was submitted with our Despatch of the 31st March, has not yet been formally presented to him, but Colonel St. John, to whose care it was entrusted, reports the Sirdar has been informed of its purport, and Her Majesty's Government is now pledged to support him as ruler of the province. He has expressed his readiness to accept the position, and has been assured that aid in money and material will be freely afforded to him if it should be required to consolidate or extend his rule in the interests of Her Majesty's Indian Empire. The separation of Kandahar from Kabul is therefore an accomplished fact, and the independence of Sher Ali Khan has been solemnly guaranteed.

3. In Kabul no final arrangement has yet been made. The disturbed state of the country and the difficulty of finding among the principal Barakzai Sirdars a man of any capacity or influence has obliged us to defer the recognition of a Chief. But after careful consideration we have arrived at the conclusion that Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan, whose presence in Afghan Turkestan is now beyond doubt, would, if willing to accept the province of Kabul without Herat or Kandahar, be more likely than any other member of the family to prove a successful ruler; and we are now endeavouring to enter into communication with him.

4. As regards Herat, it is unnecessary for us to enter into any detailed examination of the state of affairs. It will be seen from Colonel St. John's telegram of the 6th April, a copy of which is enclosed, that Sirdar Ayub Khan is apparently trying to secure our acknowledgment of his title. No communication will be made to him unless he puts forward a clear expression of his wishes.

5. The nature of the future Government of Herat does not, in our opinion, press for settlement. But we consider that the means of influencing Herat from Kandahar will be secured to us by the railway, which will, we hope, be completed early next year as far as Kandahar.

6. In the meantime General Stewart has been directed to march to Ghazni, with the object of breaking any opposition he may find there, and opening direct communication with Sir F. Roberts. This measure was, in our opinion, necessary to overawe opposition and convince the populations concerned that we are in a position to dictate on our own terms the settlement of the questions we are dealing with. We do not, however, desire that Sir D. Stewart's force should remain for long in Ghazni, and arrangements will be made to enable him to leave the place as soon as all opposition is at an end.

7. The movements of our troops in Afghanistan have been guided by the principle that we do not advance to any point of which we are not prepared to retain military occupation as long as our presence there may be demanded by the political situation; and this principle is not departed from in the proposed march to Ghazni. For this march is not an advance, but merely a lateral movement along the direct line connecting General Stewart at Kandahar with General Roberts at Kabul; and the evacuation of Ghazni will not involve any retreat, as the Bengal troops, of which General Stewart's division is composed, can, when at Ghazni, either march to Kabul and thence re-enter India by the Khyber, or return to India, direct by the Kuram.

route, as may be found most expedient on their arrival at Ghazni, by which time the political situation will be further developed.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) LYTTON.
E. B. JOHNSON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 12.

MINUTE by the VICEROY, dated 30th March 1880.

ANNEXED is a copy of a telegram from General Sir D. Stewart, dated 29th instant in reply to one sent to him by the Military Department.

I am at a loss to understand why Sir D. Stewart has not received the programme for field operations now being commenced.

It is essential that he should be at once fully informed of the entire plan of operations, and of the political objects desired by the Government of India.

The latter may be thus summed up. The Government is anxious to withdraw as soon as possible the troops from Kabul, and from all points beyond those to be occupied under the Treaty of Gandamak, except Kandahar. In order that this may be done, it is desirable to find a ruler for Kabul, which will be separated from Kandahar. Steps are being taken for this purpose.

Meanwhile it is essential that we should make such a display of strength in Afghanistan as will show that we are masters of the situation, and will overawe disaffection. But it is not desirable to spread our troops over a large tract of country, or to send small columns to any place where they would encounter opposition, and increase the hostile feeling against us. All that is necessary from the political point of view is for General Stewart to march to Ghazni, break up any opposition he may find there, or in the neighbourhood, and open up direct communication with General Sir F. Roberts at Kabul. This he can do either by the direct route, or by Kushi, as he may think to be most expedient, under such conditions as may exist when he is at Ghazni.

It is not desirable that Sir D. Stewart's troops should remain for long at Ghazni; and it is, therefore, necessary that all military dispositions should be made with a view to enabling him to leave Ghazni as soon as he has put down any open opposition that he may find there.

It is very desirable that the conduct of operations in Afghanistan should, as soon as possible, be brought under one head. Sir D. Stewart should, therefore, assume the supreme command as soon as he is in direct communication with Kabul. In the meantime he should be daily kept informed, both by the Foreign Department and the Military Department, of all news received from Kabul, or from any part of the Khyber or Kuram lines of communication, so that he may be constantly and fully made aware of the exact state of the situation at all points.

This Minute, together with the annexure, should be at once communicated in extenso by clear the line telegraph to the Commander-in-Chief; and his Excellency should be requested to state at once by telegraph to Secretary to Government, Military Department, what instructions should, under these conditions, be sent to Generals Sir F. Roberts and Sir D. Stewart.

Enclosure 2 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 29th March 1880, from General Sir D. M. STEWART, Kandahar, to VICEROY, Calcutta.

I AM not in possession of the orders of Government; nor have I received the programme for field operations now being commenced, but I would point out that I am carrying forward from hence supplies for two months, and that I shall not require to draw more European supplies from India by Kabul or Kuram until the end of May. If it is intended that the division under my command move forward beyond Ghazni towards Kuram, supplies should be collected at some place in Kuram, where the troops under my command may pass the remainder of the hot weather. By the information which I have received, no opposition is likely to be encountered at Ghazni, which may not be easily overcome by the troops with which I am advancing. The movement of a column from Kabul to meet the division under my command will, in my opinion, increase the strain upon the country which the demands of this division for native supplies must entail. The collections of tribesmen under Muhammad Jan and Muskh-i-Alam have already drawn largely upon the supplies which are procurable in the neighbourhood of Ghazni, and the uncertainty which prevails throughout the country has doubtless prevented large arrears from being cultivated this spring. It is only with difficulty that sufficient transport has been obtained to allow of the division under my command being moved with full equipment, and I am calculating on replacing casualties amongst baggage animals by purchases made at Ghazni. I submit for consideration that it is very desirable that no movement of troops belonging to Kabul or Kuram command should be made in advance of Kushi. I have this morning received a telegram from Sir F. Roberts that he only proposes to supply for my division at Ghazni, tea, sugar, and possibly rum, and that for all other supplies I must depend upon the country. I hope it will be understood that I do not require any supplies to be advanced from Kabul to meet me; and that, if orders are given for my division to remain at Ghazni, I would at once establish communication with Kabul or Kurum, as may be desired, sending my own transport to bring forward necessary supplies. I make this statement, not with a view of disturbing any approved plan of operations, but in order that there may be no misconception regarding the difficulty of feeding a large force at Ghazni during the present season.

Enclosure 3 in No. 12.

TELEGRAM, dated 6th April 1880.

From COLONEL ST. JOHN, Kandahar, to FOREIGN, Calcutta.

SIRDAR ABDUL SALAM, who came from Herat in December last as Envoy from Ayub and returned in January, has sent his confidential servant to me with a letter reporting arrival of Persian Commissioner. He offers to be medium of communication with Ayub in our interests, and asks for confidential agent to be sent to him at Herat, or letter declaring that the English Government wish to have friendship and services of Ayub. He hints that Ayub is hesitating between Persia and England, but inclines to latter. Messenger reports that Persian Commissioner left two days before he did, while letter speaks of him as still there. He says Ayub is practically in hands of Kabuli troops, who for two months would not let him leave his house. Object of letter appears to be acknowledgment of Ayub's title to Herat, overtures to Persia having finally failed. I presume letter may be answered in accordance with previous communications, namely, that Ayub can do as he likes; that we want nothing from him; and that if he wants anything from us he should express his wishes.

No. 12A.

No. 5, S. P. C., dated Kabul, 15th April 1880.

From LEPEL GRIFFIN, Esq., C.S.I., Chief Political Officer, Northern and Eastern Afghanistan, to Lieutenant-General Sir F. ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., Commanding at Kabul. (Extract.)

A durbar was held at 4 o'clock on Tuesday the 13th instant, which was attended by all the Sirdars, Chiefs, and Maliks of Kabul and its neighbourhood, many of the Hazaras, and of the trading classes; a large number of British officers in Kabul were also present. The proceedings were opened by a short speech from Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts, a copy of which is herewith forwarded, and were concluded by an address in which I endeavoured to explain both to the Sirdars and people generally, and to the delegates from Maidan, what were the general intentions of the Government, and specially with reference to the representations which had been put forward: a copy of the paper of requests of the Ghazni party with the address has been already forwarded to you. That portion of the Government programme to which I did not allude in the speech was the separation of Herat from Northern Afghanistan, for the reason that I had understood from the Government of India that no final arrangements had been made with regard to Herat, and that its future disposal was consequently still uncertain. Such being the case, and as there was no special necessity for declaring the policy of Government on this point, I considered it would be more convenient to the Government were any distinct declaration of its intention to separate Western Afghanistan from Kabul deferred.

The effect of the Durbar has been reported from many quarters to have been good, although a large number of representatives are undoubtedly much disappointed that the return of Ameer Yakub Khan has been categorically refused to them. Still all are satisfied that some definite reply has been given.

The allusion in the speech to the Government being the friend, and not the enemy, of Islam; to the large Muhammadan population which lived in perfect liberty under the British rule in India; and to the fact that the Government has several times interposed, at great cost in money and men, to preserve the integrity of the dominions of the Sultan of Turkey, has been welcomed and largely discussed in the mosques and elsewhere.

PAPERS REFERRED TO IN THE ABOVE.

Translation of a document brought before the Chief Political Officer on the 11th April 1880.

We, the undersigned, as representatives of the tribes of Afghanistan, send the following representations to the British Government:—

I. Friendship between the people of Afghanistan and the great British Government should be re-established, as of former years, inasmuch as in this way the interests and welfare of both parties would, God willing, be secured.

II. Our King and Ruler should be released and restored to his former power; and we, the tribesmen, guarantee that, by the blessing of God, he will maintain a lasting and sincere friendship towards the British Government, and that both parties will have identical interests.

III. The British Agent, whoever he may be, should be of the Muhammadan religion, while all British troops should be withdrawn from our country.

IV. The kingdom of Afghanistan should be restored in its entirety to its King and Ruler. In this way it will be able to cope with its foreign enemies.

V. The British Government should furnish such assistance to the King and Ruler of Afghanistan as it may think best for the interests of both parties.

VI. Immediate assistance should be given to the Ameer, seeing that the country has been desolated and nothing of value is left, as the British authorities are themselves thoroughly aware.

We hope that the great British Government will grant these the expressed wishes of the tribes of Afghanistan, as they consult the interests of both parties. All of us have come to the British authorities to ask that we and our sovereign may be forgiven; our wishes are set forth in the paragraphs above.

Dated Friday, 29th Rabi-ul-Sani 1297 (9th April 1880).

Names sealed and signed.

- | | |
|---------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Muhammad Alim. | 8. Abdul Ghafur. |
| 2. Muhammad Jan. | 9. Shah Muhammad. |
| 3. Muhammad Sarwar. | 10. Muhammad Afzal. |
| 4. Ghulam Haidar. | 11. Sultan Muhammad. |
| 5. Muhammad Hasan. | 12. Lal Muhammad. |
| 6. Abdul Karim. | 13. Ghulam Haidar. |
| 7. Muhammad Tahir. | |

Suliman Khels,	15 in number.
Andaris,	8 " "
Zurmat Ahmadzais,	17 " "
Wardaks,	17 " "
Logaris and Khanwaris,	15 " "
Ahmadzais,	46 " "
Tajiks,	5 " "
Tajiks of Ghazni,	9 " "
Maidan people,	14 " "
Mangals and Totakhels,	43 " "

Speech delivered by Lieutenant-General Sir FREDERICK ROBERTS, K.C.B., V.C., &c., in Durbar, at Kabul, on the 13th April 1880.

Sirdars and Maliks,—I am very glad to receive you here to-day in durbar, especially those who, through the good offices of my friend, the Mustaufi, Habibulla Khan, have been induced to come to Kabul, and make their wishes known to me. I trust that this durbar is the beginning of the end, and that it will now be possible for us to enter into such arrangements with the people of Afghanistan as will ensure an honourable peace, and a lasting friendship between them and the British. Some of you, I understand, hesitated to accompany the Mustaufi, fearing that your treatment and reception by us might not be such as he had promised you, and that some evil might befall you. You need never have any such fear when your safety has been assured on the word of a British Officer. The British do not say one thing and do another. You who have come in have been honourably treated, and after this durbar is over you are all at liberty to depart. I trust that when you leave Kabul you will carry away with you a more friendly feeling towards us than some of you have hitherto entertained, and that those of your party who are still holding aloof will be wise enough to follow the good example you have set them, and will accept our invitation and come to Kabul.

Mr. Griffin, the Chief Political Officer in Northern and Eastern Afghanistan, with whom you have already become acquainted, will now, on the part of the Government of India, answer the requests you have made.

Speech by the Chief Political Officer.

Sirdars, Khans, and Maliks of Kabul,—It has been my wish for some time past to meet you all in durbar and explain to you collectively and publicly, as I have already done privately, the intention of the British Government with regard to the settlement of Afghanistan. This is a favourable opportunity when replies have to be given to the requests of certain Chiefs and Maliks of the neighbourhood of Ghazni, who have been long hostile, but who have, at last, listened to the advice of Mustaufi Habibulla, whom General Sir F. Roberts had sent to reassure them, and have deputed many of their number to place their requests respectfully before the Government. It is to be regretted that the more important of the leaders have not come in person; when the Government promised a safe-conduct there was no reason, for even those who had been most opposed to it, to fear for their lives or liberty. The British Government bears no ill-will to those who have fought fairly against it, and those of the representatives who have come to Kabul are free to leave when they wish; and during their stay will be treated as friends and guests. But those Chiefs who have remained behind at Maidan must not think that their signatures on the paper of requests will be considered as equivalent to their presence; the more so as we know the reason that some of them have not come is that they have secretly abandoned the cause they profess to support, and have made promises to others. When you return to Maidan, ask General Ghulam Haidar and Muhammad Jan when they are going to desert you.

Maliks of Ghazni, Maidan, and Loghar, and Chiefs of the Ghilzai, Wardak, and other tribes in their neighbourhood, I have met you more than once in private interviews, and have discussed with you in a friendly way your requests, and I now only wish to say publicly, and for the information of the Sirdars and people of the city and neighbourhood of Kabul, whom it concerns as closely as it does you, what I have already said to you.

You have first asked that the former friendship between the Government of the Queen-Empress of Hindustan should be restored, that Ameer Yakub Khan should be released and reinstated, and that the British armies should retire from Afghanistan.

In reply, I would first remind you that the breach in mutual friendship was made by Ameer Shere Ali Khan. The British Government not only always desired, and still desires, friendship with Afghanistan, but will not appoint any one as Ameer who does not profess friendship, nor will allow him to continue Ameer unless he plainly shows himself the friend of the friends of the British Government and the enemy of its enemies.

For this reason the Viceroy has decided that Muhammad Yakub Khan shall not return to Afghanistan. You know whether he observed the promises that he made to the British Government. You know that he rewarded those who had opposed us in the first campaign; while those who had assisted us he turned out of their lands and appointments. You have told me privately that if Yakub be not allowed to return, you are willing to accept as Ameer any one whom the Government may choose to select. This expression of the wish of a large number of respectable Maliks will be, at the proper time, laid before His Excellency the Viceroy, together with that of others who may wish to support the candidature of Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan, Sirdar Hashim Khan, Sirdar Musa Khan, Sirdar Ayub Khan, or any other member of the ruling family who may be approved by a large number of the people. The Government has no intention of annexing Afghanistan, and will occupy no more of it than may be necessary for the safety of its own frontiers. But the province of Kandahar will not remain united with Kabul, but will be placed under the independent rule of a Barakzai prince. For the administration of those provinces that remain attached to Kabul, the Government is anxious to appoint an Ameer who shall be strong to govern his people and steadfast in his friendship to the British. And if only these qualifications be secured, the Government is willing and anxious to recognize the wish of the Afghan people and the tribal Chiefs, and to nominate the Ameer of their choice. But no decision can be given at present. You, who have assembled here, represent but a small part of the people, and it is necessary to ascertain the views and wishes of many others, Chiefs and Sirdars, who are absent from Kabul. But your votes in favour of Yakub Khan's immediate family will be remembered and considered if, until the decision of the Government be given, you absolutely abstain from all hostile action. Otherwise, you must not expect that the Government will consider him likely to be a friendly Ameer whose friends are its persistent enemies.

The armies of the Queen-Empress will withdraw from Afghanistan when the Government considers that the proper time has come. As they did not enter Afghanistan with your permission, so they will not withdraw at your request. When the country is again peaceful, and when a friendly Ameer has been selected, the Government has no wish to remain in Afghanistan. The army came to Kabul to inflict punishment for the murder of its Envoy in time of peace, which some of you have called a regretted accident, but which the British Government considers an atrocious crime, and it will remain until some satisfactory settlement can be made. You have been told that an army from Kandahar is now marching on Ghazni, while another from Bombay has taken its place at Kandahar. A third army is in Kuram, a fourth at Kabul, and a fifth at Jellalabad, the Khaibar and Peshawar.

The General has ordered a strong force to march from Kabul to-morrow towards Maidan to co-operate with the Kandahar army. If you are wise you will do everything to assist this force, which is not sent against you, nor will it molest you if only the conduct of the people is friendly. If, on the contrary, you listen to leaders who only deceive you for their own advantage, and commit and excite hostility against the Government, then punishment will quickly and certainly follow. The Khagiani tribes, three weeks ago, attacked a British post near Gundamak at night. They have since had to pay a fine of Rs. 10,000, and five of their towers have been blown up. The Hizarak people have been committing outrages on the road, and carrying off men and cattle. A large force has been sent by the General into Hizarak, and a fine of Rs. 15,000 has been imposed. The Government is quite willing to be friends with you, and to treat you as friends, but it is also resolved to be obeyed so long as its armies are in the country, and to punish severely any open opposition. You have a proverb that force and money are the only powers in Afghanistan. It is for you to choose which you wish. The Government intends to keep the sword for its enemies, and the money for its friends, and, if you are wise, you will count yourselves as our friends. Those people deceive you who preach jihad, and say that the English are the enemies of Islam. In India fifty millions of Muhammadans enjoy, under the Government of the Queen, greater liberty and happiness and security than in any country in the world; and it is the British Government which has many times, by great expenditure of men and treasure, guarded and preserved the Empire of the Sultan of Turkey against his enemies. The Government is the friend and protector of Islam, and not its destroyer.

As to your other requests for the appointment of a Muhammadan Agent at Kabul, and the grant of assistance in money and material to the new Ameer, I can only say that these requests have been made by you in ignorance, for they are matters which will be decided by the Government of India with the Chief whom they agree to appoint as Ameer. It is not fitting for small persons to discuss them. Of this only be assured, that he whom the Viceroy of India may select will be supported by the Government in every possible way so long as he shows friendly intentions towards it.

No. 13.

No. 93 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

Secret.

To the RIGHT HONOURABLE VISCOUNT CRANBROOK, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

My Lord,

Simla, 27th April 1880.

We have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of the Official Journal of the Southern Afghanistan Field Force for the week ending the 21st March 1880.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) LYTTON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" JOHN STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSTON.
" A. R. THOMPSON.
" A. FRASER.

Enclosure in No. 13.

MEMORANDUM, No. 132, dated Kandahar, 25th March 1880.

From Major C. B. EVAN SMITH, C.S.I., Political Officer, Kandahar Field Force, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

Has the honour to enclose copy of Official Journal from 15th to 21st instant, inclusive.

Official Journal, Head-quarters, Southern Afghanistan Field Force, Political Department. (Extract.)

Monday, 15th March.—In the afternoon the General received the principal Mullas and Kowamins of the city and surrounding villages in Durbar. They were twenty-nine in number, and had come in consequence of Sir Donald Stewart's late letter to the Sirdar, to inform him that they had all taken an oath on the Koran, to the effect that they would at once deliver up to justice any individual whom they might hear of that was an ill-wisher to the British Government, and intending to do mischief to the troops here in garrison. After the General had heard their statement, he informed them that he wished to say a few words to them, representing as they did the better educated and more sensible classes, and having, as he was aware, a considerable influence either for good or evil on their compatriots. He then briefly recapitulated the circumstances under which, and the reasons for which, the English had first entered Afghanistan, had a second time re-occupied it, and subsequently raised Sirdar Sher Ali Khan to govern in Kandahar. He informed them plainly that as long as Sirdar Sher Ali pursued the same loyal course towards the British Government that he had hitherto followed, he would be supported fully by the English. He pointed out that, in placing Sirdar Sher Ali Khan in power, a Chief of one of the best known families in Afghanistan, and in bestowing on him, as the Government had done, money, arms, guns and ammunition, the Government of India had afforded the most signal proof of their desire and intention to leave Afghanistan to be governed by the Afghans themselves, to abstain from any unnecessary interference whatever in the internal affairs of the country, and to render independent at the earliest possible date the Sirdar on whom the government of the Kandahar province had been bestowed, and who would certainly be assisted in rendering his rule stable and independent. There was no chance of Kandahar again falling under the authority of a supreme ruler in Kabul. Kandahar would for the future stand by itself, and the moment the Sirdar should inform Sir Donald Stewart that he considered his power sufficiently consolidated to take charge of the city, the General would be quite prepared to make it over to him.

Sir Donald Stewart said that he considered it necessary to make these remarks, as he believed that there was an erroneous impression abroad as to the future of the Kandahar State. The regular official notification of the decision and intentions of the Government would of course be made in the usual manner to the Sirdar at the fitting time, but the people might rest assured that the policy of Government was that now explained to them.

He then proceeded to inform the Mullahs that these remarks were necessary to elucidate what he intended to say to them with regard to the late fanatical and cowardly attacks on the lives of defenceless officers and men of the Kandahar Field Force. The audience were well aware that such attacks were contrary to the laws of all religions. There was no justification for them whatever in the Muhammadan religion, but, nevertheless, it could not be doubted that the miserable men who lost their lives in this shameful way were instigated and encouraged in their attempts by the direct action of the Mullahs, who made use of their influence in this disgraceful manner. Sir Donald Stewart pointed out the futility of these attempts, which, moreover, served no purpose; in no instance had the fanatics been successful in taking life, and in every case they had lost their own. The attempts were therefore foolish as well as criminal. He was aware that some of these attempts were due to the instigation of enemies of the Sirdar, who hoped that occurrences of this nature might embarrass the friendly relations at present existing between the Sirdar and the British Government. The people might rest assured that such would not be the case. He, Sir Donald Stewart, had accurate knowledge of what went on in the city, and in the assemblies, at which sedition was often talked and preached, but, knowing how much of this sedition was due to the desire of self-display, he had up to the present refrained from taking notice of it. He warned the Mullahs, however, that his patience would not always be so great. They were perfectly well aware of the advantages which had accrued to the inhabitants of Kandahar from the English occupation, and no one knew better than themselves how much they owed in the way of security to life and property, and absolute immunity from oppression, to the consideration and forbearance with which they had been treated. In return for this, however, the lives of defenceless and unsuspecting soldiers were continually being attempted by men who were incited thereto by fanatical teaching. Once for all, Sir Donald Stewart informed the Mullahs and Kowanins that he was determined that, if these attempts were persisted in, he would mark his sense of their character by measures that would be exceedingly unpleasant to the whole community, and that would ensure the severe punishment of all who were in any way connected with the wretched individuals who were made the tools of designing men not less guilty than themselves.

The entire assemblage listened to the remarks of General Stewart with profound attention. At the close, one of them acted as spokesman, and most emphatically denounced the fanatical ghazi attempts that had occurred, declaring they were acts contrary to the injunctions of the Prophet, and which were due to the teachings of ignorant men, who could not be classed as Mullahs, or expounders of religion. On behalf of those present, the speaker represented the deep sense of gratitude and acknowledgment felt by all for the policy which had been pursued towards the people of Kandahar by General Stewart, contrasting the quiet reigning here with the anarchy and fighting in the north; and he concluded by once more assuring Sir Donald Stewart that they would to the utmost of their power aid in the apprehension of all ill-wishers of the British Government, while they would one and all give security for the good behaviour of the talibs attending their respective mosques.

The General then dismissed the assemblage, informing them of his own approaching departure, and stating that the policy inaugurated by him under the orders of Government would certainly be continued by his successor as long as the people behaved with loyalty to the Sirdar and the Government.

. No. 14.

No. 104 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

The RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 4th May 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copies of telegrams from and to the Chief Political Officer at Kabul, regarding the correspondence between the British authorities at Kabul and Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan.

2. We also enclose copy of a letter* to Mr. Lepel Griffin, Chief Political Officer at

* No. 1491 E.P., dated 27th April 1880. Kabul, transmitting the views of the Government of India on the situation of affairs in Kabul, and conveying instructions for his guidance in his communications with the Sirdar.

We have, &c.,

(Signed)	LYTTON.
"	F. P. HAYNES.
"	JOHN STRACHEY.
"	E. B. JOHNSON.
"	A. R. THOMPSON.
"	A. FRASER.

Enclosure 1 in No. 14.

TELEGRAM, dated 22nd April 1880, from MR. LEPEL GRIFFIN, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla.

THE messenger, Sarwar Khan, whom I sent to Kunduz, returned last night. His lengthy statement will be sent by post. The letter of Sirdar Abdul Rahman in reply to mine is as follows—literal translation :—

Whereas at this happy time I have received the kind letter of the British officers, who called me to mind, wrote in a spirit of justice and friendship, to inquire what I wish in Afghanistan. My honoured friends, the servants of the great British Government, know well that throughout these 12 years of exile in the kingdom of the Emperor of Russia, night and day I have cherished the hope of return to my native land. When the late Amir Sher Ali Khan died, and there was no one to rule our tribe, I proposed to re-enter Afghanistan, but as it was not fated then, I turned to Tashkend. Consequently Amir Muhammad Yakub Khan, having come to terms and made peace with the British Government, was appointed Amir of Afghanistan; but since after he had left you he listened to the advice of every interested person and raised fools to power until two ignorant men directed the affairs of Afghanistan, which during the reign of my grandfather, who had 18 able sons, were so managed that it was bright like day. In consequence of that Afghanistan was disgraced before all States and ruined; now therefore that you seek to learn my hopes and wishes, they are these: as long as your empire and that of Russia exist, my countrymen, the tribes of Afghanistan, should live quietly in ease and peace, and that these two States should find us true and faithful; that we should have rest and peace between them, for my tribesmen are unable to struggle with empires, and are ruined by want of commerce. And we hope of your friendship that assistance and sympathy with the people of Afghanistan, you will permanently establish them under the honourable protection of the two Powers. This would redound to the credit of both, would give peace to Afghanistan, and quiet and comfort to God's people. This is my wish. For the rest, it is yours to decide.

Enclosure 2 in No. 14.

TELEGRAM, dated 23rd April 1880, from Mr. LEPEL GRIFFIN, Kabul, to FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla. (Extract.)

MUMAMMAD Sarwar Khan, our agent, left Kabul on 2nd and reached Kunduz on 10th; warmly received by Sirdar Abdul Rahman; gave letter and message.* Sirdar said he was delighted at message; desired nothing more than to be servant of Government. He has written to his friends not to oppose the English and ruin themselves; better days were in store for Afghanistan. After five days agent was given Sirdar's reply in presence of four confidential officers, and verbal message as follows:—

It is quite true that for three generations the English have systematically befriended Afghanistan, and that they have never done me any injury. I am anxious to know the nature of the friendship they now desire. Instead of sending agents I would much prefer, if invited, going to Charikar myself, accompanied by some 500 sowars, and there discuss matters with the English officers in person. If this is approved of, the two or three men, Wali Muhammad Khan and Hashim, now in power, should be set aside and opportunity afforded me to show what I can do in the interests of peace. For 12 years I have been a guest of the Russians, have received many favours from them. I should not like to have conditions imposed upon me which should discredit me with them, or make me appear ungrateful. If the English desire to place me in power they should arrange for the removal of my enemies and make me secure before withdrawing from the country. I shall ever try to be the friend of both powers, and desire nothing more than to be considered the friend of the English, and to secure for my country the royal immunity from foreign interference as is enjoyed by Persia. Sirdar said that he did not write first, because he had no reliable messenger; he shall continue at Kunduz till he receives reply; would come to Charikar in 20 days from messenger leaving Kabul. Sirdar, in answer to agent, said Russia had refused him permission to try his fortune in Afghanistan, and removed him to Tashkend. When telegraphic news reached of Yakub's deportation, General Kaufmann was at Orenberg. General's Secretary sent for him, told him that news, and gave him liberty to go to Turkestan. Sirdar took time to reflect three days after secretary urged him to go. He consented to receive loan of 5,000 Bokhara tillas, and present of 200 breech-loaders and ammunition. Sirdar has eaten Russian salt, and does not wish to quarrel with Russia, but if made Amir will live at peace. Left Tashkend with 100 followers, via Oratipa, Hissar, Kolab, crossing Oxus at Rustac. Sirdar has at Kunduz four infantry, two cavalry regiments, two batteries. Since he left, his family have been moved from Kokand to Tashkend, and his full allowances granted them.

General Roberts and I think and recommend as follows:—It is clear that Sirdar was sent by Russia, or that he does not want to quarrel with them. Nevertheless, he does not appear less eligible than when selected by Government, but more so. He is doubtless anxious to come to terms with English. An interview with him is essential.

* The letter was as follows:—

TO SIRDAR ABDUL RAHMAN KHAN, 1st April.

After compliments.—It has become known that you have entered Afghanistan, and consequently this letter is sent to you by a confidential messenger, in order that you may submit to the British officers at Kabul any representations that you may desire to make to the British Government with regard to your object in entering Afghanistan."

To Sarwar Khan, the bearer, full and explicit verbal instructions were given. He was directed to inform the Sirdar that the British Government having occupied Kabul, the capital of the Afghan Government, and he, a distinguished member of the late ruling family, having entered Turkistan and occupied places there by force of arms, it was essential for him to declare with what object he had come, and if actuated by friendly or hostile feelings towards the British Government. That the Sirdar's long residence, in Russia, and his notoriously close relations with that Power, might render him, to a certain extent, an object of suspicion, were it not that he had no quarrel with the British, who entertained no hostile feelings towards him. That the British Government were able to benefit him very largely in comparison with that of Russia; and that, if he followed the dictates of wisdom and self-interest, he would at once open a friendly correspondence with the British officers in Kabul. That his opportunity had now come; and that the British Government were disposed to treat him with every consideration, and to consider most favourably any representations that he might have to urge. That on receipt of the letter, he would, if he consulted his own interests, send a reply to the letter by the hand of a respectable and trusted agent, and, later, repair himself to Kabul, where he would be honourably received. The British Government had no intention of annexing the country, and only desired to see a strong and friendly chief established at Kabul; and consequently the present communication was made solely in his own interests, and not in those of the British Government.

It might be at Mootya, or Charikar, as proposed, but probably unnecessary. We would send two or three men of position, one being native official of government, to Sirdar, definitely offering him Amirship with the conditions regarding Kandahar, friendship, frontier, and foreign relations. If he accepts our proposal, to come to Kabul under safe conduct, and discuss all details. He will almost certainly come. The alternative of meeting at Charikar can be reserved, as possibly he will refuse to come to Kabul, or accept conditions without discussion.

Enclosure 3 in No. 14.

TELEGRAM, No. 1460 E.P., dated 25th April 1880.

From FOREIGN SECRETARY, Simla, to LEPEL GRIFFIN, Kabul.

YOUR telegrams, 22nd, 23rd, transmitting Abdul Rahman's letter with remarks and proposals are received, and instructions issue to you on Monday by letter and telegraph. Meanwhile suspend further proceedings and negotiations, informing Abdul Rahman, if necessary, that his letter is under consideration here.

Enclosure 4 in No. 14.

No. 1491 E.P., dated Simla, 27th April 1880, from A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to Government of India, Foreign Department, to LEPEL H. GRIFFIN, Esq., C.S.I., Chief Political Officer, Kabul.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that the Governor General has received and considered in Council your telegrams of the 22nd and 23rd instant, forwarding the translation of a letter received by you from Sirdar Abdul Rahman on the 21st instant, together with a summary of certain oral explanations which accompanied that letter, and a statement of the recommendations suggested by it to Lieutenant-General Sir F. Roberts and yourself.

2. In conveying to you its instructions on the subject of this important communication, the Government of India considers it expedient to recapitulate the principles on which it has hitherto been acting in Northern Afghanistan, and clearly to define the point of view from which it contemplates the present situation of affairs in that country.

3. The single object to which, as you are well aware, the Afghan policy of this Government has at all times been directed and limited, is the security of the north-west frontier of India. The Government of India has, however, no less invariably held and acted on the conviction that the security of this frontier is incompatible with the intrusion of any foreign influence into the great border State of Afghanistan. To exclude or eject such influence the Government of India has frequently subsidized, and otherwise assisted, the Amirs of Kabul. It has also, more than once, taken up arms against them. But it has never interfered, for any other purpose, in the affairs of their kingdom.

4. Regulating on this principle, and limiting to this object, the conduct of our relations with the rulers of Kabul, it was our long-continued endeavour to find in their friendship and their strength the requisite guarantees for the security of our own frontier. Failing in that endeavour, we were compelled to seek the attainment of the object to which our Afghan policy was, and is still, exclusively directed, by rendering the permanent security of our frontier as much as possible independent of such conditions.

5. This obligation was not accepted without reluctance. Not even when forced into hostilities by the late Amir Sher Ali Khan's espousal of a Russian alliance proposed by Russia in contemplation of a rupture with the British Government, did we relinquish our desire for the renewal of relations with a strong and friendly Afghan power; and, when the son of Sher Ali subsequently sought our alliance and protection, they were at once accorded to him on conditions of which His Highness professed to appreciate the generosity. The crime, however, which dissolved the Treaty of Gandamak, and the disclosures which followed that event, finally convinced the Government of India that the interests committed to its care could not but be gravely imperilled by further adhesion to a policy dependent for its fruition on the gratitude, the good faith, the assumed self-interest, or the personal character of any Afghan prince.

6. When, therefore, Her Majesty's troops re-entered Afghanistan in September last, it was with two well defined and plainly avowed objects. The first was to avenge the treacherous massacre of the British Mission at Kabul; the second was to maintain the safeguards sought through the Treaty of Gandamak, by providing for their maintenance guarantees of a more substantial and less precarious character.

7. These two objects have been attained—the first, by the capture of Kabul, and the punishment of the crime committed there; the second, by the severance of Kandahar from the Kabul power.

8. Satisfied with their attainment, the Government of India has no longer any motive or desire to enter into fresh treaty engagements with the rulers of Kabul. The arrangements and exchange of friendly assurances with the Amir Sher Ali, though supplemented on the part of the Government of India by subsidies and favours of various kinds, wholly failed to secure the object of them, which was nevertheless a thoroughly friendly one, and no less conducive to the security and advantage of the Afghan than to those of the British power. The treaty with Yakub Khan, which secured to him our friendship and material support, was equally ineffectual. Moreover, recent events and arrangements have fundamentally changed the situation to which our correspondence and engagements with the Amir of Afghanistan formerly applied. Our advanced frontier positions at Kandahar and Kurram have materially diminished the political importance of Kabul in relation to India; and although we shall always appreciate the friendship of its ruler, our relations with him are now of so little importance to the paramount objects of our policy that we no longer require to maintain British agents in any part of his dominions.

9. Our only reasons, therefore, for not immediately withdrawing our forces from Northern Afghanistan have hitherto been, first, the excited and unsettled condition of the country round Kabul, with the attitude of hostility assumed by some leaders of armed gatherings near Ghazni; and, secondly, the inability of the Kabul Sirdars to agree among themselves on the selection of a ruler strong enough to maintain order after our evacuation of the country.

10. The first named of these reasons has now ceased to exist. In a Minute, dated the 30th ultimo, the Viceroy and Governor General stated that “the Government is “anxious to withdraw as soon as possible the troops from Kabul and from all points “beyond those to be occupied under the Treaty of Gandamak, except Kandahar. In “order that this may be done, it is desirable to find a ruler for Kabul, which will be “separated from Kandahar. Steps” (continued His Excellency) “are being taken “for this purpose. Meanwhile it is essential that we should make such a display of “strength in Afghanistan as will show that we are masters of the situation, and will “overawe disaffection.” * * * “For this all that is necessary from the political “point of view is for General Stewart to march to Ghazni, break up any opposition “he may find there, or in the neighbourhood, and open up direct communication with “General Sir F. Roberts at Kabul.” The military operations thus defined have been accomplished by General Stewart's successful action before Ghazni.

11. With regard to the second reason mentioned for the retention of our troops in North Afghanistan, the appearance of Abdul Rahman as a candidate for the throne of Kabul, whose claim the Government of India has no cause to oppose, and who seems to be approved and likely to be supported by at least a majority of the population, affords fair ground for anticipating that our wishes in regard to the restoration, before our departure, of order in that part of the country will now be fulfilled.

12. The Governor General in Council has consequently decided that the evacuation of Kabul shall be effected not later than October next, and it is with special reference to this decision that the letter and message addressed to you by Sirdar Abdul Rahman have been carefully considered by His Excellency in Council.

13. What first claims notice in the consideration of that letter is the desire it expresses for the permanent establishment of Afghanistan with our assistance and sympathy under the joint protection of the British and Russian empires. This suggestion, which is more fully developed in the Sirdar's unwritten message, cannot be entertained or discussed.

14. As already stated, the primary object and declared determination of the Government of India have been the exclusion of foreign influence or interference from Afghanistan. This cardinal condition of amicable relations with Afghanistan has, at all times, and in all circumstances, been deemed essential for the permanent security of Her Majesty's Indian empire. As such, it has hitherto been firmly maintained by successive Governors General of India under the explicit instructions of Her Majesty's Government. Nor has it ever been ignored, or officially contested, by the Russian Government. That Government, on the contrary, has repeatedly, and under every recent change of circumstances in Afghanistan, renewed the assurances solemnly given to the British Government that "Russia considers Afghanistan as entirely beyond the sphere of her influence."

15. It is true that negotiations at one time passed between the two Governments with a view to the mutual recognition of certain territories as constituting a neutral zone between their respective spheres of legitimate influence and action, and that at one time it was proposed by Russia to treat Afghanistan itself as neutral territory. Those negotiations, however, having proved fruitless, the northern frontier of Afghanistan was finally determined by mutual agreement; and in 1876 the Russian Government formally reiterated its adherence to the conclusion that "while maintaining on either side the arrangement come to as regards the limits of Afghanistan, which is to remain outside the sphere of Russian action, the two Cabinets should regard as terminated the discussions relative to the intermediate zone, which promised no practical result."

16. The position of Afghanistan as defined and settled by these engagements was again distinctly affirmed, on behalf of the Queen's Government, by the Marquis of Salisbury in 1879, and the Government of India unreservedly maintains it in the fullest conviction of its essential necessity for the peaceable protection of Her Majesty's Indian dominions. It is therefore desirable that you should take occasion to inform Abdul Rahman that the relations of Afghanistan to the British and Russian empires are matters which the Government of India must decline to bring into discussion with the Sirdar. The Afghan States and tribes are too contiguous with India, whose north-western frontier they surround, for the Government of India ever willingly to accept partnership with any other Power in the exercise of its legitimate and recognized influence over those tribes and States.

17. The Governor General in Council is, nevertheless, most anxious that the Sirdar should not misunderstand the light in which his personal sentiments and obligations towards Russia are regarded by the Government of India. So long as the rulers of Kabul were amenable to its advice, this Government has never ceased to impress on them the international duty of scrupulously respecting all the recognized rights and interests of their Russian neighbour, refraining from every act calculated to afford the Russian authorities in Central Asia any just cause of umbrage or complaint. The intelligence and good sense which are conspicuous in the Sirdar's letter and messages to you will enable him to appreciate the difference between conduct regulated on these principles, and that which cost Sher Ali the loss of his throne. This Government does not desire, nor has it ever desired, to impose on any ruler of Kabul conditions incompatible with that behaviour which Russia, as a powerful and neighbouring empire, is entitled to expect from him; least of all can we desire to impose such conditions on a prince who has received hospitality and protection in Russian territory. I am therefore to observe that, in the natural repugnance expressed by Abdul Rahman to conditions which "might make him appear ungrateful" to those "whose salt he has eaten," the Governor General in Council recognizes a sentiment altogether honourable to the Sirdar, and perfectly consistent with the sincerity of his professed good will toward ourselves.

18. These observations will furnish you with a sufficient answer to the question asked by Abdul Rahman, as to the "nature of our friendship," and its "conditions." The frankness with which he has explained his position entitles him to receive from us a no less unreserved statement of our own. The Government of India cordially shares the wish expressed by Abdul Rahman that, between the British and Russian empires, his "tribes and countrymen may live quietly in ease and peace." We do not desire to place them in a position of unfriendliness towards a Power which is pledged to us to regard their country as "entirely beyond the sphere of its action." The injury to Afghan commerce caused by the present condition of Afghanistan, to which the Sirdar has alluded, is fully appreciated by the Government of India, and on the restoration of peace between the two countries the revival and development of trade intercourse need present no difficulty. As regards our own friendship, it will, if sincerely sought, be freely given, and fully continued so long as it is loyally reciprocated. But we attach to it no other condition. We have no concessions to ask or make; and the Sirdar will therefore perceive that there is really no matter for negotiation or bargain between him and us.

19. On this point your reply to Abdul Rahman cannot be too explicit. Previous to the Sirdar's arrival in Turkestan the hostility and treachery of those whose misconduct he admits and deplores had compelled the Government of India to make territorial arrangements of a material and permanent character for the better protection of our frontier. The maintenance of these arrangements is in no wise dependent on the assent or dissent, on the good will or ill will, of any Chief at Kabul. The character of them has been so fully explained by you to all the other Kabul Sirdars, that it is probably well known to Abdul Rahman. But, in order that our present intercourse and future relation with the Sirdar may be perfectly clear of doubt on a point affecting the position he aspires to fill, the Governor General in Council authorizes you, if necessary, to make him plainly understand that neither the districts assigned to us by the Treaty of Gandamak, nor any part of the province of Kandahar, will ever be restored to the Kabul power.

20. As regards this last-mentioned province, the Government of India has been authorized by that of Her Majesty to give to Sher Ali Khan, the present Wali of Kandahar, a distinct assurance that he will be not only recognized, but maintained, by the British Government as the ruler of that province. Sher Ali Khan is one of the native nobles of Kandahar. He is administering the province with ability, good sense, and complete loyalty to the British Government, which has promised him the support of a British garrison, so long as he requires such support. The Governor General in Council cannot doubt that Sirdar Abdul Rahman will readily recognize the obligation incumbent on the honour of the British Government to keep faith with all who, whether at Kandahar or elsewhere, have proved themselves active and loyal adherents. Yakub Khan forfeited our alliance, and with it his throne, by mistrusting the assurances we gave him, and falsifying those which he had given to us. If, misled by his example, Yakub Khan's successor attempts to injure or oppress the friends of the British Government, its power will again be put forth to protect or avenge them. Similarly, if the next Kabul ruler reintroduces into his Court or country foreign influences adverse to our own, the Government of India will again take such steps as it may deem expedient to deal with such a case. These contingencies, however, cannot occur, if the sentiments of Abdul Rahman are such as he represents them to be. Meanwhile, the territorial and administrative arrangements already completed by us for the permanent protection of our own interests are not susceptible of negotiation or discussion with Abdul Rahman or any other claimant to the throne of Kabul.

21. To the settlement of Herat, which is not included in these completed arrangements, the Governor General in Council cannot authorize you to make or invite any reference in your reply to Abdul Rahman. The settlement of the future administration of Herat has been undertaken by Her Majesty's Government, with whose present views in regard to this important question the Government of India is not yet acquainted.

22. Nor can our evacuation of Kabul constitute any subject for proposals in your correspondence with the Sirdar. This measure was determined on by the Government of India long before the appearance of Abdul Rahman as a candidate for the government of the country we are about to evacuate. It has not been caused by the hostility, and is not therefore conditional on the good will, of any Afghan power.

23. The Government of India is, however, very willing to carry out the evacuation of Kabul in the manner most conducive to the personal advantage of Abdul Rahman, whose interests we believe to be, more than those of any other Sirdar, in accordance with the general interests of the Afghan people. For this reason, it is desirable that you should inform Abdul Rahman of our intention to evacuate Kabul, and our desire to take that opportunity of unconditionally transferring to his authority the whole of the country from which our troops will be withdrawn. You are authorized to add that our military and political officers at Kabul will be empowered to facilitate any practical arrangement suggested by the Sirdar for promptly and peaceably effecting, in co-operation with him, the transfer thus contemplated on his behalf. Such arrangement must, however, be consistent with our obligations towards those who have served and aided the British Government during our occupation of those territories.

24. For this purpose, it appears to the Governor General in Council desirable that the Sirdar should lose no time in proceeding to Kabul, and there settling, in conference with General Stewart and yourself, such preliminary arrangements as may best promote the undisturbed establishment of his future government.

25. The Governor General in Council has, however, no desire to press this suggestion should it appear to the Sirdar that his presence at Kabul previous to the withdrawal of our troops, for the purpose of personal conference with the British authorities, might have the effect of weakening his popularity, or compromising his position in the eyes of his future subjects. The point is one which must be left entirely to the Sirdar's own judgment and inclination. But Abdul Rahman is doubtless aware that there are at present, in and around Kabul, personages not destitute of influence, who themselves aspire to the sovereignty he seeks, and that the family of Yakub Khan has still numerous personal adherents, who may possibly take advantage of the withdrawal of our troops to oppose the Sirdar's authority, if he is not personally present to assert it.

26. It should on both sides be remembered and understood that it is not the policy of this Government to impose upon the Afghan people an unpopular ruler, or to interfere uninvited in the administration of a friendly one. If Abdul Rahman proves able and disposed to conciliate the confidence of his countrymen, without forfeiting the good understanding which he seeks with us, he will assuredly find his best support in our political appreciation of that fact. Our reason for unconditionally transferring to him the government of the country from which our forces will, in any case, be withdrawn a few months hence, is that, on the whole, he appears to be the Chief best able to restore order in that country, and also best entitled to undertake such a task. In his performance of it he will receive, if he requires it, our assistance. But we neither need, nor wish, to hamper, by preliminary stipulations or provisoes, his independent exercise of a sovereignty which he declares himself anxious to maintain on a footing of peace and friendship with the British Government.

27. The present statement of the views and intentions of His Excellency the Governor General in Council respecting Abdul Rahman will enable you to represent them with adequate accuracy in your reply to the Sirdar's friendly overtures; and it will now be your duty to convey to Abdul Rahman, without any avoidable delay, the answer of the Government of India to the letter and message received from him. His Excellency feels assured that you will give full expression to the spirit of candour and good will in which these communications have been received and are reciprocated. But I am to impress on your attention the importance of avoiding any expression which might appear to suggest or admit matter for negotiation or discussion in reference to the relative positions of the Sirdar and the Government of India.

28. In conclusion, I am to request that on receipt of this letter you will be so good as to lose no time in submitting its contents to General Sir Donald Stewart, should he then have reached Kabul. In any case, you will, of course, communicate them to General Roberts, and act upon them in consultation with the chief military authority on the spot.

No. 14A.

No. 10 S.P.C., dated Kabul, May 8, 1880. (Extract.)

From LEPEL GRIFFIN, Esq., Chief Political Officer, North and East Afghanistan, to Lieutenant-General Sir D. STEWART, K.C.B., Commanding Her Majesty's Forces in Afghanistan.

The only other point which remains for decision is the time for evacuating the country. This is governed by two considerations; firstly, how our occupation of Kabul will affect the new Amir; and secondly, whether the supplies available for the army will allow a prolonged occupation.

It will probably, on political grounds, be advisable to withdraw from the capital as soon after the installation of the new Amir as possible. The presence of British troops will not add to the security or popularity of the Chief, when he has once established himself. But whether military exigencies will permit our armies to withdraw to Ali Kheyl, Shalozan, Gandamak, and the slopes of the Sufeid Koh in the Shinwari and Khugiani country, I am unable to say. Their stay or march must in a great measure depend on the supplies procurable in Kabul. My information, which is gathered from many reliable sources, leads me to doubt whether it will be possible to support so large a force as is now in the neighbourhood of Kabul, without importation from India. The Kabul, Logar, Maidan, and Wardak villages are those alone on which we can rely, and even here armed bands of insurgents only too often close the roads the moment our troops are withdrawn. These valleys although fertile are of but small area ; and many of the villages, according to the revenue returns, only produce sufficient grain for their own consumption. The season, moreover, is not a favourable one ; and while the outturn will be fair on irrigated lands, those dependent on rainfall will have a poor crop. These valleys have already been drained of their food stocks, and Kohistan, which has not yet been visited by our troops, has still been harried by bands of Ghazis, who have lived at free quarters in the villages. Nor is Kohistan a grain country. Its chief produce is from its vineyards, orchards, and gardens, and it pays its revenue in cash, and not in grain.

The question of supplies, as regulating the date of the evacuation of Kabul, is one which is engaging the attention of the military authorities, but its bearing on the political situation is so close that it could not with propriety be omitted from the present memorandum.

No. 15.

No. 23.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE MOST HONOURABLE THE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

India Office, London, 21st May 1880.

HER Majesty's Government have had under their most anxious consideration the state of affairs in Afghanistan resulting from the war entered upon in the autumn of 1878, the Treaty of Gandamak of 1879, the murder of the British Envoy at Kabul, and the military operations which were renewed with the object of punishing that outrage.

2. According to the latest information at my disposal, the Kabul, Kandahar, and Kurram forces absorb fully 55,000 men, of whom about 16,000 are Europeans. This is exclusive of about 13,500 men on the Punjab frontier, and is also exclusive of a force of more than 14,000 men in Sind and in the Bengal Presidency, who are held in readiness for service in Afghanistan.

3. It is evident that the employment of such a large portion of the Army of India beyond our frontier, while a further considerable force is held in readiness for service, entails a heavy financial burthen on the resources of India, and that the prolonged employment of our troops under such conditions must, especially in the case of the Native regiments, before long very seriously interfere with their efficiency.

4. Already, I have been informed by your Excellency's predecessor that it is most difficult to obtain recruits in India, a difficulty which arises in the main from the extreme dislike of the Native soldier to prolonged service in Afghanistan, and although costly and inconvenient measures have been adopted in order to stimulate enlistment, I am not yet informed that these measures have been attended with success. The continued stoppage of the usual furlough given to the Native troops serving in Afghanistan and the possible extension of a similar deprivation to those in British India itself, in consequence of the heavy duties entailed on them in the absence of a large part of the army, cannot but have a bad effect, and I conceive that, with a force of some 76 Native regiments on or beyond our frontier, it will be very difficult to devise any scheme for their relief.

5. Although our armies have encountered during the last campaign some severe opposition, yet, owing to the conspicuous gallantry and devotion of Her Majesty's troops, both European and Native, on all occasions, the superiority of our arms has been unquestionably established and maintained. Nevertheless, the result, even from a military point of view, is far from satisfactory.

6. The Army in Afghanistan holds positions at Kabul and in its neighbourhood, at Kandahar, with an outpost at Kelat-i-Ghilzai, and in the Kurram valley, besides guarding the lines of communication between these places and our frontier. I trust that these lines of communication are now secure from any serious danger, but, up to a recent date, they have not been exempt from annoyance and some loss of life on all three routes ; while beyond the positions actually occupied by our troops we have for the most part established no control. The Government which previously existed has been destroyed, and no authority exists in the country except that of independent Chiefs over the various tribes. No security can, therefore, be felt that a renewed combination of these tribes against us may not recur at any moment, and that we may not be again compelled to defend positions which we hold.

7. To attempt to occupy the whole country and to reduce it to submission and order would probably require a much larger force even than that which we have now in Afghanistan, and such order as might even then be established would have no prospect of permanence, beyond the period of our occupation. It becomes necessary, therefore, to consider what progress has yet been made towards the conclusion of arrangements which offer any hope of re-establishing a settled Government and which may enable us to withdraw from the country.

8. On referring to the correspondence which has passed between the Government of India and my predecessor, I find that in a Despatch, dated 7th January last, No. 3, Lord Lytton's Government explained as fully, I presume, as was then possible the policy which it was at that time desired to adopt. Its main features were—(1) avoidance of territorial annexation or further assumption by the Indian Government of administrative responsibilities in respect of Afghanistan, and (2) acceptance of the "disintegration of the kingdom of the late Amir Shere Ali Khan as a basis for the political reconstitution of the country." In the opinion of Lord Lytton's Government events, on the one hand, had shown the sufficiency of the military frontier secured by the Treaty of Gandamak, and, on the other hand, had demonstrated that the reconstruction of the Afghan kingdom under a single ruler was not practically possible, even were it politically desirable. They accordingly contemplated a provisional occupation of Herat and Seistan by Persia; the establishment of the province of Kandahar as a separate State under an hereditary ruler selected from among the representatives of the old governing families, to be supported by a British garrison at or near the capital; and a similar arrangement in regard to Kabul to which the Oxus provinces might remain, under certain conditions, nominally subject.

9. But while such were the views entertained by the Government of India in January last, it does not appear that, except in the case of Kandahar, any substantial approach to a definitive settlement in accordance with them has been made since that date. The negotiations which were in progress with Persia in reference to Herat and Seistan led to no result, and have been suspended. At Kabul, Sirdar Wali Mahomed has been placed in charge of the city and adjacent districts, but, by general consent, he would be wholly powerless to assert his authority even in the capital without the support of a British garrison, while no other of the Sirdars now on the spot offers better promises of success as an independent ruler, and the result of communications which have been opened with Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan, at present in Afghan Turkestan, is quite uncertain.

10. Turning to the measures which have been actually adopted in reference to Kandahar, Her Majesty's Government find that the Sirdar Sher Ali Khan has been informed in a letter from the late Viceroy, under date the 13th March, which was formally presented to him on the 11th instant, in the presence of a large assemblage, that the Queen has been pleased to recognize him as independent ruler of the province, according to limits to be hereafter defined, but that, for the consolidation of his power and for the proper guardianship of the frontiers of Her Majesty's empire, it is necessary that a force of British troops should remain in a cantonment at or near the city of Kandahar. It appears also, from the Secret Letter of the Government of your Excellency's predecessor, No. 90, dated the 7th April last, that the Sirdar has expressed his readiness to accept the position proposed to him, and that he has been assured that aid in money and material will be freely afforded to him if it should be required.

11. Thus it appears that, as the result of two successful campaigns, of the employment of an enormous force, and of the expenditure of large sums of money, all that has yet been accomplished has been the disintegration of the State which it was desired to see strong, friendly, and independent, the assumption of fresh and unwelcome liabilities in regard to one of its provinces; and a condition of anarchy throughout the remainder of the country.

12. I proceed to consider the question how far it is necessary to acquiesce in the continuance of this position of affairs. The first object which Her Majesty's Government desires to accomplish is the speedy withdrawal of the greater part of the troops now employed in Afghanistan, and the ultimate withdrawal of the whole from positions beyond our own frontier. But they also desire, if it be still possible, to see the restoration on our north-western frontier of a friendly State capable of maintaining its own independence, and of administering its own affairs without the military support of the British Government. The engagements which have been contracted in the name of the Queen with Sher Ali Khan, or with any other Afghan Chief, must of course be scrupulously respected, and it is essential that, as a preliminary to any change of policy, your Excellency in Council should satisfy yourself of the exact nature of those engagements, and how far they preclude the substitution of some other arrangement if thought desirable.

13. With regard to the measures which have been taken at Kandahar, I find that so recently as the 16th February last Sher Ali expressed his willingness, if not his desire, to retire on a pension from the Indian Government; and, although he has since accepted the proposed arrangements, there is nothing on record to prove that his wishes in this respect are changed. Again, the boundaries of the State are not even approximately defined in Sir D. Stewart's letter of the 16th February, and it does not appear that any communication on the subject has since been made to Sher Ali. The location of the British force to be maintained at Kandahar has not been decided, and upon this point an important difference of opinion exists between Sir D. Stewart and Sher Ali, the General considering that the troops should be at least five miles from the city, whilst the Sirdar wishes that on no account should they be removed to any distance. Moreover, the amount of the subsidy to be paid for the support of the garrison has not been fixed, and Sher Ali has expressed doubts whether he can maintain himself if such subsidy be insisted on.

14. It is possible that a further discussion of the points alluded to in the preceding paragraph may afford an opening for reconsideration of the whole question, if it is thought desirable. The papers, moreover, contain various indications that the Sirdar distrusts his ability to maintain his position at all except by our direct military support. How far the terms of the late Viceroy's letter, and of the assurances subsequently given, constitute a pledge of such support which could not now be withdrawn without breach of faith, is a question upon which it will be for your Excellency in Council to satisfy yourself as soon as possible.

15. With regard to Kabul, the invitation which has been addressed to Abdul Rahman appears to be of a vague character, and no engagements can yet have been entered into with him which practically commit the British Government to his support. In this quarter, therefore, as I have already observed, Her Majesty's Government is free to adopt whatever line of policy may ultimately be deemed best suited to attain the objects which the Government of India have professedly had in view, namely, the restoration of order in Afghanistan, and the peace and security of the British frontier.

16. The withdrawal of the troops cannot, under any circumstances, be immediate, and may probably, upon sanitary grounds alone, require to be postponed until the month of November. The experience of last year has shown the suffering to which an army is liable in traversing the passes at an unfavourable season, and very strong reasons would be required to justify the exposure to heat and epidemic disease of troops who have already been engaged for a lengthened period in service of a trying and difficult character.

17. Her Majesty's Government, moreover, fully recognize that a too hasty withdrawal, either from Kabul or Kandahar, would probably lead to a renewal of disturbances and to prolonged civil war. For the disastrous consequences to the Afghan people the British Government could not be held altogether free from responsibility, while protracted anarchy in Afghanistan would probably cause uneasiness and disquiet in our own dominions, and in the States of our Native feudatories and allies, which it is essential to avoid. An indispensable preliminary, also, to withdrawal, is the dispersion of any considerable hostile forces in the field which might attack and harass the troops on their march. It would not be consistent with the honour of the British arms, that Her Majesty's forces on their return to India should be exposed to insult, or that the least ground should be afforded either to the Afghans or the people of British India to regard the movement as otherwise than voluntary, and as having been decided on as a consequence of the cessation of all serious opposition. It will further be necessary to take every precaution that the tribes and Chiefs who have assisted us shall not be exposed to injury in consequence of their friendly conduct.

18. Subject, however, to the foregoing considerations, the desire of Her Majesty's Government is, as I have already stated, that Afghan territory should be evacuated whenever it appears possible to entertain the hope that the prospect of a stable Government has been secured. The interval which must elapse before the withdrawal of our troops can be commenced will enable your Excellency in Council to form a judgment and to report fully to Her Majesty's Government as to the manner in which this object may best be attained.

19. The arguments in favour of the subdivision of the Afghan kingdom appear to be twofold. It is, in the first place, held to be impossible to find any Chief sufficiently strong to rule the whole country, but upon this point the information in my possession does not enable me to form a confident opinion.

20. The second argument is of a different kind. In the opinion of those who have been most in favour of a policy of active interference in Afghanistan, it is on the line of Quetta, Kandahar, and Herat, that it is most necessary that our strategic position should be secured. There are few who apprehend any danger or attach much importance to the line of approach to India which lies through Kabul and the Khyber Pass. It was therefore with the Amir of Afghanistan in his capacity of Ruler of Kandahar and of Southern and Western Afghanistan that it has been thought necessary to attempt to improve our relations; and whatever importance may in future be attached by the Government of India to the political condition of that territory, it is thought that it may be better that we should have to deal with the ruler of it alone, and not necessarily be involved in interference with the internal affairs of Central, Northern, and Eastern Afghanistan. Should the result of the consideration which your Excellency in Council will give to the question induce you to regard as sound the view above set forth, it might, perhaps, be feasible to effect an earlier retirement from Kabul and the neighbouring district than from Western Afghanistan. In such a case, assuming the communications which have been addressed to Abdul Rahman to be responded to by him in a satisfactory manner, the object would be to establish that Sirdar at Kabul with as little direct assistance from Her Majesty's agents or troops as possible, and to give him to understand that he must rely on his own resources.

21. It would, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government be undesirable to embarrass him, and to commit ourselves to the possible necessity of further interference, by insisting on his receiving a British Resident. On the other hand a Native envoy would probably be of assistance to him in maintaining his authority, and would supply the Indian Government with all necessary information.

22. But although these arguments may be urged in favour of the establishment of separate kingdoms of Kabul and Kandahar, considerations in my opinion of not less weight point to a different conclusion. It is the strong opinion of experienced men that a permanent peace cannot be established in Afghanistan under such an arrangement. It is argued that, from the character of its population, the fertility of its soil, and its military position, Kandahar is the most important province of the country, that without it no strong and independent kingdom of Afghanistan can exist, and that no ruler of Kabul will acquiesce in its exclusion from his dominions. Sirdar Sher Ali is aware of this, and also that he cannot by himself hold his province against the warlike tribes on his frontier. It must, therefore, be regarded as almost certain that a policy of separation will be found to involve the necessity of affording permanent military support to the ruler of Kandahar, a liability to which Her Majesty's Government would entertain the greatest objection.

23. In the event of it appearing compatible with engagements which have been entered into, and desirable from the point of view of policy, to revert to the idea of the reconstruction of the kingdom of Afghanistan as a whole, and should the negotiations with Abdul Rahman fail to lead to any satisfactory result, it may become necessary for your Excellency carefully to reconsider the position of Yakub Khan, and the facts which have been ascertained with regard to his conduct in Kabul in September last. I am aware that your Excellency's predecessor held a strong opinion that his treachery or incapacity had been so conclusively proved that his restoration had become impossible, and I am far from asserting that this may not be the case. I am also aware that the Government of your Excellency's predecessor had formally decided that the abdication of Yakub Khan is to be treated as irrevocable, that this decision has been communicated to the Government at home, and has been approved, and I understand that it has been announced at Kabul that his return would never be permitted.

24. These circumstances undoubtedly constitute grave, and, possibly, insuperable obstacles to the acceptance of Yakub Khan as a candidate for the throne of Afghanistan; but he appears to have a strong party in the country, and if it should be found that, as the heir of the late ruler, he would command more support than any other candidate, and that there is no conclusive proof against him of complicity in the murder of Sir L. Cavagnari and his escort, I am of opinion that his claims, or those of his son, Musa Khan, should not be held to be absolutely excluded.

25. It is probable that, in the negotiations between your Excellency's Govern-

* "The Viceroy replied that the British Government did not share the Amir's apprehensions, but that, as already mentioned in the previous conversation, it would be the duty of the Amir, in case of any actual or threatened aggression, to refer the question to that Government, who would endeavour by negotiation and by every means in their power to settle the matter and avert hostilities. It was not intended, by insisting on such previous reference, to restrict or interfere with the power of the Amir as an independent ruler to take such steps as might be necessary to repel any aggression on his territories, but such reference was a preliminary and essential condition of the British Government assisting him. In such event, should their endeavours to bring about an amicable settlement prove fruitless, the British Government were prepared to assure the Amir that they would afford him assistance in the shape of arms and money, and would also, in case of necessity, aid him with troops. The British Government held itself perfectly free to decide as to the occasion when such assistance should be rendered, and also as to its nature and extent; moreover, the assistance would be conditional upon the Amir himself abstaining from aggression, and on his unreserved acceptance of the advice of the British Government in regard to his external relations."

ment and the candidate who may be accepted as the ruler of Kabul, your Excellency will be asked how far you are prepared to give assurances of support against external attack, such as were so anxiously desired by the late Amir Shere Ali. Her Majesty's Government are prepared to renew the assurances which were offered in 1873 by Lord Northbrook to the Amir, as quoted in the margin,* to the effect that, upon certain conditions, he might rely on the support of the British Government against unprovoked aggression; but they are unable in any degree to extend them, or to assume undefined liabilities in regard to the foreign policy of a Government the character of which must necessarily be at present so uncertain.

26. The future of Herat presents perhaps greater difficulty than any other part of the Afghan question. The arrangement proposed with Persia, as I have already stated, has been suspended, and the negotiations will probably not be renewed. The most desirable solution would undoubtedly be that the city and dependent territory should continue to form part of an united kingdom of Afghanistan. Indeed, the position of Herat constitutes one of the most serious objections to the disintegration of Afghanistan. It would be difficult for the ruler of either Kandahar or Kabul, as detached provinces, to establish his authority over it, and, in the event of an independent Sirdar assuming power at Herat, it would be practically almost impossible for the British Government to exercise any control or influence over his policy.

27. It will be necessary for your Excellency to consider carefully with your military advisers the expediency of maintaining the advanced military positions on the North-West frontier which have been acquired by the Treaty of Gandamak. The necessity of retaining the posts in the district of Pishin will be materially affected by the policy which may be decided on with reference to Kandahar, and it is probable that, for the present at all events, the maintenance of them will be desirable; but the value of the positions now held in the Kurram and Khyber districts appears to be open to the greatest doubt. A large force is now locked up in the Kurram valley with little or no military advantage, and the military occupation of the Khyber pass can probably not be permanently maintained except by the employment of a considerable force, at much risk to the health and efficiency of the troops and with little compensating profit. It appears to Her Majesty's Government that the question of the permanent tenure of these positions must be determined mainly upon military considerations, and that your decision should not be affected by announcements made under different circumstances upon the termination of the campaign last spring, or by the provisions of the Treaty of Gandamak, with regard to the rectification of the frontier.

28. I have not attempted in the preceding observations to define for the guidance of your Excellency in Council a fixed policy which would admit of no modification. The position of affairs in Afghanistan is still involved in so much uncertainty and obscurity that Her Majesty's Government can as yet do little more than commit them to the judgment of your Excellency in Council, in the full confidence that your Excellency is generally acquainted with, and concurs in, the policy which they desire to pursue, with a view to the restoration of peace, the relief of the present heavy strain upon the resources of India, and the permanent security of the frontier.

I have, &c.,
(Signed) HARTINGTON.

No. 16.

No. 131 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 15th June 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of the Diaries of the Resident, Southern Afghanistan, for the period from the 8th to 21st May 1880.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) RİPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" A. CLARKE.
" J. STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSON.
" RIVERS THOMPSON.
" J. GIBBS.

Enclosure in No. 16.

MEMORANDUM, No. 204, dated Kandahar, 19th May 1880.

From Lieutenant-Colonel O. B. C. ST. JOHN, C.B., C.S.I., Political Resident, Southern Afghanistan, to A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department.

HAS the honour to forward copy of Diary of the Kandahar Residency from the 8th to the 14th May 1880. Extract :—

May 11th.—This morning at 7.30 the Viceroy's letter and gifts were formally presented to the Wali; Lieutenant-General Primrose, commanding the Kandahar force, was kind enough to be present with his staff. Brigadier-General Brooke, the heads of the different departments, and the Officer commanding the citadel, were also present by invitation. The limited space in the Wali's house prevented a larger party being asked. A guard of honour of the 66th Regiment, under Captain McMath, with the band and the regimental colours, were drawn up in the courtyard, and half a battery of artillery in the square in front of the citadel. In the Wali's house we found a numerous assemblage, consisting of his brothers, Sirdars Hussain Khan and Nur Muhammad Khan, his young sons and nephews, the kazi and principal mullas, the leading merchants, a large number of tribal Chiefs and maliks, and others. After tea had been handed round, I addressed the Wali in Persian, as follows :—

" His Excellency the Viceroy has ordered me to deliver to your Highness this letter in answer to that sent to His Excellency by my hand. He has also desired me to request your acceptance of these gifts as a token of the great regard and esteem he has for your Highness."

The Wali expressed his profound gratitude, and asked that Mirza Hasan Ali Khan might read the translation of the letter aloud. The reading of the letter was interrupted and followed by many exclamations of approval, particularly by the mullas. I then asked the Wali's permission to say a few words to those present, and on his begging me to do so, spoke as follows, in

Persian :—

" Ulema, Sirdars, Khans, and others here present, you have seen by the letter which has just been read what great kindness the British Government, which all over the world is the support of Islam, has extended to the people of Kandahar and the Durani nation. You have also seen how peace and prosperity have been brought by us to Kandahar, and how different is its condition now from what it was two years ago. In order that this condition of peace and prosperity may continue, and that it may not return to its former state of poverty and wretchedness, the Government of England has decided to restore it to its ancient independence under the most worthy and capable descendant of its former Governors, the Sirdars of Kandahar, whose rule only ceased 25 years ago. Under the just Government of Wali Sher Ali Khan, and under the protection of England, Kandahar will, if it pleases God, remain for ever free from foreign oppression, and will rise to such a height of wealth and prosperity that will be the envy of the whole of Islam."

The Wali made a short speech in reply, expressive of his own unworthiness and his gratitude to the English Government. The Viceroy's presents were then brought forward and uncovered. The first, consisting of a sword mounted on blue velvet and silver, with a heavy gold embroidered belt, was buckled round the Wali's waist by General Primrose, on which His Highness said that he trusted he might have an opportunity of showing his readiness to draw it in the cause of the British Government. I then placed a diamond-studded repeater watch and gold chain round His Highness' neck; and presented him with the rest of the gifts, consisting of a large silver salver, a silver ewer and basin, a clock, and several pieces of silk and velvet. The guard of honour then presented arms, and a salute of 21 guns was fired by the artillery. His Highness the Wali then received the congratulations of all present; and the kazi and mullas offered a prayer, in Pushtu, expressive of thanks to God, and exhortation to the Wali to govern justly. To this he replied in the same language, exhorting them also to do their duty in keeping the people in the right way. Sweetmeats were then handed round, and we took our leave. Intelligence reached me the next morning that, after leaving the assembly, the Wali retired into his Andarum, where he took off his dress of ceremony, and, after placing a black rag (expressive of humility) on his head, offered up open prayers to God for having elevated him to so exalted a position, vowing at the same time to be faithful to the British Government, which had so honoured him. This produced an outburst of wrath from his niece, daughter of Khushdil Khan, his eldest brother, and from one of Mihrdil Khan's (his father's) widows, who abused him for joining the infidels, and for daring to compare himself with his ancestors. The Wali's favourite wife (a daughter of Sirdar Sultan Muhammad Khan, Tallai) took his part, and there was a violent quarrel.

No. 17.

No. 134 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 15th June 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter from His Highness Wali Sher Ali Khan, of Kandahar, to the Viceroy, in answer to the Earl of Lytton's letter to him, dated 13th March, which was delivered by Colonel St. John on the 11th May 1880.

We have, &c.,
 (Signed) RIPON.
 " F. P. HAINES.
 " A. CLARKE.
 " J. STRACHEY.
 " E. B. JOHNSON.
 " RIVERS THOMPSON.
 " J. GIBBS.

Enclosure 1 in No. 17.

No. 208, dated Kandahar, 20th May 1880.

From Lieutenant-Colonel O. ST. JOHN, R.E., Resident, Southern Afghanistan, to
A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India Foreign Department.

I HAVE the honour to forward herewith a letter from His Highness Wali Sher Ali Khan to His Excellency the Viceroy in answer to that delivered by me to His Highness on the 11th instant.

Enclosure 2 in No. 17.

TRANSLATION of a LETTER from SIRDAR SHER ALI KHAN, Wali of Kandahar, to HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY, dated 9th Jamadi-us-Sani (19th May 1880).

After compliments.—I beg to represent that your Excellency's very kind letter, together with the honours and presents which your Excellency was most graciously pleased to send, has reached me and caused me much pleasure; that on Friday, the 1st Jamadi-us-Sani (11th May 1880), I was invested with the honours which your Excellency had kindly sent me by my kind friend Colonel St. John. Both he and General Primrose have treated me with every mark of honour and respect, and the contents of your Excellency's letter afforded me the greatest joy and delight.

I feel extremely thankful to Her Imperial Majesty the Queen of England and the Empress of India for Her Majesty's unbounded favour in having recognized me (the sincere well-wisher of Her Majesty's Government) as the absolute Governor and the independent ruler (Wali) of the principality of Kandahar and its dependencies. For this favour of Her Majesty's illustrious Government I can make no return, but beg to express my most sincere gratitude to Her Majesty.

God willing, so long as I live, I shall not fail to fulfil, as far as lies in my power, the requirements of sincere friendship and devotion, inasmuch as Her Imperial Majesty has been so kind as not to withhold from me (the worthless one) anything which is likely to add to my strength or to put my affairs in order.

I am exceedingly glad to learn that a British force will remain in Kandahar for the security and protection of the frontier of Her Majesty's dominions, as the presence of troops here will ensure safety to the frontier. But in reality all the hardships of the journey, &c., to which the British troops are exposed, are for the sake of protecting my country and strengthening my position. With regard to the point that a certain quantity of the Government share in the grain produce of the country should be supplied to the British troops for provisions, I beg to state that this whole country, with all its resources, is the property and at the disposal of the British Government. Whether there be any excess of grain beyond my own wants or not, I will not fail to provide the fixed quantity for the imperial troops in the same way as I supplied to them what they required last year; a fact of which General Stewart and Colonel St. John are aware. Please God, I will endeavour to act in future as I have acted in the past. I am also exceedingly pleased to learn that a British officer of rank will be located here for the purpose of conveying the friendly communications and wishes of the British Government. I hope that, by the grace of God and the good will and kindness of Her Imperial Majesty the Queen-Empress, all the affairs of this country will be properly arranged and will improve greatly, the interests of this State being identical with those of the British Government. With respect to the extension of the railway to Kandahar, to which your Excellency was pleased to allude, I beg to say that the construction of railways in every country has been the cause of its advancement, as the people derive a great many advantages from them. In fact, there would be nothing so beneficial as the construction of a railway to Kandahar, as it will afford every facility for traffic, &c. I am exceedingly pleased to hear of this proposal. Please God, the good wishes and favours of the British Government towards myself and the people of this country will continue for ever. I feel highly indebted and thankful to all the British officers who were here before, as well as to those who are here at present, especially to Colonel St. John, who pays great attention to me, and is a well wisher of his own Government and a very kind friend of mine.

Usual ending.

No. 18.

No. 164 of 1880.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.
FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.To the RIGHT HON. THE MARQUIS OF HARTINGTON, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

MY LORD MARQUIS,

Simla, 20th July 1880.

WE have the honour to forward, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, copy of a letter* this day addressed to Lieutenant-General Sir D. M. Stewart, Kabul, conveying to him instructions for concluding the political arrangements preliminary to the withdrawal of the British forces from Kabul.

* No. 2431 E. P.

We have, &c.,
(Signed) RIPON.
" F. P. HAINES.
" JOHN STRACHEY.
" E. B. JOHNSON.
" WHITLEY STOKES.
" JAMES GIBBS.
" C. U. AITCHISON.

Enclosure 1 in No. 18.

No. 2431 E. P.

From A. C. LYALL, Esq., C.B., Secretary to the Government of India, to Lieutenant-General Sir D. M. STEWART, K.C.B., Commanding Forces, Northern and Eastern Afghanistan.

Foreign Department (Political).

SIR,

Simla, 20th July 1880.

THE latest reports from Kabul of the movements of Sirdar Abdul Rahman Khan show that he has now arrived in Kohistan, and that he may be expected very shortly to proceed towards Kabul. So far as his wishes and intentions can be judged from his recent actions and letters, there is fair ground for supposing that he has fully apprehended the nature and objects of the invitation sent to him in April last, and that his inclinations, as well as his needs and interests, are bringing him toward an arrangement with the British Government. It has, therefore, become expedient that you and Mr. Griffin should be furnished with instructions empowering you to conclude the political arrangements which must precede your departure from Kabul, since the evacuation of the city by our troops cannot, in any event, be much longer delayed.

2. In their correspondence with Abdul Rahman, the Government of India have throughout held steadily to two cardinal points. In the first place, it has been declared from the beginning, and throughout maintained, that our measures for withdrawing our troops from Northern Afghanistan are in no essential degree dependent upon the result of our correspondence with the Sirdar. In the instructions transmitted by my letter of the 27th April, regarding the terms of our communications with Abdul Rahman, it was laid down that our evacuation of Kabul cannot constitute any subject for proposals in Mr. Griffin's correspondence with the Sirdar. Nevertheless, since the Government were willing to carry out this evacuation in the manner most conducive to Abdul Rahman's interests, Mr. Griffin was directed to inform the Sirdar of our intention to quit the place, and of our desire, in the interests of order and the restoration of tranquillity to the country, to transfer the government to him. In my letter of the 20th May to Mr. Griffin the same policy was adhered to, and it was said that we could not materially alter our plans for evacuation upon considerations affecting a new Amir. On the 15th May, also, I telegraphed to Mr. Griffin that he should bear steadily in mind that our policy of withdrawing from Kabul is in no way dependent on establishing a friendly Amir, or on an adjustment of friendly relations, however desirable, with any Kabul ruler. The early retirement of our forces was held to be the main object of all political and military measures, an object to which the establishment of a settled Government at Kabul must, in the case of emergency, be subordinated.

3. In the second place, it was decided, in authorizing correspondence with Abdul Rahman, that this correspondence must not take the form of negotiations, in the sense of proposing or entertaining conditions, or of discussing a bargain. The suggestion that conditions should be offered to the Sirdar was definitely negatived; and the scope of the instructions given regarding this correspondence was carefully limited to authorizing an unconditional invitation and offer. The Government informed the Sirdar that if he came to Kabul upon a friendly understanding he should be recognized as Amir, and assisted to establish himself before the departure of our troops. Subsequently, upon your special recommendation, the Sirdar received a distinct statement of the views and intentions of the British Government upon certain additional points. But this statement, although of high importance to the Sirdar, was given him unconditionally; and while it conveys a declaration of the policy and intentions of Government, the Sirdar's assent has been neither asked nor expected.

4. In regard, therefore, to the plan of early withdrawal of our troops from Kabul, and to the continuance of our correspondence with Abdul Rahman, the lines of instruction originally traced have been substantially adhered to. You are thus free, as matters now stand, to complete the arrangements, political and military, preliminary to the retirement of the British forces, while, as Abdul Rahman has accepted your invitation to Kabul, the time may have arrived for the fulfilment of our offers to him of recognition and assistance. Upon these points I am now to convey to you instructions in continuation and expansion of the orders already telegraphed. The Government of India agree with the opinion of yourself and Mr. Griffin that it will probably be advisable that the Sirdar should not enter Kabul immediately, but that he should remain for the present within a distance convenient for intercourse and for personal conference, if necessary, upon the arrangements for his assumption of authority. First, then, in regard to the Sirdar's recognition as Amir (which, as well as any subsequent arrangement with him, is, of course, dependent upon your being satisfied that he is dealing with us in good faith, and in a friendly spirit), he will be recognized under the title of Amir of Kabul; and whenever the announcement shall have been publicly made, it should be understood as entitling him, thereafter, to your full countenance and political support, but not to any co-operation by British troops in his measures for establishing his authority. It will consequently be your duty to discountenance and discourage all claims of candidates and combinations of parties adverse to or inconsistent with the recognition of Abdul Rahman's Amirship.

